Majority Views. The report said the Committee revised the House version out of the belief that the Federal Government "must abide by" Administration wage-price guidelines "if it expects private industry to abide by them." The report said, "Indeed, in accepting adherence to (the) guidelines for 1965, the Committee feels deeply committed to undertake the consideration of salary legislation early in" 1966. Speaking of the 3.6-percent increase, the report added, "When allowance is made for the full 15-month period since the last adjustment of federal salaries, the annual average rate of increase of employees' basic compensation is less than 3 percent but the additional costs of fringe benefits and other cost items (which are considered part of compensation in the establishment of wage-price guideposts) raises the total cost of the committee amendment to a percentage compatible with the wage-price guideposts."

Minority Views. Committee Republicans Carlson (Kan.), Fong (Hawaii), Boggs (Del.) and Simpson (Wyo.) said they supported the 4-percent pay hike voted by the House and questioned why the House version would be threatened by a Presidential veto in light of President Johnson's March 17, 1964, statement that, "'It is false economy to offer salaries that will attract the mediocre but repel the talented.'" They said that to achieve comparability, raises of 3.5 percent in the lower grades, 8.9 percent in the middle grades and 10 percent in the upper grades of federal employees actually were needed. (1964 Almanac p. 419)

In separate minority views, Sens. Hartke (D Ind.) and Simpson said the Senate version "violates public policy" by denying federal workers comparability with their counterparts in private industry.

Fong and Simpson also filed separate individual views. Fong said he would support a 3.6-percent pay raise rather than risk a Presidential veto of a costlier pay bill and Simpson said he "resented the Presidential coercion that was used in the consideration" of HR 10281.

Changes in House Bill. The Committee reduced the over-all first-year costs of the House bill by a total $113.5 million and also cut an additional $777.6 million in future costs by disapproving the automatic, second-step pay increase proposed for 1966. Of the total first-year reduction, the Committee cut $56.7 million by lowering the pay raise from 4 to 3.6 percent and cut $56.8 million by completely disapproving liberalization of classified employee overtime rates ($15 million savings), by revising the applicability of new postal overtime rates ($32.9 million savings), by lowering new annual uniform allowances from $150 to $125 ($4.9 million savings) and by other revisions ($4 million savings). In addition, the Committee deleted provisions for establishing a permanent Federal Salary Review Commission, a modified form of which had been proposed and supported by the Administration.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Oct. 22, after brief debate and without amendment, passed HR 10281 by a 67-0 roll-call vote and returned it to the House with a one-step, $641.5-million, 3.6-percent federal pay raise. (For voting, see chart p. 1080)

During debate, Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee Chairman A. S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) said the Senate version of HR 10281 was a "responsible," "attainable" and "noninflationary bill that will not be vetoed." Unlike the House version, which "cannot...be enacted," Monroney said, the Senate version "recognizes the reality of budgetary problems, the increased costs pertaining to the Defense Department and the costs of other programs of vital importance enacted in the 89th Congress." He added that the bill was "carefully designed" to stay within Administration wage-price guidelines and that, while not going as far as the House bill, achieved comparability in the lowest federal pay grades and prevented widening of the comparability gap in the higher grades.

Pay Bill Cost Comparisons

(in millions per year)

	Administration Proposal	House Bill*	Senate Final Bill
Pay:
Classified	$267.0	$351.2	$313.8
Postal	126.5	167.9	151.1
Foreign Service	5.6	7.8	7.0
Veterans, medical	6.9	9.4	8.5
Legislative Judicial Agriculture, county	6.5	8.6	7.7
Subtotal	$412.5	$544.9	$488.2
Fringe Benefits:
Classified overtime	---	$ 15.0	---
Postal overtime	$ 58.2	126.6	$ 93.7
Uniform allowance	---	9.9	5.0
Postal relocation	4.6	4.6	4.6
Classified relocation	17.4	---	---
Severance pay	50.0	50.0	50.0
Other	---	4.0	---
Subtotal	$130.2	$210.1	$153.3
GRAND TOTAL	$542.7	$755.0	$641.5

Represents first-step costs; does not include undetermined second-step costs.*

 Minimum estimate. Other estimates ranged as high as $35.4 million for this item. This request was handled in separate legislation which did not pass. See summary of President's recommendations elsewhere in this story.*

SOURCE: SENATE POST OFFICE AND CIVIL SERVICE COMMITTEE

In response to Milward L. Simpson (R Wyo.) and other Committee Republicans who objected to the White House pressure on the bill, Monroney said the President had the responsibility "to refuse to sign into law bills enacted by the Congress which he does not believe are in the public interest." He added, "The expression of Presidential opinion and intention prior to final enactment of legislation...is certainly not unique. In fact it is a tradition respected and previously exercised by Presidents of all parties."

PROVISIONS -- See final provisions, p. 649.

Final Action

The House Oct. 22 agreed by voice vote to the Senate amendments to HR 10281. The action sent the bill to the President for his signature in a form providing a one-step, 3.6-percent raise plus fringe benefits, at a total cost of $641.5 million a year.

During House debate on the Senate amendments Oct. 22, Rep. Morris K. Udall (D Ariz.), chairman of the House Post Office and Civil Service Compensation Subcommittee, in a reference to the last-minute Senate action on HR 10281, charged that the House "has been had." Udall said the Senate bill, which he called "a watered down, toothless, illegitimate, emaciated outrage," did not represent a compromise but a "capitulation" to the "bureaucrats, advisers and self-styled experts" of the Budget Bureau and the White House. He added that the Senate, "in its blunderbuss efforts to pacify Administration objectors," had destroyed the comparability principle as well as had deleted several Administration-backed proposals, including establishment of a permanent Federal Salary Review Commission.

Several Members, who noted that HR 10281 had been passed by the House on a 370-7 roll call and that the President had signed a $1-billion military pay raise (HR 9075 -- PL 89-132), which was more than double Administration recommendations, urged the House to reject the Senate amendments and stand firm behind its original proposal. Udall, however, argued against this, stating that the leaders of the federal employee and postal unions preferred to have a 3.6-percent pay hike in 1965 than to test a possible Presidential veto of a larger raise.

Bill Signed

After signing HR 10281 into law (PL 89-301) Oct. 29, President Johnson Oct. 30 commented, "In Government, as in industry, rapid change will continue to cause dislocations in employment...I am pleased that this bill enables the Government to provide severance pay to federal employees whose jobs are eliminated." He also said, "Above all, the benefits conferred by this bill are made possible within the wage-price guideposts developed by the Council of Economic Advisers."

Related Developments

Service to the Public. President Johnson Nov. 1 announced to heads of Departments and agencies plans to improve the quality of the Government's service to the public. He said he had placed Chairman John W. Macy Jr. of the U.S. Civil Service Commission in charge of a new drive to bring better service to individual citizens, and he outlined steps he wanted taken to make Government "better and more responsive," including (1) assignment of a top official in each agency to develop a program along the desired lines; (2) reports to Macy by Dec. 15 on the steps taken; and (3) more use of special new Civil Service training courses on ways to improve service to the public.

Executive Salary Study. The President May 8 ordered Macy to study conditions for top federal jobs below Cabinet rank ($27,000 to $35,000 salary range).

Postal Rates. An advisory panel to Postmaster General John A. Gronouski May 21 recommended an increase in all postage rates and elimination of special rates for publications of non-profit organizations, and for books, phonograph records and educational materials. The panel, named in January by Gronouski, said rates should be raised enough to wipe out the postal deficit. (The postal deficit for fiscal 1965 totaled $929 million, of which $548 million was to be written off by the Treasury as an allowance for "public service," leaving a net postal deficit of $381 million. See 1962 Almanac p. 355 for explanation of postal "public service write-off.") The panel also endorsed a proposal to merge first-class and air mail into a single class to be moved by the quickest means. Gronouski Dec. 23, 1964, had announced that the President would ask the 89th Congress for "modest" postal rate increases in the second- and third-class mail categories, but no such request was made in 1965.

FEDERAL RETIREMENT PAY

HR 8469 -- Reported by House Post Office and Civil Service Committee (H Rept 529) June 17, 1965.

- Passed by the House by a 396-0 roll-call vote Aug. 3. (See p. 986)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee (S Rept 653) Aug. 30.
- Passed by the Senate by a 73-10 roll-call vote Sept. 8. (See p. 1071)
- House agreed to Senate amendment by voice vote Sept. 9.

PL 89-205 -- Signed into law Sept. 27.

Congress in 1965 enacted Administration-backed legislation (HR 8469) increasing pensions received by retired federal employees and Members of Congress and revising the method of determining future cost-of-living pay increases for retirees. The bill did not affect retirement contribution rates, which remained at 6.5 percent of salary for employees (7.5 percent for Members), matched by an equal amount contributed by the Federal Government. The bill was estimated to cost $101.9 million a year.

In its major provisions, HR 8469 increased by 11.1 percent (6.5 percent plus an estimated 4.6 percent which represented the increase in the cost of living between 1962 and September 1965, as gauged by the Consumer Price Index) the amount of pensions received by persons who had retired on or before Oct. 1, 1956. It also boosted by 6.1 percent (1.5 percent plus the 4.6-percent cost-of-living increase) the amount of pensions received by persons who retired after that date but prior to Dec. 1, 1965. (The latter date was changed to Dec. 31 in PL 89-314 -- see below.) The same provisions applied to pensions received by survivors (mostly widows) of these retirees. The bill also increased by 15 percent or $10, whichever was less, the monthly payments for survivors of federal employees who died prior to the date that formal survivor pensions were begun in 1948 (PL 80-426).

The increases provided by HR 8469 were designed to partially remove the difference in benefits received by pre-1956 and post-1956 retirees. In 1956, Congress in PL 84-854 voted benefit increases averaging 20 percent for future retirees but did nothing to improve the positions of persons already on the retirement rolls. In 1958, Congress in PL 85-465 provided benefit increases averaging 10 percent for pre-1956 retirees, thus closing about half the gap created by the 1956 law.

In addition, HR 8469 changed the method of determining future cost-of-living pay adjustments for retirees by providing automatic pension increases whenever the Consumer Price Index rose 3 percent for three consecutive months in place of the existing requirement of an average 3-percent rise for an entire calendar year. According to the House Committee, the cost-of-living adjustment principle, adopted in 1962 (PL 87-793), was producing "disappointing" results. (1962 Almanac p. 355)

For example, the Consumer Price Index rose by an average of only 2.6 percent in 1964 (not enough to warrant a retiree pay adjustment) even though it reached 3 percent in November 1964 and increased steadily to 3.7 percent in May 1965 and to 4.6 percent in September 1965. Under existing law, a retiree had to wait until three months after the end of 1965 to receive the cost-of-living adjustment. Under HR 8469, the retiree would have received the adjustment soon after the increase averaged 3 percent over three consecutive months. (An identical provision was adopted in 1965 for military retirees, see story p. 702.)

In a related 1965 development, Congress enacted a bill (HR 11303 -- PL 89-314), signed Nov. 1, extending the terminal date for benefit increases under HR 8469 from Dec. 1 to Dec. 31, 1965. The extension was designed to retain, during the 1965 Christmas season, the services of numerous employees (mostly postal workers) who had planned to retire prior to Dec. 1 in order to receive the benefit increases. (Retirees eligible for the new benefits in 1965 received pension increases of 8.1 percent -- 6.1 percent as provided by HR 8469 plus a 2-percent "bonus" provided in the 1962 law (PL 87-793) for all retirees leaving Government service during calendar 1965.)

According to the Civil Service Commission, an estimated additional 20,000 federal civilian employees took advantage of the benefit increases, electing to retire during the period November-December 1965. The normal monthly retirement rate was 5,000.

Congressional Action

House. The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee reported HR 8469 (H Rept 529) June 17. In a June 3 letter to the Committee, Civil Service Commission Chairman John W. Macy Jr. said the Budget Bureau opposed enactment of the bill because of a provision increasing from 55 to 60 percent the portion of a deceased employee's pension to which a survivor was eligible. The provision, which was expected to cost $58 million annually, was "the sort of piecemeal approach to retirement legislation which this Administration seeks to check," he said. Macy also said that, while "some justification can be found" for an immediate increase in pensions, it would be "best" to defer any action until after Dec. 1, 1965, when the President's Cabinet Committee on Federal Staff Retirement Systems was scheduled to conclude a 10-month study and issue a report. (The Cabinet Committee, however, failed to issue its report by the end of 1965.)

Floor Action -- The House Aug. 3 passed HR 8469, without amendment, by a 396-0 roll-call vote and sent it to the Senate. (For voting, see chart p. 986)

The floor manager, Dominick V. Daniels (D N.J.), said that although "$3,000 is deemed to be the borderline below which a couple is in the poverty class, the record shows that more than 75 percent of retired federal employees are receiving annuities of less than $3,000."

Senate. The Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee reported HR 8469 (S Rept 653) Aug. 30 with an amendment deleting the Administration-opposed provision increasing the amount of a deceased employee's pension for which a survivor was eligible.

Floor Action -- The Senate Sept. 8 passed HR 8469 by a 73-10 roll-call vote and returned it to the House. The Senate rejected by a 20-61 roll call a motion by John J. Williams (R Del.) to recommit the bill to committee pending completion of the Presidential committee's study. (For voting, see chart p. 1071)

Final Action. The House Sept. 9 concurred by voice vote in the Senate amendment to HR 8469, clearing the bill for the President's signature.

REORGANIZATION ACT

HR 4623 -- Reported by House Government Operations Committee (H Rept 184) March 17, 1965.
S 1135 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Government Operations Committee (S Rept 154) April 8.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate by voice vote April 9.
- Passed by the House by voice vote June 3.

PL 89-43 -- Signed into law June 18.

Enactment of S 1135 extended through Dec. 31, 1968, the President's authority under the Reorganization Act of 1949 to reorganize federal agencies through transfer, abolition or consolidation of agency functions.

Under the provisions extended by S 1135, Presidential reorganization plans went into effect automatically 60 days after being submitted to Congress, unless either chamber of Congress during that period disapproved the plan by a majority of Members present and voting.

In a letter to Congress Feb. 3, President Johnson had indicated he wanted permanent authority to submit reorganization plans, but Congress in S 1135 refused this request and imposed a time limit.

In related 1965 developments, Mr. Johnson submitted to Congress five reorganization plans, all of which were allowed to go into effect despite controversy over one that reorganized the Customs Bureau. (See next page)

Congress also passed legislation granting the President's request for creation of a Cabinet-level Department of Housing and Urban Development. (See p. 382)

Background

REFERENCES -- For legislative action on Reorganization Acts, see the following Almanacs: 1945, p. 699; 1949, p. 554; 1953, p. 296; 1955, p. 104 (PL 16); 1957, p. 669; 1959, p. 308; 1961, p. 356; 1963, p. 392; 1964, p. 425.

Reorganization authority was first given to the President in the Executive Reorganization Act of 1932. After various amendments, the reorganization authority was revised in the 1939 Reorganization Act, which provided for Congressional rejection of Presidential reorganization plans by a concurrent resolution of both chambers of Congress. Subsequently, emergency wartime reorganization authority was granted in the War Powers Act of 1941 (Title I). After the war, the reorganization authority was again reenacted, with revisions, in the Reorganization Act of 1945, which expired April 1, 1948. Under the 1945 Act, a concurrent resolution of both chambers was required for Congressional rejection of a reorganization plan.

In 1949, a new measure, the Reorganization Act of 1949, was enacted. It permitted the President to establish new Cabinet-level departments by means of reorganization plans; provided for rejection of a Presidential reorganization plan by the vote of a majority of the authorized membership of either chamber; and gave the President reorganization power for four years, instead of permanently as President Truman desired.

The 1949 Act was extended for two-year periods in 1953, 1955 and 1957 (at which time the method of rejection was changed to a simple majority of those present and voting in either chamber), but expired in 1959. It was reinstated in 1961, with a June 1, 1963, expiration date, when it was allowed to lapse because Congress was vexed with President Kennedy for his 1962 attempt to create a Cabinet-level Department of Urban Affairs and Housing by means of a reorganization plan, after a bill to the same effect was blocked in the House Rules Committee. (1962 Almanac p. 380; 408)

However, in 1964, at President Johnson's request, the 1949 Act was again reinstated, until June 1, 1965, with an amendment prohibiting the use of the Act to establish new Cabinet departments.

In his Jan. 25, 1965, Budget Message, President Johnson requested permanent extension of the 1949 Act. A draft bill (S 1134, HR 4623) to this effect was submitted by the Administration Feb. 3. Senate Government Operations Committee Chairman John L. McClellan (D Ark.) introduced a bill (S 1135) providing only a two-year extension.

Senate

COMMITTEE ACTION. The Senate Government Operations Committee April 8 reported S 1135 (S Rept 154), amended to extend the Reorganization Act for four years, until June 1, 1969. The action followed a March 29 hearing by the Executive Reorganization Subcommittee.

FLOOR ACTION. The Senate passed S 1135 April 9 by voice vote. Before passage, the Senate agreed by voice vote to an amendment offered by floor manager Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.), limiting the extension to Dec. 31, 1968, "to make it coterminous with the end of the President's term of office."

Ribicoff said the President's request for permanent authority was considered, but the Government Operations Committee decided that a limit "was more appropriate considering the constitutional question of so broad a delegation of our legislative powers and responsibility."

House

COMMITTEE -- Government Operations.

ACTION -- March 17 reported the Administration bill HR 4623 (H Rept 184) to extend the Reorganization Act permanently.

Majority Views. The report said the Reorganization Act was a "useful and beneficial" tool for executive reorganization. It called the lack of permanent authority a "glaring defect," which had led to "periods when no authority was available." The report argued that a permanent extension of authority would not affect Congressional review of any plans submitted by the President and that the provision of the Act permitting a simple majority of either the House or the Senate to defeat a reorganization plan had "practically eliminated" any danger of "executive domination."

Minority Views. The 11 minority members of the Committee signed dissenting views recommending a two-year extension of the Act. The minority said, "In the face of the continual disposition of every Administration to press for more executive organization power, the Congress needs to preserve the necessity for reviewing the operation of the law at regular intervals."

(Continued on next page)

FLOOR ACTION

The House June 3 passed HR 4623 by voice vote after amending it to embody the language of the Senate bill, S 1135. It then passed S 1135, clearing the bill for the President. As passed by the House, S 1135 extended the Reorganization Act to Dec. 31, 1968.

Before clearing S 1135, the House June 3 considered three alternatives: (1) to make the authority permanent, as requested by President Johnson and as recommended by the Government Operations Committee in reporting HR 4623 March 17; (2) to extend the authority to Dec. 31, 1968, as the Senate had done in passing the bill April 9; or (3) to extend the authority only to June 1, 1967, as proposed by GOP members of the Committee. In the interest of expediting enactment of legislation extending the already expired authority, the Committee majority receded from its March 17 report and recommended to the House that it accept, as a compromise, the Senate's limited extension to Dec. 31, 1968. This was the alternative which the House followed.

In House debate, John J. Rhodes (R Ariz.), chairman of the GOP Policy Committee, said a permanent extension would "threaten the prerogative of the Congress to review this legislation on a regular basis" and future Congresses "should continue to have the right to" amend the law when necessary. Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.) then offered an amendment on behalf of the Committee to concur in the Senate's extension. John N. Erlenborn (R Ill.), for the Committee's minority, offered a substitute to limit the extension to two years.

Reuss asked GOP support for his compromise proposal, saying, "we ask you to go up by a year and one-half and we are willing to come down from infinity -- from eternity -- to three and one-half years." The Erlenborn substitute was rejected on a 40-75 standing vote, after which the House accepted the Reuss amendment. Just before passage, the House rejected by voice vote a motion by Erlenborn to recommit (kill) the bill.

REORGANIZATION PLANS

President Johnson submitted five reorganization plans to Congress in 1965. None of them was disapproved by either chamber of Congress, and all five therefore went into effect. Details:

PLAN NO. 1. Submitted March 25. Abolished 53 offices in the Bureau of Customs which had been filled by Presidential appointment, to be accomplished not later than Dec. 31, 1966. The effect of the plan was to place the Bureau on a career, civil service basis. (In the past, appointments generally were made on Senators' recommendations.) The offices affected were those of the customs collector, customs controller, merchandise appraiser, and customs surveyor. The plan also transferred to the Secretary of the Treasury any functions vested by law in officials of the Customs Bureau. The plan was estimated to produce savings totaling $9 million a year. Of this amount, approximately $1 million a year represented salaries of the abolished political appointee positions.

The plan itself did not cover another aspect of the proposed Custom Bureau reorganization which could be accomplished administratively by the Treasury Department (of which Customs was a part). It involved reorganization of the service into six regional offices with about 25 subordinate district offices. They were to replace 113 existing independent field offices. The regional offices were placed in Boston, New York, Miami, New Orleans, San Francisco and Chicago. The district locations were not specified.

This proposal brought protests from many Members of Congress, with some suggesting that their areas were being downgraded when placed under a regional office in another location.

On Aug. 12, the Customs Bureau announced that Baltimore, Houston and Los Angeles would also become regional Customs headquarters, and that the number of subordinate district offices would be increased to 42. Regional offices were to assume the over-all principal supervisory responsibilities and functions of the abolished offices.

The proposals to eliminate the 53 Presidentially appointed positions, and by administrative action to put the regional office plan into effect, were contained in a Treasury Department study initiated in 1963 and completed in 1965, called the Stover Report (after James H. Stover, a Treasury official). In 1952, the Senate rejected a similar plan to reorganize the Customs Bureau. (1952 Almanac p. 243)

Attempt to Disapprove Plan. Resolutions were introduced in the House and Senate (H Res 347, S Res 102) to disapprove the plan.

House Action -- Following hearings, the House Government Operations Committee May 6 reported H Res 347 (H Rept 311) with the recommendation that the resolution not be passed, and that the plan be allowed to go into effect. There was no further action.

Senate Action -- Also following hearings, the Senate Government Operations Committee May 20 reported S Res 102 (S Rept 203), recommending that the resolution not be passed and that the plan go into effect.

The Senate May 24, by a 17-64 roll call, rejected S Res 102. (For voting, see chart p. 1040)

Since neither chamber had passed a resolution of disapproval, Reorganization Plan No. 1 automatically went into effect at midnight, May 24.

During Senate debate, Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) argued that Senators were in a better position than civil service officials to select qualified customs collectors. E. L. Bartlett (D Alaska) said, "We do not have to abolish the whole system in order to make certain improvements...there are definite advantages to the Government in certain political appointments."

John O. Pastore (D R.I.), sponsor of S Res 102, said he introduced the resolution of disapproval so that hearings would be held on the plan. He added that when Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler testified before the Committee assuring that "further study" of the regional office plan was being made, "I was satisfied that he was doing the right thing."

Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) said, "I would be happy...to have the necessity of appointing a politician for the customs collector taken off my shoulders."

PLAN NO. 2. Submitted May 13. Consolidated the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Weather Bureau and the Central Radio Propagation Laboratory of the National Bureau of Standards into a single new agency in the Department of Commerce to be known as the Environmental Science Services Administration. In an accompanying message to Congress May 13, the President said the reorganization would "enhance our ability to develop an adequate warning system for the severe hazards of nature." Savings have been estimated to reach $700,000 by the end of the third year.

PLAN NO. 3. Submitted May 27. Coordinated the work of the railroad safety personnel with that of the locomotive inspectors to eliminate duplication of inspection activities. The effect of this plan was to transfer to the Interstate Commerce Commission all federal locomotive inspection activities which had been operated by Presidential appointees since 1911. Savings were estimated at $170,000 a year through more efficient operation.

PLAN NO. 4. Submitted May 27. Abolished nine statutory committees, transferring their functions to existing officials or agencies. The plan abolished the National Housing Council, the National Advisory Council on International Monetary and Financial Problems, the Board of the Foreign Service, the Board of Examiners of the Foreign Service and the Civilian-Military Liaison Committee established in the National Aeronautics and Space Act. The plan provided for the functions of these groups to be transferred to the President and gave him the authority to provide for their performance. In this connection, Mr. Johnson said, "Wherever the continuing need for and the usefulness of a committee has been demonstrated, I would anticipate the establishment of a successor committee along the general lines of the body now provided by law. Certainly, prompt action will be taken to create successor committees to such bodies as the Board of Foreign Service and the National Advisory Council on International Monetary and Financial Problems."

In addition, Plan No. 4 abolished the Advisory Council on Group Insurance, the Loan Policy Board of the Small Business Administration, the Bonneville Power Advisory Board and the Atomic Weapons Awards Board. The functions of these groups were assigned to agency heads.

The plan also abolished the relevant functions of the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare with respect to consulting with and considering the recommendations of the President's Committee on Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Crime. The Committee was established by Executive Order May 11, 1961. Mr. Johnson said, "To require the Secretary by law to consult with a Committee established by Executive Order is clearly anomalous." The reorganization plan did not otherwise affect the Committee. Estimates of savings were not made.

PLAN NO. 5. Submitted May 27. Eliminated all eight advisory committees of the National Science Foundation. The Foundation originally had three divisions, each with an advisory committee as required by the National Science Foundation Act of 1950. With the growth of the Foundation to eight divisions, each with its own committee advising the Director, it was felt there was overlapping in some of the program areas.

The plan also authorized the Director of the National Science Foundation to delegate functions vested in him by law or delegated to him by the National Science Board. The plan would not transfer functions from the Board, but it would allow the Director to redelegate those delegated to him. Exact savings were not identified, but the annual cost of supporting each committee was $14,000 to $15,000.

USIA KENNEDY FILM

H Con Res 285 -- Reported by House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 139) March 5, 1965.
- Passed by the House June 9 on a 311-75 roll-call vote. (See p. 968)
- Reported adversely by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (S Rept 646) Aug. 25.

S J Res 106 -- Reported favorably by Senate Foreign Relations Committee (S Rept 647) Aug. 25.
- Passed by the Senate Aug. 26 by voice vote.
- Reported by House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 1093) Sept. 23.
- Passed by the House Oct. 7 by voice vote.

PL 89-274 -- Signed into law Oct. 20.

Congress in 1965 passed a controversial bill (S J Res 106 -- PL 89-274) to allow the showing in the United States of the U.S. Information Agency (USIA) film, "John F. Kennedy -- Years of Lightning, Day of Drums," depicting events in the Kennedy Administration. The bill gave the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts exclusive rights to distribute the film through educational and commercial media within the country.

Similar bills and resolutions had been introduced in the House and Senate, touching off a sharp partisan controversy. Republicans said that use in the United States of a film "designed for propaganda overseas would set a most undesirable pattern" and that its use here "would mean that the taxpayers would be subsidizing programs designed to shape their judgment." While some criticism was leveled at the film itself, most of the criticism centered on the use of USIA material for domestic consumption.

The issues posed by the resolutions revolved around interpretation of the USIA's functions and the "Congressional intent" guiding them. Supporters of the bill said that the film had evoked "considerable public interest" and that domestic distribution would "not interfere with the USIA's primary mission overseas."

The Administration did not take a stand on the issue. However, the State Department, in a Feb. 1 letter to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said the Department "supports the objective common to all" the proposals under consideration -- to show the film domestically.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, S J Res 106:

Authorized the showing in the United States of the USIA film, "John F. Kennedy -- Years of Lightning, Day of Drums."

Directed the USIA to transfer six master copies of the film to the trustees of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. The Center would have exclusive rights to distribute the film, through educational and commercial media, and would pay the Treasury Department $122,000 to cover the film's original production costs. Net profits from distribution of the film would go to the Treasury for use by the Center.

Stipulated that any film produced by the Government concerning the "life, character and public service" of a person who had served or was serving as a Government official could not be shown or distributed in the United States until after the person's death and unless authorized by law.

Background

The Smith-Mundt Act (PL 81-402) passed Congress Jan. 27, 1948, "to promote the better understanding of the United States among the peoples of the world and to strengthen cooperative international relations." The Smith-Mundt Act provided for "an information service to disseminate abroad information about the United States, its people, and policies promulgated by the Congress, the President, the Secretary of State and other responsible officials of Government." In reporting out the Act in 1947, the House Foreign Affairs Committee stated: "the Congress would certainly wish this particular authorization to be directed solely toward the people of other countries." The information duties fell under the Secretary of State.

In August 1953, the United States Information Agency was established as an independent government agency. The USIA director was appointed by the President, and the Agency was made responsible to the President.

The USIA Motion Picture Service, responsible for production of the Kennedy film, acquires or contracts for the production of motion pictures in appropriate languages for use abroad, through commercial outlets, or for film showings conducted by U.S. Information Service posts.

"Years of Lightning, Day of Drums" was produced by the USIA shortly after the assassination Nov. 22, 1963, of President Kennedy. The first full-length documentary produced by the Agency, the 90-minute, color film covers President Kennedy's two years and 10 months in office and the state funeral on Nov. 25, 1963. It was produced by George Stevens Jr., director of USIA's Motion Picture Service, and written and directed by Bruce Herschensohn, a leading American free-lance producer of documentary films.

The film was released in the fall of 1964 for distribution overseas through commercial outlets -- for the most part American film companies -- and for showings conducted by local TV networks abroad and USIS posts. An English version of the film went to about 120 countries, and the USIA made versions in more than 20 foreign languages.

The enthusiastic reception given the film after showings abroad and limited showings in the United States created widespread public demand for general domestic distribution. The film was shown in the United States in December 1964 at the State Department, the National Press Club of Washington, and the Overseas Press Club in New York.

These domestic showings were provided in accordance with a PL 81-402 provision which states: "Any (U.S. information) press release or radio script...shall be available...at the State Department...following its release as information abroad, for examination by representatives of United States press associations, newspapers, magazines, radio systems...(and) to members of Congress."

The film was given an additional showing in Boston in February following Senate approval Feb. 11 of a House resolution (H Con Res 282). The resolution authorized the USIA to make the film available at dedication ceremonies of the Boston Civic War Memorial Auditorium. The film had a three-day public run beginning Feb. 21 and was seen by 130,000 people, according to a Washington Evening Star report, "the greatest number to see a film in one place, in that brief a time."

An earlier and sole instance of domestic release of a USIA movie occurred in 1962. The Senate Aug. 23, 1962, unanimously approved a "sense-of-Congress" resolution (S Con Res 84) authorizing the USIA to distribute, through commercial and educational media, the Agency-produced "Mrs. Kennedy's Asian Journey." The film covered Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy's March 1962 trip to Pakistan and India and was distributed commercially by United Artists, selected by lot. The $19,000 profit was paid into the Treasury's General Fund.

House

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Affairs.

ACTION -- Reported H Con Res 285 (H Rept 139) March 5. The resolution, introduced by Clement J. Zablocki (Wis.), ranking Democratic committee member, was approved by the Committee against almost solid Republican opposition. In a 16-8 party-line vote, only one Republican Committee member voting, James G. Fulton (Pa.), endorsed the proposal.

The report said the film should be available to the American public for several reasons: the subject was "part of our national heritage"; American taxpayers had supported what was "probably the best documentary ever produced by the USIA"; "considerable public interest" had been evinced in having the film released domestically; previous showings of the film in this country had occurred; and domestic distribution would not interfere with the USIA's primary mission overseas.

A minority report, signed by all GOP Committee members except Fulton and F. Bradford Morse (Mass.), stated that the resolution was "rammed through" the Committee, only eight members had seen the film, no hearings were held and debate was limited.

H Con Res 285 stated it was "the sense of Congress" that the film be shown in the United States and that the USIA should make "appropriate arrangements" for distributing the film through educational and commercial media in this country. The resolution contained no further stipulations. However, the Committee's report listed several "guidelines" which the Committee said the USIA should follow: no appropriated funds should be used to pay for the film's reproduction and distribution costs; as "many Americans as possible," including those in educational and other non-profit institutions, should see the film; overcommercialization should be avoided and "propriety and dignity" considered when other films are shown with the USIA film; non-partisanship should be the "rule" in all distribution arrangements; and money received "for United States use" should be paid into the Treasury.

FLOOR ACTION

The House June 9 passed H Con Res 285 by a 311-75 roll-call vote.

Fifty-five Republicans and 256 Democrats voted in favor of the resolution, and 68 Republicans and 7 Democrats opposed it. (For voting, see p. 968)

Before passage, the House first approved and then rejected an amendment to require that the film be shown without charge. The amendment, proposed by William S. Mailliard (R Calif.), first was accepted by a standing and a teller vote and then rejected by a 174-216 roll-call vote. In addition, the House rejected by voice vote a motion by Frances P. Bolton (R Ohio) to recommit (kill) the bill.

Debate on the resolution June 9 centered on possible political and commercial exploitation of the film. Republicans contended the film could be used for Democratic political purposes. Edward J. Derwinski (R Ill.) said the film was "a natural political vehicle...President Kennedy is a present political force." Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen (R N.J.) suggested there was nothing to prevent the USIA from making a film about a living American, "for example the Attorney General of the United States, or a U.S. Senator." Frelinghuysen also criticized the film for implying "that no President before John F. Kennedy did anything significant in the field of civil rights...or outer space." Furthermore, he said, Americans who "have already paid for this film" through taxes should not have to pay "for the privilege of seeing it." Glenard P. Lipscomb (R Calif.) said the resolution would "set the precedent of making the (USIA) a domestic propaganda arm of our Government, propagandizing the American people...at (their) own expense."

Opponents of the resolution also contended that the USIA had no authority to contract with a film distributor for commercial showings and that imprecise language in the resolution and the committee report gave no guidance as to how the film was to be released. Mailliard said the film could be linked "with some sensational C-grade commercial picture" such as "The Monster from Outer Space." Zablocki said he had understood the film would be shown in movie theaters as a main feature and that if admission fees were forbidden, the film could not be shown commercially. Mailliard argued that the cost of showing the film could be recovered from television networks, which "would pay a handsome price" for it.

Supporters of the resolution argued that the Americans should be allowed to see the film because, as Edward P. Boland (D Mass.) put it, "it is a part of our national heritage, and its showing can help broaden general understanding of our history and appreciation of our form of government." Harold D. Donohue (D Mass.) said, "This great motion picture is of basic and traditional concern to the citizens of our country." Roman C. Pucinski (D Ill.) argued that the resolution would not set a precedent for domestic dissemination of USIA material, but was a "carefully considered exception." Herbert Tenzer (D N.Y.) supported the resolution but said Mailliard's proposed amendment would require Congress to pass an additional appropriation for USIA to produce the film and would "prohibit education or commercial mediums or any organization from charging a nominal fee" to meet the cost of public viewing.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

June 9 -- William S. Mailliard (R Calif.) -- Require that the film be shown without charge. Accepted by a 75-61 standing vote and a 96-87 teller vote; rejected by a 174-216 roll call.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Relations.

ACTION -- Aug. 25 reported adversely H Con Res 285 (S Rept 646) and favorably S J Res 106 (S Rept 647), a clean bill. (The Committee had considered H Con Res 285 and two related bills, S Con Res 4 and S J Res 8, in executive sessions March 3 and 16 and Aug. 24. No hearings were held.)

S Rept 647, in explaining why the Committee drew up a clean bill to replace H Con Res 285, said "the Committee considered it important that it be made clear that no precedent would be established which might encourage USIA to turn from its assigned task of conducting information activities abroad to disseminating information at its discretion in the United States," that domestic distribution of the film should not be handled by the USIA, that proceeds of the domestic showings should be used to benefit the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts and that the Center should pay $122,000 to the Government for six master copies of the film. The Committee also said that the stipulations should be provided by a joint resolution, which has "the force and authority of law," rather than by concurrent resolution, "which would merely express the sense of the Congress." The report said "there should be no partisan political considerations in the arrangements made for distributing the film" and that the film should not be shown for political purposes, such as at a political convention.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate passed S J Res 106 without amendment Aug. 26 by voice vote. No objections were voiced against the bill during a brief discussion before passage.

Final Action

The House Foreign Affairs Committee reported S J Res 106 (H Rept 1093) Sept. 23 without amendment. The House passed the bill without amendment Oct. 7 by voice vote.

Several Republicans opposed the measure during preliminary debate on the bill Oct. 5. E. Ross Adair (R Ind.) claimed the bill, despite a specific disclaimer, would establish a "very dangerous precedent" for domestic distribution of USIA material, which was prohibited by long-standing Congressional policy. Adair also suggested the film could be exploited for political purposes because the bill did not set up "sufficient safeguards" concerning the film's use. Zablocki, floor manager of the bill, maintained the Committee report contained adequate assurances against political and commercial exploitation of the film. He quoted a Sept. 23 letter to the Committee from Roger L. Stevens, chairman of the Kennedy Center, which said the film would be released to educational organizations without profit to the Center and released through commercial media by methods "in keeping with the high standards of the film and the intent of Congress."

The bill was tentatively approved Oct. 5 by a 55-12 standing vote of the House, but the final vote was put off to Oct. 7.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT

The Senate Oct. 13 adopted by voice vote and sent to the House a resolution (S Con Res 61) to permit the USIA to show "Adlai Stevenson the Ambassador" at a memorial tribute to Stevenson Oct. 24 in Chicago. An objection was raised Oct. 14 against the House considering the resolution, and the USIA film was not shown. Stevenson died July 14.

D.C. CRIME BILL

HR 5688 -- Reported by House District Committee (H Rept 176) March 17, 1965.

- Passed by the House on a 251-131 roll-call vote March 22. (See p. 944)
- Reported, amended, by Senate District Committee (S Rept 600) Aug. 13.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate on an 86-7 roll-call vote Aug. 31. (See p. 1069)

The House and Senate in 1965 passed differing versions of a bill (HR 5688) revising the District of Columbia Criminal Code but took no final action on the measure during the year.

Supporters of the bill, similar to one passed by the House in 1963, contended that the steady rise in the crime rate in the District showed a need for change in existing criminal laws and procedures, especially those permitting police to question suspects.

Central points of difference between the House and Senate were provisions permitting police interrogation of suspects, authorizing investigative arrests, nullifying the Mallory Rule (relating to admissibility of confessions) and modifying the Durham Rule (relating to the defense of insanity). (For background on the two rules, see below)

PROVISIONS -- Following are the major provisions of HR 5688 as passed by the House, and the differing provisions passed by the Senate:

Mallory Rule. Title I of the House version nullified the Mallory Rule, providing instead that delay between arrest and arraignment did not in itself vitiate a confession. The Senate version said that confessions were admissible at trial if police warned the suspect of his rights, gave him opportunity to obtain counsel, confined interrogation to an aggregate of three hours after arrest and recorded the interrogation.

Durham Rule. Title II of the House version abolished the rule and defined insanity as lacking the "substantial capacity either to know or appreciate the wrongfulness" of one's act. It required the plea of insanity to be raised within 15 days of pleading not guilty. The Senate version made no change in the rule, but required the plea of insanity to be raised within 30 days before trial or within 15 days of the court's receipt of results of a court-ordered psychiatric examination.

Investigative Arrests. Title III of the House version authorized police to detain up to six hours for questioning a person who police had probable cause to believe had committed, was committing or was about to commit a crime. It also provided for detention of material witnesses for up to six hours and thereafter on bond. The Senate version did not authorize investigative arrests but did permit detention of material witnesses in felony cases.

Robbery. Title IV of the House version added robbery to the list of crimes of violence, while the Senate version substituted robbery for housebreaking on that list.

Increased Penalties, Obscenity Law. Title V of the House version provided minimum sentences for assault, two degrees of burglary, production or circulation of obscene matter, robbery, bribes to influence athletic contests and the use of explosives with intent to damage property, and added a mandatory sentence for use of firearms in the course of committing a crime of violence. The Senate version removed the minimum sentence for sports bribes. Title V also authorized the U.S. Attorney for the District to bring injunction proceedings to halt the sale or distribution of obscene matter, providing for a hearing on the issue of obscenity within five days and for appeal. The sale or distribution of obscene matter was made a crime punishable by a fine of up to $5,000 and imprisonment of up to two years in the House version and one year in the Senate version. The title also punished the making of false reports to police.

Retroactivity. Title VI of the Senate version, but not the House version, prohibited retroactive application of the bill to crimes committed before enactment.

Background

HR 5688 represented yet another effort to alter criminal law procedure in the District, procedure governed in part by court rulings in two key cases. Those were Mallory v. U.S. (1957), by the Supreme Court, and Durham v. U.S. (1954), by the federal Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

In Mallory, the Court held that "unnecessary delay" in arraigning a criminal defendant vitiated his interim confession to police as a violation of Rule 5(a) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, which required arraignment "without unnecessary delay." Mallory had been questioned for seven hours after arrest before he confessed and before he was arraigned, despite the presence of more than 35 magistrates in the same building.

Durham abolished the old right-and-wrong insanity test and enunciated a new test, that "an accused person is not criminally responsible if his unlawful act was the product of mental disease or defect."

The Senate and House in 1958 passed differing versions of a bill to change the Mallory Rule, but the Senate did not adopt the conference report. (1958 Almanac p. 295) The House passed similar bills in 1959 and 1961, but the Senate acted on neither. (1959 Almanac p. 211; 1961 Almanac p. 412)

An obscene matter bill similar to provisions in HR 5688 was passed by Congress in 1962, but President Kennedy pocket vetoed the measure on grounds that it raised constitutional problems. (1962 Almanac p. 410) A bill to alter the Durham Rule was passed by the House in 1961 but received no further action.

HR 5688 was essentially the same as an omnibus D.C. crime bill (HR 7525) passed by the House by voice vote on Aug. 12, 1963. Most sections of that bill were opposed by the Budget Bureau, the Justice Department and the District of Columbia Commissioners, and there was no evidence in 1965 that their objections had changed. The Senate took no action on HR 7525. (1963 Almanac p. 407)

Administration Action

President Johnson Feb. 15 sent to Congress a message outlining proposals for the District of Columbia and urging, among other things, better incentives and training for police, measures to reduce the workload of courts, a pistol registration law and new authorities for the police department. He said he would appoint a crime commission to study law enforcement in the District. (This was done July 16. See story p. 628)

On July 14, David C. Acheson, U.S. Attorney for the District, advised District Police Chief John B. Layton that police should adopt the practice of questioning suspects for up to three hours aggregate after advising them of their rights to remain silent and to obtain counsel and affording them an opportunity to obtain counsel.

House

COMMITTEE -- District of Columbia.
HEARINGS -- None.

ACTION -- March 17, by a 14-9 vote, reported HR 5688 (H Rept 176). The bill had been introduced March 2 by Rep. Basil L. Whitener (D N.C.).

A lengthy minority views section was signed by nine Committee members: Democrats William L. Dawson (Ill.), Abraham J. Multer (N.Y.), B.F. Sisk (Calif.), Charles C. Diggs Jr. (Mich.), Carlton R. Sickles (Md.), Donald M. Fraser (Minn.) and J. Oliva Huot (N.H.) and Republicans Charles McC. Mathias Jr. (Md.) and Frank Horton (N.Y.). In addition, George W. Grider (D Tenn.) filed a short minority views section. Both minority sections opposed enactment of the bill.

FLOOR ACTION. The House March 22 passed HR 5688 by a 251-131 roll-call vote. Before passage, the House by a 166-216 roll-call vote rejected a motion by Rep. Charles McC. Mathias Jr. (R Md.) to recommit the bill to the House District of Columbia Committee with instructions that it hold hearings on "criminal legislation" for the District. (For voting, see chart p. 944)

During debate March 22, opponents said HR 5688 was harsh, repressive, untimely in view of the President's proposed D.C. crime commission and ineffective in dealing with the "deep social roots" of crime. They pointed out that no hearings had been held on the bill.

Basil L. Whitener (D N.C.), floor manager of HR 5688, said that there had been ample hearings on the similar bill (HR 7525) in 1963. He said police must not be "shackled" in their authority to question suspects and hold witnesses and argued that mandatory sentences would deter criminal activity.

Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.) declared that "nothing in this bill" would alter crime statistics or deter the commission of crime. Multer also argued that the investigative detention section would allow police to hold a person an indefinite length of time even though the bill specified a limit of six hours. He said a person could be released after six hours and immediately rearrested by another policeman and detained for another six hours. "That could go on ad infinitum," he said.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- District of Columbia.
HELD HEARINGS -- Intermittently between April 27-Aug. 5 on HR 5688 and a similar bill (S 1526) introduced by Sen. Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.).

ACTION -- Aug. 13 reported HR 5688 (S Rept 600) with amendments.

Majority Views. The report called the District's crime rise the "foremost local problem in recent years," noting that it had risen steadily since 1957 and was up 25.1 percent from 1963 to 1964.

It said the Mallory Rule denied police an "essential investigative tool," but said that statutory guidelines for interrogation were preferable to administrative orders, even though the Justice Department opposed statutory guidelines as inviting legal attack.

The Durham Rule had proved workable, the report said, but time limits should be placed on entering the plea of insanity to prevent the prosecution from being "taken by surprise at trial." The report said the House provision for six-hour investigative arrests "would not meet the constitutional test."

Minority Views. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) dissented on grounds that Title I, which permitted three hours of interrogation, abridged rights guaranteed by the 4th, 5th, 6th and 8th Amendments. The Mallory Rule should not be changed, he said, and the bill should contain provision for counsel for indigent defendants in order to save it from constitutional attack.

Supplementary Views. Robert F. Kennedy (D N.Y.) and Joseph D. Tydings (D Md.) said they would offer floor amendments to avoid any change in the Mallory Rule until current studies of the problem were completed, to delete the bill's mandatory minimum prison sentences as contrary to modern penological theory, to ease the time limit on a plea of insanity, and to limit the rewritten obscenity statute to "obscene" materials, omitting "lewd or indecent" as possibly unconstitutionally vague language.

FLOOR ACTION. The Senate Aug. 31 passed HR 5688, amended, by an 86-7 roll-call vote. The Senate rejected, by a 26-67 roll-call vote, an amendment by Sens. Tydings and Kennedy to delete modifications of the Mallory Rule. One other amendment was accepted and one was rejected, both by voice votes. (For voting, see chart p. 1069)

Debate centered largely on the wisdom of altering the Mallory Rule.

Thomas J. McIntyre (D N.H.) Aug. 30 said, "My fear is that the suspect may, on occasion, be getting the better break," and that rights of accused persons and rights of the public to be secure had fallen into imbalance. Strom Thurmond (R S.C.) Aug. 31 added, "For too long, unreasonable applications of the Mallory Rule have allowed admittedly guilty and dangerous criminals to escape punishment altogether."

Opponents of modifications of the Mallory Rule argued that the rule bore little relation to the rising crime rate. "I think," Kennedy said Aug. 31, "we should understand that even were the Mallory Rule to be done away with, the incidence of crime would not be materially affected in the District of Columbia." Wayne Morse (D Ore.) Aug. 30 repeated his view that the Mallory Rule modification was unconstitutional and said the provision would antagonize the District's large Negro population.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Aug. 30 -- Joseph D. Tydings (D Md.) and Robert F. Kennedy (D N.Y.) -- Require that written notice by a defendant of his intention to plead insanity be made at least 30 days prior to trial or within 15 days after receipt by the court of a court-ordered mental examination report. (The bill as reported required notice within 15 days after pleading not guilty.) Voice vote.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Aug. 30 -- Tydings and Kennedy -- Delete provisions setting minimum mandatory sentences for certain crimes of violence. Voice.

Aug. 31 -- Tydings and Kennedy -- Delete Title I, relating to the admissibility of evidence. Roll call, 26-67.

HEMISPHERE EXPOSITIONS

Several proposals for participation by the Federal Government in domestic exhibitions with an international aspect moved through Congress in 1965. But a few Members, noting that the 1964-65 New York World's Fair ended with a deficit of $18 million, tried hard to prevent further Government participation. The Congress in 1962 had appropriated $17 million for a U.S. pavilion at the New York fair.

Senate opposition prevented a vote on a House-passed bill (HR 30) which authorized U.S. participation in the proposed Inter-American Cultural and Trade Center (Interama) in Dade County, Fla., which was to be a permanent exposition. The House bill authorized $11 million for construction of a U.S. exhibit, plus maintenance costs.

The House failed to act in 1965 on a Senate-passed bill (S 2614) which provided for U.S. Government participation in the 1967 Alaska Centennial Exposition. The bill authorized $3 million in federal grants for centennial projects which made a permanent contribution to the Alaskan economy. Also authorized was $600,000 for U.S. participation in centennial ceremonies and exhibits.

A study of the extent and manner of federal participation in the HemisFair 1968 Exposition in San Antonio, Texas, was authorized in HR 9247 (PL 89-284) and $125,000 was appropriated for the study.

BACKGROUND -- In addition to the U.S. pavilion at the New York World's Fair, for which $17 million was appropriated in 1962 (1962 Almanac p. 157), Congress also authorized in 1958 a U.S. science center at the Century 21 Exposition held in Seattle, Wash., in 1962. Appropriations of $9.9 million were provided for the exhibit. (1961 Almanac p. 380, 179)

The Commerce Department on Oct. 2, 1964, issued regulations to be followed by U.S. promoters of international fairs. Noting that the U.S. Government expected that a Bicentennial Exposition celebrating the 200th year of American independence would be held in 1975 or 1976, and that in the same period some 16 U.S. cities were hoping to hold international expositions, the Commerce Department statement emphasized the need for approval of the Bicentennial Exposition by the Bureau International des Expositions (BIE) in Paris, which governs the scheduling and conduct of international fairs in which foreign governments officially participate. The statement said other U.S. expositions should not interfere with the Bicentennial and that the Government would invite foreign participation in a U.S. fair only if it had been approved by the BIE. As for financial aid by the U.S. Government, the Commerce Department said it would not sponsor such legislation but would give its views on individual projects when asked by Congress.

INTER-AMERICAN CULTURAL CENTER

Congressional opposition to continuing U.S. participation in world's fairs centered on the proposed Inter-American Cultural and Trade Center (Interama) to be established near Miami, Fla., starting in 1967. It was planned as a permanent center to promote understanding, cultural exchange, trade development and political cooperation among nations of the Western Hemisphere. The Inter-American Center Authority, which would operate Interama, was chartered as a state agency by the Florida legislature in 1951. The Authority in 1961 acquired from the city of Miami a 1,700-acre tract of land on which to build the exposition.

HOUSE ACTION. The House Sept. 22 passed HR 30, which authorized federal participation in Interama and $11 million for a U.S. Government exhibit there, on a 255-112 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 1006) The bill was reported Sept. 9 by the House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 974).

Committee approval of HR 30 followed a two-year lobbying effort by several lobbyists, a public relations firm and the entire Florida delegation. The two principal lobbyists, both of whom registered for Interama in 1963, were Edward K. Moss, who in 1965 was deputy director for public affairs in the Office of Economic Opportunity, and Raymond K. Jacobson, a Washington attorney, who served as advance man for Hubert H. Humphrey during the 1964 campaign. (1963 Almanac p. 1068)

Richard K. Donahue, a Boston attorney and former member of the White House legislative liaison staff under President Kennedy, was employed by Interama to help obtain a $22 million loan from the Community Facilities Administration in the Housing and Home Finance Agency and also to help speed agency reports required by House and Senate committees before legislation authorizing U.S. participation in Interama could be reported. Donahue did not register as a lobbyist.

The Commerce Department had no objection to the bill, since Interama would be a permanent exhibition rather than a fair that would concern the international exposition bureau in Paris. The State Department, however, in a Sept. 8 letter to the Committee said, "Before the Federal Government makes a commitment to become a permanent exhibitor, it would seem reasonable to confirm by some independent study the likelihood of participation in this event by U.S. private enterprise and Latin American countries."

HR 30 earmarked $250,000 for a study by the appropriate Government agency of the proposed nature and cost of U.S. participation in Interama and the probable participation by foreign countries and private industry. An amendment by H.R. Gross (R Iowa) to reduce this sum to $125,000 was rejected by voice vote of the House.

In debate, the bill's floor manager, Dante B. Fascell (D Fla.), said that to date Interama had obtained financial commitments and resources "approaching" $150 million out of a total $500 million the project was expected to cost.

SENATE ACTION. After four meetings on the bill in executive session, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Oct. 22 reported HR 30 (S Rept 937) with amendments and without recommendation. The Senate Committee cut from $11 million to $7.5 million the authorization for the U.S. exhibit at Interama, and limited the payment of maintenance costs to the first two years instead of four years.

The report included a letter from the Budget Bureau indicating that the Administration was unable to decide whether or not HR 30 was desirable legislation. The Budget Bureau's letter said Interama was "a most imaginative proposal which will be of undoubted benefit to the state of Florida and the city of Miami." But it questioned what would happen if Interama encountered financial difficulties in the future. It also noted that approval of the bill "might" prompt other cities to seek federal funds for similar undertakings; federal participation thus would be a "significant precedent," the Bureau said. The agency said it could not recommend action on the bill "pending further study."

The report also carried minority views by Chairman J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) and Sens. Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio), John J. Williams (R Del.) and Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) which said HR 30 would "set a precedent... which will haunt the Senate for years to come" and declared that the bill's proponents had "not made a case why there is a need for action now," so soon before the adjournment of Congress.

Lausche, in an Oct. 20 Senate speech, complained of numerous communications pressuring him to approve the bill. He said Irving Muskat, head of Interama, "has been very busy. I cannot say that he is the one who has contacted these people, but the evidence points toward him. I serve notice on him that the more he attempts to beat me down, the greater my opposition will be to his program."

On Oct. 22, the last day of the session, Sen. Williams (Del.) prevented Senate consideration of HR 30 when he objected to a unanimous consent request by Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) to consider the bill, which had just been reported from committee. Congress adjourned in the early morning of Oct. 23, preventing action on HR 30 until 1966.

HEMISFAIR EXPOSITION

Congress, in HR 9247 -- PL 89-284, authorized participation by the U.S. Government in the international HemisFair 1968 Exposition to be held at San Antonio, Texas, in 1968. The six-month fair was to celebrate the 250th anniversary of the founding of San Antonio and to display the achievements of the Western Hemisphere. HR 9247 requested the President to invite the participation of foreign countries in the exposition and, as enacted, authorized $125,000 for a Commerce Department study of the extent and cost of the U.S. Government's participation.

The original bill authorized $250,000 for the study, but an amendment offered on the Senate floor Sept. 28 by John J. Williams (R Del.), and accepted by voice vote, cut the cost to $125,000. A similar amendment offered in the House Sept. 22 by H.R Gross (R Iowa) had been rejected by voice vote, but the House Oct. 6 accepted the Williams amendment without objection.

HR 9247 was reported by the House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 975) Sept. 9 and a companion bill (S 2167 --S Rept 767) was reported by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Sept. 22, with minority views by Williams and Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio). The two Senators warned that the Government and foreign countries were being asked to participate in too many fairs and said the U.S. Government was already committed to contribute to the Universal International Exposition to be held in Montreal, Canada, in 1967.

HR 9247 was signed into law Oct. 22. The general supplemental appropriations bill (HR 11588 -- PL 89-309), enacted Oct. 31, provided the full $125,000 authorized for the study of U.S. participation in the exposition. On Nov. 11 President Johnson issued a proclamation inviting foreign countries to participate in the HemisFair. He noted that Texas Gov. John B. Connally (D) had agreed to be the commissioner general of the fair.

ALASKA CENTENNIAL

The Senate Oct. 22 passed by voice vote and sent to the House a bill (S 2614) providing for U.S. participation in the 1967 Alaska Centennial exposition, celebrating the U.S. purchase of Alaska from Russia in 1867. The bill authorized $3 million in federal grants for centennial projects which made a permanent contribution to the Alaskan economy. The federal funds had to be matched by non-federal money. The bill also authorized $600,000 for U.S. participation in centennial ceremonies and exhibits. Matching was not required for these funds.

Before passage, the Senate by voice vote accepted an amendment by John J. Williams (R Del.) reducing the amount authorized in the committee bill for matching funds from $4 million to $3 million.

In opposition to the bill, Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) said he favored U.S. participation in the program but saw "no justification" for spending $4,600,000 in federal-local funds to build auditoriums in Sitka, Anchorage, and Fairbanks which he said would be used for convention purposes.

The Commerce Committee by a vote of 16-1 reported S 2614 Oct. 20 (S Rept 928). The dissenting vote was cast by Lausche. The Committee reduced the amount authorized in the bill as introduced from $7,200,000, the cost of Alaska's purchase, to $4 million.

Some form of federal participation in the Centennial was recommended in a May 27 Commerce Department report to Congress. The report said the Government "should place primary emphasis on...programs contributing to the long-range development of Alaska," such as economic aid and college scholarships.

A similar House bill (HR 9963 -- H Rept 1187) which authorized $5 million in matching grants was reported by the House Public Works Committee Oct. 21. The House did not act on the bill in 1965.

GOVERNMENT INFORMATION

For the second year in a row, the Senate in 1965 passed an Administration-opposed bill to require the Government to disclose more information to the public. The 1965 "Freedom of Information Bill" (S 1160) was reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 813) Oct. 4 and passed by voice vote of the Senate, without dissent, Oct. 13. It was almost identical to the 1964 bill. (For details, see 1964 Almanac p. 414.)

Hearings on a similar House bill (HR 5012) were held March 30-April 5 by the Foreign Operations and Government Information Subcommittee of the House Government Operations Committee, but no further action was taken.

House Subcommittee Chairman John E. Moss (D Calif.) April 2 released a letter from President Johnson which assured the Subcommittee that the claim of "executive privilege," by which the Executive Branch withholds information from Congress, would continue to be asserted only by the President, and not by his subordinates. The President promised that his Administration would "cooperate completely with Congress in making available to it all the information possible."

The "Freedom of Information Bill" required that, except for eight categories of information (of which the first was "the interest of national defense or foreign policy"), Government agencies must make their records and information available to the public. It authorized federal court suits to obtain information.

The bill was backed by the American Newspaper Publishers Assn., the American Bar Assn. and the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., among others. Federal officials said a statute would be too inflexible and would open to the public individuals' private records.

OBSCENE MAIL

HR 980 -- Reported by House Post Office and Civil Service Committee (H Rept 219) April 1, 1965.
- Passed by the House on a 360-21 roll-call vote April 5. (See p. 948)

The House in 1965 passed a bill (HR 980) to permit a person who received "obscene, lewd, lascivious, indecent, filthy, or vile" mail to have the Postmaster General prevent the sender from mailing similar unsolicited material to the addressee or his children.

The Justice and Post Office Departments raised administrative and constitutional objections to HR 980. The Senate took no action on the bill.

HR 980 was the latest attempt by Rep. Glenn Cunningham (R Neb.) to find a way to limit obscene mail. Meanwhile, an earlier law sponsored by Cunningham, which required the withholding of "Communist political propaganda" from the mails unless the addressee requested delivery, was struck down by the Supreme Court.

Background

REFERENCES -- Obscene Mail (1958 Almanac p. 240; 1964 Almanac p. 440; Congress and the Nation p. 1671-72)

Although the mailing of obscene matter long has been a criminal offense (18 USC 1461), the determination of what is obscene has varied greatly. (For Supreme Court decisions between 1957-1962, see Congress and the Nation, p. 123a-127a.) From 1950 on, Congress made a number of attempts to strengthen anti-obscenity laws. A 1958 law (PL 85-796) permitted prosecution of an offender in any court district through which obscene mail passed or which received obscene mail. Prosecution previously was limited to districts in which obscene mail originated. (1958 Almanac p. 240)

In 1964 the House passed a bill (HR 319) by Rep. Cunningham to permit persons who received mail which they considered "morally offensive" to return the mail to the Postmaster General with the request that he notify the sender not to mail them further similar unsolicited material. HR 319 was opposed by the Administration and the Senate did not act on it. (1964 Almanac p. 440)

1965 Action

When the 89th Congress convened in 1965, Cunningham introduced a revised version of the legislation (HR 980) which substituted for the phrase "morally offensive" the language "obscene, lewd, lascivious, indecent, filthy or vile." The bill also required the Postmaster General to hold a hearing before seeking court action.

The House Post Office and Civil Service Subcommittee on Postal Operations held hearings on HR 980 March 30. The only witness was Rep. Edwin Reinecke (R Calif.) who supported the bill.

In letters to the Subcommittee, the Post Office and Justice Departments raised administrative and constitutional objections to HR 980 and declined to recommend passage.

Postmaster General John A. Gronouski wrote, "The bill...lodge(s) the determination as to what constitutes obscenity within the subjective opinion of each person involved," instead of in the courts. The Departments said that mailing obscene material was already a criminal offense and that persons could refuse to receive it. (See PL 87-793, 1962 Almanac p. 358)

ACTION -- The Post Office and Civil Service Committee reported the bill (H Rept 219) April 1. The report said that in previous hearings recognized authorities "presented...overwhelming evidence that a multimillion-dollar traffic in obscene mail and immoral products is still growing, with much of it directed to debasement of the morals of the very young and impressionable." FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover was quoted as saying obscene mail was a major factor in the growth of juvenile delinquency.

No minority views were presented.

FLOOR ACTION

The House April 5 passed HR 980 by a roll-call vote of 360-21, and sent it to the Senate. (For voting, see chart p. 948)

Under the bill, a person could return obscene mail to the Postmaster General and direct the PG to tell the sender not to mail any more to the individual or his children. Further mailings would allow the Government to seek a restraining court order against the sender. Violation of the court order would be punishable as contempt of court.

In debate, Cunningham said the bill was "based on old English common law that a man's home is his castle and therefore it is my parental right not to have my privacy invaded." John V. Lindsay (R N.Y.), in opposition, said the bill would "give the recipient the power to trigger off an action...against the most innocent sender, even a Member (of Congress) sending a newsletter."

ABA Position. The American Bar Association at its annual convention Aug. 9-13 said it was "in accord with the objections to HR 980 voiced by the Justice and Post Office Departments."

Obscenity Study. The Select Subcommittee on Education of the House Education and Labor Committee held hearings Sept. 1, 2, 8 and 14 on a bill (HR 7465), sponsored by Rep. Dominick V. Daniels (D N.J.), to establish a Commission on Noxious and Obscene Matters and Materials, to consist of 15 members appointed by the President. The Commission, with a staff and subpoena powers, would study the traffic in obscene materials and explore methods of combating it.

Fred M. Vinson Jr., Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Criminal Division of the Justice Department, Sept. 14 suggested postponing action on the bill in light of a possible study by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare of the effects of obscenity on the human mind.

Communist Mail. The Supreme Court May 24, 1965, in Lamont v. Postmaster General and Fixa v. Heilberg, unanimously struck down a section of the 1962 omnibus postal law (HR 7929 -- PL 87-793) which required the withholding of "Communist political propaganda" unless the addressee requested delivery. The Court found that the requirement to fill out a Post Office form requesting delivery infringed on the addressee's freedom of speech.

The section, sponsored by Rep. Glenn Cunningham (R Neb.), directed the Post Office to intercept Communist propaganda from foreign countries and deliver it only if the addressee requested it. Excluded were first-class letters and Communist propaganda mailed to libraries, universities, government offices and scientific institutions. (1962 Almanac p. 356, 365, 370)

SPORTS REGULATIONS

Congress in 1965 considered legislation to extend federal regulation of certain professional sports activities. It also took action to help settle a dispute between two amateur athletic organizations.

The Senate passed a bill (S 950) to bring professional baseball, football, basketball and hockey uniformly under the antitrust laws, with specific exemptions granted for certain activities of the sports. The House passed a bill (HR 8635) designed to rid professional boxing of alleged racketeering. HR 8635 created a Federal Boxing Commission to regulate professional matches televised or broadcast interstate or to other countries. The Senate adopted a resolution (S Res 147) authorizing establishment of an arbitration board to settle disputes relating to the conduct of amateur athletics. The board's first job was to help settle the battle between the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. and the Amateur Athletic Union over control of amateur track and field competition in the United States.

ANTITRUST EXEMPTIONS

S 950 -- Reported by Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 462) July 16, 1965.

- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Aug. 31. (For roll-call vote on amendment, see p. 1070)

The Senate in 1965 passed and sent to the House a bill (S 950) applying antitrust laws uniformly to professional baseball, football, basketball and hockey, but exempting from such laws the league and team activities believed necessary to preserve a balanced competitive situation.

BACKGROUND -- Since 1922 the status of baseball and other professional sports with respect to antitrust regulation had been cloudy. In that year, the Supreme Court ruled that organized professional baseball was not subject to antitrust laws (Federal Baseball Club of Baltimore v. National League). The Court held that the "reserve clause," a provision in players' contracts that forbade them to contract with another professional baseball team, was not a violation of antitrust regulation.

The Court affirmed baseball's exemption from antitrust laws in 1953 (Toolson v. New York Yankees). George Toolson, New York Yankee farm team player, sued the Yankees on grounds they had blacklisted him after he refused to report to a minor league club. The majority ruled against Toolson, noting that baseball had "been left for 30 years to develop, on the understanding that it was not subject to existing antitrust legislation."

Two years later, professional boxing was refused a similar antitrust exemption. The Court said its baseball decisions "did not hold that all businesses based on professional sports were outside the scope of the antitrust laws" (U.S. v. International Boxing Club of N.Y.).

In 1957, William Radovich, a former guard with the Detroit Lions, sued the National Football League on grounds it prevented him from becoming a player-coach in the Pacific Coast League. The Court ruled that professional football was not exempt from antitrust laws (Radovich v. National Football League). It said that the coverage of the Toolson case had been carefully restricted to baseball.

In the Radovich decision, and on previous occasions, the Court indicated that it was a Congressional prerogative to legislate a rule that would apply uniformly to professional sports. "We, therefore, conclude," the Court's majority said in 1957, "that the orderly way to eliminate error or discrimination, if any there be, is by legislation and not by court decision." (For Court decisions, see 1958 Almanac p. 318)

Congressional Action. Congress was reluctant to act on the Supreme Court's suggestion, although since 1952 it considered sports regulation in several sessions. Only once, in 1961, was a sports antitrust bill passed by both houses of Congress and enacted into law. The law (HR 9096 -- PL 87-331) was of limited scope. It amended the antitrust laws to authorize professional sports leagues of baseball, football, basketball and hockey to enter into television contracts on behalf of member teams and protected college football from competing telecasts of professional games. (1961 Almanac p. 502)

In 1958 Congress considered bills that made antitrust laws applicable to professional baseball, football, basketball and hockey, but exempted certain team activities believed to be necessary and peculiar to the games. The House passed a bill (HR 10378) granting antitrust exemptions for activities of the four professional sports relating to: equalization of competitive playing strengths (e.g., the drafting of minor league or college players); employment of players (e.g., the reserve clause); agreements to play within specified geographical areas; broadcast and television rights; and "the preservation of public confidence in the honesty in sports contests."

The decision of the Senate Judiciary Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee to table HR 10378, however, prevented further action on the bill in the 85th Congress. (1958 Almanac p. 318)

In 1960, the Senate Judiciary Committee reported without recommendation a bill (S 3483) that was similar, except in two provisions, to the 1958 sports antitrust bill. One new provision prohibited the televising of professional league games (in any of the sports) within 75 miles of a city where a regularly scheduled league game was being played in the same sport. The provision was designed primarily to protect the "live gate" at minor league games, especially in baseball.

The second new provision, which applied only to baseball, was designed to restrict stringently the use of the reserve clause in baseball players' contracts. It set a limit on the number of players a major league club could reserve for its own use and for use by its affiliated minor league clubs. Players with more than four years of experience in professional baseball, who had not been reserved within the limits, would be available in baseball's yearly draft.

The Senate June 28, 1960, struck out, by a 45-41 roll-call vote, the provision limiting the reserve clause. Supporters of the Committee's bill argued in vain that unrestricted use of the reserve clause had forced some players to remain in the minor leagues because it tied them to one major league team and barred them from selling their talents to other teams. Committee members said the floor amendment nullified the purpose of S 3483 and moved that the bill be recommitted. The Senate agreed to the recommittal motion by a 73-12 roll-call vote. (For additional information on S 3483, see 1960 Almanac p. 261)

The Senate Judiciary Committee Aug. 4, 1964, reported another sports antitrust bill (S 2391) that was similar to the earlier measures. No further action was taken by the 88th Congress. (Continued on next page)

Shortly after S 2391 was reported, the Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS) Aug. 14 announced its intention to purchase 80 percent of the New York Yankees baseball team for $11.2 million, effective Nov. 2. The Justice Department immediately began a study to determine if the purchase violated antitrust laws, but no case was brought and the sale was consummated.

In a related development, a legal battle began in 1965 over the Milwaukee (Wis.) Braves' baseball team's plan to move its franchise to Atlanta, Ga. The move would have left Milwaukee without a major league baseball franchise. In Milwaukee; a state circuit judge issued a temporary restraining order instructing the Braves to prepare to play in Milwaukee in 1966. Hearings on an antitrust suit brought by the state of Wisconsin against the Braves and the National League began Feb. 28, 1966. Meanwhile, an Atlanta superior court judge issued a temporary injunction requiring the Braves to play their home games in Atlanta's new stadium. A federal judge in Houston, Texas, Feb. 24, 1966, granted a temporary injunction that in effect ordered the Braves to play their 1966 home games in Atlanta, and scheduled hearings on a request for a permanent injunction.

1965 Action

COMMITTEE -- Senate Judiciary, Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- Feb. 18-19, 23-24 on a bill (S 950) to exempt certain activities of professional baseball, football, basketball and hockey teams from antitrust law, and to bring professional baseball under antitrust law and the Federal Trade Commission Act.

In opening the 1965 hearing, Sen. Philip A. Hart (D Mich.), chairman of the Subcommittee and sponsor of S 950, said that the major focus of the hearings would be the CBS purchase of the Yankees and "its relationship to this legislation." Hart contended that the transaction had "killed any hopes of passage" of S 2391 in 1964, and said that a public review of the CBS purchase was necessary "if we are ever going to get this bill (S 950) through Congress."

With one exception, major league officials and owners of individual league teams testified in support of the CBS purchase. The exception was Charles O. Finley, owner of the Kansas City Athletics, who said he would be greatly relieved "if federal action nullifies the sale." Finley said CBS would have an advantage in television contract negotiations because it would know what packaging of programs would be most acceptable to the league. Frank Stanton, president of CBS, defended the transaction as a "diversification" of the company's activities. Officials of the National Broadcasting Company and the American Broadcasting Company supported the CBS purchase.

Sen. William Proxmire (D Wis.) testified in support of his proposed amendment to S 950 which required professional teams to pool their radio and television revenues, thus discouraging owners from moving teams to obtain larger television markets. The amendment was prompted by the Braves' decision to move from Milwaukee to Atlanta. Commenting on the Braves' move, Proxmire said, "The fact is that several enterprising Chicago businessmen (owners of the Braves) saw an opportunity to move into a vast, unexploited television and radio market which dominates at least five states and jumped at the opportunity."

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Senate Committee July 16 reported S 950 (S Rept 462). The Committee adopted two major amendments. One amendment, sponsored by Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D N.C.), banned a provision of the player draft system (in any of the sports covered by the bill) whereby a single team had "exclusive or preferred right" for six months to contract for a player's services while he was still in college. The other amendment prohibited the televising of professional football games at times when the telecasts would conflict with the playing of high school as well as college football games.

The report said there was no reason "in theory or fact" why baseball should not be subject to antitrust laws. It said the legislation was in response to the Supreme Court's position that Congress should legislate a uniform rule on the applicability of antitrust laws to professional sports.

The report also stated that the specific exemptions provided in the bill were necessary to maintain "balance" between teams within a league. It pointed out that the exemptions would allow, among other practices, the use of the player draft and the reserve clause, which it said were "necessary to maintain competitive equality among the member clubs and leagues in the various sports." It said without the exemptions, "the wealthier teams would absorb the best talent and force the dissolution of the poorer teams and the leagues themselves."

The report said "the CBS acquisition of the Yankees brings into sharp focus the need for the present bill. Organized baseball relies increasingly on television for financial stability and the position CBS has gained by its acquisition raises serious competitive questions that require the availability of antitrust weapons to protect the public interest."

Concerning the amendment to ban the televising of professional football games in areas where high school games were being played, the report said that such an amendment was "necessary to obviate the great disadvantage that could result to high school football programs, and to other high school athletic programs for which football provides financial support if there is competition from televised professional football games."

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Aug. 31 passed S 950, amended, by voice vote and sent it to the House. (For roll-call votes on amendments, see chart p. 1070)

During debate, Sen. Hart, who was floor manager of the bill, said S 950 was designed to extend antitrust regulation to business aspects of professional sports while exempting certain "traditional essential sports aspects." "On balance," Hart said, the bill protected the public, ensured a competitive system of team sports and protected the interests of team players.

Exemptions from the antitrust laws, Hart explained, would allow professional sports to continue the draft system of player selection, which helped equalize playing strengths, and the reserve clause. Hart said other exemptions would allow the leagues to effect geographic balances to ensure financial stability through preservation of their "live gates" and would allow the leagues to have commissioners, providing for player discipline, etc.

The Senate, on a 29-60 roll-call vote, refused to adopt the amendment, sponsored by Ervin, that would have prevented teams from getting "exclusive or preferred right" for six months to contract for a player's services while he was still in college. Ervin said the amendment was designed to preserve the individual's "freedom" to bargain with all teams seeking his services. Hart opposed the amendment, contending that the draft system, by prohibiting competitive bidding, "represents the best assurance of a high-level balance...(preventing) the rich (teams) from getting richer and the poor getting poorer."

Also rejected, by a 26-62 roll call, was an amendment by Proxmire to require major league baseball to pool and equally distribute radio and television revenues -- a practice adopted by major league football. The bill, without his amendment, Proxmire argued, would spell the end of major league baseball in many communities with limited television markets, including Milwaukee. Hart opposed the amendment on the grounds that Congress should not get involved in "a decision that relates to how businesses across the country shall be permitted to treat the profit that may be derived as a result of their management effort."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S 950:

Extended the applicability of the antitrust laws and the Federal Trade Commission Act uniformly to professional baseball, football, basketball and hockey.

Exempted from such laws activities of these sports relating to: (1) the equalization of playing strengths; (2) the employment, reservation and selection of players; (3) the right to operate in specific geographic areas; and (4) the "preservation of public confidence in the honesty in sports contests."

Extended to high schools the same protection afforded colleges under a 1961 law (PL 87-331) by banning the televising of professional football games after 6 p.m. Friday or on any Saturday from mid-September to mid-December within 75 miles of a high school game.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Aug. 31 -- William Proxmire (D Wis.) -- Permit the antitrust exemption for operation of any team within a specific geographic area only if the team's league required the pooling and equal distribution of revenues derived by member teams from radio and television broadcasting. Roll-call vote, 26-62.

Gordon Allott (R Colo.) -- Allow the exemption of football player selection and contract arrangements only if each team permitted all other teams in leagues of similar rank in the sport to participate in player selection and contract plans on an equitable basis. The amendment would have required a common draft and thus eliminated the practice of two teams in different leagues bidding against one another for the services of a single player. Voice.

James B. Pearson (R Kan.) -- Delete from S 950 the provision giving antitrust exemption for agreements permitting only one team to operate within a specific geographic area. (Pearson said deletion of the exemption "would aid in the protection of municipalities against overnight loss of their professional athletic groups.") Voice.

HOUSE BILL

Rep. Byron G. Rogers (D Colo.) July 21 introduced a bill (HR 9981) which differed in one major respect from S 950. It contained the provision, sponsored by Sen. Allott and rejected on the Senate floor, for a common draft among leagues of equal standing. In introducing his bill, Rogers said: "It would give the less wealthy teams in the professional sport equality with the more wealthy teams in the same sport in bidding for player personnel." No hearings on HR 9981 were held in 1965.

BOXING COMMISSION

HR 8635 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 784) Aug. 12, 1965.

- Passed by the House by a 346-4 roll-call vote Aug. 16. (See p. 990)

The House in 1965 passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 8635) creating a Federal Boxing Commission to regulate professional matches televised or broadcast interstate or to other countries. The legislation was designed to rid boxing of alleged racketeering. It was, however, opposed as "undesirable" by the Justice Department and by U.S. broadcasters.

BACKGROUND -- Congress for several years had been concerned about racketeering and bribery in professional boxing. The Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Antitrust and Monopoly, whose chairman was the late Sen. Estes Kefauver (D Tenn. 1948-1963), in 1959 conducted an investigation of the monopoly aspects of professional boxing, and held hearings on the sport in June and December of 1960. Testimony disclosed that one of the leading figures controlling boxing was Frank Carbo, a well-known racketeer, and that one of Carbo's lieutenants, Gabriel Genovese, was paid $60,000 for obtaining matches for former middleweight champion Carmen Basilio.

In 1961 and 1963 Kefauver sponsored bills to create an office of the National Boxing Commissioner.

In March 1964 the Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee, under its new chairman, Philip A. Hart (D Mich.), held hearings on Kefauver's bill (S 1182). The hearings concentrated on the circumstances surrounding the championship fight between Cassius Clay and Charles "Sonny" Liston Feb. 24, 1964, which ended when Liston declined to continue the fight after the sixth round. The bill was reported to the full Committee, but no further action was taken.

However, Congress did act in 1964 to lessen racketeering influences on professional sports by enacting a bill (S 741 -- PL 88-316) to make bribery in sporting events a federal crime. The bill prohibited the use of any interstate or foreign transportation or communications facility in an attempt to influence an amateur or professional sporting event by bribery. It set maximum penalties of $10,000 and five years imprisonment. (1964 Almanac p. 429)

1965 Action

The 1965 bill for a boxing commission (HR 8635) was introduced May 27, 1965, only two days after the second Clay-Liston fight, held in Lewiston, Maine. Liston was beaten again, this time in the first round. HR 8635 was sponsored by Oren Harris (D Ark.), chairman of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. The bill established a Federal Boxing Commission with power to prevent the televising or broadcasting of any boxing event which the Commission determined to be in any way affected by bribery, collusion, or racketeering. (The telecasting of fights had become the most profitable element of a match.) The bill did not give the proposed Commission power to prohibit professional fights or to license boxers, promoters and managers, nor did it contain provisions relating to disclosure of contracts and financial transactions.

COMMITTEE -- House Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HELD HEARINGS -- July 6-8 on HR 8635.

Melvin L. Krulewitch, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, recommended that the commission be given the power to license boxers, promoters and managers to prevent individuals "detrimental to boxing" from being involved in the sport. Former heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey endorsed the proposal, saying "the power to license and control would be the key to federal authority." Most witnesses, including William Henry, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, recommended that the bill's controls on boxing be strengthened.

The Justice Department opposed the bill as "unnecessary and undesirable." In a letter Aug. 6 to the Committee, it said "existing law provides strong measures for dealing with many of the problems besetting professional boxing.... If further legislation is considered necessary, however, it should be directed at criminal activities in general and not limited to professional boxing." The Budget Bureau also opposed the bill.

ACTION -- The Committee Aug. 12 reported HR 8635 (H Rept 784) with amendments that allowed the proposed commission to prohibit professional fights under some circumstances and to license persons and businesses associated with boxing matches. Another amendment raised the maximum penalty for violation of a commission order from $10,000 to $50,000.

FLOOR ACTION

The House Aug. 16, by a 346-4 roll-call vote, passed HR 8635 and sent it to the Senate. The only Members opposing the bill were Democrats George W. Grider (Tenn.), Elmer J. Holland (Pa.), Barratt O'Hara (Ill.) and Edward J. Patten (N.J.). (For voting, see chart p. 990)

Prior to floor consideration of HR 8635, members of the National Assn. of Broadcasters (NAB) sent a message to House Members asking them to oppose the bill. The broadcasters indicated that they were generally sympathetic to the measure, but they were seriously disturbed by what they considered a "prior restraint" on their freedom to broadcast.

In response to the broadcasters, Chairman Harris and other members of the Committee drafted and inserted into the committee bill an amendment allowing broadcasters licensed by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to cover suspect fights at their discretion but at the risk of losing their licenses when they came up for renewal. The amendment was removed during floor consideration after other Members asserted that it would nullify the whole purpose of the bill.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 8635:

Established a Federal Boxing Commission, consisting of three members appointed by the President, with Senate confirmation, for six-year terms.

Authorized the commission to license boxers, managers, agents, promoters, matchmakers, referees, judges, or any other person or business connected with the broadcast or telecast of boxing matches across interstate lines or into foreign countries.

Empowered the commission to prohibit the interstate or foreign telecast, broadcast or wire transmission (to home receivers or theaters) of a match or to cancel the match itself when it determined that a boxer, manager or other participant was not properly licensed or when it believed that a match would in any way be affected by "bribery, collusion, intentional losing, racketeering, extortion or the use of unlawful threats, coercion, intimidation or violence."

Provided criminal penalties of up to $50,000 in fines and/or five years imprisonment upon conviction of withholding documents from the commission, or falsifying such documents. Provided penalties of up to $50,000 in fines and/or one year imprisonment for furnishing television, radio or wire coverage which had been prohibited by the commission. Provided a scale of less severe penalties for other infractions.

SENATE ACTION

The Senate Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee June 29 reported to the full Judiciary Committee, without recommendation, a bill (S 2124) to establish an office of National Boxing Commissioner in the Department of Justice for five years. No hearings were held on the bill and no further action was taken. S 2124 was introduced June 10 by Sen. Hart, and was similar to the earlier Kefauver bills.

TRACK DISPUTE

S Res 147 -- Reported by Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 462) July 16, 1965.
● Adopted by the Senate by voice vote Sept. 20.

In S Res 147 the Senate authorized the Vice President of the United States to appoint a five-member board of arbitration to render final and binding decisions in disputes relating to the conduct of amateur athletics. Adoption of the resolution was prompted by the continuing battle between the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (NCAA) and the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) over sponsorship of amateur track meets.

BACKGROUND -- The dispute between the NCAA and the AAU had continued sporadically for almost 50 years. The NCAA claimed jurisdiction, in recent years, over student athletes from approximately 650 colleges and universities and had the power to impose penalties on member schools or individual students for disobeying its orders. The AAU included amateur athletic clubs and individuals throughout the nation, and conducted numerous track and field meets.

In recent years the feud concerned sponsorship of "open" track meets in which both college and other athletes competed, as opposed to "closed" meets in which only college athletes competed. The AAU refused to approve meets if the meet sponsors permitted the NCAA to give its approval. The NCAA, however, insisted on dual sponsorship of open meets and barred its students from participating in meets it had not approved.

The AAU had been designated by the International Amateur Athletic Federation as the U.S. representative to that body. The designation gave the AAU the power to certify the eligibility of all amateur athletes to compete in IAAF meets, including the Olympic games. When the dispute threatened to obstruct fielding of an effective

U.S. team for the 1964 Olympic games, President Kennedy asked Gen. Douglas MacArthur to help. MacArthur's mediation resulted in a temporary truce.

The controversy broke out anew in 1965. At issue was an AAU-sponsored track and field meet in San Diego, Calif., June 26-27, which was to determine which athletes were to represent the United States in a dual meet with the Soviet Union at Kiev. Since the AAU refused to allow NCAA approval of the meet, the NCAA banned its students from the meet. A few college athletes, with the permission of their colleges, defied the NCAA ban and competed at San Diego. Others, notably runners Gerry Lindgren of Washington State University and Tom Farrell of St. Johns University, competed without approval of their colleges, thus jeopardizing both their collegiate eligibility and their athletic scholarships. However, many college athletes did not compete at San Diego, and the United States lost the meet at Kiev. It was the first loss to the Russians since the series of dual meets began in 1958.

Senate Action

COMMITTEE -- Senate Commerce.

HELD HEARINGS -- Aug. 16-27 on the dispute between the NCAA and AAU.

TESTIMONY -- Committee Chairman Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.), in an opening statement, said the purpose of the hearings was to finally "end the crippling war between the NCAA and the AAU." Magnuson said he hoped that the parties would agree to settle the dispute through voluntary arbitration, but that his Committee was prepared to consider legislation if necessary.

College athletes Gerry Lindgren and Tom Farrell, who defied the NCAA boycott of the AAU San Diego track meet in June, were the first to testify. Lindgren, saying, "we were not able to field our best team against the Russians," blamed the NCAA boycott. Farrell said he defied the NCAA ban because, "I wanted to represent my country." He expressed fear that the NCAA might bar him from future collegiate meets.

Several witnesses called for the establishment of a powerful track and field federation, or for creation of a committee to settle the NCAA-AAU dispute.

On Aug. 17, Committee members asked representatives of the two groups to adopt a moratorium whereby no punitive action would be taken against athletes by either organization for the duration of the hearings. Spokesmen for both groups agreed to the request.

William M. Henry, president of the Southern California Committee for the Olympic Games, testified on the financial interests the two organizations had in seeking control of amateur athletics. Henry said that he had learned, in his capacity as organizer of track meets, that the AAU took about two-thirds of the receipts for any meet it sanctioned. He said that the NCAA had a flat fee of $200 for sanctioning a meet.

On Aug. 25, the presidents of both amateur athletic organizations promised to accept binding arbitration of their dispute. Everett D. Barnes, president of the NCAA, agreed without any qualifications, but AAU President Clifford H. Buck said he would have to take the matter up with his executive committee. He promised to recommend acceptance.

Walter Byers, the executive director of the NCAA, told the Committee that "the AAU's claim to sole sanctioning authority in domestic meets" was without jurisdiction, and that he had been told by lawyers that an AAU rule to this effect was in violation of U.S. antitrust laws.

Sen. Robert F. Kennedy (D N.Y.) and Nicholas Rodis, chairman of the Interagency Committee on International Athletics, recommended that the U.S. Olympic Committee be given permanent authority to arbitrate all amateur athletic disputes.

Sen. Magnuson said that the "Olympic Committee was created by a charter from Congress, so we have some authority to make use of it." In winding up the hearings, Magnuson warned that he would not stand for any "mischief-making" against the truce the NCAA and AAU accepted Aug. 17 for the duration of the hearings, and which had been continued by consent of both disputing parties.

Resolution Reported. The Senate Commerce Committee Sept. 16 reported S Res 147 (S Rept 753), authorizing the Vice President to appoint a board to arbitrate disputes in amateur athletics. In letters to the Committee, the governing boards of the NCAA and the AAU agreed to the proposed arbitration, although the AAU's letter noted that it had "no authority to enter into arbitration concerning" international sports activities. Both groups also agreed to suspend penalties previously imposed on individuals, institutions and organizations affected by the dispute.

The report said S Res 147 was "deliberately broad and free of restrictions." It pointed out that the board had jurisdiction not only over the NCAA-AAU dispute but also over disputes arising in other amateur sports.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Sept. 20 adopted by voice vote the resolution (S Res 147) providing an arbitration board to settle disputes in amateur athletics.

S Res 147 provided that the Vice President of the United States appoint a five-member board to settle by binding arbitration any disputes relating to amateur athletics submitted to it by the parties involved. The resolution suggested that while the NCAA-AAU dispute was being considered, the two groups should grant ammesty to all individuals, institutions and organizations involved in the dispute; vacate pending penalties; permit full use of athletic facilities for scheduled meets; and end restraints against participation in scheduled meets and tournaments. They had agreed to do so, sponsors of S Res 147 said. Another provision required the appointed board to report its findings to the Senate by Feb. 15, 1966.

Arbitrators Named

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey Dec. 14 announced his appointments to the sports arbitration board. Appointed were: Theodore Kheel, a New York lawyer specializing in labor mediation, chairman; Archibald Cox, former U.S. Solicitor General; Gen. David M. Shoup, retired Marine Corps Commandant; Ralph Metcalfe, Chicago alderman; and Thomas Vail, publisher and editor of the Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer. Shoup and Metcalfe were former track champions.

Despite several meetings between the board and representatives of the NCAA and AAU, the board was unable to resolve the dispute in time for the Feb. 15 deadline set for its report.

D.C. RAPID TRANSIT

HR 4822 -- Reported, amended, by House District of Columbia Committee (H Rept 536) June 21, 1965.

- Passed by the House by voice vote July 15.
- Reported by Senate District of Columbia Committee (S Rept 637) Aug. 23.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Aug. 25.

PL 89-173 -- Signed into law Sept. 8.

Congress in 1965 enacted an Administration bill (HR 4822) authorizing construction of a publicly owned but privately operated rail rapid transit system for the District of Columbia. As signed into law, the bill:

Authorized the National Capital Transportation Agency to build and equip a 24.9-mile rail-transit sytem with 13.1 miles of it underground, at a total cost of $431 million (not including an estimated $52 million for interest costs).

Authorized $150 million in grants for construction and equipment, two-thirds from the Federal Government and one-third from the District of Columbia.

Authorized the sale of bonds to cover the remaining costs -- $281 million plus the interest costs of approximately $52 million -- underwritten on a two-thirds federal, one-third D.C. basis. The bonds would be paid off "out of the fare box," i.e., from the revenues of the transit system.

Required that the system be operated by a private contractor, and guaranteed workers' bargaining rights.

Most of the system would lie within the District's boundaries, but the design permitted extension into suburban areas, if later authorized. Construction of the authorized system was expected to take more than six years.

There was little opposition in Congress to the rail-transit plan. This was in sharp contrast to the fate of similar legislation in 1963, which was killed by the House on a 278-76 roll-call vote that recommitted the bill.

Of the factors which contributed to passage in 1965 of a bill so roundly defeated in 1963, the most important were (1) changes in the financing formula which reduced the federal share from $120 million out of $400.6 million (5/6 of the amount not covered by revenue bonds) to $100 million out of $431 million (2/3 of the amount not covered by bonds); and (2) a stipulation that the publicly owned system would be privately operated and the rights of employees protected. This stipulation removed opposition from transit unions based on the fear that collective bargaining rights would not be allowed to employees of a publicly operated transportation system. Another factor which worked in favor of passage was that national highway industry organizations, which bitterly fought the subway plan in 1963, in 1965 for the most part remained neutral.

The general supplemental appropriations bill for fiscal 1966 (HR 11588) granted $6,104,000 -- $3,075,000 less than requested -- for initial construction costs of the transit system. The total included $2,000,000 toward the District of Columbia's one-third share of the capital costs of the system; $425,000 for salaries and expenses; and $3,679,000 for planning and construction of the system. A House amendment to reduce the $2,000,000 item to $250,000 was rejected by standing vote. (See story p. 182)

BACKGROUND -- President Kennedy in 1963 recommended construction of a $792-million rail-transit system for the District of Columbia and its suburbs in Maryland and Virginia. The bill ran into opposition because of its cost, because the suburbs were not yet authorized by their states to share in administration and financing of the plan, and for other reasons. Finally, a $400.6-million plan dropping most suburban lines was approved by the House District of Columbia Committee but the House Dec. 9, 1963, ordered it recommitted to the Committee, in effect killing the plan. (1963 Almanac p. 396)

President Johnson Feb. 10, 1965, asked Congress to enact a new $431-million rail-transit plan. The President said that the system would provide improved transportation for the District of Columbia while preserving "the beauty, the dignity and the historic and monumental character of our Capital City."

House

COMMITTEE -- House District of Columbia.

ACTION -- June 21 reported HR 4822 with amendments (H Rept 536) by an 18-3 vote.

Majority Views. The Committee said HR 4822 contained these changes to meet objections raised to the 1963 bill: reduced the federal investment and increased the D.C. investment; provided that the facilities could not be operated except under contract by private entities; and provided that transit workers affected by any contract for operation of the system would be protected. The Committee amended the Administration bill to preserve the existing rights of bus companies currently serving the region.

The Committee said the program had the "overwhelming support of the Federal and District...Governments, the local governments of the National Capital region and the public at large."

Minority Views. Alvin E. O'Konski (R Wis.) and Richard L. Roudebush (R Ind.) opposed the bill on grounds of "the wholly unrealistic cost projections and the unfeasibility and unusability of" the system. They said it would be "a foot in the door" for a larger system costing over $2 billion; the debt could not be repaid "out of the fare box"; it would not be used to the extent expected; it "established unequal and preferred treatment for the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia which is not available to other cities and states"; it should be wholly financed by the District; and the estimated costs of construction, even if accurate, did not include the $52 million interest payment and such indeterminate costs as relocation assistance to businesses along the system's routes and added police protection in the underground areas.

In separate dissenting views, William H. Harsha (R Ohio) mentioned many of the arguments expressed in the minority views and opposed "federal financing of such a subway." He said the bill did not "provide for private enterprise operation; it merely adds on an extra charge and cost for an operator to operate for the Government, without any element of risk or expectancy of profit."

FLOOR ACTION

The House July 15 passed HR 4822 by voice vote.

Before passage the House rejected by voice vote a motion by Alvin E. O'Konski (R Wis.) to recommit the bill to the District of Columbia Committee with instructions to require a D.C. payment of two-thirds of the grants and federal payment of one-third. An identical amendment had been rejected earlier, along with seven other amendments, many of which were sought by the private D.C. Transit System Inc., which sought to protect its investments and to put itself in a position to control the rail transit system.

Most of the opposition centered on the provisions for federal financing. Bill manager Basil L. Whitener (D N.C.) said, however, that "if we who do not believe in 'home rule' continue to deny the basic necessities of this community, we have cut the props out from under our argument that the Congress should legislate exclusively for the District." Proponents insisted the system was vital to improve transportation problems in the District and said the financing formula was based on that in the 1964 Urban Mass Transportation Act. (1964 Almanac p. 556)

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

July 15 -- William H. Harsha (R Ohio) -- Require that all operating and interest costs be financed by users of the system. Voice vote.

Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.) -- Make it clear that construction, alteration and repair of the system must be carried out by private firms. Voice.

John Dowdy (D Texas) -- Require that the system be operated by franchise to a private company which would provide the cars, rolling stock and related facilities. Voice.

James Roosevelt (D Calif.) -- Require that if it became necessary to acquire private bus transit operations to produce a coordinated transit program, the acquisition would be consummated by June 30, 1968, and the value of the private system should be based on its current "going concern" valuation. Voice Multer -- Require Congressional approval before any contract for operation of the system could take effect. Standing, 11-93.

Multer -- Require the District to satisfy any judgment for damages arising from the system. Voice.

Alvin E. O'Konski (R Wis.) -- Change the federal share of direct appropriations for the system to one-third and the D.C. share to two-thirds. Standing, 31-92.

Multer -- Provide for financing the system through loans from the Treasury, reimbursable with interest. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Senate District of Columbia.

ACTION -- Aug. 23 unanimously reported HR 4822 without amendment (S Rept 637). The report said the "time for action" had arrived and that there was no question as to the "soundness of the investment."

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Aug. 25 passed HR 4822 by voice vote. There was no opposition during brief discussion of the bill.

Bill Signed

In signing HR 4822 Sept. 8, President Johnson said the "significance" of the measure reached beyond the District of Columbia. Mr. Johnson stated, "If we are to realize the full promise of tomorrow's urbanized America, we must all -- across our land -- meet today the pressing challenge of urban transportation...." He said the legislation would help to make the District of Columbia the "model city" it ought to be.

NARCOTICS TREATMENT

A new concept in the approach of law enforcement to the narcotics addict -- treating him more as a medical case than a criminal -- was the subject of legislation introduced but not acted upon in Congress in 1965. The concept aimed at hospitalization rather than jail for the new or young addict. Hearings were held on a variety of proposals, including an Administration bill, but no legislation was reported.

The subject had been under study in the previous year, and the new concept had been advocated by the President's Advisory Committee on Narcotics and Drug Abuse, the report of which was made public Jan. 25, 1964. (1964 Almanac p. 253)

In his March 8, 1965, message on crime, the President referred to the Committee's report and urged passage of a bill providing for civil commitment of addicts who were "likely to respond to treatment and achieve rehabilitation." The President also recommended a less restrictive law than the existing one which specified mandatory minimum sentences without probation or parole. (For text of message, see p. 1394)

ADMINISTRATION BILL

The Administration bill was sent to Congress June 16 by Treasury Secretary Henry H. Fowler and Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach. It was introduced in the Senate (as S 2152) by Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.) and in the House (as HR 9167) by Judiciary Chairman Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.).

Under the Administration bill, persons eligible for treatment and rehabilitation would be addicts charged with or convicted of any federal offense, except a crime of violence or selling narcotics (unless the person showed that the sale was made to support his addiction). Persons against whom a prior charge of felony was pending, or who were repeating offenders, would also not be eligible.

The chief feature of the Administration bill was to provide for civil commitment of addicts who were charged with a federal crime. If the rehabilitation of the addict proved successful, he would in effect be excused from prosecution for his crime and would have no criminal record. When an addict was charged with a federal offense, the federal court could ask him if he would agree to civil commitment and treatment if found susceptible of rehabilitation. If the person agreed and was selected for rehabilitation, the court would commit him for up to three years to the custody of the Surgeon General (the head of the Government's Public Health Service). During this period he would first be confined to an institution but could be released for supervised aftercare in the community at the discretion of the Surgeon General. If the treatment failed or if the person failed to abide by the terms of the program, the court would resume prosecution for the offense with which he had been charged.

Eligible persons who had been convicted of a federal offense could be committed to the Attorney General for similar rehabilitation for periods up to 10 years, but not longer than the maximum allowable sentence for the offense. The offender would be eligible for parole, and the Attorney General could arrange for aftercare for paroled persons.

(Continued on next page)

The bill also provided for more lenient treatment under the law of marihuana offenders, and of narcotic offenders who were under 26. Current law required minimum mandatory sentences for offenders of laws regulating sale and smuggling of narcotics and marihuana, and prohibited suspension of sentence, probation or parole. Similar provisions governed sentencing of second offenders eligible for parole (an offender becomes eligible for parole after serving one-third of his sentence). The bill permitted the courts to sentence narcotic and marihuana offenders who were under 26 under the provisions of the Federal Youth Corrections Act, which allowed indeterminate sentencing for treatment and conditional release for individuals susceptible of rehabilitation. Currently the Act only covered such individuals who were under 22. Also, the bill directed the Board of Parole to review the records of all marihuana offenders currently in prison who were under 26 when convicted, and make recommendations for mitigation of sentence.

Finally, the bill authorized the Surgeon General to provide for institutional rehabilitation of narcotic addicts and directed him to admit not only persons committed by the courts but also persons who voluntarily committed themselves. The Surgeon General was also authorized to provide for supervised aftercare for persons conditionally released into the community from such institutions.

OTHER BILLS

Before the Administration's measure was sent to Congress, more inclusive bills had been introduced in the House and Senate. Among these was an omnibus bill (HR 9051) introduced June 15 by Celler, who said he preferred the broad approach because "the problem of drug abuse cannot be alleviated by piecemeal efforts." His bill drew together, with a few modifications, proposals made in a series of bills (S 2113-16) introduced June 9 by Sens. Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) and Robert F. Kennedy (D N.Y.). Kennedy June 22 endorsed the Administration measure, although he said he favored additional reforms.

The Celler and the Javits-Kennedy bills limited use of the civil commitment procedures to offenders of narcotics laws who were also addicts; the Administration bill included all addicts charged with a crime against the United States, with certain exceptions.

The omnibus bill exempted addicts who sold narcotics for resale; it provided for treatment of any federal prisoner who was an addict or who suffered a mental or physical condition associated with addiction; and it provided for post-release care by the Parole Board through agreements with local health authorities.

The measure went further than the Administration bill in repealing most minimum mandatory sentences for marihuana and narcotics offenders and in permitting suspended sentences, probation and parole in most narcotics cases. Penalties for selling to a minor or smuggling remained harsher than for other offenses.

The Celler bill included the Javits-Kennedy proposal to authorize an appropriation of $7.5 million a year for three years for a federal-state program of rehabilitation programs for drug users returning to community life. The Celler bill added a provision authorizing appropriations of grants-in-aid of $15 million a year for three years to pay states for up to two-thirds of the cost of constructing institutions for hospital treatment of drug users.

House Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Judiciary Subcommittee No. 2.

HELD HEARINGS -- July 14 and 15 and Aug. 5, 6 and 12 on the Administration bill (HR 9167) and similar bills providing for the civil commitment of narcotics addicts in lieu of imprisonment.

TESTIMONY -- July 14 -- Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach testified that "the fight on crime cannot be separated from a fight on narcotic addiction." Organized crime, he said, "profits on the spread of this disease. Desperate drug takers often resort to crime to feed their addiction. To give more addicts a way to rid themselves of the ravages of the disease, therefore, is also to provide strong ammunition to the fight on crime." Katzenbach said the Administration bill represented "a fundamental reorientation toward the problem of addiction," placing "the emphasis on addiction as a sickness." "We have too long," he said, "stressed punitive solutions and neglected medical and rehabilitative measures." HR 9167, Katzenbach stated, combined "flexibility with adequate safeguards," giving the courts and correctional authorities "ample scope to provide the most appropriate treatment" and "an excellent process" for selecting those addicts who could be helped from those who could not and from those who were "dangerous."

Katzenbach said there were an estimated 45,000 to 100,000 addicts in the United States and that between 1960 and 1963, 43 percent of all convicted addicts in federal institutions violated laws other than narcotics and marihuana statutes. It was "extremely important" because of this "close relationship" between addiction and crime, the Attorney General said, that, with certain exceptions, all addicts convicted of any federal offense be eligible for treatment, as proposed in HR 9167. Katzenbach said the "great advantage" of pre-trial civil commitment lay in its "swift medical and rehabilitative treatment," the opportunity for an addict to avoid the "stigma" of a trial and possible conviction, and also in that it would keep addicts off the streets instead of letting them go free on bail. Thus, he said, it was "an important obstacle to the further spread of addiction." He noted that California and New York had post-conviction civil commitment laws for addicts, and that 52 percent of the addicts treated under the California program "were neither detected using narcotics nor convicted of any crime within six months after their release."

Comprehensive Approach Urged

Celler endorsed his own bill (HR 9051) and said the Administration bill was "not enough." Celler stated enactment of a civil commitment bill was "important" but that "you cannot cure an addict of his physical hunger and return him to an environment which engendered his addiction in the first place without helping him cope with that environment." More important, Celler said, the causes of addiction must be attacked "before addiction generates crime." A "successful solution to the drug problem," Celler said, "can be achieved only by a comprehensive, across-the-board approach." Celler also stated he was "not calling for the elimination of enforcement efforts. We have a need for them to combat the illegal traffic in drugs." However, "high criminal sanctions have not reduced the number of addicts among us," he said, "All they have done is increase the addict population of our prisons."

James P. Hendrick, Acting Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, said the Department "fully supports" HR 9167 and that its proposals were "far preferable" to those of other pending bills. Hendrick said existing, "tough" mandatory penalties were a "vital factor" in coping with illicit traffic in narcotics, but, he said, the Treasury Department "would be the last to suggest that strict penalties represent the entire solution to the problem." Mandatory penalty provisions, Hendrick said, "should be applied restrictively in such a way as to provide a greater incentive for rehabilitation." He said the Department was "in full accord" with treating addicts "in terms of mental illness rather than crime" and said the Department was particularly interested in two safeguards of the civil commitment procedures: that an addict would be immediately removed from circulation instead of remaining free on bail, to continue "for months or even years to indulge his habit and committing crimes to support his addiction"; and that the bill would "separate the sheep from the goats" by excluding certain addicts from electing civil commitment. Hendrick also said mitigation of mandatory penalties was "properly limited" to those "who should have the best chance of being restored to useful life" -- the young and the marihuana users.

July 15 -- Sen. Robert F. Kennedy (D N.Y.) said he was "sorry" the Administration bill did not provide for federal aid for state and local rehabilitation services. Kennedy stated, "We shall never make any headway toward helping the addict and alleviating the narcotic and drug abuse problem until we can engender and facilitate a nation-wide research and treatment program carried on at all levels of government and by as many private agencies as possible." Headway would be accomplished, he said, "only by dint of the most intensive and personal kind of supervision and sympathetic help to the addict," particularly during the "aftercare" period. Kennedy also said a federal program of narcotics research and treatment would "complement" the provisions of the new law which expanded federal controls over depressant and stimulant drugs (PL 89-74; see story p. 352).

Robert Kennedy Urges Amendments

Kennedy generally supported Celler's omnibus bill (HR 9051) but favored the "fewest possible exclusions" of addicts from pre-trial civil commitment programs and opposed limiting civil commitment programs only to persons charged with narcotics violations. He opposed the Administration's proposed three-year commitment period as "too short" and recommended "intensive and effective" aftercare for addicts. He also recommended amending HR 9167 to extend the civil commitment program and indeterminate sentencing provisions to cover abusers of barbiturates, amphetamines, etc.; recommended retaining the current prohibition against parole for persons illegally selling narcotics; and recommended that the Administration bill eliminate mandatory minimum sentences for marihuana violators, as provided under HR 9051, instead of just making them eligible for parole because "many" marihuana users, "while unwise, are not people who are appropriately dealt with by being thrown into jail and having the key tossed away."

Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) stated, "The Administration bill fails to meet the standard set by bills which so many of us in both houses have introduced" in two respects: "It lacks a federal program of construction of needed facilities for medical treatment of addicts, and it lacks a federal program for providing post-medical treatment services to addicts. This is a crucial gap," Javits said.

William L. Springer (R Ill.), sponsor of HR 8900, a civil commitment bill, stated, "Experience has demonstrated only too well that completely voluntary commitment does not work.... Civil commitment provides a handle by which the enforcement authorities may keep a firm hand on the patient and give him strong incentive to keep up treatment and to be truly rehabilitated.... It does not suddenly put him on his own with all the terrible temptations that seem to afflict such persons." Springer's bill would provide for institutional treatment and rehabilitation for up to three years, plus two years of aftercare on a probationary basis.

Richard L. Ottinger (D N.Y.), sponsor of a bill (HR 9159) identical to the Administration bill, also urged legislation which would authorize federal funds for "more and more specialized aftercare facilities operated by the states in local communities with severe drug problems." He also called for research into programs that would take the profit, criminal element and incentive to crime out of illegal narcotics traffic such as the so-called English "clinic plan" under which addicts can legally obtain narcotics under medical prescription.

AMA REJECTS NEW YORK VIEW

The American Medical Assn. at its annual convention in June rejected a resolution of the New York delegates which urged an easing of criminal penalties for certain narcotics offenses. The resolution also urged that marihuana offenses be treated as similar to abuse of amphetamines and barbiturates, instead of being classified, as under existing law, with the more serious problem of heroin and other true narcotics.

New York state, with one of the more severe narcotics problems in the nation, began an experimental "maintenance" program for narcotics addicts when Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller (R) July 20, 1965, signed a new law. Rockefeller said the experiments would be limited in scope. The law permitted maintenance doses of narcotics to be given prisoners who volunteered for state research projects on addiction.

McCLELLAN SUBCOMMITTEE REPORT

In a report (S Rept 72) issued March 3 by the Senate Government Operations Permanent Investigations Subcommittee on its 1964 hearings on illicit traffic in narcotics, the following recommendations were made:

- Authorize civil commitment for narcotic addicts in federal jurisdiction, and urge states and muncipalities to offer addicts "proper treatment and withdrawal in a drug-free environment." (The report said "the weight of medical evidence" was opposed to making drugs available to addicts under "ambulatory maintenance" programs.)
- Provide federal funds for state and local treatment and rehabilitation centers and for research on the cause, treatment and prevention of addiction.
- Hold "high-level" conferences between the Treasury Department and Latin American agencies to develop means of controlling the illicit production and shipment of narcotics.

A bill (S 2191) for civil commitment of addicts was introduced by Subcommittee Chairman John L. McClellan (D Ark.) June 24.

SENATE PASSES OMNIBUS DISASTER RELIEF BILL

S 1861 -- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 459) July 15, 1965.

- Passed by the Senate by voice vote July 22.

President Johnson declared major natural disasters 25 times in both 1964 and 1965, making them the worst disaster years since the Federal Disaster Act was passed in 1950. The high number of disasters resulted in heavy pressure in Congress in 1965 for new omnibus legislation which would supplement existing disaster relief laws and would take effect as soon as a disaster struck.

Such a bill (S 1861) was passed by the Senate without controversy in July, but received no House action. S 1861 set up a standby disaster relief program which included such aids as federal loan adjustment assistance, federal-state grants for up to 75 percent of the former value of ruined property, and grants to farmers to restore production. Federal relief available under existing law consisted primarily of emergency help, such as temporary shelter, and special laws had to be passed in 1964-65 to provide additional federal relief in three particularly serious disasters. Some Congressmen in 1965 argued that this additional relief should be available to all victims of national disasters, and S 1861 provided many of the aids authorized in the three special bills.

The two special disaster relief bills enacted in 1965 were HR 11539, for the relief of Hurricane Betsy victims in Florida, Mississippi and Louisiana, and S 2089, for the repair of certain kinds of damage caused by heavy floods in the Northwest in winter 1964-65. HR 11539, in addition, authorized the Housing and Urban Development Department to conduct a nine-month study of alternate methods of comprehensive disaster aid and report to Congress with recommendations. The study was strongly endorsed by many Congressmen, and further action on the omnibus bill (S 1861) seemed likely after the survey was completed in 1966. (See stories p. 678, 679)

Congress in 1965 also enacted several bills dealing with special aspects of disasters. (See next page)

Background

In 1950, Congress enacted the Federal Disaster Act (PL 81-875) that delegated responsibility to the President to mobilize and coordinate federal disaster relief assistance to state and local governments. The Act gave the President authority to declare a "major disaster" -- a natural catastrophe which the President determined to be of sufficient magnitude and severity to warrant federal assistance. Upon approving a governor's request for federal aid, the President was authorized to direct any appropriate federal agencies to provide emergency relief to a stricken state and to allocate funds from the President's disaster relief fund, established by the Act, for relief. (The President's fund is only one of many federal relief programs assisting disaster-stricken areas. A number of the other programs can provide assistance without need of a Presidential declaration.) The relief measures included protective work, clearing debris and wreckage, carrying out emergency health and sanitation action, providing temporary shelter or housing and repairing or temporarily restoring damaged public facilities. Federal agencies were required under the Act to coordinate their relief efforts with state and local relief agencies; and state and local governments were required to supplement federal aid money. (1950 Almanac p. 177)

In 1961, President Kennedy by Executive Order transferred to the Office of Emergency Planning the authority to administer the provisions of the Act.

Recent Disasters. Between 1961 and 1965, 105 disaster declarations were made by the President and a total of $303,853,100 in disaster relief funds was allocated, broken down as follows:

Fiscal Year	Declarations	Allocations
1961	13	$17,918,000
1962	22	64,921,000
1963	20	15,920,900
1964	25	105,093,200
1965	25	100,000,000*

*estimate

Only nine states did not suffer major disasters during the five-year period. Most of the disasters involved either flooding or drought. There were 66 major floods and six hurricanes of disaster proportions during the five years.

While most of the disaster relief provided was made available under existing law, Congress in 1964-65 found it necessary to enact special remedial legislation for certain cases. Following devastating Alaska earthquakes in March 1964, it passed four bills providing special recovery aids to the state. (1964 Almanac p. 436; for 1965 bills, see below)

Program Changes Studied. The OEP in December 1964 began a study of the disaster relief program. The survey covered: federal experience in administering PL 81-875 to determine how the Government could most effectively aid in major disasters; (2) techniques for anticipating and planning in advance for disaster in order to minimize its effects; and (3) federal-aid policies for program assistance in hazardous areas, such as flood plans. The study had not been completed by December 1965.

With the increasing number of disasters, a number of Congressmen in 1965 called for a standby federal disaster program which would take effect as soon as a disaster occurred.

Sen. E.L. Bartlett (D Alaska), referring to the bills providing earthquake relief for Alaska and flood relief for the Pacific Northwest, called it "ridiculous" that two essentially similar laws had to be enacted to deal with two dissimilar disasters. Furthermore, Bartlett said, Members of Congress from disaster-states frequently "have had to put together emergency legislation and press it through the Congressional grist mills," making it "inevitable" that such "hastily drafted legislation will be found to have both technical and practical defects." Bartlett said this demonstrated "the need for major amendments to existing federal legislation."

Sen. Birch Bayh (D Ind.) said July 22 in a Senate speech that the procedure of enacting special legislation when a major disaster struck "not only consumes the time of Congress and not only prolongs the delay in granting desperately needed financial assistance, but also results in a hodgepodge approach to the problems created by disasters and the relief of those problems."

Members of Congress also criticized as too limited the extent of federal aid available to communities and individuals. In a House speech Aug. 5, William J. Randall (D Mo.), whose state was hard hit in April by tornadoes and floods, called federal relief expenditures "a drop in the bucket when compared with the magnitude of damage caused by most natural disasters." The "hard fact of the matter," he said, "is that we have not developed a coordinated disaster relief program sufficient to meet all the likely contingencies of natural calamity." Many communities, Randall said, "have had to go virtually without relief or assistance in the absence of a more comprehensive program."

While general and extensive relief was provided by the Federal Government to repair or reconstruct damaged public facilities, Members of Congress contended that little or no assistance was available to the private sector of the economy -- to individual citizens who lose their homes, businesses, farm buildings and other general property. Sen. Bartlett said that "in thousands of cases, individuals in disaster areas lose everything except their mortgage obligations which they had on property which no longer exists."

Flood Insurance Issue. A controversial aspect of the campaign for new federal disaster legislation was the old issue of flood insurance. The insurance industry does not provide insurance against flood damage, and generally had been reluctant to see the Federal Government offer insurance.

Federal guarantees for flood insurance have been sought and authorized in past years, but never materialized. In 1952 President Truman requested national flood insurance in a special message to Congress. In 1956 President Eisenhower, in his Economic Report to Congress, recommended federal re-insurance for private insurers offering flood insurance. Congress that year passed the Federal Flood Insurance Act of 1956 (PL 84-1016), which authorized federal programs of flood insurance, flood re-insurance and loan contracts covering flood losses. However, no funds were ever appropriated to implement the Act because there had been no technical study of what the actual costs would be for starting the program. As an alternative, Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. (D N.J.) proposed flood insurance study legislation that was passed by the Senate but not the House in 1962 and 1963. (1962 Almanac p. 570)

The insurance industry does not provide flood insurance on the grounds that flood damage is not an insurable risk in the same sense as fire, wind or hurricane damage, in which premiums paid by many persons will provide funds to compensate the relatively few who have losses. Insurance agencies argue that floods do not pose an equal threat to every person and that only those who live in a river valley or on the seashore would buy flood insurance, a situation inconsistent with the insurance principle of "risk-spreading." A June 9 Wall Street Journal article said that insurers and state insurance regulators appeared to be generally accepting the view that large-scale flood insurance would require federal participation, despite "wide misgivings...regarding federal encroachments." The most likely outcome, the article said, was "an indemnification plan based largely on Government aid."

Omnibus Bill Introduced. Among disaster bills introduced in 1965, the most prominent was S 1861, introduced April 30 by Bayh and 33 co-sponsors. S 1861 set up a comprehensive, automatic disaster relief program which was considerably more extensive than the aids provided under the 1950 Disaster Act. Bayh July 22 explained that the bill was designed to help people who were not able to protect themselves through insurance at reasonable rates by giving them "easy-to-get" loans at reasonable terms -- all of which they must repay with interest.

Congress in 1965 also took action on the following, less comprehensive, disaster relief bills:

SBA Loans. Congress in June enacted an Administration-backed bill (S 1796 -- PL 89-59) to provide additional Small Business Administration (SBA) assistance for disaster victims. The law increased the maximum maturity of SBA homeowner and small business loans from 20 to 30 years, gave the SBA Administrator discretion to suspend principal and interest payments on certain disaster loans for up to five years, required the SBA either to purchase or make payment on portions of loans held by participating lending institutions for which principal and interest were suspended (the borrower later would have to repay the SBA) and increased the SBA's revolving fund by $50 million for disaster loan purposes. (See story p. 862)

Farmers. In August Congress cleared an Administration-backed bill (HR 8620 -- PL 89-112) to provide price support payments to wheat, feed grains and cotton growers who were not able to plant their crops in 1965 because of floods and other natural disasters. (See story p. 139)

Tax Relief. The House Aug. 3 passed by voice vote and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 7502) providing that certain property losses resulting from a major disaster could be deducted as a loss from ordinary income rather than from capital gains. The bill expanded a 1958 tax amendment to cover property, such as a business, house or car, which was partially insured. Under the 1958 law, only property losses which were not insured could be deducted directly from ordinary income. (Ordinary income is subject to generally higher tax rates than are capital gains.)

A Wall Street Journal article Aug. 4 said that private tax men were "not impressed" by the bill because it would apply only in federally designated major disaster areas. Because of this limited availability, the article said, the "inequities" of the 1958 tax law would continue in all other areas, discriminating against businesses that insured their property.

The Senate Finance Committee Sept. 9 postponed action on HR 7502 until 1966 after a controversial, nongermane amendment had been tentatively approved. (See p. 844)

Schools. Congress in October enacted an Administration-backed bill (HR 9022 -- PL 89-313) giving the Office of Education standby authority to provide immediate federal financial aid for the repair and operation of public elementary and secondary schools in areas affected by major disasters. The aid could come from funds available under "impacted areas" laws, pending an appropriation for disaster aid. Under existing law, the OEP had authority to provide temporary facilities in school districts affected by disaster and to assist in repairing and equipping school buildings. The Office estimated that expenditures under the broader authority provided in HR 9022 would average between $1,250,000 and $1,500,000 a year, as compared with the $750,000 average a year expended by the OEP in disaster-stricken school districts. (See story p. 306)

Action on S 1861

The Senate Public Works Committee held hearings on S 1861 June 21-22 and July 15 reported the bill (S Rept 459) with amendments. The report said the hearings had convinced the Committee of: (1) the existence of major gaps in the assistance provided to disaster victims, (2) the inability of disaster areas to recover without outside assistance, and (3) the existence of a "critical timelag" from the time a disaster occurred until the time when major outside assistance became available to victims.

The Senate July 22 passed S 1861 by voice vote. No opposition was expressed.

Major Provisions. The most controversial provisions of S 1861 authorized the Rural Electrification Administration, Housing and Home Finance Agency and Veterans Administration to refinance or readjust principal or interest payment schedules and extend maturity dates on loans held by disaster victims. The Small Business and Farmers Home Administrations were also authorized to grant emergency loans of up to $30,000, even if the victims had not tried to seek relief from private capital sources. (The Budget Bureau in 1965 opposed a similar provision in another bill (HR 11539) -- see next column.)

Another key provision of the bill was aimed at encouraging development of standby state disaster plans for the relief of homeowners and business concerns. The President was authorized to make 50-50 matching grants for development of the plans, and the plans were to provide for grants of up to $30,000 for homeowners and $100,000 for businesses involved in disasters. The grants would be on a 50-percent federal, 25-percent state basis, with the individual or business absorbing the first 25 percent of the property loss. Grants could not be made in cases where private insurance was available and collectible.

In its other provisions for aid to individuals, S 1861 authorized grants of up to $10,000 to farmers for up to two-thirds of the cost of restoring cultivated land or their livestock. Provision was made for emergency housing facilities for one year for homeless disaster victims facing severe hardship; victims would pay up to 25 percent of income and no charge was to be made in extreme cases.

Provisions relating to schools authorized whatever federal funds were necessary to rebuild and operate elementary and secondary schools if state and local agencies did not have sufficient funds to do so.

For repairs on federal-aid highways, S 1861 authorized federal appropriations to cover up to 100 percent of the costs, instead of the usual federal-state 50-50 equation. The annual appropriation for the federal-aid highway emergency relief fund was increased from $30 million to $50 million. The bill also authorized appropriations for up to 100 percent of the cost of repairing public highways or bridges not eligible for aid from the President's emergency relief fund.

For public works, S 1861 authorized whatever funds were necessary to repair such projects. Federal assistance for public works repair was extended to rural unincorporated areas. Loans, and in certain cases partial grants, were authorized for construction or improvement of waste disposal systems and other public facilities providing for community services in rural areas.

HURRICANE BETSY RELIEF

HR 11539 -- Reported by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 1164) Oct. 13, 1965.
- Passed by the House by voice vote Oct. 18.
- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 917) Oct. 20.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Oct. 22.

PL 89-339 -- Signed into law Nov. 8.

One of the special pieces of disaster relief legislation enacted in 1965 was a bill (HR 11539) providing a variety of federal aid to victims of September's Hurricane Betsy in Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi.

During Congressional consideration of HR 11539, Rep. Claude Pepper (D Fla.) said damages from Hurricane Betsy were estimated at $2.5 billion -- over $2 billion in Louisiana, about $250 million in Mississippi and $119 million in Florida. Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.) said the hurricane was "the worst disaster, as far as property damage was concerned, that has ever hit the United States." He stressed that loan adjustment assistance authorized by HR 11539 was intended to aid poor persons who were not in a financial position to protect themselves against such losses through insurance.

Major provisions of HR 11539 permitted the Small Business Administration to cancel up to $1,800 or waive up to $1,800 in interest on disaster loans, regardless of whether the disaster victim could have purchased insurance against his losses. The Farmers Home Administration was authorized to provide the same benefits for uninsurable farm losses regardless of whether a farmer could obtain financial assistance elsewhere.

In Oct. 13 testimony on HR 11539 before the House Public Works Committee an Administration spokesman requested amendments to limit the SBA loan and interest waivers to uninsurable (water) damage and to limit the FHA loan and interest waivers to farmers who could not obtain credit from other sources. The spokesman, Budget Bureau Deputy Director Elmer B. Staats, said the Administration did not believe the Federal Government had a responsibility for disaster losses which could have been covered by insurance or from cases in which private aid was available. And, even with these amendments, Staats said, "the volume of federal assistance required will be substantial." However, neither the House nor Senate made these or any other changes in HR 11539, and the bill was signed into law without the Administration-requested revisions.

Another provision of HR 11539 directed the Department of Housing and Urban Development to undertake a study of alternative comprehensive methods of federal disaster aid and insurance, and to report to Congress with recommendations within nine months. This provision was similar to but less specific than a bill (S 408) passed by the Senate Jan. 28, 1965. S 408 required that the report include evaluations of the feasibility of each program studied, estimates of its cost to the Government and to property owners, the legal authority for state financial participation, and an indication of the feasibility of excluding selected areas from insurance coverage and of initiating the programs experimentally in pilot areas. S 408 was reported (H Rept 632) by the House Banking and Currency Committee July 21 without amendment. Minority views were filed by Burt L. Talcott and Del Clawson (R Calif.), who claimed that the bill had been only superficially considered and that it could be a first step toward promoting "the Federal Government as a competitor with the private insurance industry."

S 408 was not cleared for House floor action by the House Rules Committee, and the House Banking and Currency Committee therefore added provisions for such a study to HR 11539. During both House and Senate consideration of HR 11539, provision for the study was endorsed by a number of Congressmen as an important step toward enactment of comprehensive disaster-protection legislation in 1966. (For 1965 consideration of omnibus disaster legislation, see p. 676)

HR 11539 authorized $70 million to carry out its provisions. The Administration later requested that $1.6 million be appropriated for the comprehensive study. However, the general fiscal 1966 supplemental appropriations bill (HR 11588 -- PL 89-309) provided $1 million for the study and $35 million for the other provisions of the bill in fiscal 1966. (See story p. 182)

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, PL 89-339, the Southeast Hurricane Disaster Relief Act of 1965:

Expressed Congress' recognition that because of extensive property damage and loss in Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi as a result of Hurricane Betsy in 1965, "special measures" were needed to aid these states in rehabilitation of devastated areas.

Authorized, until Jan. 1, 1967, the sale at "fair and equitable" prices of Government-provided trailers to hurricane victims who were occupying the trailers as temporary housing.

Authorized, until Jan. 1, 1967, the Small Business Administration to take the following actions in regard to SBA loans for property damage or loss resulting from Hurricane Betsy which was not covered by insurance or other means:

Cancel up to $1,800 of a disaster loan over $500 or waive up to $1,800 in interest on disaster loans over a three-year period, whether or not the disaster victim could have purchased insurance against his losses.

Make loans to private schools and colleges even if financial assistance was available from private sources. Permitted interest to be waived and payments of principal deferred on such loans for the first three years of the loan without limitation on the total amount of interest waived. (Existing law permitted the SBA to make 3-percent interest loans under its disaster loan program. But the agency normally did not make such loans when other financial aid was available on reasonable terms. Its general policies did not permit cancelation of any part of a loan or waiver of interest.)

Authorized, until Jan. 1, 1967, the Farmers Home Administration to provide the same loan benefits as those from the SBA (above) to farmers for property or crop loss, regardless of whether a farmer could obtain financial assistance elsewhere.

Directed the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to conduct a feasibility study of alternative programs of federal disaster relief programs for property owners, including possible federal flood and earthquake insurance programs. Required that a report on the study be submitted to the President nine months after funds were appropriated for it, with a report on earthquake insurance to be submitted three years after the appropriation.

Authorized appropriations of $70 million to carry out the provisions of HR 11539.

NORTHWEST FLOOD RELIEF

S 327 -- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 166) April 22, 1965.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote April 23.

HR 7303 -- Reported by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 310) May 6.

S 327 -- Passed, amended, by the House by voice vote May 19.
- Senate agreed to House amendments by voice vote May 20.
- Vetoed by President Johnson June 5.

S 2089 -- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 276) June 7.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote June 7.
- Reported by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 482) June 9.
- Passed by the House June 15.

PL 89-41 -- Signed into law June 17.

Congress in 1965 enacted legislation providing financial aid to California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Idaho, largely for road reconstruction in areas damaged by floods in December 1964 and January-February 1965. Provision was also made for river bank protection in California where railroad trackage adjacent to the Eel River was particularly vulnerable to washout.

These aids were initially contained in a bill (S 327) which President Johnson vetoed June 5. The President objected to a provision requiring approval by the House and Senate Public Works Committees before work could proceed on Eel River protection. The veto message said the section "seriously violates the spirit of the division of powers between the Legislative and Executive Branches" and was "an undesirable and improper encroachment by the Congress....into the area of executive responsibilities."

Shortly after the veto of S 327, Congress cleared and the President signed another bill (S 2089) which was identical to the first except that it omitted the prior-approval requirement.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law June 17, PL 89-41, the Pacific Northwest Disaster Relief Act of 1965:

Authorized emergency appropriations of up to $50 million in fiscal 1965 and $20 million in fiscal 1966 from which the Secretary of Commerce could make expenditures for repair or reconstruction of highways, roads and trails damaged by the floods. (The amounts were in addition to a $30 million annual appropriations authorization contained in existing law for road disaster relief.)

Authorized the Secretaries of Agriculture and the Interior, in order to facilitate resumption of logging on Federal Government-owned lands, to reimburse timber sale contractors for restoration of roads which were under construction when the floods occurred.

Required a timber purchaser under Government contract to bear 15 percent, up to $4,500 (rather than the entire amount) of reconstruction costs. (The Government would bear 85 percent of the costs and 100 percent of amounts over $30,000 in a timber purchase contract.) Provided that this provision would not apply to any road reconstruction projects costing less than $500

Amended the 1964 Federal-aid Highway Act to increase appropriations for forest roads and trails development during fiscal 1966 from $85 million to $123 million, with the additional $38 million to be used for forest road repair in the flood-damaged areas.

Permitted the existing 30-day minimum time period required for public notice of national timber sales to be reduced to seven days by the Secretary of Agriculture. (This would make more timber quickly available for communities dependent on the timber industry.)

Authorized additional time for persons applying for use of public land to comply with required application procedures.

Authorized appropriations of $3,875,000 to permit the President, through the Office of Emergency Planning, to provide river bank protection along the Eel River in California in those areas where adjacent railroad trackage (of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad) was particularly vulnerable to washouts. Stipulated that the work must be in the public interest.

Amended the Small Business Act to allow maturities up to 30, instead of 20, years for loans made to replace, reconstruct or repair dwellings damaged or destroyed by the floods.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

ACTION -- April 22 reported a bill (S 327 -- S Rept 166) to provide financial assistance to the states of Oregon, Washington, California and Idaho for the reconstruction of roads, highways and trails damaged by floods in winter 1964-65. The bill also contained other provisions designed to aid flood victims, such as a 10-year extension on the maturity of Small Business Act loans for reconstructing or repairing flood-damaged dwellings.

Majority Views. The Committee said total flood damages were estimated at $461,500,000, and that "the disruption and destruction of transportation facilities" was "of most critical importance to the economy of the region." It said enactment of S 327 was "essential in the effort to avert greater economic dislocation and severe unemployment in the forest products industry of the Pacific Northwest."

Major Provisions. Provisions relating to roads: Raised the federal-aid highway emergency relief fund from $30 million annually to $80 million in fiscal 1965 and $50 million annually thereafter, but provided that the Senate and House Public Works Committees could disapprove expenditures from the relief funds; provided for federal payment of reconstruction of roads which were being constructed by national forest timber purchasers when they were damaged by floods; increased the fiscal 1966 authorization for forest development roads and trails from $85 million to $123 million, and earmarked the new funds for road repair in the flooded areas.

Other provisions: reduced the minimum time requirement for advertising sale of national forest timber, raised from 20 to 30 years the maturity period for Small Business Administration loans for replacement or repair of dwellings in flooded areas; and authorized $250,000 for a study of river bank protection where the Eel River in California had flooded and washed out railroad trackage, and then authorized such sums as necessary to carry out recommended work there.

Administration Views. The Budget Bureau recommended two amendments which were not adopted by the Committee. One would have disallowed federal payment for reconstruction of timber purchasers' roads when costs were less than $500. The other would have deleted the provision enabling the Senate and House Public Works Committees to disallow expenditures from federal-aid highway emergency funds. It said the latter provision raised "substantial constitutional questions" of separation of powers.

FLOOR ACTION. The Senate April 23 passed S 327 by voice vote without amendment.

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

ACTION -- May 6 reported a bill (HR 7303 -- H Rept 310) that was companion to S 327.

Differences from S 327. There were the following important differences between the House and Senate bills:

- S 327 raised the $30 million federal-aid highway emergency authorization to $80 million in fiscal 1965, $50 million in fiscal 1966 and $50 million annually thereafter. HR 7303 made the same 1965-66 changes, but dropped the figure back to $30 million a year from 1967 on.
- HR 7303 did not contain the Administration-opposed provision permitting the Public Works Committees to disapprove emergency fund expenditures.
- HR 7303 contained the Administration-proposed amendment disallowing federal payment for reconstruction of timber purchasers' roads when costs were under $500.
- HR 7303 was much more specific on the Eel River study and reconstruction work. It authorized $3,875,000 for the survey and work but stipulated that no appropriation could be made for work not specifically approved by the Senate and House Public Works Committees. In a letter in the Committee report, the Budget Bureau "strongly" objected to the provision for Committee approval.

FLOOR ACTION. The House May 19 passed S 327 by voice vote after substituting for its provisions those of HR 7303 as reported to the House.

FINAL ACTION. The Senate May 20 agreed to the House amendments to S 327.

PRESIDENT'S VETO. President Johnson vetoed S 327 June 5. He said he was "in complete sympathy with the purpose" of the bill, but the section requiring approval of the Eel River work by the Public Works Committees was "an improper encroachment ....into the area of executive responsibilities."

Action on S 2089

Two days after Mr. Johnson's veto of S 327, Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) introduced S 2089. It differed from the earlier bill only in not containing the prior-approval section, and was quickly passed by the Senate and House without change and sent to the President.

In signing S 2089 into law (PL 89-41) June 17, Mr. Johnson praised the bill and then made the following statement on the Presidential veto: "Let none think I worship the veto. I exercise it rarely and only when required. I never welcome either the opportunity or the necessity to make use of that power in this office. But I do believe that it is imperative to the order and to the success and to the strength of this great constitutional system -- and some of the great constitutional lawyers in our country are standing behind me this morning -- that the division of responsibilities as well as the division of powers be faithfully and religiously maintained, and that is why I took the decision to withhold my approval of this legislation originally and to set forth my views very respectfully and very carefully in an attempt to be as inoffensive as possible to the Congress."

FOREIGN AFFAIRS SYSTEM

HR 6277 -- Reported, amended, by House Foreign Affairs Committee (H Rept 830) Aug. 19, 1965.

● Passed, amended, by the House by voice vote Sept. 9.

The House in 1965 passed an Administration-backed bill (HR 6277) to establish a single personnel system within the State Department, the United States Information Agency (USIA) and the Agency for International Development (AID). AID was attached to the State Department but USIA was an independent agency. Currently, each of the three foreign affairs agencies operated under two personnel systems, the Classification Act of 1949, governing most federal civilian career employees (the so-called "classified" or Civil Service workers), and the Foreign Service Act of 1946, governing professional diplomatic corps officers and others subject to overseas duty.

HR 6277 proposed to shift all employees of the three agencies, over a period of time, to the Foreign Service. The bill was supported by the Civil Service Commission but opposed by federal employees' unions and veterans' groups because it would remove the agencies' employees from the veterans' preference laws applicable to Civil Service employees. The Senate did not act on the bill in 1965.

In its major provisions, HR 6277 gave the estimated 19,000 classified employees of the State Department, USIA and AID the option of transferring to Foreign Service status and required that all future employees of the three agencies would enter under Foreign Service status. Classified employees not electing to join the Foreign Service would retain their current status, their Civil Service jobs ultimately being eliminated through normal attrition. Classified employees electing to transfer would not be subject to an examination, required to serve overseas without their written consent or subject to a reduction in compensation or over-all retirement benefits.

Classified employees transferring into the Foreign Service, however, would be subject to the lower Foreign Service mandatory retirement age of 60 and to Foreign Service selection-out procedures under which an employee would be released if he remained in the same grade for a specified number of years without advancement or if he remained in the lower 10 percent of the same grade for three years. In addition, such employees would no longer qualify for automatic veterans' preference rights generally applicable to classified employees who had served in the military during wartime. Thus, employees who chose to change status would lose certain Civil Service benefits, such as the higher mandatory retirement age of 70, various job-security protections and automatic veterans' rights to preference on Civil Service examinations, reductions in force, etc. (For details of Veterans Preference Act, see Congress and the Nation p. 1368.)

The bill also amended the Overseas Differentials and Allowances Act of 1960 (PL 86-707) to increase from 25 to 50 percent the pay differential for employees assigned to foreign areas where there was "unusual danger of injury due to hostile activity."

President's Request. A program designed to "strengthen the personnel capabilities" of the Federal Government's foreign affairs agencies was recomended by President Johnson in his Jan. 14 Foreign Aid Message to Congress. In a May 6 letter to Congress, the President specifically endorsed HR 6277, which had been introduced March 15 by House Foreign Affairs State Department Organization and Foreign Operations Subcommittee Chairman Wayne L. Hays (D Ohio). In addition, the President in 1965 made several other recommendations aimed at establishing what he described as a more "unified and flexible career Foreign Service." (See next page)

House

COMMITTEE -- Foreign Affairs.

HELD HEARINGS -- May 19, 20 and 25 on HR 6277.

ACTION -- Aug. 19 reported HR 6277 (H Rept 830) with amendments. The report said the bill as introduced called for a complete merging of classified and Foreign Service personnel systems within a three-year period but that the Committee, by giving classified workers the option to transfer, adopted the "least unsettling" course. The bill was based, the report said, on the premise that the voluntary transfer of classified personnel to the Foreign Service system "is the most equitable way to effect a transition from a dual to a single personnel system."

FLOOR ACTION

The House Sept. 9 passed HR 6277 by voice vote with an amendment.

During lengthy House floor consideration, debate centered largely on the fear that enactment of the bill would set a precedent for ultimately doing away with all Civil Service job-security protections and veterans' preference rights. The attack on the bill was led by Arnold Olsen (D Mont.), H.R. Gross (R Iowa) and several of their colleagues on the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee. They also argued that the measure, since it dealt with federal employees, should have been referred to their Committee. (Although the procedure varies, most legislation affecting federal employees is referred to Post Office and Civil Service. In some instances, however, legislation affecting State Department employees is referred to Foreign Affairs, as was done with HR 6277.)

In all, Olsen offered three amendments, the first two of which were designed to basically alter the bill. Each was defeated. (See below)

The amendments were opposed by Wayne L. Hays (D Ohio) and E. Ross Adair (R Ind.), chairman and ranking minority member, respectively, of the Foreign Affairs State Department Organization and Foreign Operations Subcommittee. They argued that since the bill gave classified employees the option of not transferring to Foreign Service status, it adequately protected those individuals wishing to retain their Civil Service and veterans' preference rights. They said the bill was primarily designed to give the three foreign affairs agencies the "ability" and "flexibility" to improve the quality of their services. They also noted that representatives of the major national veterans' organizations had urged the State Department to increase its efforts to attract and retain high caliber individuals and that one of the "strongest proponents" of HR 6277 was John W. Macy Jr., chairman of the Civil Service Commission.

Prior to final passage, Adair, in an attempt to satisfy some of the complaints of opponents of the bill, offered an amendment, accepted by voice vote, expressing the "policy of Congress" that the Foreign Service give preference to veterans "whenever practicable."

Also prior to passage, the House by voice vote rejected a motion by Gross to recommit the bill with instructions to delete sections allowing the President to transfer classified employees to Foreign Service status and making inapplicable certain Civil Service benefits and veterans' preference rights. These were two of the changes proposed by Olsen in floor amendments.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Sept. 9 -- E. Ross Adair (R Ind.) -- Express the "policy of Congress" that "whenever practicable" preference be given veterans in Foreign Service employment. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Sept. 9 -- Arnold Olsen (D Mont.) -- Delete a section of the bill permitting Foreign Service personnel to serve in domestic positions previously reserved to classified employees. Standing vote, 47-83.

Olsen -- Delete a section authorizing transfer of classified employees to Foreign Service status. Voice.

Olsen -- Delete a section making inapplicable veterans' preference and certain other civil service benefits of persons transferring to Foreign Service. Standing, 65-87.

Related Developments

USIA Nominations. President Johnson April 13 sent the Senate a list of 760 USIA career officers nominated for appointment to the Foreign Service. In a letter accompanying the list, Mr. Johnson said that appointment of the USIA officers to the Foreign Service would represent a "significant milestone in the development of our Foreign Service." The Senate, however, failed to confirm the nominations in 1965.

Recommendation for appointment of USIA officers to the Foreign Service resulted from an agreement, announced Oct. 3, 1964, between the Secretary of State and the USIA Director. The agreement provided for appointment of USIA officers as "Foreign Information Officers" who would be given diplomatic status and assignments in overseas Foreign Service posts where specific, specialized USIA experience was needed. The purpose of the agreement was to form a pool of talent to increase the "efficiency" and "flexibility" of both the Foreign Service and the USIA in their relations with other nations.

Foreign Service Appointments. The President May 6 signed an executive order permitting qualified Foreign Service officers to obtain appointments to Civil Service positions without re-examination. Mr. Johnson said, "This will assist me in placing the right man in the right job."

Career Ambassadors. The Senate took no action on the President's Sept. 28 nominations of three diplomats to the rank of career ambassador in the Foreign Service. The three, who currently held the rank of career minister, were Under Secretary of State Thomas C. Mann, U.S. Ambassador to the Soviet Union Foy D. Kohler and Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Relations Douglas MacArthur II. Action was deferred reportedly because some members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee questioned whether the three qualified for the accolade, accompanying the career ambassador rank, of "exceptionally distinguished service to the Government." It was also reported that any future action on the nominations would be delayed until the Senate could act on HR 6277 and the President's April 13 USIA nominations.

FEDERAL COMPUTER POOL

HR 4845 -- Reported by House Government Operations Committee (H Rept 802) Aug. 17, 1965.
- Passed by voice vote of the House Sept. 2.
- Reported by Senate Government Operations Committee (S Rept 938) Oct. 22.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate Oct. 22.

PL 89-306 -- Signed into law Oct. 30.

Congress in 1965 enacted an Administration-supported bill (HR 4845) establishing the authority and procedure for making more efficient use of automatic data processing (ADP) in the Federal Government. The bill made the General Services Administration (GSA) responsible for coordinating ADP in the Government, instead of leaving each agency to determine its own policy.

Federal expenditures currently exceeded $3 billion a year for ADP, according to the report (S Rept 938) of the Senate Government Operations Committee accompanying the bill. The Government was the largest single user of data processing equipment in the world; its use of computer systems had risen from 10 in 1954 to more than 2,000 in 1965, excluding another 1,000 to 2,000 systems leased or purchased by private contractors at Government expense.

HR 4845 was designed to remedy the inefficient use of ADP by federal agencies, many of which used their equipment only occasionally, or leased instead of bought it because of the initial high cost. GSA was authorized to establish pools of ADP equipment for use by various agencies and to transfer computers from one agency to another.

The Comptroller General "conservatively" estimated that the savings under HR 4845 procedures would amount to $200 million annually, the Senate report said. Although the Budget Bureau had resisted previous efforts to initiate such a coordinated program, it supported HR 4845.

BACKGROUND -- The legislation was sponsored by Rep. Jack Brooks (D Texas) and Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.). In 1963 a similar bill by Brooks (HR 5171) was passed with some controversy by the House but not acted on by the Senate. (1963 Almanac p. 409)

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 4845:

Amended Title I of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 by adding a new section centralizing in GSA control over ADP equipment needed by federal agencies. GSA could buy or lease ADP equipment, transfer it among agencies or set up pools for use by various agencies.

Permitted to be excluded from GSA arrangements all ADP equipment used by the Defense Department for military purposes or by the Central Intelligence Agency or other agencies for classified purposes.

Specified that GSA was not to interfere with or try to control the use of ADP by other agencies.

Authorized financing of ADP equipment by a revolving fund instead of by individual agencies' appropriations. Agencies would pay user charges to the fund for equipment leased from it.

Authorized the Commerce Department to advise GSA on technical developments in ADP and to recommend to the President uniform standards for use of ADP equipment by federal agencies.

National Security

Atomic Energy Act 708
Coast Guard Bills 718
Defense Authorizations 684
Draft Developments 689
Freedom Academy 720
Military Bases 697
Military Pay Raise 702
Reserve Merger Plan 692
Servicemen's Insurance 706
Space Authorizations 712
Stockpile Disposal 716
Subversive Activities Rulings 719

DEFENSE PROCUREMENT AND RESEARCH ACT

S 800 -- Reported by Senate Armed Services Committee (S Rept 144) April 2, 1965.

● Passed by the Senate by an 85-0 roll-call vote April 6. (See p. 1033)

HR 7657 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 271) April 29.

S 800 -- Passed, amended, by the House by voice vote May 5 after HR 7657 was passed by a 396-0 roll call. (See p. 958)

● Conference report (H Rept 374) agreed to by voice votes of the House May 26 and the Senate May 27.

PL 89-37 -- Signed into law June 11.

Congress in 1965 authorized appropriation to the Department of Defense of $8,958,300,000 for procurement of aircraft, missiles and naval vessels, and $6,444,500,000 for research and development (R&D) carried out by the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force and the Defense agencies. The fiscal 1966 military procurement and R&D authorization bill (S 800) totaled $15,402,800,000. This was $105,600,000 more than the sum requested by the Administration.

The bill provided $1.7 billion less than the amount authorized for fiscal 1965 procurement and $81.2 million more than the amount authorized for fiscal 1965 R&D. However, the bill did not include procurement items covered by two supplemental defense requests, totaling $2.4 billion, to meet costs of the Viet Nam war. No separate authorizing legislation was required to cover these additional requests, the Armed Services Committees of the House and Senate having waived jurisdiction in order to speed the appropriations process. (See stories p. 168,180)

In action on the Administration's procurement requests, Congress added $150.5 million for an unbudgeted nuclear-powered frigate, and $133.6 million for two unbudgeted nuclear-powered attack submarines (in addition to the four requested). Partially offsetting these additions was the disapproval of two fast-deployment logistics ships (out of a total of four) at a savings of $64.2 million. These actions left the procurement request $219.9 million larger than the sum requested by the Administration.

In the field of research and development, Congress cut the Administration's program by a total of $121.3 million, but it added an unbudgeted $7 million to the $15 million requested to continue preliminary development work on a new strategic bomber to "follow on" the B-52 in the 1970s. Thus the net reduction was $114.3 million. A large portion of the reduction -- $52.2 million -- was in "military sciences" research, which included both federally conducted research and contract research, such as that carried out by the Rand Corp. and other non-profit research organizations. (For subsequent controversy over "Project Camelot," funded under this budget, see p. 177.)

The research and development account also authorized $150 million for a manned orbiting laboratory (MOL), which when operational would be the first manned military excursion into space, and funds for continued development, but not production, of the Nike-X, an anti-ballistic missile system for which $400 million was budgeted in fiscal 1966. (See p. 174)

In adding funds to the bill for a nuclear frigate, two nuclear submarines and bomber research, Congress was following the wishes of the military departments within the Defense Department against the recommendations of Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and the President. The addition of two nuclear attack submarines brought that program back to the six recommended by the Joint Chiefs of Staff for fiscal 1966. The nuclear frigate was added at the insistence of the House Armed Services Committee in an effort to speed the attainment of a Navy goal not endorsed by McNamara -- a nuclear-powered surface fleet. In its report on S 800, the House Committee announced its intention to authorize construction of a nuclear-powered carrier in fiscal 1967, whether wanted by the Administration or not. (In 1965 there were three active nuclear-powered surface warships -- a carrier, a cruiser and a frigate. A second frigate was under construction. For background of issue, see 1964 Almanac p. 158.)

The $7 million for bomber development met a small part of an Air Force request for $82 million in additional funds to speed up the development of an "advanced manned strategic aircraft" (AMSA) lest current strategic bombers wear out before a successor was ready. The extra bomber funds reflected continued Congressional unease over the prospect that missiles would replace bombers in the 1970s as the principal -- perhaps only -- nuclear delivery vehicles of the Strategic Air Force. But the bomber-missile issue was much less intense in 1965 than in other recent years (See p. 173)

S 800 also contained Administration-backed language which stated that naval ship alteration, conversion and repair work was not to be assigned to private and public shipyards on the basis of an arbitrary formula, but solely on the basis of "economic and military considerations." The language was aimed at a provision, included in the defense appropriations bills for fiscal years 1963-65, that 35 percent of the funds for these activities be allocated for work in private shipyards. Opponents of the requirement said it had "hobbled" Navy shipyards. The provision in S 800 was not binding on the House and Senate Appropriations Committees, but they accepted it and did not include the 35-percent requirement in the fiscal 1966 appropriations bill. (See p. 179)

S 800 authorized procurement of 2,294 aircraft (Army 1,118, Air Force 517, Navy and Marine Corps 659); 38,190 missiles (Army 32,218, Air Force 1,509, Navy and Marine Corps 4,463); and 62 new naval vessels and 12 conversions. By contrast, the fiscal 1965 authorization covered 2,755 aircraft (Army 1,282, Air Force 889, Navy and Marine Corps 584); 35,398 missiles (Army 13,998, Air Force 9,795, Navy and Marine Corps 11,065); and 53 new vessels and 7 conversions.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law June 11, S 800 authorized the following sums (figures in parentheses are subtotals):

Procurement	($ 8,958,300,000)
Army	(598,200,000)
Aircraft	344,500,000)
Missiles	253,700,000
Navy and Marine Corps	(4,013,800,000)
Aircraft	1,915,800,000
Missiles	377,000,000
Ships	1,721,000,000

Air Force	(4,346,300,000
Aircraft	3,550,200,000
Missiles	796,100,000
Research, Development, Test and Evaluation	(6,444,500,000)
Army	1,406,400,000
Navy and Marine Corps	1,439,200,000
Air Force	3,103,900,000
Defense Agencies	495,000,000
TOTAL	$15,402,800,000

In addition, S 800:

Earmarked $133.6 million of Navy ships' funds for construction of two nuclear-powered submarines and $150.5 million for construction of a nuclear-powered guided missile frigate.

Earmarked $150 million of Air Force R&D funds for the manned orbiting laboratory program (MOL) and $7 million for development of an advanced manned strategic aircraft (an additional $15 million, for a total of $22 million, was intended to be earmarked for the plane but was not, due to an error).

Repealed existing laws which authorized construction of naval vessels on a tonnage basis. (The effect of the repeal was to relieve the Navy of the need to keep track of unused tonnage balances. New construction was no longer authorized on a tonnage basis, so the tonnage authorizations were meaningless.)

Re-enacted a provision of the Vinson-Trammell Act of 1934 requiring that every other warship be built in a Government yard, but permitting the President to waive the requirement if he found it not in the public interest, and added escort ships to the provision.

Required that naval ship conversion, alteration and repair work shall be assigned on the basis "of economic and military considerations and shall not be restricted by requirements that certain portions of such naval shipwork be assigned to particular types of shipyards or to particular geographical areas or by similar requirements."

Provided that no funds could be appropriated for procurement of tracked combat vehicles after Dec. 31, 1965, or to any Defense Department emergency fund for research and development after June 30, 1966, unless they had been previously authorized by law.

Changed the name of the Military Air Transport Service (MATS) to the Military Airlift Command (MAC).

Background

REFERENCES -- 1964 Almanac p. 444; 1963 Almanac p. 419; 1962 Almanac p. 416; 1961 Almanac p. 414.

S 800 was the fifth annual authorization bill for military procurement of aircraft, missiles and ships, and the second annual bill to cover all programmed research and development. The bill did not cover roughly $2.7 billion in budgeted procurement of items such as motor vehicles, clothing, ordinance, petroleum, oil and lubricants. It also did not cover an emergency fund available to the Defense Secretary for urgent but unforeseen research and development needs. The Administration asked for an appropriation of $150 million for this fund in fiscal 1966 but got only $125 million. (See p. 168)

The House and Senate Armed Services Committees in 1965 continued to expand, slowly, the areas of defense spending that required authorization prior to appropriation. S 800 provided that, beginning on Jan. 1, 1966, appropriations for procurement of tracked combat vehicles would require authorization and that, beginning July 1, 1966, appropriations for the emergency fund for research and development would require authorization. In a similar fashion, the Committees in recent years had required authorization of military construction, procurement of ships, aircraft and missiles, and military research and development. Tracked combat vehicles included tanks, personnel carriers, amphibious landing craft, self-propelled artillery, and others.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

ACTION -- April 2 reported S 800 (S Rept 144) authorizing $15,283,800,000 -- $13.4 million less than the Defense Department sought. The Committee cut a total of $229 million -- $185.1 million in procurement requests and $43.9 million in research requests. But it added $215.6 million above the Administration's requests -- $133.6 for two additional nuclear-powered attack submarines and $82 million for accelerated development of a manned bomber.

Following is a summary of the Committee's major changes in the Administration's requests:

Navy Hawkeye Aircraft. While approving funds for the procurement of 649 new Navy and Marine Corps aircraft, the Committee deleted $99.8 million for the procurement of 10 E-2A Hawkeye planes, a carrier-based early-warning aircraft. "Because of technical deficiencies," the Committee said, 1965 procurement of the Hawkeye was cancelled by the Defense Department and prior authorizations stretched out to keep production in operation through fiscal 1967. The Committee said it "appreciates the importance of the E-2A" but preferred to review progress made in overcoming the deficiencies before authorizing further procurement.

Naval Vessels. The Committee authorized funds for the construction of 56 new ships, the conversion of 12 others, and the construction of surface craft and landing craft. Revisions were made in three items:

The Committee approved construction of six rather than four nuclear-powered attack submarines (SSN) at a cost of $66.8 million each. It said that the Defense Department's fiscal 1965 program contemplated construction of six nuclear submarines a year and intelligence sources "give no indication that the submarine threat posed by our potential enemies is diminishing."

The Committee approved construction of five rather than 10 motor gunboats (PGM) at a saving of $21.1 million, because the "requirement for a large number of this type ship as a part of the U.S. Navy is somewhat vague."

The Committee also approved construction of two rather than four gas-turbined fast deployment logistic ships (FDL), which would be the roll-on, roll-off type carrying cargoes and vehicles to forward areas. The Committee said the reduction reflected its view that procurement of this type ship should proceed at "a moderate pace" until its requirement is "more precisely estimated." The saving was $64.2 million.

Military Sciences. The Committee cut $43.9 million from the $1,039,200,000 asked for military sciences research by the military departments and defense agencies. This was achieved by a 5-percent reduction in all programs except research connected with the nuclear test ban treaty safeguards. The Committee said the reduction was recommended because examination of some of the military sciences research projects "shows that their relevance to national security is rather remote." The Committee added that "there is some concern" the services had contracted for research to an extent "prejudicial to the...ability to study and analyze within the Department."

Manned Bomber. The Committee increased Air Force R&D funds by $82 million to accelerate development of an advanced manned strategic bomber. The Committee said it "consistently has emphasized the importance it attaches to the continued availability of effective manned bombers and its concern over the aging of the B-52 force." It added, however, that even if full-scale development of a new bomber were begun immediately, it "could not be produced and deployed in substantial numbers before the expiration of the estimated useful life of the older models of the B-52." Alternative proposals by McNamara to develop a bomber version of the F-111 (TFX) fighter plane, the Committee said, would result in a plane with less range and less payload capability than desired. (For McNamara's remarks during House hearings on fiscal 1966 defense funding, see p. 176)

In fiscal 1965, $52 million was appropriated for development of a new manned bomber. Of this amount, Defense Secretary McNamara decided to spend $28 million in fiscal 1965 and $24 million in fiscal 1966. He also approved an additional request for $15 million in fiscal 1966, for a total program of $39 million. He disapproved an Air Force plan to spend an additional $82 million, for a total of $121 million in fiscal 1966. The Committee, however, met the Air Force's request.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate April 6 passed S 800 by an 85-0 roll-call vote and sent it to the House. There was no controversy on the bill itself and no changes were made in the version recommended by the Armed Services Committee. (For voting, see chart p. 1033)

Prior to final passage, however, three amendments not directly related to the substance of S 800 were proposed, debated and then withdrawn.

The first, by Howard W. Cannon (D Nev.), was intended to reverse a Jan. 16 Defense Department order ending the Ready (active) Reserve careers of Members of Congress, federal judges, and key employees of the Executive, Legislative and Judicial Branches. The order was based on a Dec. 12, 1964, statement by McNamara that these employees would be more essential to the national defense in their current positions, in case of national emergency, than on active duty in the Armed Forces. McNamara also said the presence of "several thousand" such persons in the Ready Reserve "detracts from the combat readiness of the reserve unit, wasted training funds, and prevents others who could serve in a time of mobilization from taking part in the Ready Reserve Program." (For McNamara statement and list of Congressmen-Reservists, see p. 693)

In conjunction with the order, the Active Reserve units on Capitol Hill were disbanded Feb. 1. Cannon, as a Brigadier General in the Air Force Reserve and second in command to former Sen. Barry Goldwater (R Ariz. 1953-65) in the Air Force Reserve unit on Capitol Hill, was personally affected by the order. (For a discussion of the controversy over Reserve officers in Congress as related to the "military-industrial lobby" issue, see 1963 Almanac p. 429)

Cannon said his amendment would not reverse the disbanding of the Capitol Hill Reserve units or others but would permit the individuals affected by the order to continue their Reserve careers. He said the Defense Department should not be allowed to "unilaterally abrogate" their Reserve contracts. Under the Defense Department order, the individuals affected would be retired if they had 20 or more years of service. Those who had at least 18 years of service would be permitted to remain in the Ready Reserve until they had served 20 years. Those with less than 18 years of service would be placed in the Standby (inactive) Reserve where they would not be able to accumulate retirement credits. Retired Reserve personnel are entitled to retirement pay on reaching age 60, based on a reduced scale for their years in the active Reserve, if their active duty and active Reserve duty service totals at least 20 years. They may also continue to accumulate retirement credits up to 30 years of service. Cannon said the order "harshly" discriminated against individuals with less than 18 years of service. (At the time of the order, Cannon himself had 26 years of service.) He was supported in the amendment by Jack Miller (R Iowa).

John Stennis (D Miss.), floor manager of S 800, opposed the amendment because, he said, its broad effect would be to repeal the President's authority to screen the personnel of the Active Reserve in order to keep the Reserves in a high state of readiness. Cannon withdrew the proposal after Stennis promised that the Senate Armed Services Committee would hold hearings on it if it were introduced as a bill. However, Cannon did not subsequently introduce a bill on the matter, and no hearings were held.

The Senate next turned to two amendments by John G. Tower (R Texas), designed to allow income tax exemptions and other tax benefits to servicemen stationed in and around South Viet Nam, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1961. By designating the area around Viet Nam (including Laos) as a combat zone, the amendments would have brought into force two provisions of law which (1) exempted enlisted men from all income taxes on their service pay and commissioned officers from taxes on the first $200 per month of their service pay, while serving in the designated areas, and (2) provided tax relief to estates of personnel killed in the combat zone, by excusing part of the estate taxes and by forgiving income taxes owed by the estate. Similar tax relief had been granted to servicemen during the Korean War.

Tower said current provisions of the Internal Revenue Code provided for tax relief in combat zones. "All that is required is Presidential designation of an area as a combat zone," he said. "There can be little doubt that Americans in Southeast Asia are facing combat conditions." Because "sensitive" foreign policy considerations were involved in the President designating Southeast Asia as a combat zone, Tower said, "I propose that Congress take that action now." It need not be interpreted by anyone "as any sort of warlike action," he added. Although Stennis said the amendments were "laudable," he said he would have to raise a point of order since they constituted revenue measures, required by the Constitution to originate in the House. Tower then withdrew the amendments.

President Johnson April 24, by Executive Order (No. 11216) retroactive to Jan. 1, 1964, designated the area of Viet Nam (but not Laos) a "combat zone" for internal revenue purposes.

During brief debate on the provisions of S 800, Stennis April 6 said the defense budget for fiscal 1966 was lower than that for fiscal 1965 because of (1) the "extraordinary ability and energy" of Defense Secretary McNamara and his civilian and military assistants; (2) emphasis on qualitative improvement of existing programs instead of on initiation of expensive new weapons systems; and (3) reprogramming actions during fiscal 1965 which involved "stretch-outs, cancellations, and changes in accounting or funding practices."

Stennis noted that by June 30, the United States would have a striking force of 800 Minuteman missiles, 464 Polaris missiles, 600 B-52s and 80 B-58s. In addition, Stennis said the Senate had added $82 million to S 800 to speed development of a manned bomber to replace the B-52 force. Sen. Cannon said that the "defense of this country is too important to allow a bomber gap to occur for the sake of a few million dollars."

Draft, Army Readiness. Stennis said Congress should take steps to end speculation that the military draft would be abolished. He said the speculation hindered "the proper flow of men into the services" and left potential draftees uncertain about their futures. (Later in the year President Johnson ordered a major increase in the draft. See story p. 689)

Stennis also said that the Senate Armed Services Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee was engaged in a study of the combat and material readiness posture of the Army. He noted that McNamara had given Army operations in South Viet Nam "first claim on every dollar and every man in the entire" military establishment. Stennis said he did not suggest there was "anything wrong" with this, but that Congress would ultimately have to insure that withdrawals for Viet Nam operations did not deplete the supplies of other regular Army forces.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S 800 authorized:

Procurement of aircraft	$ 5,710,700,000
Procurement of missiles	1,426,800,000
Procurement of naval vessels	1,549,500,000
Research, development, test and evaluation:
Army	1,429,500,000
Navy and Marine Corps	1,462,600,000
Air Force	3,221,300,000
Defense agencies	483,400,000
TOTAL	$15,283,800,000

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

ACTION -- April 29 unanimously reported a bill (HR 7657 -- H Rept 271) authorizing $15,303,400,000 for defense procurement and R&D, which was $19.6 million more than authorized by the Senate.

The Committee added $157.5 million above the Administration's requests: $150.5 million for an additional nuclear-powered guided missile frigate and $7 million for accelerated development of a new manned bomber.

Committee Views. In its report, the Committee made the following major points: "Congress is not the creature of an agency or a department, but that department is our creature and it is ours to direct and guide"; an additional nuclear-powered aircraft carrier would be approved by the Committee for fiscal 1967 "whether requested by the Department of Defense or not...."; and, while recognizing the need for a strong R&D program, the Committee believed billions of dollars have been invested in the past "with little to show from the standpoint of hardware to increase our defense posture."

Navy. The Committee approved $150.5 million above budget estimates for procurement of an additional nuclear-powered guided missile frigate (DLGN). The action was taken, the report said, because the Defense Department "has both procrastinated and vacillated in its approach to nuclear-powered surface ships" for too long. "It has been an in-and-out game, with nuclear propulsion recommended one year and a return to conventional power the next year -- and for the same general type of ship," the report said. In addition, the report said a new nuclear-powered carrier (CVAN) would be recommended by the Committee for fiscal 1967 "regardless of any foreseeable circumstances, technical, fiscal, or otherwise."

The Committee also restored the following Senate cuts in Administration requests: $99.8 million for 10 E-2A Hawkeye carrier-based reconnaissance aircraft; $21 million for five motor gunboats (PGM), for a total of 10; $64.2 million for two fast-deployment logistic ships (FDL), for a total of four. It authorized only four nuclear attack submarines costing $267.3 million, as requested by the Administration, instead of the six authorized by the Senate, costing $400.9 million.

Air Force. Unlike the Senate, which did not alter Air Force procurement requests, the House Committee cut $25 million from missile support equipment and facilities and $5 million from industrial facilities. The report said the Committee believed that neither program would be seriously impaired by the reductions.

R & D. Noting the investment of substantial sums in research programs that were later cancelled, such as the Air Force's XB-70 bomber and Dynasoar spacecraft and the Navy's Snark and Skybolt missiles, and the Defense Department's $3-billion balance of unobligated R&D appropriations, the Committee recommended a total R&D authorization of $6,444,500,000, which was $114.3 million below Administration requests. The Committee noted, however, that it wanted it "clearly understood" that the reductions would not affect such high-priority programs as the Navy's Poseidon missile and the Army's Nike-X ballistic missile defense system.

The military sciences budget was cut $52.2 million, to $987.0 million. The Senate had cut these funds by $43.9 million. The balance of the House reduction was as follows: $3.7 million from the Navy's avionics system for a light attack aircraft (ILAAS) and $10.1 million from Air Force exploratory development; $4 million from general Army exploratory development and $10 million from the Navy's advanced surface-to-air missile program scheduled for initiation in 1965; $20.9 million from the Air Force's Titan III space booster program; $10.6 million from Army testing funds for combat support, surveillance, etc., programs; and $9.7 million from Air Force development in the areas of command and control systems.

(Continued on next page)

Advanced Manned Strategic Aircraft, MOL -- The Committee earmarked $7 million above the budget request for development of a new generation of manned strategic aircraft to replace the B-52 in the 1970s. It said the funds would permit the Air Force to initiate the "program definition stage" of development. The Senate authorized $82 million additional for the project, the full amount sought by the Air Force.

The Committee authorized the requested amount of $150 million for the Air Force's manned orbiting laboratory program (MOL), and said the funds could only be spent for this program. The report said the project "warrants a classification of the highest priority." (See p. 174)

Other Actions. The Committee repealed existing statutes authorizing construction of naval vessels on a tonnage basis. The report said the statutes were "meaningless" since naval vessels were no longer authorized on a tonnage basis, but that the laws still required the Navy to maintain a "rather extensive and expensive bookkeeping operation" to keep track of the unused tonnage balances. The repeal also cancelled a provision of the 1934 Vinson-Trammell Act which required every second warship to be built in Navy yards. The Committee re-enacted this requirement (which could be waived in the public interest) and extended it to cover escort vessels as well as major warships.

The Committee also provided that naval ship conversion, alteration and repair work would be assigned to Navy and private shipyards solely on the basis "of economic and military considerations." The language was designed to preclude the House and Senate Appropriations Committees from reinstating a three-year-old requirement that at least 35 percent of the funds for such work be allocated to private shipyards.

Finally, the Committee required that funds to procure "tracked combat vehicles" and the emergency fund for defense research and development be authorized by Congress before they could be appropriated, and changed the name of the Military Air Transport (MATS) to the Military Airlift Command (MAC).

FLOOR ACTION

The House May 5 passed HR 7657 by a 396-0 roll-call vote. There were no floor amendments. (For voting, see chart p. 958)

Following passage, the House by voice vote substituted the text of HR 7657 for that of S 800, the Senate version of the authorization bill, and sent S 800 to conference with the Senate.

During May 5 debate, Armed Services Committee Chairman L. Mendel Rivers (D S.C.) noted that HR 7657 totaled $1.67 billion less than authorized for fiscal 1965. Rivers said that the Administration had asked for $100 million less in fiscal 1966 than in fiscal 1965 for Army aircraft, $300 million less for Navy missiles, $465 million less for Navy vessels, $100 million less for Air Force aircraft, and nearly $1 billion less for Air Force missiles.

Nuclear Surface Ships. Rivers said the Committee's action, in adding funds for a nuclear-powered frigate and announcing its intention to authorize a nuclear-powered carrier in fiscal 1967, was intended to "express the will of Congress that greater and more rapid progress be made in the field of nuclear-powered surface ships" and was a "manifestation of the intention of the Armed Services Committee to place itself in the forefront of military determinations." He added: "To my mind,...Congress has been shunted aside by the Pentagon over the past several years in determining our defensive and offensive military structure.

"We have been invited to sit at the table but we have not been invited to join in the meal, so to speak. This time is over. We are going to carve the roast for ourselves from now on."

R & D. Rivers said that while the Committee reduced Administration R&D requests by $114.3 million, the authorization was still $121 million above fiscal 1965 appropriations. He noted that 30 percent of the Army's R&D budget would be spent on the Nike-X ballistic missile defense system, which includes the Nike-Zeus missile and high acceleration Sprint missile; that 26 percent of the Navy's budget would be spent on anti-submarine warfare; and that a high percentage of the Air Force's budget would be spent on two new projects, the C-5A, a heavy logistics airplane, and a short-range attack missile which would complement the Hound Dog missile presently carried on the B-52 bomber and would become the weapons system for the F-111 fighter.

Ship Repair and Conversion. The only heated debate on HR 7657 concerned the provision barring the Appropriations Committees from allocating at least 35 percent of all funds for Navy ship conversion, alteration or repair work to private shipyards. Such a requirement had been attached to the fiscal 1963, 1964 and 1965 procurement appropriation bills by the House and Senate Appropriations Committees. In fiscal 1964 and 1965, the proviso had been supported by the Administration. (1964 Almanac p. 153)

In the President's fiscal 1966 budget, however, a recommendation for the requirement was omitted. During Committee hearings on HR 7657, Defense Department officials testified that repeal of the requirement, and an increase of approximately 15 percent (from a total 65 to 80 percent) of shipwork assigned to Government shipyards, would save $10 to $15 million annually.

During debate, Rivers and Rep. William H. Bates (R Mass.) argued that private yards had done more than 68 percent of total Navy shipwork (including construction) in the period 1963-65, "as compared to about 54 percent in the period 1953-62." They also noted that Navy shipyard employment had dropped from 98,600 to 83,500 in the period 1962-64 and private shipyard employment had increased from 115,600 to 123,800. Rivers said the requirement "hobbled" Navy shipyards.

Rep. Charles E. Bennett (D Fla.) said that the Defense Department's analysis that $10 to $15 million could be saved each year by repeal of the 35-percent requirement was "extremely prejudicial in favor of the naval shipyards" since the private yards "necessarily" had to include fixed overhead costs in their charges.

Other Debate. Samuel S. Stratton (D N.Y.) said that the Armed Services Committee had originally voted to approve the authorization legislation on March 23, more than a month before the bill was finally reported on April 29. He said he was the only member of the Committee to oppose the earlier version of the bill (HR 6650), which provided $14,793,520,740, a net reduction in Administration requests of $503,679,260. Stratton inserted in the Congressional Record additional views which he had intended to file if HR 6650 were reported. In the views, Stratton said that Committee cuts of $504.6 million in R&D requests represented "an unwarranted and unnecessary risk with our national security." In his May 5 remarks, Stratton indicated that Defense Department officials and the White House had asked the Committee to reconsider the R&D cuts. He praised Rivers for being "willing to listen to facts and to adjust his thinking" in agreeing to reverse the Committee's original action. Reports had indicated that a major reason for the cut in R&D funds was Rivers' desire to find funds for a $1-billion military pay raise opposed by the Administration for budgetary reasons. (See p. 702)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 7657 authorized:

Procurement of aircraft	$ 5,805,500,000
Procurement of missiles	1,401,800,000
Procurement of naval vessels	1,651,600,000
Research, Development, Test and Evaluation
Army	1,406,400,000
Navy and Marine Corps	1,439,200,000
Air Force	3,103,900,000
Defense Agencies	495,000,000
TOTAL	$15,303,400,000

For other provisions, see final provisions of S 800 (p. 685).

Conference

The House May 26 and the Senate May 27 agreed by voice votes to the conference report (H Rept 374) on S 800. The conference report was filed May 25. The compromise version of the bill authorized $15,402,800,000. This was $119 million more than the Senate version and also $99.4 million more than the House version.

In major actions, the conferees:

- Agreed to the Senate provision for two unbudgeted nuclear attack submarines at a cost of $133.6 million and to the House provision for an unbudgeted nuclear frigate at a cost of $150.5 million.
- Agreed to House restoration of Senate cuts of $99.8 million for 10 Hawkeye aircraft and $21 million for five gunboats, and agreed to a Senate action reducing from four to two the number of fast-deployment logistics ships, a cut of $64.2 million.
- Agreed to House allowance of $7 million in unbudgeted funds for bomber development, instead of the extra $82 million proposed by the Senate, and agreed to House language earmarking $150 million for the manned orbiting laboratory program.
- Restored House cuts, totaling $30 million, in Air Force procurement, but agreed to House cuts in research and development for all branches.
- Agreed to all House non-monetary amendments to the bill. (For final provisions, see p. 685)

During brief Senate debate May 27, Stennis said that the Senate accepted the House figure for bomber development because "with the passage of time and the absence of a decision to proceed to the program definition phase, it is clear that all of the $82 million...could not be effectively expended during fiscal year 1966."

In addition, Stennis agreed with Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D La.) that Senate acceptance of a House provision designed to discourage the Appropriations Committee from allocating funds for repair, alteration and conversion of naval vessels to private shipyards "does not preclude the Appropriations Committee from putting the limitation in (the defense appropriations bill) if the Committee thinks the facts justify it."

DRAFT DEVELOPMENTS

HR 10306 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 747) Aug. 9, 1965.
- Passed by the House by a 393-1 roll-call vote Aug. 10. (See p. 988)

S 2381 -- Reported by Senate Armed Services Committee (S Rept 589) Aug. 12.

HR 10306 -- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Aug. 13.

PL 89-152 -- Signed into law Aug. 30.

Congress in 1965 enacted a bill (HR 10306) making it a federal crime to knowingly destroy or mutilate a draft card. The legislation was a reaction to calls from various antidraft proponents for young men to destroy their draft cards as a manifestation of their differences with the Johnson Administration's Viet Nam policy. The antidraft campaign gained momentum after President Johnson's July 28 announcement of an increase in draft calls to help supply men for the Southeast Asian battlefront.

As enacted, HR 10306 amended the Universal Military Training and Service Act of 1951, which previously had outlawed only forgeries, alterations or other changes of draft cards. Penalties provided for forgeries, etc., were also applied to destruction of draft cards -- a maximum $10,000 fine and/or imprisonment for up to five years.

The legislation was passed by Congress after brief debate and little controversy. Only one person was recorded against the measure -- Rep. Henry P. Smith III (R N.Y.), who objected to the severity of the punishment for offenders. Proponents said the bill was aimed at the "beatniks and so-called 'campus-cults'" who made up much of the antidraft movement and had urged draft card burnings. Enactment of the bill, House Armed Services Committee Chairman L. Mendel Rivers (D S.C.) said during House debate, was "the least we can do for our men in South Viet Nam fighting to preserve freedom, while a vocal minority in this country thumb their noses at their own Government."

Six individuals were arrested for violating the new law in 1965; none had come to trial by the end of the year.

Unpublished Draft Study. The doubling of draft calls and the reactions to the increasing manpower needs in Viet Nam brought to an unpublished end a special Pentagon study of alternatives to the draft, which was initiated by President Johnson in 1964. According to one Pentagon official, the importance of the study had been "overtaken by events" such as the military buildup in Viet Nam. Certain of the study group's conclusions, however, were leaked to the press. The group, according to May reports, estimated that under normal conditions it would cost between $3 and $5 billion a year in higher recruitment and pay costs to end the draft and provide sufficient incentives for enlistment to maintain projected military strengths over the coming decade.

Establishment of the study group had done much to blunt Republican calls during the 1964 election campaign for an outright end to the draft system. Opening his bid for the Presidency Sept. 3, 1964, Republican candidate Sen. Barry Goldwater (Ariz.) had promised that, if elected, "Republicans will end the draft, and as soon as possible." In reply, Democratic Vice Presidential candidate Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (Minn.) Sept. 3 said that to end the draft "at this time (before all alternatives were thoroughly studied) would be premature and irresponsible. The draft is still necessary to our national security...."

(Continued on next page)

Background

REFERENCES -- 1963 Almanac p. 436; Congress and the Nation p. 237-334.

Except for a 17-month period between March 1947 and June 1948, the United States has had a draft law continuously since 1940, when the Selective Service Act became law. This was superseded by the Selective Service Act of 1948 and later by the Universal Military Training and Service Act of 1951 (PL 82-51), which extended the draft authority for four years. Additional four-year extensions were enacted in 1955, 1959 and 1963. Special authority to draft physicians and dentists, first enacted in 1950, was extended in 1953, 1955, 1957, 1959 and 1963.

Draft Study

Growing Congressional pressures for a major reassessment of the draft before expiration of the current law in 1967 led President Johnson April 18, 1964, to announce approval of Pentagon plans for "a very comprehensive study of the selective service system." The President said the study would "consider alternatives to the present draft selection system, including the possibility of meeting our requirements on an entirely voluntary basis in the next decade." Like many Members of Congress, the President expressed concern that the system may have "drifted" from the principle that "the obligations and privileges of service must be shared equally...."

Among the questions faced by the Pentagon study group was whether conscription was basically compatible with the nation's concepts of democracy and individual rights. Opponents of the draft pointed out that, despite its designation in law as "universal military training," the draft was not universal but selective, discriminatory and inequitable. In support of their position, draft opponents cited the example of recent years during which only 50 percent of men reaching age 26 had served in the military; the remainder were deferred or rejected as unfit for service. Other unfair aspects of the system pointed out by critics included: the deferment system, which allowed men wealthy enough to go to college and graduate school or to get married a good chance of escaping the draft; the average selection age of 21 or 22 (as of May 1965), which came at a time when college graduates had to make career decisions; the freedom of local draft boards in administering the regulations governing selection; and the rapid manpower turnover of the armed services which resulted from brief compulsory service.

The draft was defended largely on the basis of cost and convenience. If the draft were ended, according to some reports, not only would the armed services have a hard time obtaining the necessary manpower, but the quality of the manpower would decline -- since it would be less likely that the services could attract sufficient numbers of the well-trained and well-educated men now selected through the draft. It also was feared that enlistments would drop if the draft were ended, since many currently enlisted in order to choose a preferred service or to avoid the uncertain waiting period of the draft. Furthermore, supporters of the draft doubted that Americans would welcome the large professional military "elite" which would be established if the draft ended participation of citizen-soldiers.

Draft Rejectees. A collateral argument was that the draft system helped to locate underprivileged youths at an age when they could still be given education and health care and become productive members of society. Of the 342,422 eighteen-year-olds examined by the Selective Service in fiscal 1965, only 195,169 qualified for service. Of the 147,253 remaining, 85,001 failed to meet mental requirements; 10,376 were disqualified on both mental and medical grounds; 47,844 were medically disqualified; and 4,032 were ineligible for "administrative reasons," mainly having to do with morals.

Several programs to assist draft rejectees with educational and physical deficiencies were recommended following a report on the subject to President Kennedy in 1963. In 1964, for example, the Selective Service System received a special appropriation to increase its early classification of 18-year-old registrants. Those found unfit for military service were offered (but not required to accept) assistance through manpower programs operated by the Labor and Health, Education and Welfare Departments and the Office of Economic Opportunity's Job Corps. With the increase in draft calls in 1965, however, the use of the Selective Service System and military examining stations for rejectee referral was deemphasized. (1963 Almanac p. 436; 1964 Almanac p. 177)

Also in 1964, an Army program -- the Special Training and Enlistment Program (STEP) -- was proposed as a means to assist in the rehabilitation of rejectees and thus to reduce reliance on the draft. The theory behind the program was that the Army could elevate men to its standards by special training rather than lowering its standards when more men were needed. However, a $21.7-million request to launch the program was disapproved by Congress in the fiscal 1966 defense appropriations bill. Congress contended that it was not a proper program to be administered by a military department. (See story p. 168)

Draft Increases

President Johnson July 28, 1965, announced that the Viet Nam war had necessitated a doubling of draft calls to 35,000 men a month, the highest level since May 1953, in the waning months of the Korean War. The announcement dashed most remaining hopes of an official 1965 recommendation to revise the nation's draft laws. (For other details of the President's announcement, see p. 168)

In the early months of 1965 draft calls had reflected the normal needs of the armed forces in a period of moderate cold war tension. After August they rose significantly. For the entire year, the calls totaled 233,250, as follows (all for Army unless otherwise noted):

Jan.	5,400	May	15,100	Sept.	27,400
Feb.	3,000	June	17,000	Oct.	31,600*
March	7,900	July	17,100	Nov.	38,350†
April	13,700	Aug.	16,500	Dec.	40,200

* Includes 2,600 for Navy.

† Includes 4,050 for Marine Corps.

The impact of the draft on military enlistments was reflected in a sharp upturn in the volunteer rate in mid-1965. By Sept. 30, enlistments for all branches had risen from 18,189 in April 1965 to 50,245 in September.

The extent of the need for manpower in late 1965 was further shown when the President, by Executive Order Aug. 26, directed that men between the ages of 19 and 25 who married after midnight Aug. 26 and were childless should be placed in the same draft category as single men. That decision was followed by a Selective Service System announcement Oct. 26 of an end to draft exemptions for childless married men altogether, thus extending the draft to men married prior to Aug. 26. Since Sept. 10, 1963, childless married men had been deferred from the draft until the supply of single men was exhausted. (1963 Almanac p. 436)

Antidraft Campaign

An organized campaign against the draft, which began following President Johnson's draft increase announcement and led to Congressional enactment of the draft-card burning law (PL 89-152), reached its peak during a nationwide Oct. 15-17 weekend demonstration protesting U.S. military involvement in Viet Nam. The movement was reportedly led by the Chicago-based Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) and also involved student radical organizations (known as the "new left") who opposed the Viet Nam war and hoped to build a mass antidraft movement as another form of protest. These protesters became known as Vietniks to their detractors. (For other details of 1965 Viet Nam protests, see p. 457.)

According to news reports, the SDS had organized "draft counseling workshops" in six cities to encourage and instruct men of draft age to be conscientious objectors. Beginning Oct. 15, draft opponents picketed induction centers. There also were isolated incidents of draft card burnings in open violation of PL 89-152. In addition, pamphlets were circulated at Rutgers University in New Jersey and at the University of California (Berkeley) on how to "beat" the draft by feigning madness, stupidity, homosexuality, drunkenness or drug addiction. The SDS denied any connection with the pamphlets. (For a March 8 Supreme Court decision on conscientious objectors, see below.)

On Oct. 18, David J. Miller, a 22-year-old volunteer for the relief program of the Catholic Worker, a liberal Catholic newsletter, was the first person arrested under PL 89-152. A pacifist, he had burned his draft card Oct. 15 before hundreds of spectators at a New York City antiwar rally, because, he said, the draft was a "form of involuntary servitude." Miller was indicted Nov. 19.

Others arrested and indicted in 1965 for violating PL 89-152 were: Stephen Lynn Smith, 22, a University of Iowa student; Thomas C. Cornell, 31, a New York City school teacher; Marc P. Edelman, 20, a Mt. Vernon, N.Y., cabinet maker; Roy Lisker, 27, a New York City novelist and teacher; and James E. Wilson, 21, a Chatham, N.Y., employee of the Catholic Worker.

REACTION

Justice Department. Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach Oct. 18 told a news conference in Chicago that there were "some Communists involved" in the antidraft movement and that the Justice Department had begun an investigation of groups behind the movement. Katzenbach added that while he disagreed "strongly and violently" with the antidraft demonstrators, they had a right to express their ideas.

Presidential Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers Oct. 18 said President Johnson "concurred in and approved strongly" of the Justice Department's investigation of antidraft groups.

Congress. Sen. John Stennis (D Miss.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee, Oct. 15 said the "unwarranted and disgraceful campaign" to encourage and instruct youths to avoid the draft amounted to an "unlawful conspiracy." Stennis said the Government should pull the antidraft movement up "by the roots and grind it to bits."

Senate Republican Whip Thomas H. Kuchel (Calif.) Oct. 18 called the persons urging draft evasion "vile and venomous." The effect of these demonstrations, he said, would be to "sow the seeds of treason."

Selective Service System. It was reported Dec. 14 that eight University of Michigan participants in an Oct. 15 sit-in demonstration at the local draft board office in Ann Arbor, Mich., had lost their student draft deferments and had been reclassified 1-A, the primary draft eligible category. The sit-in had resulted in the arrest Oct. 22 of 36 persons -- a professor, 4 teaching fellows and 31 students.

According to Selective Service Director Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey Dec. 13, "Reclassification is quicker at stopping sit-ins than some indictment that takes effect six months later..., and we haven't heard of any sit-ins since the one in Ann Arbor." Hershey emphasized, however, that the reclassifications were not ordered as a result of the students' beliefs, but because they were in violation of a section of the 1951 law which "makes it illegal to obstruct the workings of the Selective Service System."

Critics of the reclassification charged that the draft boards were assuming the functions of the judicial system in judging and punishing students for sit-ins.

Decision on Conscientious Objectors

The Supreme Court March 8, in a unanimous opinion, gave a broad interpretation of the conscientious objection section of the Universal Military Training and Service Act. The law exempts from combat training and service persons who "conscientiously oppose participating in war because of their religious training and belief."

Under the statutory definition, the term "religious training and belief" meant "an individual's belief in relation to a Supreme Being involving duties superior to those arising from any human relation but (not including) essentially political, sociological or philosophic views, or a merely personal code." The Court, in finding the three appellants qualified for exemption, said the test was "whether a given belief that is sincere and meaningful occupies a place in the life of its possessor parallel to that filled by the orthodox belief in God of one who clearly qualifies for the exemption."

The claims of exemption by the three men, Daniel A. Seeger and Arno S. Jakobson of New York City and Forest B. Peter of Hayward, Calif., had been rejected by the Selective Service appeal board and upheld by the federal circuit court in New York and rejected by the court in California. The Supreme Court refused to rule on claims by the three men that the law was unconstitutional by requiring a religious test.

(Of the nearly 31 million persons classified under the draft laws as of Dec. 20, approximately 76,000 were conscientious objectors.)

RESERVE MERGER PLAN

Congressional opposition in 1965 succeeded in blocking, at least until 1966, a plan by the Defense Department to reduce the size and improve the readiness of the Army's reserve forces. The controversial plan would have abolished all Army Reserve units and transferred their personnel to Army National Guard units. Total authorized paid-drill strength of the Army reserves would have been reduced by 150,000 men, to 550,000. The new reserve force would have been organized in fully equipped "high-priority" units; other units would have been abolished. It was estimated by the Department that the plan would save $150 million a year in addition to doing away with a cumbersome dual management structure for the reserves and improving the utility of the reserves as a military force.

The plan, which had the full backing of President Johnson, came under attack from the House Armed Services Subcommittee No. 2, headed by Rep. F. Edward Hebert (D La.), and by the Senate Armed Services Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee, headed by Sen. John Stennis (D Miss.). The plan received qualified support from the National Guard Assn. and most states. It was sharply opposed by the Reserve Officers Assn., as well as by Members of Congress who were reservists and by a handful of state legislatures and Governors.

As originally proposed, the plan would have been implemented under the Defense Secretary's existing statutory authority to effect reorganizations within the defense establishment. The only Congressional action required would have been to accept the proposed reduction in the authorized paid-drill strength of the Army reserves and to agree to a single appropriation for the merged forces.

Following a hostile reception of the plan in Congress, however, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara in May held a joint press conference with Hebert to announce that the merger would be delayed to permit a thorough Congressional review of the plan and enactment of technical "supporting" legislation. The House Subcommittee subsequently held brief hearings on this legislation (HR 8243), then deferred action. In August, it issued a statement declaring the plan to be not "in the national interest" in view of the Viet Nam buildup.

In line with the House Subcommittee's action, Congress in the annual defense appropriations bill (HR 9221 -- PL 89-213) appropriated funds for separate components rather than for the merged force requested by the Defense Department. The legislation also required the Reserve to be programmed to attain a total strength of 270,000 men by the end of fiscal 1966 and the Guard a strength of 380,000 -- a slight drop from the 700,000-man combined strength authorized for fiscal 1965. In addition, the law stated that the required strengths would cease to be effective only upon enactment by Congress of legislation authorizing a reserve reorganization and prohibited the Secretary from transferring funds appropriated in the bill to carry out a reorganization that did not have Congressional approval. (See story p. 168)

Despite the stand taken by Congress, McNamara by year's end accomplished many of the objectives of his original merger proposal by creating a 100-percent combat-ready, 150,000-man "select" force of separate Reserve and Guard units and by eliminating certain obsolete Reserve units. McNamara said the new plan did not violate Congressional guidelines set in PL 89-213.

The Defense Department also studied plans to merge the Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard, but deferred a decision in 1965.

OBJECTIONS TO PLAN

According to some observers, the refusal of Congress to endorse the Reserve-Guard merger in 1965 was due not so much to specific objections to the plan itself as to anger at McNamara's "arrogance" in initially attempting to press the reorganization without full Congressional advice or authorization. They said that Congress had in the past reacted strongly against proposals to reduce the size of the Army reserves. Also they noted that the merger proposal was one of several issues in 1965 where Congress sought to assert its authority over defense affairs, others being military pay, where Congress provided pay increases more than double the ones requested by the Defense Department, and the attempt to gain veto power over base-closure plans. (See stories p. 702, 697)

Spokesmen for the Reserve Officers Assn., the chief opponent of the merger plan, said that these factors, while evident, were not the real reason for the position taken by Congress. They asserted that the hearings had shown that the Administration proposal was a "bad plan" which defense officials were unable to justify. Moreover, they contended that, in the proposed transition period during which the merged force would have taken shape, morale and combat readiness would have been very low. In face of the Viet Nam situation, they stated, Congress could have ill-afforded to endorse a proposal which would have resulted in an immediate, though temporary, loss of readiness.

Observers noted that the Administration would have had to obtain the approval of all state Governors, as well as of Congress, in order to achieve a consolidation of the reserves by reducing the size of the National Guard and building up the Reserve.

Background

REFERENCES -- 1962 Almanac p. 1012; 1964 Almanac p. 153; see also, Jan. 20, 1965, Editorial Research Reports, "Reserve Forces and the Draft," and Congress and the Nation p. 237-334.

Under the direction of Defense Secretary McNamara, a partial reorganization of the Army Reserve components was initiated in 1962 following evidence that reserve units called to action during the 1961 Berlin crisis were undermanned and underequipped, and that many individual reservists were poorly trained. As completed May 1, 1963, the reorganization reduced four Reserve and four Guard divisions to brigade status, eliminated 1,861 obsolete sub-division units, created 1,071 new units and tightened personnel standards.

The 1962-63 reorganization was implemented in lieu of a more extensive Pentagon proposal which had drawn severe criticism from Members of Congress, Governors, Reserve and Guard associations and many state residents. The original proposal was based on Pentagon arguments, dating back to 1958, that the Army Reserve and Guard should be reduced in size and improved in skills and readiness.

As of mid-1965, the Army Guard was organized into 23 divisions and 7 brigades and the Army Reserve into 6 divisions and 4 brigades. As set by the fiscal 1965 defense appropriations bill (PL 88-446), the authorized paid-drill strength of the Reserve totaled 300,000 and that of the Guard, 400,000. The actual combined strength of the two components was somewhat less, however, totaling about 670,000.

McNAMARA ANNOUNCEMENT

Renewing his efforts to streamline the nation's reserve forces, McNamara Dec. 12, 1964, unveiled a major new plan to reorganize the Army Reserve-National Guard structure. At the same time, McNamara also said that no person holding a "key assignment" in the Federal Government, including Members of Congress, would be permitted to take part in the ready (active) reserve forces, and that travel by Members of Congress at the invitation of the individual military services would be restricted.

Reserve Reorganization. McNamara's new reorganization plan proposed, effective July 1, 1965: (1) a 150,000-man reduction in the combined 700,000-man authorized paid-drill strength of the two Army reserve components, resulting in a new authorized strength of 550,000 men, all under the Guard; (2) a 25-percent reduction in the combined 8,200-unit strength of the two components (4,000 Guard, 4,200 Reserve) to a new 6,000-unit force under Guard management; and (3) elimination of 21 low-priority divisions -- 15 Guard and 6 Reserve -- for which adequate equipment was not available. In addition, it was estimated that there would be a 50,000-man reduction in annual recruitment for the Army's program allowing six months of active duty training, followed by 5-1/2 years of ready reserve service.

The effect of the plan would have been to transfer to or consolidate with the Guard all existing Reserve units. Surplus or inactivated reservists not electing to join the Guard would be placed in a Reserve pool, subject to periodic training and recall. The Army reserve forces would be organized in 8 divisions and 16 brigades, all under the Guard, instead of the current 29 divisions and 11 brigades. Reserve enlistees electing to join the new units would have to volunteer for enlistment in the Guard; Reserve officers would have to apply for Guard commissions, subject to state approval.

Under the plan, McNamara said, the Army Reserve would consist of "individuals rather than units" and would provide trainees for summer camp units and mobilization.

Federal Reservists. Regarding his decision to bar key federal personnel, including Members of Congress, from participation in the ready reserves, McNamara said a recent survey had shown that about 150,000 federal personnel were reservists, and that about 5,000 of these, in addition to Members of Congress, held jobs in which they would be more valuable to the nation's security, in case of mobilization, than they would be on active duty. He said elimination of these personnel from the ready reserves would free positions for other reservists who could be called to active duty in case of need.

Affected reservists with less than 18 years of combined active and ready reserve service would be placed on standby status; they would not be entitled to draw drill pay and would lose eligibility for promotion and retirement benefits as long as they remained on standby status. Reservists with 20 years of service would be automatically retired, but those with between 18 and 20 years of service would be permitted to remain in active reserve status until they had served 20 years and so become eligible for retirement benefits.

The ruling applied to 79 Senators and Representatives and 240 Congressional staff assistants who were active reservists at the time of the announcement. Those Members affected by the change who were on either the Senate or House Armed Services Committees or the Senate or House Defense Appropriations Subcommittees were: Sens. Howard W. Cannon (D Nev., Brig. Gen., Air Force Reserve), Barry Goldwater (R Ariz., Maj. Gen., Air Force Reserve), Daniel K. Inouye (D Hawaii, Maj., Army Reserve), Henry M. Jackson (D Wash., Lt. Col., Army Reserve) and Strom Thurmond (R S.C., Maj. Gen., Army Reserve); Reps. William H. Bates (R Mass., Cmdr., Navy Reserve), Charles E. Chamberlain (R Mich., Cmdr., Coast Guard Reserve), O. C. Fisher (D Texas, Lt. Col., Air Force Reserve), Ed Foreman (R Texas, Capt., Air Force Reserve), Durward G. Hall (R Mo., Col., Army Reserve), George M. Huddleston Jr. (D Ala., Cmdr., Navy Reserve), Richard H. Ichord (D Mo., Capt., Air Force Reserve), Joe M. Kilgore (D Texas, Col., Air Force Reserve), Glenard P. Lipscomb (R Calif., Lt. Col., Army Reserve), Robert L. F. Sikes (D Fla., Maj. Gen., Army Reserve), Robert T. Stafford (R Vt., Cmdr., Navy Reserve) and Samuel S. Stratton (D N.Y., Capt., Navy Reserve). Goldwater, Foreman, Huddleston and Kilgore did not serve in the 89th Congress.

The Defense Department Jan. 16, 1965, issued an official order carrying out the plan and abolishing the Capitol Hill reserve units. (For Senate debate on the order, see p. 686)

Congressional Military Travel. McNamara said that, effective immediately, all future defense survey trips by Congressmen and Congressional staffs at the invitation of the individual military departments would be subject to regulations issued by his office. The regulations, he said, would ensure a more equitable distribution of Congressional travel between the various services and would provide Congressmen "a fuller view" of military activities in the field in all the services. McNamara noted that there was a wide "disparity" between the departments in the amount of travel authorized for Congressmen.

REACTION

McNamara's proposed reserve realignment immediately drew criticism from the Reserve Officers Assn., which Dec. 12 appealed to President Johnson to halt the plan. The Association said the plan was "a move stimulated purely for money-saving purposes without regard of objective analysis," and would constitute a "change in the defense posture of our country of monstrous proportions." In a letter to the Association, President Johnson Dec. 12 said the proposed reorganization was "both prudent and wise."

Sen. Strom Thurmond (R S.C.), a member of the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee, said that McNamara had "made no mention that Congressional approval would be necessary" and predicted extensive Congressional study of the proposal. Sen. John Stennis (D Miss.), chairman of the Subcommittee, Nov. 28 had expressed concern over "persistent reports" that a reorganization was planned and announced that the Subcommittee would conduct hearings on the reserve program in January.

Sen. Ralph Yarborough (D Texas) and Rep. Clark MacGregor (R Minn.) Dec. 15 criticized the Defense Department plan. Yarborough said the plan "means a departure away from the long accepted status of the citizen soldier," and would change the concept of a civilian reserve force to support the standing army. MacGregor termed the McNamara proposal "typically arbitrary."

Senate Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) Dec. 20 endorsed the reserve merger. Dirksen said that the nation's defenses were not "in a good strategic position" when reserve units "are not ready by either training or weapons." He added that the promised saving of $150 million a year "is something that you just don't brush off lightly."

Hearings on Merger Plan

HOUSE

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services, Subcommittee No. 2.

HELD HEARINGS -- Intermittently between March 25 and April 29 on the proposed consolidation of the Army Reserve with the Army National Guard. Highlights of testimony:

March 25 -- In a lengthy opening statement, Subcommittee Chairman F. Edward Hebert (D La.) said he had not decided on the merits of the Pentagon's plan, but charged that Defense Secretary McNamara "defied" the law and showed "contemptuous disregard of Congress" in attempting to put the proposed merger into effect. "They can't destroy (the authorized strength of) the Reserve without authority of Congress," he said. "They can't force the National Guard to do anything without amending the Constitution." Hebert added that "we (the Subcommittee) will decide" the issue, emphasizing the "we."

Army Secretary Stephen Ailes defended the plan. He said the merger had three basic purposes: (1) to bring manpower and equipment into balance by eliminating low-priority divisions which "are not a significant military asset" unless fully equipped and backed up by the necessary supporting units. (To fully equip these divisions and supporting units would require, Ailes estimated, additional expenditures of $10 billion); (2) to improve combat readiness by enlarging the high priority force and increasing manning levels of present high priority forces; and (3) to streamline the management structure of the Army reserve components by eliminating duplication and differences in organization, standards and procedures inherent in a dual management system. He said the proposal was a step towards a "quick reaction force" and a step away from the "slow, deliberate World War II type of mobilization plan."

Ailes noted that 48 states (all except Texas and Wisconsin), the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico had indicated that the proposed new troop lists were satisfactory to meet their requirements for forces to be used in time of natural disaster and to preserve law and order. (This fact did not necessarily represent state endorsement of the merger concept. See p. 695.)

March 26 -- Gen. Harold K. Johnson, Army Chief of Staff, told the Subcommittee, "There are persuasive strategic and related reasons why the realignment is a practical and desirable means of improving the capability to project United States military power." He said military requirements reflecting conditions in the world today and in the future made it evident that only fully supported reserve component units would meet the test.

March 29 -- Subcommittee Chairman Hebert labelled as "press agentry" and "trickery" the manner in which McNamara announced the merger in December 1964. Referring to the two other orders issued by McNamara at the same time (dealing with reservists in the Federal Government and Congressional travel by military invitation), Hebert said they were made "so the real meat of the thing (the merger proposal) would be forgotten." He charged that the Defense Department "needed a whipping boy, and it happened to be Congress. It's as old as press agentry itself. It goes back to the days of Barnum."

March 30 -- Lt. Gen. W.H.S. Wright, chief of the Army's Office of Reserve Components, said that "while we were supported with funds for authorized paid-drill strength, we are not authorized to buy the material requirements for our 21 low-priority divisions and supporting units; put another way, we have funds for 100 percent of our personnel but only 65 percent of those personnel are in units for which we can purchase equipment."

April 5 -- During the course of a hearing at which Wright testified again, Rep. Alton Lennon (D N.C.) implied that the Johnson Administration delayed announcement of the merger for political reasons. "I abhor politics when it enters matters of national security," he said. If the Pentagon had the "intestinal fortitude," it would have made the plan public before the Nov. 3 Presidential election, Lennon asserted, and would not have worried about "the political repercussions across the country."

April 6 -- Gen. Winston P. Wilson, chief of the Army National Guard Bureau, said his office actively participated in the preparation of the merger plan and was "fully aware of the challenge we accepted...." He said the most "difficult" portion of the plan was setting up troop lists adequate for each of the 50 states, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia. The objective, he said, was to distribute equitably between the states the 6,000 units in the merged force.

Maj. Gen. W.J. Sutton, chief of the Army Reserve, explained that, under the merger, the functions of 38.2 percent of current Reserve units would be unaffected; 39.3 percent of the units would be reorganized and consolidated; 7.2 percent would be converted to a new branch of operations; and 15.3 percent would be surplus and inactivated.

SENATE

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services, Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- Intermittently between March 1 and May 13 on the proposed Army Reserve-Guard merger. The Subcommittee received substantially the same testimony from many of the same witnesses appearing before the House Subcommittee. Highlights of other testimony:

March 1 -- McNamara told the Subcommittee the merger would improve combat readiness and effect cost savings of $150 million a year. He added, however, that economy was secondary. "Units for which there are no foreseeable needs in our contingency war plans should be eliminated from the (military) structure altogether, and the resources they now consume applied to more urgent requirements," McNamara said.

Asked how he proposed to maintain control over the National Guard when the law and the Constitution reserved procurement and training to the states and Congress, McNamara said, "Because I have directed it and because the Federal Government provides 90 percent of their money, and this is a tremendous bludgeon to hold over them."

Reminded by Subcommittee Chairman John Stennis (D Miss.) that increased combat readiness had been the object of a realignment of the reserve components in 1962, McNamara replied that further studies made a more extensive realignment necessary.

March 25 -- During a hearing at which Gen. Wilson testified, Sen. Thurmond, a former national president of the Reserve Officers Assn. (1954-55), objected to the proposed merger, contending that "now is the time to build up" all Army Reserve and Guard units in view of increasing Communist aggression. Thurmond also noted that the plan proposed the elimination of some Guard as well as Reserve units. He said, "Congress should take a long look" before approving the plan.

April 8 -- Maj. Gen. James F. Cantwell, president of the National Guard Assn., endorsed the basic concept of a merger, but said the Association was wary of certain specifics, such as the dissolution of 15 Guard divisions.

April 12 -- John T. Carlton, executive director of the Reserve Officers Assn., said the merger was an "ill conceived, destructive, disruptive and divisive plan." He termed "an indictment of the U.S. Army" the Defense Department's contention "that politically appointed state officials, some with very sketchy military backgrounds and knowledge, can do a better job of training troops... than can regular Army" officers. The claim that the plan would save $150 million a year, Carlton added, was a "pretense" and a "deception."

April 13 -- Maj. Gen. J.W. Kaine, chairman of the Combined General Staff Committees on Reserve Policy, said, "I am opposed to the merger and reorganization because I do not believe it is in the best interest of the national defense." Kaine added that the "basic concept" of the plan was never approved by his Committees.

McNamara-Hebert Agreement

Defense Secretary McNamara and Subcommittee Chairman Hebert held a joint news conference May 15 to announce that they had reconciled some of their differences over McNamara's authority to implement the proposed Reserve-Guard merger.

In effect, McNamara, while defending the substance of his plan, agreed with Hebert that it should be fully reviewed by Congress. Implementation of the plan, which was originally scheduled for July 1, would be "delayed," McNamara said, until Congress could complete its study and could pass certain "supporting legislation." The legislation would involve such technical revisions in existing statutes as: authorizing displaced reservists to be trained in Guard units, permitting women to join the Guard, increasing from 7 to 30 days the period during which certain Guard units could conduct training assemblies and establishing a Guard unit in the Virgin Islands.

Legislation incorporating these provisions (HR 8243) was introduced by Hebert May 18. (For hearings on bill, see below.)

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- July 1 -- A Reserve Officers Assn. press release noted that the legislatures of six states -- Arkansas, Louisiana, New Hampshire, Oklahoma, Texas and Wisconsin -- had adopted formal resolutions opposing in effect the Reserve-Guard merger.

July 13 -- At his news conference, President Johnson, in reply to a reporter's question as to the effect of the Viet Nam war on the proposed reserve merger, said, "So far as I am aware, the situation there has no effect on the merger one way or the other."

July 28 -- President Johnson announced that U.S. troops in Viet Nam would be increased from the current 75,000 to 125,000 and that monthly draft calls would be raised from 17,000 to 35,000. The President added that it was not currently necessary to call up reserve units. (See p. 168)

HEARINGS ON HR 8243

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services, Subcommittee No. 2.

HELD HEARINGS -- Aug. 2-4 on HR 8243. The Subcommittee Aug. 11 suspended further hearings until 1966, in effect blocking the merger for the time being.

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 2 -- Deputy Secretary of Defense Cyrus R. Vance said, "The time has come for the Congress to act" on the proposal to merge the Army Reserve and National Guard, and that delay was causing "uncertainty in the reserve forces with consequent loss of morale and adverse effects on recruiting." However, Vance said that the Defense Department had decided to defer a proposed merger of the Air Reserve and Air National Guard.

Vance said that "in light of the recent decisions with respect to Viet Nam," the Army merger plan should be implemented "as soon as possible." He said that as a result of the decision to increase the number of U.S. troops in Viet Nam, "we plan a temporary augmentation of both the active and reserve forces of the Army." He explained that the active Army would be strengthened "by activating one division force, three brigade forces, additional helicopter companies and combat and service support units. This will require a doubling of draft calls and heavy increases in the Army's training load." He said the status of selected reserve forces including three divisions, six brigades and various support units -- would be raised "to a level higher than that of present high-priority units." Vance said, "Clearly this increase of readiness can be accomplished more quickly -- and will require the introduction into the military service of fewer men from civilian life -- if the trained manpower resources that will be released" by the Reserve-Guard merger "are available...." (See below)

Aug. 3 -- During a second day of testimony, Vance was asked whether the proposed merger should not be delayed because of a possible call-up of some Reserve and National Guard forces as a result of the increased U.S. effort in Viet Nam. Vance responded, "It would be detrimental to national security if we do not go forward with the plan." Hebert replied, "I've got to counter that. From the evidence we have heard so far, I am persuaded that it would be detrimental to the national security to go ahead with the plan now, because of the turbulence it has created in the reserves."

Aug. 4 -- Frank E.G. Weil, representing the American Veterans Committee, opposed the Department's merger plan because "it will tend seriously to delay integration" of National Guard units, because of the degree of political control and influence on the National Guard of each state, and because draftees would be required to complete their reserve service requirements under state control.

SUBCOMMITTEE STATEMENT

A Subcommittee statement, issued Aug. 12 and signed by all members except Lucien N. Nedzi (D Mich.), said the merger would "result in an immediate and serious loss in the combat readiness of the affected reserve units" and thus was "not in the national interest." The statement added that the Subcommittee had "very serious reservations" about the proposed reduction in the mobilization base from the current 29-division, 11-brigade structure to an 8-division, 16-brigade structure, and urged that the Department "carefully restudy and re-evaluate" the plan. In conclusion, the statement said the Subcommittee was "determined" to resolve the question of future merger plans by ultimately enacting "positive legislation . . . (to) prevent a repetition of the unfortunate turmoil and confusion that has occurred in both the Army Reserve and National Guard as a result of the Department's premature announcement to merge" the two components.

The statement was signed by Hebert, Hardy (D Va.), Lennon (D N.C.), Hagan (D Ga.), Long (D La.), Bray (R Ind.), Wilson (R Calif.) and Pirnie (R N.Y.). The statement also noted that the Subcommittee's position had been endorsed by full Committee Chairman L. Mendel Rivers (D S.C.) and by William H. Bates (R Mass.), the ranking Republican on the Committee.

In a separate release Aug. 12, Nedzi said that, "Despite what it says, the majority has acted in a manner directly contrary to the national interest. The national interest, particularly at a time when American participation in Viet Nam increases daily, demands that we increase our usable combat strength." The testimony clearly showed that the merger was a "carefully thought-out plan" which would have contributed more to the national defense than the current reserve setup, he said.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Aug. 11 -- A Defense Department news release stated that the Department "regrets" the action of the House Subcommittee. It said that both Army Secretary Stanley R. Resor (who replaced Ailes June 30) and Army Chief of Staff Gen. Johnson were "firmly" convinced that the proposed merger was in the national interest, and that they were "concerned that failure to realign the structure now will compel the Army to retain non-essential units at the expense of forces which are required by our current contingency plans." The statement also said that disapproval of the merger would result in more men being called into the armed forces.

Sept. 14 -- Hebert, speaking to the Southern Governors Conference in Sea Island, Ga., said that "erosion" would be a better word than "merger" to describe the reserve reorganization plan. He asserted that the plan "can only lead to further destruction of the powers of the states. Don't kid yourselves. You're not running the Guard today. The Guard is run from Washington. They can federalize your Guard overnight and your Guard is gone."

Vance told the Governors Conference that charges that the merger would weaken gubernatorial influence with the National Guard were "hogwash." Vance said the Pentagon would continue to press for the merger, despite opposition in Congress.

'Select Force' Proposed

McNamara Sept. 30 announced a new plan to increase the combat readiness of the Army Reserve and Army National Guard. The plan, which involved creation of a "select force" of 150,000 reservists, was directly related to the U.S. military buildup in Viet Nam. According to Pentagon officials, the plan was designed to provide a quick-reaction reserve force to back up the regular Army, to minimize the Viet Nam war's drain on U.S. civilian manpower and to lessen the strain on training facilities which were already committed to the regular Army. The officials added that establishment of the select force would not deter the Defense Department from pressing for a major realignment of the Army reserve forces in 1966.

McNamara emphasized that his new plan was different from the consolidation plan because no merger was involved, it would be carried out under existing statutory authority, and it was in line with Congressional wishes concerning separate forces and drill-pay strengths. He said that it had been cleared with key Members of Congress.

The plan would create a "select" force of 119,000 Guardsmen and 31,000 Reservists which would be brought to 100-percent combat readiness. The force, operating under a stepped-up training schedule, would be capable of deployment to a battle zone within six to eight weeks. It would consist of 976 units -- 744 Guard units and 232 Reserve units -- and would be led by three 15,000-man divisions and six 4,000-man brigades.

The plan would also disband 751 "low-priority" Reserve units comprised of approximately 55,000 men. Some of these men, it was hoped, would join the selected high-priority units to bring them up to strength.

Congressional Reaction. Stennis Oct. 7 charged in a Senate floor speech that McNamara's new proposal represented the beginning of a "major scuttling of the Army Reserve." He said McNamara was "virtually ignoring the mandate of Congress," set forth in the fiscal 1966 defense appropriations bill (HR 9221 -- PL 89-213), not to reorganize the Army reserve components without the enactment of appropriate legislation. (See p. 177)

Stennis also took issue with McNamara's assertion that Senate leaders had been consulted and had "responded favorably" to the plan. Only three Senators were consulted in advance, Stennis said, and none of them agreed to the plan or received it favorably. Neither, he said, did the Defense Department make clear to him that the plan would deactivate 55,000 Reservists.

McNamara's action brought a different type of response from Reps. Hebert and Bray. In a joint statement, they said that the new plan "in no way involves the merger as contemplated by the Department of Defense" in December 1964, and that the Pentagon had the authority to take the steps under the law without further Congressional action being required.

Senate Committee Resolution. The Senate Armed Services Committee Oct. 22 unanimously adopted a Committee resolution endorsing the formation of a "select" force but asking McNamara to postpone until March 1, 1966, the disbanding of the 751 low-priority Reserve units.

McNamara Reply. McNamara Nov. 13 announced that plans to abolish the low-priority units would be carried out immediately, despite Congressional objections. McNamara's statement said that the Senate Committee's resolution had been "carefully considered" but that "the immediate inactivation of these units, which are not required by contingency war plans, is essential." He said that the plans, by quickly making available additional trained manpower for other units, would reduce the need to recruit new men from civilian life. McNamara also reiterated that the plan did not involve a merger, and added that Army Reserve strength would be programmed to attain 270,000 by the end of fiscal 1966, as provided by PL 89-213.

PRESIDENT WINS MILITARY BASE DISPUTE

HR 8439 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 386) May 27, 1965.
- Passed by the House by voice vote June 10.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Armed Services Committee (S Rept 338) June 21.
- Passed by the Senate by an 89-0 roll-call vote June 28. (See p. 1053)
- Conference report (H Rept 713) agreed to by a 389-0 roll-call vote of the House Aug. 4 and by voice vote of the Senate Aug. 5. (See p. 986)
- Vetoed Aug. 21.

HR 10775 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 956) Sept. 3, 1965.
- Passed by the House by a 347-0 roll-call vote Sept. 7. (See p. 996)
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Sept. 9.

PL 89-188 -- Signed into law Sept. 16.

Registering his first veto of a major public bill since taking office, President Johnson in 1965 refused to sign into law a military construction authorization measure (HR 8439) which included a provision requiring the Secretary of Defense to submit plans for closing military installations to Congress for review. Mr. Johnson objected particularly to language in the provision that permitted the Secretary to submit such plans only in the first four months of a year. It also forbade closing of any base until 120 days after the Secretary's report was submitted to Congress. The President called the provision a "fundamental encroachment" on the powers of the Executive Branch.

Congress did not attempt to override the veto and, instead, passed a new bill (HR 10775) with a watered-down reporting requirement on base closures that the President accepted.

McNamara Shutdowns Protested

The controversial provision which brought the veto of HR 8439 originated in the House Armed Services Committee and appeared to be a challenge by the Committee's new chairman, L. Mendel Rivers (D S.C.), to the "unilateral" decisions made by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara to close bases. It was prompted by McNamara's Nov. 18, 1964, announcement of intentions to close or phase out 95 military installations in the United States and abroad. The plans affected facilities in 34 states and numerous Congressional districts, and met considerable opposition from Congress. (1964 Almanac p. 160)

As originally approved by the House, HR 8439 provided a formula under which any base-closure plan would be subject to veto by either chamber of Congress; the Senate deleted the provision altogether. In conference, a compromise was reached which struck out authority for a Congressional veto but which required the Secretary of Defense, between Jan. 1 and April 30 of each year, to submit base-closure plans to Congress for a 120-day review. After HR 8439 was vetoed, Congress replaced the bill with HR 10775, which included a provision giving Congress 30 days to review base-closing plans submitted by the Secretary. An effort on the House floor to get a vote on overriding the veto of HR 8439 was beaten down by a 323-19 roll-call vote.

Late in 1965, McNamara Dec. 6 announced the closing or consolidation of an additional 126 domestic and 23 overseas military bases at an estimated savings of $410 million a year. McNamara explained Dec. 8 that most of the base reductions were related to a Defense Department decision to cut back the Strategic Air Command's bomber fleet between 1965-71. McNamara was expected to submit the base-closure plan to Congress for review soon after the 1966 session convened.

Funds Authorized. In both HR 8439 and HR 10775, Congress authorized identical sums of $1,780,062,000. The total included $1,085,851,000 for new construction at 427 military bases in the United States and abroad, $9,823,000 in deficiency authorizations for projects approved in previous years, and $684,388,000 for 9,500 new units of military family housing plus maintenance and debt payments on all family housing.

The total of $1,780,062,000 was $173,136,000 less than revised Defense Department requests of $1,953,198,000. It also was $154,865,000 less than the House approved and $58,710,000 more than was voted by the Senate. The largest reductions in the Administration's requests were $21.2 million from the Army's near-obsolete Nike-Hercules anti-missile system, $22.4 million from the Air Force's tactical aircraft shelter program, $15.2 million from Air Force projects in Europe, and $51.2 million from family housing requests. The Administration had sought authority to construct 12,500 new housing units. Although Congress allowed actual construction of only 9,500 units, it authorized 11,180 units, thereby giving the Department some leeway in determining construction priorities. The fiscal 1966 military construction appropriations bill (HR 10323), however, provided funds for construction of only 8,500 units. (See story p. 225)

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 10775 authorized:

Military Construction:
Army	$ 309,522,000
Navy	311,412,000
Air Force	334,376,000
Defense Agencies	100,051,000
Reserve and National Guard	30,490,000
Deficiencies, prior years	9,823,000
Total, Military Construction	$1,095,674,000
Family Housing:
Construction (all services)	$ 195,589,000
Operation, maintenance and debt payments	488,799,000
Total, Family Housing	$ 684,388,000
GRAND TOTAL	$1,780,062,000

In addition, HR 10775:

Prohibited the Defense Department from closing or abandoning any "camp, post, station, base, yard or other installation" in the United States or Puerto Rico which employed 250 or more civilians and military personnel until 30 days after the Secretary of Defense reported the facts of and justification for the action to the House and Senate Armed Services Committees.

Stipulated that the land comprising the Bolling-Anacostia deactivated air fields in Washington, D.C., could not be transferred, reassigned or disposed of prior to July 1, 1967.

Required that every subsequently authorized new military hospital in the United States or its possessions include facilities for obstetrical care unless "sound and specific justification" for omitting such facilities were made by the Secretary concerned.

Directed the Secretary of Defense to assure that buildings whose construction was authorized by the Act be built "to maximize fallout protection" where that could be done without impairing their purpose or effectiveness. Limited the amount allowed for this purpose to 1 percent of the total authorized for each project.

Prohibited contracts between the Air Force and Aerospace Corp. allowing Aerospace to construct or acquire real property unless authorized by Congress.

BACKGROUND -- The House considered Defense Department requests totaling $1,955,320,000 -- $1,945,497,000 in new authorizations and $9,823,000 in deficiency funds. After the House passed the bill, the Department reduced its requests to $1,953,198,000 -- $1,943,375,000 in new authorizations and $9,823,000 in deficiencies.

Action on HR 8439

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

ACTION -- May 27 reported HR 8439 (H Rept 386) authorizing $1,934,927,000, including $9,823,000 in deficiency funds. The total was $20,393,000 less than Defense Department requests.

The bill also included a controversial provision granting either chamber of Congress authority to veto Administration plans for closing military bases in the United States or Puerto Rico that employed more than 250 people.

The Committee report said HR 8439 provided for construction of 12,300 new family housing units, which was 200 less than requested, and for leasing of a requested 7,500 housing units, which was 2,500 above the current ceiling.

As for the Committee's relatively small reduction in budget requests, the report said that the amount sought for fiscal 1966 was "a more realistic request than in prior years" and that the Committee recognized that even if the full request had been allowed, "it would take nearly 13 years to replace obsolete World War II facilities." Of the Committee's reductions, only $3.5 million, for a disapproved 200-unit housing project at the Naval Complex, Johnsville, Pa., was specifically identified.

Language Provisions. In other actions, the Committee:

● Wrote language into the bill requiring specific Congressional authorization for the Secretary of Defense to dispose of land comprising the Bolling-Anacostia military complex near Washington and of contracts between the Air Force and the non-profit Aerospace Corp. allowing Aerospace to acquire land. The Secretary had expressed his intention to turn over a portion of the Bolling-Anacostia base for an urban redevelopment project. Although the Committee did not explain its action toward Aerospace, reportedly the restriction was attached to the bill because of recent complaints by the U.S. Comptroller General of Aerospace's failure to construct new buildings on nearby land already owned by the Government.

● Approved $55 million for medical facilities, of which about $22.3 million was for construction of eight new military hospitals containing 538 beds. The Committee said it was "dissatisfied" with the Department's response to recommendations by a Special Subcommittee on the Construction of Military Hospitals, appointed in 1964, and therefore wrote into the bill a recommended requirement that each new military hospital contain obstetrical facilities and adequate beds to care for retired military personnel and their dependents.

● Included language directing the Secretary of Defense to assure that buildings for which construction was authorized by the Act have "maximum fallout protection." The amount allowed for this purpose was limited to 1 percent of the total amount authorized for each project.

● Said all Congressmen were "extremely conscious" of the base-closure program of the Department. As a result, the Committee said it obtained assurances that construction authorized by the bill would not be done on bases to be deactivated. However, it noted that the bill included $49.8 million to transfer certain functions of bases to be closed to 31 other bases. Economies made possible by these transfers would result in savings of $477 million a year, the Committee said. The Committee also noted that since 1961, 669 separate closure or reduction actions had been taken which, when completed, would eliminate 149,881 excess jobs and produce annual savings of more than $1 billion.

While applauding the efforts of the Secretary of Defense to effect economies, the Committee said, "Congress should have an opportunity to make its will known ...." To accomplish this, the Committee attached to the bill a requirement that no base could be closed or "substantially reduced" until Congress had 70 days to veto the proposal. (A similar restriction was placed on the Defense Department with respect to established functions of the Department in the Defense Department Reorganization Act of 1958 -- 1958 Almanac p. 133.)

FLOOR ACTION

The House June 10 passed HR 8439 by voice vote, without amendment, and sent it to the Senate. Debate was largely limited to the base-closure provision attached in committee.

Press reports indicated that if the provision were not stricken from the bill in the Senate, the President might veto HR 8439. On June 5, in a veto message on a flood relief bill for Pacific Coast states, the President said: "The proper separation of powers and division of responsibilities between Congress and the Executive Branch is a matter of continuing concern to me. I must oppose the tendency to use any device to involve Congressional committees in the administration of programs and the implementation of laws." (See story p. 676)

In support of the provision, Committee Chairman L. Mendel Rivers (D S.C.), floor manager of the bill, said Congress' stand on the base-closure issue would determine whether or not Congress would relinquish its constitutional prerogative to raise and support the nation's armies. In effect challenging President Johnson to a test as to who was going to run the military establishment, Rivers said Congress' function was not "to rubber stamp only what is submitted for approval" by the Executive Branch. He contended that since construction of military bases had to be authorized by Congress, it should have a say as to their dissolution.

The provision was supported by a vast majority of House Members, and particularly by New York Congressmen who were concerned about the Brooklyn Navy Yard, scheduled to be closed June 30, 1966. Opposition was limited to a handful of Members -- Brock Adams (D Wash.), Phillip Burton (D Calif.), Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.), Floyd V. Hicks (D Wash.), Melvin R. Laird (R Wis.) and Lucien N. Nedzi (D Mich.). Nedzi said the provision was "directed at subsidizing the economies of communities possessing unneeded military facilities."

Appropriations Committee Chairman George H. Mahon (D Texas), also chairman of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, in a brief statement said he had serious concern" and "reservation" about the provision.

Noting that no effort was made on the House floor to delete the provision, Curtis said "the sponge has been tossed in" by the Democratic leadership, who had decided not to "make a fight for its own executive Administration."

Before passing the bill the House rejected, by voice vote, a motion by John W. Wydler (R N.Y.) to recommit the bill with instructions that it be reported with language providing that any base closure previously ordered but not completed by June 1, 1965, be included in the provision. Earlier, an identical amendment offered by Samuel S. Stratton (D N.Y.) was rejected by a 32-104 standing vote. Rivers said the additional language was not necessary since it was his "curbstone opinion" the provision applied to any facility "still open" at the time the President signed the bill. But he also said it might lead to a Presidential veto if construed as "ex post facto in its application."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 8439 authorized:

Military Construction	$1,202,827,000
Family Housing	732,100,000
Total	$1,934,927,000

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

June 10 -- Samuel S. Stratton (D N.Y.), for Otis G. Pike (D N.Y.) -- Provide that the Congressional veto over proposed installation closures apply to Defense Department actions previously ordered but incomplete as of June 1, 1965. Standing vote, 32-104.

Lester L. Wolff (D N.Y.) -- Delete $851,000 to move the functions of the Sands Point (N.Y.) Naval Training Device Center to the Naval Training Device Center, Orlando, Fla. Standing, 61-113.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

ACTION -- June 21 reported HR 8439 (S Rept 338) authorizing $1,721,352,000, including $9,823,000 in deficiencies. The total was $231,846,000 less than revised Department requests and $213,575,000 less than the sum voted by the House. The Committee deleted the base-closure provision attached in the House.

The major Committee reduction in the House bill was $74,925,000 cut from new family housing construction. The Committee authorized 10,930 units at 53 locations, specifically denying 1,570 of the 12,500 Administration-requested units, including the 200 units cut by the House. However, the Committee limited to 8,000 the number of units that could actually be constructed. Authorizing the larger figure, the report said, would give the Defense Department greater "leeway" in selecting the specific units "deemed most necessary." The Committee also denied a 2,500-unit increase (to 7,500 units) in the ceiling on housing leases and two $100,000 "representation houses" for entertaining dignitaries at the North American Air Defense Command in Colorado Springs, Colo., and at MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa, Fla.

Other major Committee changes in the House version included the following: elimination of $22.4 million for tactical aircraft shelters; denial of $21.2 million for expenditures relating to Nike-Hercules anti-missile facilities; reduction of $15,196,000 for several Air Force projects in Europe; approval of construction of seven, rather than eight, new military hospitals; and addition of an unbudgeted $9.2 million for Army National Guard construction. The latter item, the Committee said, would assure an adequate construction program in the event the proposed Army Reserve-National Guard merger were not consummated. The report said the Army Reserve had sufficient uncommitted funds on hand. (See p. 692)

House Provisions Deleted. The Committee gave the following reasons for deleting certain language attached to the bill by the House:

- Provision for a Congressional veto over military base closures was "unwise" since occasional alteration of the base structure was part of the Secretary of Defense's responsibility to provide for the "effective, efficient and economical administration" of the military establishment. The Committee emphasized, however, that changes "should be scheduled and announced as far in advance" as possible and that "adequate notice should be given to the Members of Congress and to the communities affected."
- Disposal of land comprising the Bolling-Anacostia deactivated airfields in Washington, D.C., "should be properly handled" in accordance with the Federal Property Disposal Act, rather than be subject to Congressional authorization.
- Requirement that all new military hospitals contain facilities for retired personnel and obstetrical facilities was "premature and piecemeal" since a long-range health and care program for retirees was currently under study and since obstetrical facilities "may in fact be of higher quality in the civilian community...." The Committee added that retention of this provision would have increased costs by $16 million over the next five years.
- Requirement that all construction authorized by the bill have "maximum fallout protection" was opposed because design work for the fiscal 1966 construction program was 60-percent completed, "leaving little flexibility to provide for such shelter space."
- Prohibition of real estate contracts between the Air Force and Aerospace Corp. unless authorized by Congress was opposed because "it deals with only one aspect of the contractual relationship of one military department with one organization."

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate June 28 passed HR 8439 by an 89-0 roll-call vote, as recommended by the Committee. (For voting, see chart p. 1053)

(Continued on next page)

During debate, John Stennis (D Miss.), acting chairman of Armed Services, said that "a very substantial majority" of the Committee had voted to delete the House base-closure provision. Stennis said it was "the law of the land" that the restructuring of military installations was "an Executive function...under strict surveillance of the Legislative Branch of the Government, which must provide the money." He said it was his "deliberate conclusion" that the provision would have applied only to future closure announcements. If interpreted as being retroactive, as suggested by House Armed Services Committee Chairman L. Mendel Rivers (D S.C.), Stennis said the provision would have been "ex post facto law to the extent of cutting off Executive power used under existing operative law." and would have been invalidated by the courts.

Thomas J. McIntyre (D N.H.), who had protested the closing of the Portsmouth naval base, contended that retention of the provision would be a "sound approach." He said the Department of Defense and the military departments should not be "an entity unto themselves, separate and apart from the rest of the Government." McIntyre's views were supported by Sens. Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D N.C.), Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.), Edmund S. Muskie (D Maine), Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine) and Strom Thurmond (R S.C.). No amendment to reinsert the House provision was offered, however.

In explaining the bill, Stennis said the Committee had deferred "some meritorious matters because of the very urgency of the extra cost of the effort in Viet Nam; and the story has not been half told as yet with reference to the cost of the war in Viet Nam." (See story p. 168)

Before passing HR 8439, the Senate rejected an amendment offered by Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) by voice vote and an amendment co-sponsored by Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), Dirksen and Jack Miller (R Iowa) by a 32-56 roll call. The Douglas-Dirksen-Miller amendment would have restored to the bill a Defense Department request of $3,510,000 to transfer small arms research and development facilities from the Springfield, Mass., Armory to the Rock Island, Ill., Arsenal. Douglas said the request was made on the basis of an independent study which concluded that the transfer would result in savings of $4.6 million a year. Douglas explained, however, that as a result of "political pressure" by the Massachusetts Congressional delegation, the request was deferred and a new study launched. Douglas said he offered the amendment in an attempt to "save the (Massachusetts) Senators from their baser elements and enable them to become statesmen once more."

The amendment was opposed by Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.) and Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), ranking minority member of the Committee. They asserted that their own study showed the transfer "would be a sheer waste of the taxpayers' money," involving a "one-time cost of $73 million," rather than a savings. Stennis said the item had been deleted because the Defense Department was restudying the move and because the Committee does "not authorize speculative projects that may be three years in starting."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 8439 authorized:

Military Construction	$1,068,918,000
Family Housing	652,434,000
Total	$1,721,352,000

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

June 28 -- Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Authorize $3,510,000 to transfer small arms research and development facilities from the Springfield, Mass., Armory to the Rock Island, Ill., Arsenal, provided that the authorization was not disapproved by the Secretary of Defense prior to final Congressional action on the fiscal 1966 military construction appropriations bill. Roll-call vote, 32-56.

Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Restore $3,415,000 for facilities at Chanute Air Force Base, Rantoul, Ill., by accepting the House figure of $6,240,000. Voice vote.

Conference

REPORT -- House-Senate conferees Aug. 3 issued the conference report on HR 8439 (H Rept 713) authorizing $1,780,062,000, including $9,823,000 in deficiencies.

The House conferees agreed to the major Senate monetary revisions in the House bill (see Committee section, above) and to Senate disapproval of one of the eight new hospitals authorized by the House. In addition, the conferees compromised on the number of new family housing units to be constructed, authorizing 11,180 units but limiting to 9,500 the number that actually could be built. The bill also authorized the leasing of 7,000 housing units.

Base Closures. The conference agreement included a modified version of the House-approved base-closure provision that had been deleted by the Senate. The new provision removed the most objectionable feature of the original House language -- specific authorization of a veto by either house of Congress upon Committee disapproval of base-closure plans. Instead, the conference language required the Secretary of Defense to submit any proposals to close or reduce bases to the Armed Services Committees and only between Jan. 1 and April 30 of each year. The closings could not take place until 120 days after the Secretary's report was submitted, and if Congress adjourned prior to expiration of the 120 days, the proposed action would have to be resubmitted during the next regular session of Congress.

In their statement accompanying the conference report, House conferees said the new language would "give the Armed Services Committees of both the House and Senate an opportunity to hear the matter of any particular base closure at a time when it is considering the military construction authorization bill and to write restrictive language in such legislation in case it disapproved such a base closure. While the House conferees preferred the language originally contained in the House-passed version of the bill, it is believed that the compromise language can effectively accomplish the same purpose...."

Other Language Provisions. All other House language provisions, deleted by the Senate, were restored to the bill, with the following changes in wording:

- Transfer, reassignment or disposal of the Bolling-Anacostia airfields was prohibited prior to July 1, 1967, instead of disposition of the land being left to specific Congressional authorization.
- Military hospitals authorized in the future were required only to have obstetrical facilities and not beds for retired military personnel and dependents.
- Congressional authorization was required, not just for construction and land acquisition contracts between the Air Force and the Aerospace Corp., but for any such contracts between a military department and a non-profit corporation or organization which received 75 percent or more of its gross income from federal funds.

ACTION -- The House Aug. 4, by a 389-0 roll-call vote, and the Senate Aug. 5, by voice vote, adopted the conference report on HR 8439, sending the bill to the President. (For voting, see chart p. 986)

During House discussion of the conferees' action, Rivers said the new base-closing provision gave the House "exactly what we wanted." Rivers said, "We wanted the Secretary of Defense to take us into a partnership when he got ready to close a base or considered closing a base.... That is what the conferees insisted on. That is what we received." He said the House Armed Services Committee would tolerate no "unilateral dismantling" of defense installations by the Secretary of Defense. Referring to press reports that the compromise version of the base-closing provision represented a setback for the House Committee, Rivers asked, "Does it look like we are losing? I wish we were doing as well in Viet Nam as the House Committee on Armed Services is doing on Capitol Hill."

The Senate cleared the bill without discussion.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the President, HR 8439 authorized:

Military Construction	$1,095,674,000
Family Housing	684,388,000
TOTAL	$1,780,062,000

President's Veto

President Johnson Aug. 21 refused to sign HR 8439 into law and returned the bill to Congress with a veto message. Mr. Johnson based his objections to the measure on the section requiring the Secretary of Defense to submit plans for closing military bases to Congress for a 120-day review period. The President indicated, however, that he would accept a new bill containing "a reasonable reporting provision, consistent with the legislative powers of the Congress." (See below)

In his veto message, the President said he had been "advised" by Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach that the base-closure provisions of HR 8439 were "repugnant to the Constitution," representing a "fundamental encroachment" on the separation of powers between the Legislative and Executive Branches. The limitations imposed by the provisions, Mr. Johnson added, "could seriously interfere with and adversely affect the administration of our military program and our continuing efforts to improve our defense posture."

The President cited the following major reasons for vetoing HR 8439:

- The base-closure provisions "substantially inhibit" the Commander in Chief's constitutional obligations to execute the powers of his office. "He cannot sign into law a measure which deprives him of power for eight months of the year (i.e., May through December) even to propose a reduction of mission or the closing of any military installation...."
- "Effective national defense in this nuclear age requires flexibility in the management of our defense installations, including the assignment of their respective missions."
- "The American people are entitled to a dollar's worth of defense for every dollar spent. The base-closure program is a vital element in effecting important economies within the military establishment."
- The President must "be concerned about the cumulative erosion of the executive power by legislation" such as HR 8439. "The power of the Congress... is not served by assuming executive functions. Not only does separation of powers fail when Congress impairs the executive function, but the sheer inability of the Congress to deal meaningfully with the multitudinous details of execution of its laws weakens government."

Disapproval of HR 8439 was Mr. Johnson's third veto of a public bill since becoming President in 1963. (1963 Almanac p. 1020; 1964 Almanac p. 892; 1965 Almanac p. 1427)

Action on HR 10775

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

ACTION -- Sept. 3 reported HR 10775 (H Rept 956) including a revised version of the base-closure provision of HR 8439 which was the cause of Mr. Johnson's veto. HR 10775 authorized the same military construction and family housing sums as HR 8439.

The new base-closure provision, reportedly worked out between the Committee and the Administration, required that no military installation in the United States or Puerto Rico employing more than 250 civilian and military personnel could be closed or abandoned until 30 days after the closure plan and full justification of the plan had been submitted to the House and Senate Armed Services Committees.

The only other change from HR 8439 was in a provision requiring specific authorization of construction and land contracts between the Defense Department or any military department and any non-profit group which received 75 percent or more of its gross income from federal funds. The new provision, which reverted to the original House language in HR 8439, applied only to contracts between the Air Force and the Aerospace Corp.

Majority Views. The Committee report stated: "When the President signs into law an authorization bill, and later an appropriations bill, according to the Attorney General, he is bound to execute that law. But in the execution of the law the Congress obviously contemplates that the (military) base it has authorized is required and will remain open. Therefore, whether or not a base should be closed might well be a question for the Congress to determine." The report added: "The Committee believes the Congress must... be concerned about the cumulative erosion of the legislative powers of the Congress, frequently based upon the assumption that Congress is unable to deal meaningfully with the multitudinous details of execution of its laws. The Congress is not so devoid of ability and capability that it cannot go into details that vitally affect the welfare of the nation. And frankly the Committee grows tired of the implication that the Congress really only has the power to appropriate funds."

In conclusion, the report said that by adopting the compromise reporting procedure the Committee "has not entered into a strategic withdrawal, but has entered into a new era of understanding" with the Executive Branch.

Separate Views. Five Committee members -- Reps. Otis G. Pike (D N.Y.), Alton Lennon (D N.C.), Floyd V. Hicks (D Wash.), Bob Wilson (R Calif.) and Durward G. Hall (R Mo.) -- urged that Congress repass HR 8439 over the President's veto. All had military or naval bases in their districts. They said: "We may retreat, we may back up, we may avoid our responsibility, and we may shy away from a direct confrontation with the Executive Branch, but we would do a far greater service to the nation and to the principle of separate, but equal powers, in Government, if we uphold our original unanimous judgment and protect the integrity of the Legislative Branch...."

FLOOR ACTION

The House Sept. 7 passed HR 10775 by a 347-0 roll-call vote and sent it to the Senate. Prior to passage, the House, on a 323-19 roll call (R 99-18; D 224-1), tabled (killed) a motion by Hall to discharge the Armed Services Committee of further consideration of HR 8439. Had Hall's motion been adopted, a motion to override the President's veto of HR 8439, requiring a two-thirds majority vote, then would have been in order. (For voting, see chart p. 996)

During floor debate, Chairman Rivers said, "We could, of course, have made it (the base-closing issue) a far greater issue. We chose not to take that path because we are dealing with the national security." He said that, "While we do not claim a victory, we do not admit nor imply a defeat." The Executive Branch was now convinced, he said, that Congress "must be a partner" in military affairs. Rivers also said that he had been assured "by the highest source in our Government" (presumably the President) that no base would be closed without advance notice to the Congressman affected, and that "we have every reason to believe" no base would be closed when Congress was not in session.

With regard to revision in the language pertaining to construction contracts between the Defense Department and non-profit groups, Porter Hardy Jr. (D Va.), chairman of the Armed Services Special Investigations Subcommittee, explained that the provision had been changed because its general language might have been "too restrictive" on privately sponsored, Government-financed, non-profit organizations. He said the effect of the general language would be reviewed and possibly included in the fiscal 1967 authorization bill.

OTHER DEBATE -- Sept. 7 -- F. Edward Hebert (D La.) -- The Defense Department has forced Congress into the role of "silent partner...on the theory that the Congress is, in view of modern technology and related complications, simply incapable of dealing meaningfully with the profound intricacies of national defense. Consequently, like 'big brother,' (the Department) has 'reluctantly' assumed the prerogatives of Congress."

Hardy (D Va.) -- HR 8439 "is clearly constitutional; and it will remain constitutional until properly ruled otherwise by the courts, opinions of the Attorney General to the contrary notwithstanding."

William H. Bates (R Mass.), ranking Armed Services Committee minority member -- "If the President is not required to bring back to Congress for Congressional approval the deletion of some program previously approved by Congress, the President is in effect gathering unto himself an item veto, which has never been allowed up to this point."

Senate

The Senate Sept. 9 passed HR 10775 by voice vote, without debate, and cleared it for the President's signature. The Senate Armed Services Committee did not issue a report or take any other formal action on the bill.

MILITARY PAY RAISE

HR 9075 -- Reported by House Armed Services Committee (H Rept 549) June 24, 1965.
- Passed by the House by a 410-0 roll-call vote July 20. (See p. 980)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Armed Services Committee (S Rept 544) Aug. 6.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate by an 89-0 roll-call vote Aug. 11. (See p. 1064)
- House agreed to Senate amendments by voice vote Aug. 12.

PL 89-132 -- Signed into law Aug. 21.

By unanimous roll-call votes of both chambers, Congress in 1965 enacted an Administration-opposed bill (HR 9075) authorizing basic pay and related pay increases for active duty and retired members of the uniformed military services, plus uniformed personnel of the Reserves, Coast Guard, Public Health Service and Coast and Geodetic Survey. The bill was estimated to cost $1,048,029,000 a year, more than double the $504.3-million pay increase recommended by the Administration.

Of the total authorized, $880.4 million was for basic pay increases, averaging an over-all 10.4 percent and effective Sept. 1, 1965. The pay of enlisted men with less than two years' service was increased for the first time since 1952. The remaining $167.6 million was for such items as Social Security payments, terminal leave payments, retired personnel benefits, new hostile-fire pay rates and new re-enlistment bonuses. (See Provisions and chart on p. 703)

HR 9075 was a slightly revised version of a bill (HR 5725) introduced earlier in the session by House Armed Services Committee Chairman L. Mendel Rivers (D S.C.). The legislation, according to Rivers, was designed to give military personnel a substantial pay boost in order to "correct" the current "inequitable" lag between military and federal civilian employees' pay scales. Rivers also introduced the Administration's draft bill (HR 8714), but called its pay recommendations "disgracefully inadequate" and "paltry." (Rivers in 1965 also led Congressional challenges to the Administration on the closing of military bases and the proposed Army Reserve-National Guard merger. See p. 697, 692.)

Upon signing HR 9075 into law Aug. 21, President Johnson said that, while the measure provided pay raises of more than $540 million above what he sought, "In this critical period...in light of the alternatives available to me, I have concluded that the public interest will best be served by signing the bill."

Enactment of HR 9075 constituted the third major military pay increase since 1963. PL 88-132, signed Oct. 2, 1963, authorized pay increases of $1.2 billion, including 17-percent raises for all active duty personnel with two or more years of service. PL 88-422, signed Aug. 21, 1964, authorized increases of $207.5 million, including 2.5-percent raises for all active duty personnel except enlisted men with less than two years of service. (1963 Almanac p. 447; 1964 Almanac p. 468)

Congress in 1965 also enacted legislation (HR 3044 -- PL 89-149) increasing the pay of enlisted men by $55 a month and of officers by $110 a month while serving on flight deck crews of aircraft carriers. The increase was estimated to cost $5.3 million annually.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 9075:

Authorized military pay increases totalling $1,048,029,000 for an estimated 2.7 million uniformed personnel on active duty, 1 million reservists and 505,000 retired personnel.

Basic Pay Costs -- Of the total, $809,855,000 was for basic pay increases for active duty armed forces personnel of the Defense Department, broken down as follows:

- $136.6 million for officers with more than two years' service, for a flat 6-percent increase. The basic pay of a first lieutenant with four years' service would rise from $477 a month to $505; the pay of a brigadier general with 28 years' service, from $1,266 a month to $1,342; the pay of a chief of staff, from $2,019 a month to $2,140.
- $493.1 million for enlistees with more than two years' service, for a flat 11-percent increase. The basic pay of a corporal with five years' service would rise from $210 a month to $233; the pay of a sergeant first class with 18 years' service, from $379 a month to $421.
- $28.9 million for officers with less than two years' service, for a flat 11-percent increase. The basic pay of a second lieutenant would rise by 22.2 percent, from $241 a month to $295; the pay of a captain by 21 percent, from $354 to $428.
- $151.2 million for enlistees with less than two years' service, for an average 17.3-percent increase. The basic pay of a recruit would rise 12.7 percent, from $78 a month to $88; the pay of a sergeant by 33.6 percent, from $145 a month to $194.

In addition, the bill authorized basic pay increases totalling $53,536,000 for reservists and approximately $17 million for uniformed personnel of the Coast Guard, Public Health Service and Coast and Geodetic Survey and officer candidates.

Additional Costs -- The remaining $167.6 million of the $1-billion increase went for such items as Social Security, re-enlistment bonuses, hostile-fire pay, terminal leave payments and retired personnel benefits. (See chart)

The bill also:

Permitted variable re-enlistment bonuses of up to four times current rates for personnel possessing critically needed skills.

Authorized a $10 monthly increase (to $65) in hostile-fire pay.

Granted free first-class postage for servicemen in areas designated by the President as combat zones (such as Viet Nam).

Authorized a "bonus" increase in retirement pay for personnel retired prior to the effective date of HR 9075 equal to the percentage by which the Consumer Price Index rose from the 1962 average to August 1965 (about 4 percent).

Provided for future cost-of-living pay increases for all retirees whenever the Consumer Price Index rose 3 percent for three consecutive months in place of the existing requirement of an average 3-percent rise for an entire year.

Established a procedure requiring the President to review the "adequacy" of military pay each year and report to Congress and requiring the President to review the "principles and concepts" of military pay each four years.

Set the effective date of the pay raises on the first day of the month following the date of enactment (Sept. 1, 1965).

Pay Proposals

Rivers Bill. Rivers March 3 introduced legislation (HR 5725) proposing an average 10.6-percent pay increase for all uniformed military personnel at an estimated annual cost of approximately $973.8 million. The bill provided no changes in special pay or allowances. Companion bills were also introduced by 33 of the 37 members of the House Armed Services Committee.

In a statement to the Committee, Rivers said HR 5725 was designed to bring military pay to levels comparable to those of federal civilian employees. He said he arrived at his new rates by developing a hypothetical comparability relationship between military and civilian salary rates, taking into consideration such differing factors as the serviceman's quarters and subsistence allowances and rate of retirement contributions. "Thus for the first time," he said, "my bill attempts to link uniformed services' pay levels to those provided... civilian employees and identifies in precise amounts the value of so-called major traditional military fringe bene-

Pay Cost Comparisons

(in millions, on 12-month basis)

		HR 9075
	Administration Bill	House Version	Senate, Final Version
Defense Department
Basic Pay:
Active duty	$369.0	$824.6	$ 809.9
Reserve	9.5	54.5	53.5
Officer candidates	.8	3.5	3.5
Social Security:
Active duty	14.3	27.2	26.9
Reserve	.4	.8	.7
Officer candidates		.1	.1
Hostile-fire pay	--	--	15.0
Re-enlistment bonus (present law)	7.2	15.2	15.0
Variable re-enlistment bonus	21.7	21.7	21.7
Terminal leave payments	10.2	19.8	19.3
Severance pay	.7	1.1	1.1
Reserve readjustment	.2	.2	.2
Death gratuity	.4	.7	.7
Retired personnel:
Retired before effective date	55.0	--	55.0
Retired after effective date	4.3	8.0	7.8
Subtotal, Defense Department	$493.7	$977.4	$1,030.6
Coast Guard*	8.4	15.3	14.6
Public Health Service*	2.1	2.7	2.7
Coast and Geodetic Survey*	.1	.1	.1
GRAND TOTAL‡	$504.3	$995.5	$1,048.0

Note: Figures may not add to totals due to rounding.

Totals include basic pay, Social Security, retirement and other costs.*

$29,000.*

‡The fiscal year 1966 cost with Sept. 1, 1965, as the effective date: Administration bill, $418.0 million; House version, $824.5 million; Senate and final version, $868.3 million.

SOURCE: Senate Armed Services Committee

fits." Rivers said that if military pay rates continued to lag behind civilian rates, "we will develop a type of mediocrity in our armed forces that no American can accept." He said, "Second best in this business means being last."

Rivers said a Presidential task force was currently reviewing federal civilian and military pay rates, but he added, "The justification for a (substantial) military pay raise needs no study."

Administration Bill. Rivers June 2 introduced an Administration bill (HR 8714) proposing a military pay increase of a flat 4.8 percent for personnel with two or more years of service and a flat 2.7 percent for personnel with two or less years of service at an estimated total cost of $447.6 million a year. The bill included $21.7 million for a new system of re-enlistment bonuses for persons with critically needed skills and language authorizing a continuing Presidential review of military salary scales. Later the Administration increased the cost of its bill by $56.8 million by recommending a "bonus" payment for persons retiring before enactment of the bill and changes in the formula for determining future pay increases for retirees. (See Provisions, above, and Senate Action, below.)

HR 8714 was based on recommendations in an April 15 report of the President's Special Panel on Federal Salaries. The report had concluded that, "Congressional action in 1962, 1963 and 1964 placed military compensation at a level, in relation to civilian pay levels, sufficient to attract and retain adequate numbers and quality of personnel in the armed forces." A draft of HR 8714 was transmitted to Congress by the Administration May 12. The proposal was immediately attacked by Rivers, who said he was "dumbfounded" by the Administration's recommendation of such a "paltry increase." Rivers June 2 said he introduced HR 8714 "only to provide a legislative vehicle upon which the Congress can work its will."

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HELD HEARINGS -- June 7-15 on HR 5725 and HR 8714. During hearings, Defense Department officials testified in support of HR 8714, objecting to HR 5725 because it provided "unnecessary" increases, particularly in grades not designated as "critical retention points." They said the substantial increases for personnel with less than two years' service provided in HR 5725 would work structural changes in the current pattern of basic military compensation scales. Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara June 7 told the Committee that HR 8714 was fair to both servicemen and taxpayers.

ACTION -- The Committee June 24 reported a clean bill (HR 9075 -- H Rept 549), introduced by Rivers June 15, authorizing military pay increases costing an estimated $995,544,000 on an annual basis. The total was $547,958,000 above initial Administration requests of $447.6 million. Basic pay increases recommended by HR 9075 averaged an over-all 10.6 percent, or the same as provided by HR 5725. HR 9075 was ordered reported by 34-1 vote June 15.

In addition to raising pay, HR 9075 also included Administration-proposed provisions for a new system of re-enlistment bonuses for persons with critically needed skills and for a continuing Presidential review of military salaries. HR 9075 also set the effective date of the pay raises upon enactment, rather than on Jan. 1, 1966, as proposed by the Administration.

Of the total amount authorized by HR 9075, $824.6 million was for basic pay increases for active duty armed forces personnel (not including items such as Social Security payments), broken down as follows: $145.7 million for officers with over two years of service (an average pay raise of 6.4 percent, ranging from 5 percent for a first lieutenant to 12.3 percent for a brigadier general); $498.9 million for enlistees with over two years of service (an average 11.1 percent, ranging from 8.7 percent for a corporal to 15.3 percent for a sergeant first class); $28.9 million for officers with less than two years of service (an average 22 percent, ranging from 21 percent for a captain to 22.2 percent for a second lieutenant); and $151.2 million for enlistees with less than two years of service (an average 17.3 percent, ranging from 12.7 percent for a recruit to 33.6 percent for a sergeant).

The balance of $170.9 million went for such items as Social Security payments, re-enlistment bonuses and other benefits; retired personnel payments; and basic pay increases for uniformed members of the Reserves, Coast Guard, Public Health Service and Coast and Geodetic Survey and officer candidates.

Majority Views. The Committee cited two principal reasons necessitating a military pay raise: "The inability of the military to attract and retain adequate numbers of qualified career personnel" and "inadequate compensation" received by servicemen in comparison to that received by federal civilian employees. The Committee said that re-enlistments were needed in specialists accounting for about 41 percent of the enlisted force to achieve current manning objectives. It said that taxpayers were losing "many millions of dollars" due to a drop in re-enlistment rates, since the training cost of each new inductee varied from $4,000 to $5,000. Inadequate compensation, the Committee continued, was illustrated by surveys showing that 34 percent of all enlisted personnel in the United States, "at one time or another, engaged in moonlighting activities" during 1964; and hardship discharges had increased from 9,533 in fiscal 1963 to an estimated 12,668 in fiscal 1965. The Committee added that during the 13-year period, 1952-65, military pay had increased by only 36.6 percent while federal civilian pay had increased by 46.3 percent.

The Committee was particularly critical of the recommendations embodied in HR 8714. It said the President's Panel did not interview a "single military witness" and based its recommendations on statistics supplied by McNamara, who then judged the statistics as a member of the Panel. The Committee also objected to a Panel proposal that the President be authorized to periodically adjust military pay unless his recommendation was vetoed by Congress within 60 days. This, the Committee asserted, "would constitute an abdication by the Congress of its legislative responsibility...."

Minority Views. Rep. Samuel S. Stratton (D N.Y.), the only Committee member to vote against HR 9075, said he supported the Administration bill, with the inclusion of $150 million more for pay increases for enlistees with two or less years of service.

FLOOR ACTION

The House July 20 passed HR 9075, without amendment, by a 410-0 roll-call vote and sent it to the Senate. Most of the debate on the bill occurred on July 19. (For voting, see chart p. 980)

During floor action on the bill, the House July 19 rejected, by a 9-83 standing vote, an amendment by Robert W. Kastenmeier (D Wis.), which would have added about $323 million to the cost of the bill. The amendment would have (1) provided pay increases for enlistees with less than two years of service at the same rate as that for enlistees with over two but less than three years of service and (2) provided larger increases for lower grade officers and no increases for higher grade officers. Kastenmeier explained that the pay increases in HR 9075 for enlistees were "scarcely adequate" and that higher grade officers could "afford to wait" for a pay raise until lower grade officers "are properly taken care of...."

Rivers opposed the amendment on the grounds that it would abandon the longevity principle, "which is inherent in all statutory pay systems for both federal civilian and military employees" and which is "designed to recognize and encourage improved performance within the grade concerned." Rivers added that Kastenmeier's argument, presented in Committee, that the amendment would be a "first step toward eliminating the draft," was fallacious because "neither the rates of pay in HR 9075 nor those proposed (by Kastenmeier) could be expected to achieve in any substantial measure the goal of elimination of the draft and the substitution of a completely voluntary military (manpower) procurement system."

DEBATE -- July 19 -- Rivers -- "Our military personnel cannot lobby for a pay increase. They cannot go on strike. They cannot bargain with their employer. They cannot, as do other workers, threaten to transfer to a competitor of their employer.... In short, once committed to a military career, these personnel become victims of the system and can look only to Congress for equitable pay treatment."

Alvin E. O'Konski (R Wis.) said that a Job Corps enrollee would receive more pay during his first year than a "typical soldier."

Samuel S. Stratton (D N.Y.) -- "As the one member of the (Armed Services) Committee who voted against reporting this legislation..., I rise now to indicate my intention to vote for this measure and to support it."

F. Edward Hebert (D La.) -- "I think the Secretary of Defense, so brilliant and so capable in so many areas, was moving out of his terrain when he got engrossed in the personnel field. This is landmark legislation. It marks the point where the Pentagon statistical pinball machines rang 'tilt.' It marks the beginning of pay equity for the military men. Let it also be a landmark of the Congress' determination not to be afraid to trust the heart more than the computer."

Lucien N. Nedzi (D Mich.) -- Nedzi said he supported the pay raise, but said the "defects of HR 9075 are that it raises pay more than necessary in some areas and it allocates increases among the various grades in the wrong proportions."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

ACTION -- Aug. 6 reported an amended version of HR 9075 (S Rept 544), authorizing military pay increases totalling an estimated $1,048,029,000 a year -- a $52.5 million increase in the sum voted by the House. Excluding a $56,761,000 increase for retired personnel, recommended by the Administration following House action and approved by the Senate, the Senate total actually represented a $4.3 million cut in the House amount. The Senate bill recommended basic pay raises averaging an over-all 10.4 percent as compared with 10.6 percent provided by the House.

The Senate reduced the House amount by, among other things, providing flat-rate pay increases for personnel with more than two years' service: 6 percent for officers (as compared with the House's average 6.4 percent) and 11 percent for enlisted men (as compared with the House's average 11.1 percent). It rejected the sliding scale adopted by the House, with larger increases for higher ranking officers and enlisted men, as constituting a structural change in military pay. The Senate added $15 million for larger hostile-fire pay, raising the monthly amount from $55 to $65 for personnel in Viet Nam and any other area designated as a combat zone by the President.

In addition, the Senate increased the House sum by $56,761,000 ($55 million for Defense Department personnel; the remainder for other uniformed personnel) by approving an Administration proposal to provide an immediate, one-time, increase in retirement pay for personnel retired prior to the effective date of HR 9075 equal to the percentage by which the Consumer Price Index rose from the 1962 average to August 1965 (about 4 percent). The Senate also approved another Administration proposal to provide for future cost-of-living pay increases for all retirees whenever the Consumer Price Index rose 3 percent for three consecutive months, in place of the existing requirement of an average 3-percent rise for an entire calendar year. (A provision identical to this was recommended and adopted for federal civilian employees in 1965. See p. 656.)

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Aug. 11 passed HR 9075 by an 89-0 roll-call vote and returned it to the House. (For voting, see chart p. 1064)

No opposition to HR 9075 was expressed in Senate debate. The Senate accepted by voice vote an amendment offered by Norris Cotton (R N.H.) providing for free first-class postage for servicemen in combat zones and rejected by a 34-53 roll-call vote an amendment offered by Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.) raising even more the pay scales for enlisted men with less than two years' service, at an estimated cost of $158 million. (For voting, see chart p. 1064)

Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) and Russell B. Long (D La.) persuaded Vance Hartke (D Ind.) to withdraw a proposed amendment to provide pensions to World War I veterans and their widows at an estimated cost of $1 billion in the first year.

DEBATE -- Aug. 11 -- Russell said the bill was necessary to bring military pay more into line with civilian pay rates and to retain highly trained personnel in critical areas. It did not include increased pay for the buildup announced Aug. 4 by President Johnson; the $1.7 billion sought for the Viet Nam conflict in that announcement was "only a small downpayment" on that conflict. (See p. 168)

Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) -- "This is a wise, simple and much-needed measure."

Nelson said that 34 percent of enlisted men have outside jobs and that 1.7 percent "are actually receiving public relief payments."

Final Action

The House Aug. 12 concurred by voice vote in the Senate amendments to HR 9075, clearing the bill for the President's signature. President Johnson signed the measure into law (PL 89-132) Aug. 21.

SERVICEMEN'S INSURANCE

S 2127 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 619) Aug. 16, 1965.

● Passed, amended, by the Senate by voice vote Aug. 19.

HR 10873 -- Reported by House Veterans Affairs Committee (H Rept 1003) Sept. 15.

S 2127 -- Passed, amended, by the House by voice vote Sept. 20 after HR 10873 was passed by a 360-0 roll-call vote. (See p. 1004)

● Senate agreed to House version, with an amendment, by voice vote Sept. 22.

● House agreed to Senate amendment by voice vote Sept. 23.

PL 89-214 -- Signed into law Sept. 29.

Congress in 1965 enacted Administration-backed legislation (S 2127) permitting all military personnel to purchase $10,000 in low-cost group life insurance to protect them against the risk of death in service, whether from battle or other causes not connected with combat in any way. The bill also authorized $5,000 death gratuity payments to survivors of servicemen who died under certain conditions between Jan. 1, 1957, and the effective date of S 2127 -- the period during which no servicemen's insurance was available.

The insurance provisions of S 2127 authorized the Administrator of the Veterans Administration (VA) to purchase group life insurance policies from one or more participating life insurance companies. Each individual entering the armed forces would be eligible for the $10,000 coverage unless he affirmatively elected not to receive it or elected instead to receive insurance in the amount of only $5,000. The policy would be effective only for the duration of the individual's term of service. During his period of coverage, however, the individual could -- upon application, payment of the required premium, and without medical examination -- convert to a permanent plan of insurance written by one of the participating companies which would remain in effect after the individual was discharged from the service.

The premium rates for servicemen under the group plan would be determined by the VA. They were estimated at about $2 a month for $10,000 policies and $1 a month for $5,000 policies, amounts believed sufficient to make the program, including VA administrative costs, self-sustaining. Premiums were to be deducted from servicemen's pay. However, the expenses of the program traceable to "extra hazard" costs during periods of hostilities were to be paid by the Government. These additional costs were estimated by the VA to be about $4 million a year during a period of hostilities such as existed in Viet Nam.

The death gratuity provisions of S 2127 authorized retroactive payments to survivors of military personnel dying from certain specified causes, including action of a hostile force or the "extra hazard of military or naval service." The total cost of the gratuity program was estimated at about $46 million.

The final version of S 2127 was based largely on amendments added in the House which made the bill acceptable to the Administration. The Senate version, which the Administration opposed, was more selective in its coverage than the final version and would have authorized free, Government-financed $10,000 "special indemnity insurance" benefits for survivors of military personnel who were killed on duty in "combat zones."

Rationale of Bill. A system of substantial monthly benefits already existed for survivors of military personnel killed in action or dying from other service-connected causes from Jan. 1, 1957, on. It was called the Dependency and Indemnity Compensation (DIC) system (PL 84-881). Under that 1956 law establishing DIC, as amended in 1963, for example, payments for a surviving widow were $112 a month plus 12 percent of current basic pay for the deceased serviceman's last rank. The payments, however, were available only to certain classes of beneficiaries: spouses, unmarried children under 18 or dependent parents. A separate system of monthly benefits also existed for survivors of those dying from service-connected causes before Jan. 1, 1957. It was called "death compensation." (1956 Almanac p. 566; Congress and the Nation p. 1352)

Although DIC benefits were generally considered adequate, the following four factors led to enactment of S 2127 in light of the existing world situation: (1) The desire to provide survivors of servicemen killed in action (many of whom were uninsured or uninsurable) with large lump-sum insurance payments in addition to monthly DIC benefits. (2) The unwillingness of most private insurance companies to write life insurance covering servicemen when they were assigned to hostile areas such as Viet Nam. (3) The desire to permit servicemen to provide for persons -- such as brothers, sisters, grown children, non-dependent parents or friends -- other than those eligible for DIC or death compensation. (4) The desire to provide an added inducement for men to seek a service career.

As enacted, the insurance available under S 2127 was basically similar to that available from 1940-51 under the old National Service Life Insurance (NSLI) program. The insurance authorized by the original Senate version of the bill would have been similar to free special indemnity policies available between 1951 and 1956. (Congress and the Nation p. 1372; 1964 Almanac p. 285) Since the end of 1956, no Government insurance against the risk of death in service had been available.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, S 2127:

Life Insurance. Authorized the Administrator of Veterans Affairs to purchase from private insurance companies group life insurance policies to cover members of the armed forces on active duty.

Provided that each member of the armed forces would be insured against death in the amount of $10,000 unless (1) he stated in writing that he did not want the insurance or (2) he chose to be insured in the amount of $5,000. Allowed a person refusing the insurance or choosing the lower amount to obtain the full coverage later upon proof of good health and meeting any other requirements specified by the Veterans Administration.

Provided that the insurance policies authorized under the legislation would terminate 120 days after a member's separation or release from active duty or upon a member's being absent without leave for a period of more than 31 days. Provided that a member, at any time during the period he was covered, could convert the insurance policy to permanent, regular insurance without medical examination.

Stipulated that premiums, as determined by the Veterans' Affairs Administrator, would be deducted from each member's monthly "basic or other pay" until his separation or release from active duty (amounts previously paid would cover the final 120-day period).

Stipulated that the VA would pay each month to the participating insurance companies the costs traceable to "extra hazards" such as currently existed in Viet Nam. (The cost would be determined on the basis of the "excess mortality" suffered by present and former armed services' members insured under the legislation above the mortality incurred by the U.S. civilian male population of the same age as the median age of armed services' members).

Authorized the insured to designate anyone he desired as beneficiary.

Provided that the group insurance would be in addition to any United States Government Life Insurance, National Service Life Insurance or other benefits that the insured might hold or that survivors might be eligible to receive.

Established an Advisory Council on Servicemen's Group Life Insurance consisting of the Secretary of the Treasury as chairman, the Secretaries of Defense, Commerce and Health, Education and Welfare, and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, to meet annually or more often at the call of the Administrator and to assist the Administrator in matters relating to activities carried out under the legislation.

Provided that the insurance would take effect on a date designated by the Administrator (Sept. 29, 1965).

Death Gratuity. Authorized a $5,000 retroactive "death gratuity" payment to survivors of armed services' members who died under specified conditions on or after Jan. 1, 1957, and before the effective date of the insurance provided by S 2127.

Stipulated that death result from (1) action of hostile forces, (2) a military or naval aircraft accident, (3) "the extra hazard of military or naval service," as determined by the VA, or (4) service for which special pay or hazardous duty pay was authorized.

Provided that the payment would be made only if applied for within one year after enactment of S 2127 and if the person receiving the gratuity waived all future death compensation and DIC payments.

Required that the amount of the gratuity be reduced by the amount of any death compensation, DIC, national service life insurance and U.S. Government life insurance payable as a result of the death of the armed forces' member.

Provided that a gratuity payment could go only to a widow or widower, a child or children of the veteran (in equal amounts), or the parents of the veteran, in that order. (The gratuity was designed to aid certain special categories of survivors, namely, those ineligible for DIC and death compensation benefits, such as married children, children over 18 and non-dependent parents, plus any person whose monthly DIC or death compensation benefit was very small -- for example, a parent receiving the minimum single-person DIC payment of $17 a month).

Congressional Action

SENATE. The Senate Finance Committee Aug. 16 reported S 2127 (S Rept 619), authorizing free $10,000 "special indemnity insurance" for members of the armed forces on duty in a combat zone designated by the President on or after Jan. 1, 1962. The insurance would go to certain survivors of military personnel who were killed on active duty in the combat zone or who died within two years after service as a result of injury or disease incurred while serving in the zone. The bill was introduced by Herman E. Talmadge (D Ga.) June 11.

During Committee hearings Aug. 11, VA Administrator William J. Driver opposed the bill. Driver said that the cost of the program would be superimposed on top of the Government-sponsored DIC program and that, nevertheless, the Administration would prefer to improve survivors' benefits "for all who die in military service, not only those in combat." The VA estimated the cost of the insurance authorized by S 2127 at $2.2 million the first year, increasing to $6.7 million in the fifth year.

Floor Action -- The Senate passed S 2127 by voice vote Aug. 18, then repassed the bill by voice vote with an amendment Aug. 19. Reconsideration of the bill came after voice-vote agreement to an amendment offered by Thruston B. Morton (R Ky.) to give the VA Administrator authority to divide the insurance benefits as he considered fair if the surviving spouse had remarried or the family's children were not in the spouse's custody. As originally passed, the bill would have required that the payment go to the surviving spouse only, even if she had remarried and had adequate support, but was not supporting her own children.

HOUSE. In place of S 2127, the House Veterans' Affairs Committee Sept. 15 reported a bill (HR 10873 -- H Rept 1003) providing privately sponsored insurance for all active duty military personnel, as recommended by the Administration.

As introduced by Robert A. Everett (D Tenn.) Sept. 3, HR 10873 proposed a $10,000 group life insurance program for all personnel unless they elected not to be covered or elected to receive only $5,000 coverage. In Committee, the bill was expanded to include, among other things, the $5,000 death gratuity provisions.

The Committee report included a letter from VA Administrator Driver opposing S 2127 but supporting HR 10873.

Floor Action -- The House Sept. 20 passed HR 10873 by a 360-0 roll-call vote without opposition. Following passage, it substituted the language of HR 10873 for that of S 2127, passed the amended S 2127 by voice vote, and returned it to the Senate. (For voting, see chart p. 1004)

FINAL ACTION. The Senate Sept. 22, by voice vote, concurred in the House amendments to S 2127. However, the Senate deleted the wording under the death gratuity section which specified that benefits would be available only if death resulted from "an explosion of an instrumentality of war." Instead, it provided for benefits if death resulted from various specific causes or "the extra hazard of military or naval service, as such hazard may be determined by" the VA Administrator. The effect of this amendment, offered by Talmadge and accepted by voice vote, was to broaden the death gratuity coverage, extending retroactive benefits to survivors of men who died, for example, in the crash of a jeep during training. The amendment increased the cost of the death gratuity section from $19.7 million to $46 million.

The House accepted the Talmadge amendment by voice vote Sept. 23.

ATOMIC DEVELOPMENT SHIFTS TOWARD CIVILIAN PROGRAMS

HR 8122 -- Reported by Joint Atomic Energy Committee (H Rept 349) May 13, 1965.
- Passed by the House on a 352-1 roll-call vote May 20. (See p. 962)
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote May 24.

PL 89-32 -- Signed into law June 2.

Congress in 1965 authorized $2,555,521,000 for the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) for fiscal 1966. The amount was recommended by the Joint Atomic Energy Committee and was $36,514,000 less than requested by the Administration. The major reduction was in the advanced space power system (SNAP-50). The public works appropriation bill (HR 9220--PL 89-299), which carried funds for AEC, reduced the total authorized by $143,001,000. (See story p. 208)

In general, the authorization bill reduced amounts for military purposes and increased amounts for civilian atomic energy programs as compared with fiscal 1965. While, in fiscal 1965, 60 percent of AEC funds was spent for military purposes and 40 percent for civilian purposes, in the fiscal 1966 authorization the division was roughly 50-50. The shift was expected to increase when a projected $375 million proton accelerator was developed. (See p. 711)

The total authorized by HR 8122 was $69,016,000 less than the amount appropriated to AEC for fiscal 1965. The decrease resulted primarily from reductions in raw materials costs and in cutbacks in production of fissionable materials and nuclear weapons.

HR 8122 reflected a shift in emphasis of the reactor development program from work on low conversion ratio reactors to more advanced reactors, designed to improve the efficiency of nuclear fuels. The bill authorized AEC to enter into cooperative arrangements, under the cooperative power reactor program, for development of a large seed-blanket reactor (LSBR) and a high-temperature gas-cooled reactor (HTGR). Both were advanced reactors designed to use thorium as a fuel in addition to uranium. The LSBR, moreover, was intended to be a breeder reactor, creating as much as or more fuel than it consumed.

Controversy over California Contract

Under HR 8122, the AEC was permitted to reach an agreement with California for the joint development and construction of a $171.5 million LSBR plant producing 500 megawatts of power. A long-term authorization of $91.5 million for AEC's share of the project was included in the bill, with $25 million earmarked for development preceding a contract. The plant was to have supplied power to pump water from the Feather River in northern California to southern California. It was to operate for as long as nine years on one loading of nuclear fuel -- three or four times as long as nuclear plants in operation.

The cooperative arrangement with California was opposed by Rep. Arch A. Moore Jr. (R W.Va.), who cast the only dissenting vote on HR 8122 in the House. Rep. Chet Holifield (D Calif.), chairman of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, May 20 told the House, "I understand the problem of the gentleman from West Virginia. (He) has been told that this is going to eliminate the burning of coal."

Late in 1965, the AEC dropped plans to build the California plant. The AEC Dec. 27 said that Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, director of the AEC's Division of Naval Reactors, had concluded that it was unlikely the reactor core for such a plant could be developed satisfactorily.

Moore Jan. 26, 1966, told the House the project had been dropped, noted that Holifield and Craig Hosmer, ranking GOP member of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, were Californians, and said "it was perfectly obvious what their interest really was."

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 8122 authorized:

Operating Expenses:

Raw materials	$ 212,770,000
Special nuclear materials	378,000,000
Weapons	704,400,000
Reactor development	585,963,000
Physical research	239,000,000
Biology and medicine	83,000,000
Training, education and information	15,780,000
Civilian applications of isotopes	12,800,000
Civilian applications of nuclear explosives	17,875,000
Community programs	5,915,000
Program direction and administration	81,500,000
Security investigations	6,300,000
Cost of work for others	7,095,000
Anticipated revenues	-89,622,000
Subtotal, operating	$2,260,776,000

Plant and Capital Equipment:

New construction projects	$ 133,385,000
Construction planning and design	3,000,000
Capital equipment	158,360,000
Subtotal, plant and capital	$ 294,745,000
TOTAL	$2,555,521,000

In addition, the bill:

Extended for one year, to June 30, 1966, the date for approving proposals under the third round of the cooperative power reactor demonstration program.

Authorized the AEC to enter into a cooperative arrangement with a state or with privately, publicly or cooperatively owned utilities or industrial organizations for development of a thorium seed-blanket nuclear powerplant; authorized use of up to $25 million of the funds appropriated for the project, for research and development on the powerplant prior to execution of a contract.

Authorized the AEC to enter into a similar cooperative arrangement for a high-temperature gas-cooled nuclear powerplant; authorized waiver of use charges for special nuclear materials (fissionable material) at this powerplant; authorized the AEC to agree to purchase uranium-233 produced in the reactor during the term of the cooperative arrangement. (A contract for a 330 megawatt plant with the Public Service Co. of Colorado was under negotiation.)

Rescinded prior year authorizations for five projects totaling $60,955,000.

House

COMMITTEE -- Joint Atomic Energy.

HELD HEARINGS -- Jan. 27, Feb. 2-4, 9-10, 16, March 10-11, 18-19, 24 on the Atomic Energy Commission's fiscal 1966 budget requests.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 27 -- AEC Chairman Glenn T. Seaborg said the proposed fiscal 1966 AEC budget reduced operating costs for raw materials, production of "special nuclear materials" (fissionable material) and nuclear weapons by an estimated $123 million under the fiscal 1965 figure and increased costs for peaceful uses of atomic energy by about $50 million. He said it would be "possible in 1966, without in any way jeopardizing our national security, to make further significant reductions" in AEC programs "most directly related to military requirements."

Concerning raw materials, Seaborg said, "Costs for procurement of uranium concentrates under existing contracts are estimated at $212.8 million, a decrease of $54.7 million from 1965. Contracts for procurement from foreign sources terminate at the end of calendar year 1966." He said costs for the special nuclear materials program were estimated at $378.6 million, a cut of $19.9 million. However, the request did not include "any new production cutbacks in addition to those (cutbacks in production of enriched uranium and plutonium) announced by the President in January and April 1964," Seaborg said. (1964 Almanac p. 459) On Feb. 15 the AEC announced a new cut-back in production of uranium-235. When the reduction was completed at the end of three years, the United States would be producing 60 percent less uranium-235 than in 1964.

Weapons production costs in fiscal 1966 would be about $705.4 million, down from $753.3 million in fiscal 1965, Seaborg said, in line with changing stockpile objectives. He said AEC weapons facilities would be closed in 1966 at Medina Base, San Antonio, Texas, and at Clarksville, Tenn. and that the Oak Ridge, Tenn., Y-12 plant would be reduced by 1,000 employees during calendar 1965.

Seaborg requested an increase in the program for development of civilian and military nuclear reactors. Included under the reactor program, he said, would be increased development of "those advanced reactor concepts which will achieve near-or low-gain breeding," and development of uses of nuclear energy for desalination of sea water.

He also sought increases for various civilian programs, such as biology and medicine, and a $5 million increase, to $17.9 million, for the "plowshare" program to develop peaceful uses of atomic energy. Emphasis would be placed on developing a nuclear excavation technology, Seaborg said.

BILL REPORTED

ACTION -- The Committee May 13 reported HR 8122 (H Rept 349) by unanimous vote, recommending $2,555,521,000. The AEC had requested $2,295,990,000 for operating expenses and $296,045,000 for plant and capital equipment for a total of $2,592,035,000. The Committee cut $35,214,000 from operating funds and made a net reduction of $1.3 million in plant and capital equipment funds.

OPERATING EXPENSES. Major Committee actions on requested authorizations for operating expenses:

Raw Materials. Approved the full request, $212,770,000, for procurement of uranium concentrates under long-term contracts executed in prior years. Said the sum was below the costs for fiscal 1965 because fiscal 1966 costs were estimated to drop by 18 percent.

Special Nuclear Materials. Cut the request for special nuclear materials (fissionable material) by $625,000, to $378 million. Said the decrease of about $20 million below the fiscal 1965 level was due to the effect of cutbacks in the production of enriched uranium and the shutdown of three uranium production reactors announced in 1964. The further cutback announced Feb. 15 -- (see above) would produce an additional saving of $625,000 (the amount of the cut) in fiscal 1966, the report said.

Weapons. Said that a reduction in nuclear weapon production activities during the previous few years was "reflected in reduced costs for the weapons program." Authorized $704.4 million -- a cut of $1 million in the request -- and said the $1 million could be allocated instead to a meson physics facility to be constructed at the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory (see below).

Reactor Development. Authorized $585,963,000, a reduction of $9.8 million in the over-all $595,763,000 requested for development of nuclear powerplants for central power stations, commercial ships and military and space requirements.

Civilian Power Reactors. Said that, in general, the civilian power reactor program was "characterized by a continuing shift in emphasis from development of low conversion ratio light water reactors to the more advanced converter and breeder-type reactors which held the promise of a more effective utilization of our nuclear fuel resources." Said work on the fast breeder reactor program would be increased by about $8.1 million during fiscal 1966. Endorsed "a Government-supported program directed to the achievement of our ultimate goal in nuclear power -- the creation of a virtually limitless supply of energy," but said that "continual vigilance must be exercised to phase the Government out of further development of improvements to types of reactors which are commercially available, which effort should be carried forward by private industry."

Authorized $70.8 million, a reduction of $1 million, to be "applied against the program generally." Recommended that within the $70.8 million, the AEC allocate $500,000 to speed up the fast reactor fuel development program. Included in the over-all sum $1 million (in addition to $6 million previously authorized) for continuing the cooperative program with Canada for joint development and exchange of information on heavy water technology.

Large Seed-Blanket Reactor. Authorized the AEC to enter into a cooperative arrangement for the seed-blanket nuclear reactor (LSBR) and authorized appropriation of $91.5 million (the full request) for the project. Said it assumed from testimony that the negotiations with California "aim at a mutually beneficial flow of power between the parties and that the state does not intend to utilize LSBR generation to serve directly customers now receiving service or otherwise enter the commercial power business unless the parties in interest fail to consummate a satisfactory agreement." The Committee amended the draft bill to permit the AEC to enter into a cooperative agreement with participants other than a state to cover the contingency that California could not carry out the arrangement. It permitted the AEC to use $25 million of the authorized appropriation for the LSBR for research and development work on the reactor before a contract was executed.

High-Temperature Gas-Cooled Reactor. Authorized the AEC to enter into a cooperative arrangement for a high-temperature gas-cooled nuclear reactor; authorized appropriation of $40,863,000 (the amount requested) for the project; and authorized the AEC to waive use charges at the project totaling an estimated $6,443,000 and to agree to purchase uranium-233 produced at the reactor during the period of the cooperative arrangement. Said the arrangement would be made with the Public Service Co. of Colorado and the General Dynamics Corp.

Euratom. Approved the $2.9 million authorization requested for continuing the second five-year joint research program with the European Atomic Energy Community (Euratom).

Merchant Ship Reactors. Increased the $1.4 million authorization requested for the merchant ship reactor program by $1.1 million to a total of $2.5 million because the request was "insufficient to carry out a significant effort in this field."

Naval Propulsion Reactors. Added $2 million to the $96,550,000 requested for the naval propulsion reactor program, which the Committee said would permit work on the research submarine program to continue at the requested level without delaying work on a destroyer nuclear-core development program.

SNAP. Reduced the $22 million requested for development of the advanced space power system (SNAP-50) to $12 million, but recommended the full requests for other SNAP projects. Said SNAP-50 was "in the advanced technology phase" and was "not seriously considered as a project with significant development objectives."

Physical Research. In balance, recommended the full $239 million requested for physical research, but within the total, cut $500,000 for high-energy physics, leaving $100 million, and cut $1 million -- to $22.5 million -- for controlled thermonuclear research. Reallocated the $1.5 million cut to medium energy physics research and development, thus providing a total authorization of $9 million. Recommended that at least $2 million of the funds be used for research and development for a proposed Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory meson physics facility.

Biology and Medicine. Authorized $83 million, a cut of $2 million in the request, for the biology and medicine program. Said "a significant portion" of the cut should be applied against the AEC's program for study of atmospheric radioactivity and fallout because "no special justification has been presented for this relatively rapid rate of growth for the fallout study program."

Training and Education. Recommended the fiscal 1965 sum, $15,780,000 -- a cut of $1,070,000 -- for the training, education and information program.

PLANT AND EQUIPMENT. The Committee cut $3,955,000 from requested plant and equipment projects but added $2,655,000 that was not requested, for a net cut of $1.3 million. The largest reduction was $750,000 in a request for $1.5 million for capital equipment in the SNAP-50 program. The Committee added $1.2 million for architecture and engineering on the meson physics laboratory at Los Alamos.

FLOOR ACTION

The House May 20 passed HR 8122 by a 352-1 roll-call vote, with Arch A. Moore (R W.Va.) the sole dissenter. Prior to passage, the House rejected two efforts by Moore to delete the authority for cooperative work on the seed-blanket reactor. His motion to recommit the bill with instructions to delete the authorization was rejected by a 43-313 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 962)

Moore objected to the provision on these grounds: it would set a precedent by giving California "the first state-owned public nuclear power facility"; the AEC and the taxpayers would be assuming "an open-end obligation to furnish all the money needed for construction of the system over the fixed cost" of $80 million to be contributed by California; there had been "difficulties," announced after the agreement had been reached, which could make it doubtful that the core to be furnished by the Government could last nine years. He mentioned at one point that he was "sorry" the project "happens to be" in the "home state" of Joint Committee Chairman Chet Holifield (D Calif.).

Holifield replied that this project would not set a precedent because there were in existence three cooperative reactors which the AEC would offer for sale at the end of the cooperative arrangement to the cooperating group and in this case "the principle is practically the same although it is arranged a little differently; the state would pay for the entire costs of the powerplant construction as well as for use of steam from the plant and maintenance of the core, for a total of $161.7 million, whereas the AEC would pay $91.5 million; and the fuel life problem would be solved or the reactor would not be built "because we are going to build the reactor on the basis of a nine-year life." Craig Hosmer (R Calif.), ranking GOP member of the Committee, explained that the Government "gets into this area in developing and building these plants where there are uncertainties because there are uncertainties. It is to the advantage of the taxpayers of the country to get answers in these areas of uncertainty." Holifield said the project would bring "into existence the utilization of thorium which will multiply uranium energy sources by a factor of from 25 to 50.... It will breed as much fuel as it consumes eventually and that is the goal we are moving toward." Holifield added, "I understand the problem of the gentleman from West Virginia. (He) has been told that this is going to eliminate the burning of coal. Why, we have figures to show that the burning of coal is going to increase as long as we have coal to burn." He pointed out, however, that new fuel sources would be needed when the coal supply was depleted and in areas which currently had no coal, oil or gas. Also during the debate Thomas G. Morris (D N.M.) indicated that Holifield and Hosmer had taken "the initiative in broadening this authorization to assure the country that the state of California was not trying to get something that no one else would be entitled to participate in...."

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

May 20 -- Arch A. Moore Jr. (R W.Va.) -- Delete authority for a cooperative arrangement for developing a large seed-blanket reactor. Standing vote, 7-57.

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Authorize appropriation of "not to exceed" $25 million for research and development on the large seed-blanket reactor during contract negotiations. (The amendment added the "not to exceed" stipulation to the figure, which was already in the bill.) Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE. The Joint Atomic Energy Committee May 14 reported legislation (S 1957 -- S Rept 191) identical to HR 8122 and H Rept 349.

FLOOR ACTION. The Senate May 24 passed HR 8122 by voice vote, without opposition, clearing the bill for the President's signature.

Atom Smasher Site

Controversy surrounded efforts by the Atomic Energy Commission in 1965 to select a site for a 200-Bev (billion electron volt) proton accelerator.

The accelerator would be the largest atom smasher in the world. It would cost an estimated $348 million to build and at least $50 million annually to operate. As a consequence, the area in which the accelerator was built would reap substantial economic rewards. (The fiscal 1967 budget estimated the cost of the accelerator as $375 million, and requested $2.2 million to continue with design studies.)

The AEC considered the accelerator a necessary instrument for a further step in nuclear physics research. The accelerator, it was hoped, would provide new information on the nucleus of the atom.

In January 1965, the AEC prepared and President Johnson approved a "Policy for National Action in the Field of High Energy Physics" which supported construction of the 200-Bev accelerator laboratory. The accelerator also was supported by testimony on high energy physics research given at Joint Atomic Energy Committee hearings March 2-5.

Early plans of the AEC called for selection of a site in calendar 1965, but the timetable later was extended into 1966.

The AEC listed the following criteria for a site:

(1) There must be at least 3,000 acres of reasonably level, stable land either owned by or relatively available to the Government.

(2) The site must have a potential powerload of several hundred megawatts and a minimum of 2,000 gallons per minute of clean, cool water.

(3) It must be reasonably close to commercial and industrial centers, including research and development activities.

(4) It must be reasonably close to communities having adequate housing, cultural and educational facilities for some 2,000 scientific and technical personnel and their families.

(5) It must be close to adequate surface transportation systems and a major airport with frequent service to major U.S. cities.

Areas for sites were proposed by states, counties, cities, universities, chambers of commerce, development agencies and others. By Sept. 13, the AEC had narrowed a list of 126 proposed areas (containing over 200 sites in 46 states) to 85 areas in 43 states. It eliminated altogether sites in North Dakota, South Dakota and Wyoming.

The AEC Sept. 13 sent a list of the 85 areas to a special 11-member committee of the National Academy of Sciences for further evaluation and for recommendations.

Politics Charged

Rep. Craig Hosmer (R Calif.), ranking minority member of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, Sept. 15 called the atom smasher "one of Washington's biggest political hot potatoes" and charged that "in face of the political pros' onslaught, the AEC has become mired in a mammoth pork barrel." Rep. Melvin R. Laird (R Wis.), chairman of the House Republican Conference, Sept. 27 predicted that the site would not be selected until after the 1966 elections.

The huge accelerator laboratory would have a diameter of about one mile, would require six to eight years to build, and in size would rank second only to the John F. Kennedy Space Center in Florida among the nation's scientific complexes. The accelerator itself would be the largest scientific instrument in the world. It would be almost seven times as powerful as the accelerator at the Brookhaven National Laboratory, Long Island, which, at 33-Bev, was the most powerful in the world.

The entire complex would include an injector-booster accelerator system, a main accelerator ring, internal and external experimental areas and other service structures. The laboratory would employ more than 2,000 scientists and technicians.

Other Nuclear Developments

Disarmament Meetings. A 114-nation Disarmament Commission met at the United Nations April 21-June 17 and urged resumption of the 17-nation Geneva Disarmament Conference. The Geneva Conference resumed July 28, under UN auspices, and held generally fruitless discussions on means to halt the proliferation of national nuclear forces and on a general test-ban treaty to cover underground nuclear testing. The Conference adjourned Sept. 16.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.) Oct. 1 told the Senate, "We simply cannot, with the scientific information available to us, undertake a comprehensive test-ban treaty which would ban underground testing without on-site inspection."

Red China. Communist China May 14 announced the explosion over "western areas" of its second atomic bomb. The official communique said China was developing nuclear weapons for defensive purposes and would never be the first to use them. The bomb's explosive force was believed to have been about the same as that of China's first atomic bomb, exploded on Oct. 16, 1964. That bomb was estimated to have had the explosive force of 20,000 tons of TNT, the size of the 1945 Hiroshima bomb.

NASA AUTHORIZATION

HR 7717 -- Reported by House Science and Astronautics Committee (H Rept 273) May 3, 1965.
- Passed by the House on a 389-11 roll-call vote May 6. (See p. 960)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Aeronautical and Space Sciences Committee (S Rept 188) May 13.
- Passed by the Senate on a 79-4 roll-call vote June 2. (See p. 1043)
- Conference report (H Rept 514) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate June 16.

PL 89-53 -- Signed into law June 28.

Congress in 1965 authorized $5,190,396,200 for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in fiscal 1966. The amount was slightly under the $5,227,506,000 authorization for NASA in fiscal 1965. The space budget began to level off in fiscal 1965 after a steep climb as construction of facilities was completed.

The authorization for NASA in HR 7717 was $69,603,800 below the Administration request and was about halfway between the House and Senate figures --$6,551,350 more than the House had authorized and $6,430,150 less than the Senate sum.

The largest cut made in the Administration request was $38,929,000 from the research and development category. Of that cut, $30 million was an across-the-board reduction in the Administration's request of $2,997,385,000 for Project Apollo, the final project in the manned lunar landing program. After the reductions, the research and development sum was $4,536,971,000, by far the largest category in the bill.

HR 7717 included a provision stating the sense of Congress that "it is in the national interest to distribute funds as widely as possible" across the nation and that NASA "should explore ways and means of distributing its research and development funds whenever feasible." The provision reflected concern in Congress that NASA funds were being concentrated in the coastal states, especially in an area extending from Florida to Texas.

The bill authorized unbudgeted funds for three programs which NASA had proposed to terminate. These included $6 million in the nuclear-electric systems category for further work on the SNAP-8 generator system; and, in the chemical propulsion category, $7.5 million for continued development of the M-1 liquid-hydrogen, liquid-oxygen engine, and $6.2 million for continued development of the 260-inch solid-fuel booster with a 6-million-pound thrust.

HR 7717 also included a total of $62,376,350 for construction of NASA facilities -- $12,323,650 below the request. It authorized $5 million for construction of the Electronics Research Center in Cambridge, Mass., for which the Administration had requested $10 million.

The bill authorized $591,048,850 for NASA administrative operations -- $18,351,150 under the request.

Subsequently, in the Independent Offices Appropriation bill (HR 7997) Congress appropriated $5,175,000,000 for NASA for fiscal 1966. (See story p. 154) The appropriation was broken down as follows: $4,531,000,000 for research and development, $60,000,000 for construction, and $584,000,000 for administrative operations. The $5,971,000 research and development cut was an across-the-board reduction.

In its consideration of HR 7997, the Senate rejected by a 16-61 roll-call vote an amendment by William Proxmire (D Wis.) to reduce NASA appropriations by 5 percent, or $259,515,260. Proximire contended that space activities were consuming "too great a proportion of our national resources."

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 7717 authorized the following funds:

Research and Development
Manned space flight
Apollo (lunar flight, landing)	$2,967,385,000
Gemini (2-man flight)	242,100,000
Advanced missions (after Apollo)	10,000,000
Physics and astronomy	165,900,000
Lunar and planetary exploration	213,115,000
Bioscience	31,500,000
Meteorological satellites	42,700,000
Communications satellites	2,800,000
Applications of satellite technology	28,700,000
Launch vehicle development	63,600,000
Launch vehicle procurement	178,700,000
Space vehicle systems	35,000,000
Electronics systems	34,400,000
Human factor systems	14,900,000
Basic research	22,000,000
Nuclear-electric systems	33,000,000
Nuclear rockets	58,000,000
Solar and chemical power	14,200,000
Chemical propulsion	43,700,000
Aeronautics	42,200,000
Tracking and data acquisition	242,321,000
Sustaining university program	46,000,000
Technology utilization	4,750,000
Subtotal, Research and Development	$4,536,971,000
Construction of facilities	62,376,350
Administrative Operations	591,048,850
TOTAL	$5,190,396,200

Background

REFERENCES -- 1964 Almanac p. 452; 1963 Almanac p. 413; 1962 Almanac p. 425.

Congress in 1964 authorized $5,227,506,000 for NASA in fiscal 1965. This sum was slightly under the $5,350,820,400 authorized for fiscal 1964, but still well above the fiscal 1963 figure of $3,744,115,250. Appropriated amounts differed slightly from these figures.

NASA requests for fiscal 1966 funds totaled $5,260,000,000, broken down as follows: research and development, $4,575,900,000; construction of facilities, $74,700,000; administrative operations, $609,400,000.

House

COMMITTEE -- Science and Astronautics.

ACTION -- May 3 reported HR 7717 (H Rept 273) authorizing $5,183,844,850 for NASA in fiscal 1966. Administration estimates were reduced by $103.4 million, but another $27.2 million was added for 3 unbudgeted projects, for a net reduction of $76.2 million. The Committee reduced Administration requests as follows:

Apollo. The estimate of $3 billion was cut by $30 million to encourage "program improvements."

Astronomical observatories. NASA asked for $32.5 million for five observatories; the Committee cut out $6.2 million for the fifth.

Geophysical observatories. Similarly, $5.4 million for a seventh observatory was dropped.

Surveyor lander. $85.6 million asked; $1.5 million cut.

Lunar Orbiter. $37 million asked; $1 million cut.

Launch vehicle procurement. $194.5 million asked; a "nominal" $5 million cut.

Centaur maintenance. $19.4 million asked; $10 million cut.

Tracking and data acquisition. $246.2 million asked; $3,879,000 cut.

Construction of facilities. $74.7 million asked; $14 million cut. Of this, $10 million allocated to the controversial Electronics Research Center in Cambridge, Mass., was deleted on grounds that the funds could not be used in fiscal 1966. (For background, see 1963 Almanac p. 412 and 1964 Almanac p. 452. For appropriations action, see this volume, p. 154.)

Administrative operations. $609.4 million asked; $23.4 million cut.

The Committee increased Administration estimates for three projects.

The $27 million requested for nuclear-electric systems was raised to $33 million to permit continued work on the SNAP-8 generator system.

The $30 million asked for chemical propulsion was increased by $21.2 million to continue two programs: development of the M-1 liquid-hydrogen, liquid-oxygen engine ($15 million) and the 260-inch solid-fuel booster with a 6-million-pound thrust ($6.2 million). NASA had proposed that both programs be terminated.

Minority Views. Minority members of the Committee presented a number of additional views on HR 7717. Fulton (Pa.) urged that propulsion research be placed under the Office of Advanced Research and Technology rather than being subject to the "changing whims and budgetary constraints" of the Office of Manned Space Flight and the Office of Space Science and Applications. Fulton also proposed the establishment of an inspector general within NASA, and he was joined by Bell (Calif.) in recommending more research in nuclear propulsion.

Roudebush (Ind.), Rumsfeld (Ill.), Gurney (Fla.) and Conable (N.Y.) expressed concern over the "apparent low priority" given to development of a military space capability. They were joined by Mosher (Ohio), Pelly (Wash.) and Wydler (N.Y.) in opposing the Cambridge, Mass., site for the Electronics Research Center.

Wydler proposed that military control of space be placed on a "crash basis" equal in priority to Apollo, and, with Roudebush, opposed the continuation of the M-1 liquid oxygen-hydrogen engine.

FLOOR ACTION

The House May 6 passed HR 7717, without amendment, by a roll-call vote of 389-11. An open rule for three hours of debate previously had been adopted by a 389-0 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 960)

Debate on HR 7717 was conducted almost entirely by members of the House Science and Astronautics Committee which had written the bill. As Clarence J. Brown (R Ohio) put it, in asking approval of the rule, "I want to be very frank, very sincere, and very honest with the House and admit that I do not know anything about this legislation and know very little about NASA and what it is doing. I do not think anybody else in the House knows too much about it either.... We are going to have to take it on faith...." Both Republicans and Democrats on the Committee, however, expressed strong support for NASA's program in general, confining their criticism to details of the space effort.

Of the 11 Republicans voting against HR 7717, only H.R. Gross (Iowa) voiced opposition to NASA's costliest undertaking -- the effort to place a man on the moon. Acknowledging that he had supported the effort at the start, he said, "I am all through as of today voting for $3 billion for a moon program and I will not again vote for it so long as we are in shooting wars and trying to finance the rest of the world."

Melvin R. Laird (R Wis.), chairman of the House Republican Conference, explained his reason for voting against the bill on other grounds. Noting that from 78 to 80 percent of NASA's funds were being spent in the coastal states, he said "this is the only method available to those of us in the great central section of the United States in expressing our deep concern and sincere disappointment over the failure of the national space agency to follow through on their earlier commitments to recognize our section of the country." Laird and Gross were among nine Midwesterners voting "nay."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 7717 authorized fiscal 1966 appropriations as follows:

Research and Development	$4,537,121,000
Construction of Facilities	60,675,000
Administrative Operations	586,048,850
TOTAL	$5,183,844,850

The bill also stated the sense of Congress that "it is in the national interest" to distribute federal research funds as widely as possible and that NASA "should explore ways and means" of spending its R&D funds "on a geographical basis whenever feasible...."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Aeronautical and Space Sciences.

ACTION -- May 13 reported HR 7717 (S Rept 188) authorizing $5,196,826,350. This was $12,981,500 more than the House version. The Committee made the following major changes in the bill as passed by the House:

Apollo. Restored the $30 million "across-the-board" cut made by the House, but then reduced funds for Apollo extension systems by $24 million.

Launch vehicle development. Restored a $3 million cut voted by the House.

Nuclear electric systems. Authorized the $27 million requested by the Administration, compared with $33 million voted by the House.

Chemical propulsion. Authorized $36.2 million, compared with $30 million requested by the Administration and $51.2 million voted by the House.

Construction of facilities. Authorized $67.4 million, compared with $74.7 million requested and $60.7 million voted by the House. The Committee restored $10 million allocated to the controversial Electronics Research Center in Cambridge, Mass., which had been deleted by the House on grounds that the funds could not be used in fiscal 1966.

(Continued on next page)

Administrative operations. Authorized $596.1 million, compared with $609.4 million requested and $586 million voted by the House.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate June 2 passed by a 79-4 roll-call vote and sent to conference with the House an amended bill authorizing appropriations of $5,196,826,350 for NASA.

Before passage, the Senate by voice vote adopted en bloc a series of committee amendments. The Senate by a 59-26 roll-call vote also adopted a motion by Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.) to table (kill) an amendment to limit the waiver of U.S. property rights in inventions developed in connection with research under NASA contracts. The amendment was sponsored by Russell B. Long (D La.). (For voting, see chart p. 1043)

Voting against passage were Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.), Wayne Morse (D Ore.) and A. Willis Robertson (D Va.).

Most debate on HR 7717 concerned Long's amendment to limit the waiver of patent rights. Long's amendment would have permitted the Administrator of NASA to waive U.S. property rights in inventions made under NASA contracts only if he determined that a private inventor had an equity in a patent on an invention that had not been financed by the Government, and that the waiver would "promote substantially" the use of the invention in the national interest. The "equity" provision of the amendment would have required a determination by the Administrator that an individual had made a sufficient contribution to an invention, without financial assistance from the Government, to justify the waiving of all or part of the resulting patent.

Long said his amendment would prevent the NASA Administrator from granting private patents on research carried out under the research and development authorization in the bill "when he does not know on what he is granting a waiver." Long said the Administrator under existing law had authority to waive patent rights at the time of the contract "if he finds it in the national interest to do so," but that he had been granting waivers "without knowing what the patent would be and without knowing whether it would be of great value or slight value." He asked, "How would he know whether it was in the national interest to waive certain patent rights if he did not know what the patent would be and what it pertained to or what value it had...." Long said, "By 1970, almost $25 billion will be spent under the research program of NASA alone. Do we desire the 192 million people of our country to have the benefit of that $25 billion of research, or do we wish those benefits to be locked up for a few special interests, a few large private companies which have filed for private patent rights on it."

Long's amendment was opposed by Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), who said that Long was "rather exaggerating the idea of the Government giving things away." Saltonstall said that since NASA's existing waiver regulations had come into effect, "there have been 4,480 NASA contracts where waiver at the time of contracting could have been considered, yet only seven waivers were granted."

Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine), ranking Republican on the Senate Aeronautical and Space Sciences Committee, also opposed the amendment. She said it "may be a good amendment or it may be a bad one," but the Committee had held no hearings "on the subject of patents." She said that hearings "on several bills which would establish a uniform Government patent policy" were being held by the Senate Judiciary Patents, Trademarks and Copyrights Subcommittee, and that she would oppose the amendment "until hearings have been held and made available for evaluation...." (For story on patent hearings, see p. 887)

In other debate, William Proxmire (D Wis.) said that "as a Senator from the Midwest," he was troubled by the fact that "approximately 80 percent of the NASA budget is spent in the coastal states, in the well-known 'space crescent' extending from Florida around through Texas." He noted that the Senate Aeronautical and Space Sciences Committee had amended a House provision of HR 7717 urging the distribution of funds "on a geographical basis" by dropping the geographical reference. He said the Committee had made "this innocuous but laudatory provision more innocuous and less laudatory," and that as the bill stood, NASA could distribute funds "perhaps upon some other criteria, like the size of business."

In response, Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.), chairman of the Committee, said that earlier language in the provision referred specifically to geographical distribution, and that there was no question but that the Committee intended that the expenditure of R&D funds "should involve attention to geographical distribution." However, Anderson said that "the desire for widespread distribution is limited by other, more important considerations," such as the question of "who can best and most economically do the job on the basis of past performance records and bids."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 7717 authorized fiscal 1966 appropriations as follows:

Research and Development	$4,533,350,000
Construction of Facilities	67,376,350
Administrative Operations	596,100,000
TOTAL	$5,196,826,350

The bill also stated the sense of Congress that "it is in the national interest" to distribute federal research funds as widely as possible and that NASA "should explore ways and means of distributing its research and development funds whenever feasible." (The House-passed version urged distribution "on a geographical basis whenever feasible.")

AMENDMENT REJECTED

June 2 -- Long (D La.) -- Permit the NASA Administrator to waive U.S. property rights in inventions made under NASA contracts if he determines that an inventor has sufficient equity in an invention not financed by the Government, and that the waiver would "promote substantially" the use of the invention in the national interest. Tabled, 59-26 roll-call vote.

Conference

The House and Senate June 16 agreed by voice votes to the conference report (H Rept 514) on HR 7717, authorizing $5,190,395,200 for NASA -- a figure approximately splitting the difference between amounts authorized earlier by the House and Senate.

Following are the major settlements agreed to by the conferees, who filed their report June 15:

Apollo. Agreed to the House's $30 million across-the-board cut instead of the Senate's $24 million cut in Apollo extension systems funds.

Geophysical observatories. Agreed to the Senate's restoration of $5.4 million for a seventh observatory which the House had deferred.

Launch vehicle development. Accepted the full $4 million requested and voted by the Senate for supporting research and technology. The House had cut $3 million on grounds that the activity should be handled by the office of Advanced Research and Technology instead of the office of Space Science and Applications.

Launch vehicle procurement. Agreed to the $10.8 million Senate cut in the Centaur program instead of the $10 million House figure. Noted that although the House and Senate Centaur cuts were similar in amount, they

Major 1965 Space Achievements

Major achievements of the U.S. space program in 1965 were five two-man Gemini flights of increasing length and complexity, and close-up photographs of Mars transmitted by a space probe, Mariner IV. The purpose of the Gemini flights was to perfect devices and techniques for Project Apollo, designed to carry men to the moon before the end of 1969. The photographs of Mars revealed, in the view of most scientists, the improbability of the existence of life on that planet.

Gemini. In his press conference March 20, President Johnson said, "...I gave Mr. Webb (James E. Webb, NASA administrator) and his group every dollar in the budget this year that they asked for a manned space flight." In a press conference Aug. 29, the President said that the schedule to get a man on the moon "is going along very well...but I don't want to be over-optimistic... A lot of hard work is ahead of us. It is going to be very costly in both time and resources." Generally, in the 1965 Gemini flights, men performed far above expectations, while machines proved fallible. The flights and what they achieved:

Gemini 3 -- Manned by astronauts Virgil I. Grissom and John W. Young, Gemini 3 was the first maneuverable space craft. The craft March 23 made three orbits in four hours, 53 minutes.

Gemini 4 -- Astronauts Edward H. White 2nd and James A. McDivitt June 3-7 orbited the earth 62 times in Gemini 4. During the flight, White left the space craft and maneuvered himself in space for 23 minutes, the first American astronaut to take a "walk in space."

Gemini 5 -- In a flight lasting 190 hours and 53 minutes and orbiting the earth 120 times, astronauts L. Gordon Cooper Jr. and Charles Conrad Jr. broke the previous record for number of orbits (81) and time in space (119 hours) set in 1963 by a Russian cosmonaut. At the end of six orbits it was feared the mission would be ended, but the astronauts cut electricity use to a minimum, nursed the electrical system back to the point of normal power and continued the flight on a day-to-day-basis.

Gemini 6 and 7 -- A meeting Dec. 15 of two space ships 180 miles above the earth represented the greatest success up until that time in the U.S. program to land a man on the moon. Gemini 7, flown by astronauts Frank Borman and James A. Lovell Jr., was launched Dec. 4. Gemini 6, manned by astronauts Walter Schirra Jr. and Maj. Thomas Stafford, was launched Dec. 15 and reached the point of rendezvous with Gemini 7 in four orbits. The space ships flew in formation for four hours, separated at one time by only one foot. Gemini 6 was only 26 hours aloft, descending Dec. 16, but Gemini 7 remained aloft for 330 hours and 33 minutes, longer than any previous space flight. It came down Dec. 18.

Mariner IV. After a 325-million mile flight that began Nov. 28, 1964, the Mariner IV space probe July 15 transmitted the first close-up photographs of Mars. The planet "fly-by" brought Mariner IV within 6,118 miles of the planet. The photographs, the first close-up photographs of another planet, showed a crater-pocked landscape lacking any sign of water erosion or other indication that life might be sustained on Mars. President Johnson said July 29, "It may be, it just may be, that life as we know it with its humanity is more unique than many have thought, and we must remember this."

MOL. President Johnson Aug. 25 announced that he had directed the Defense Department to develop a $1.5-billion manned orbiting laboratory to conduct defense-related research in space. The largest space craft yet planned by the U.S., MOL would consist of a Gemini capsule attached to a 42-foot long cannister. Astronauts were to return to earth in the capsule, leaving the cannister in orbit. The defense appropriation (HR 9221) earmarked $150 million for development of MOL. (See story p. 168)

Ranger Shots. The Ranger 8 unmanned craft Feb. 20 crash-landed in the moon's Sea of Tranquility after transmitting 7,162 pictures of the lunar surface. Ranger 9, launched March 21, transmitted 6,000 pictures before crashing only four miles off target in the Alphonsus crater.

Soviet Feats. A Russian cosmonaut, Aleksei A. Leonov, March 18 was the first man to step outside a space craft and float in space. Russian viewers saw the maneuver and other activities of Leonov and his fellow cosmonaut on television. The flight lasted 26 hours 17 orbits. Russia July 16 demonstrated a powerful new booster rocket, Proton I, that lifted into orbit the heaviest payload, 26,000 pounds. The heaviest payload lifted by the U.S. was 19,000 pounds. Dr. George E. Mueller, chief of manned flight for NASA, said it would take "a great number of years" for the U.S. to achieve first place in space.

COMSAT. In its third year, the Communications Satellite Corp. (COMSAT), the private company established by Congress in 1962 to operate a global communications satellite system (1962 Almanac p. 546), continued its slow progress. Among problems not yet solved were: should COMSAT provide use of Early Bird satellite channels directly to U.S. television networks for overseas broadcasts or lease the channels to U.S. telecommunications carriers which would provide the channels for the networks; how to cope with European disinterest in use of Early Bird channels and the high rates charged by European ground stations (Early Bird, with a 240-channel capacity, leased only 68 circuits in 1965); agreement on tariffs and rates of return for COMSAT -- a question for the Federal Communications Commission; a decision on an application by the American Broadcasting Co. to build and operate its own satellite system for domestic TV, a challenge to COMSAT's claimed exclusive control of U.S. commercial satellites.

were based on different aspects of the Centaur program, and stipulated that the $10.8 million cut "should be administered by NASA within the total Centaur procurement."

Nuclear-electric systems. Agreed with the House's $33 million, an increase of $6 million over the request and Senate figure, to permit continued work on the SNAP-8 generator system, which NASA had proposed to terminate. Stipulated that the project "shall be continued" and that "the funds authorized for SNAP-8 shall be utilized for no other purposes."

Chemical propulsion. Recommended a compromise $7.5 million to be used "only" for continued development of the M-1 liquid-hydrogen, liquid-oxygen engine, for which no funds were requested or authorized by the Senate but $15 million was authorized by the House.

Tracking and data acquisition. Agreed to the House's total $242,321,000 -- $3,879,000 below the request and Senate figure.

Construction of facilities. Authorized $62,376,350, a compromise between the House's $60,675,000 and the Senate's $67,376,350 but $12,323,650 under the request. Provided a compromise $5 million (request and Senate: $10 million, House: none) for the Electronics Research Center in Cambridge, Mass.

Administrative operations. Agreed to a compromise $591,048,850 -- $18,351,150 below the request.

Research funds. Accepted Senate language on distribution of federal research funds, instead of House language urging distribution "on a geographical basis whenever feasible."

During House debate June 16, J. Edward Roush (D Ind.), James G. Fulton (R Pa.) and Ken Hechler (D W.Va.) objected to acceptance by the conferees of Senate language on the distribution of NASA funds. The Senate provision stated the sense of Congress that "it is in the national interest" to distribute funds as widely as possible and that NASA "should explore ways and means of distributing its research and development funds whenever feasible." Conferees dropped stronger House language urging distribution "on a geographical basis whenever feasible..."

Other House debate concerned funding of the three projects which NASA had proposed to eliminate. The bill's authorization of $7.5 million for the M-1 engine was of particular concern to Rep. John W. Wydler (R N. Y.) who said the Science and Astronautics Committee had been told that "anything less than" the $15 million which the House had authorized "would produce a program that was in effect of no value." Committee Chairman George P. Miller (D Calif.) replied that the engine was not yet needed and $7.5 million would "keep the program going for one year." "Although this will slow down the engine and in the long run will cost us more," he added, "nevertheless we will not scrap the $100 million or more we have in it." In defense of funding all three projects, Rep. Fulton said they were vital to the space program and had been "brought to advanced stages of completion, certainly 50 percent," at a cost of "millions of dollars," and it was illogical to eliminate them.

Wydler also objected to authorizing $5 million for the Electronics Research Center because the program "has slipped one year, yet in spite of that we are being asked to continue to appropriate money for it as though it were going on as originally planned." Miller replied that "the Senate had before us (in conference) some information that the matter was coming along much faster and that they will be able to get into it much sooner than they previously believed."

NATIONAL STOCKPILES

S 28 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Armed Services Committee (S Rept 56) Feb. 8, 1965.

- Passed by voice vote of the Senate Feb. 9.

The two houses of Congress and the Executive Branch were unable to agree in 1965 on a major overhaul of stockpiling laws. A bill (S 28), passed Feb. 9 by the Senate, was unsatisfactory, for different reasons, to the Administration and to Members of the House.

Involved in the stockpiling issue are both national security -- the acquiring of materials essential in case of war -- and the impact of government actions on the national economy -- the disposal of unneeded items from the stockpile without disrupting the private economy.

Late in 1965 the Administration used the threat of unloading aluminum from the stockpile to persuade aluminum producers to rescind a price increase and announced the sale of a large quantity of copper to ease a shortage of that metal.

S 28 would have consolidated the three existing U.S. stockpiles into two stockpiles, one containing materials sufficient to meet stockpiling objectives to be set by the President, and the other consisting of excess materials. Materials from the excess inventory could be sold provided neither house of Congress vetoed the action. It was hoped to dispose of $4.5 billion worth of excess items without disrupting domestic markets or relations with U.S. allies.

Three Members of the House, testifying at hearings held by the House Armed Services Committee, objected that S 28 would transfer to the Executive Branch power over disposal of materials which had been largely vested in Congress. The Members, all from districts with mineral interests, were Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.), chairman of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, Laurence J. Burton (R Utah) and Ed Edmondson (D Okla.). Officials of the Bureau of the Budget and Justice Department, on the other hand, objected that the provision for disapproval of a disposal action by one house of Congress violated the principal of the separation of powers.

S 28 provided that the General Services Administration, under the President, would administer the stockpiles. Existing law vested the authority in the President, who had delegated responsibility to the Office of Emergency Planning. The OEP, at the House Armed Services Committee hearings, recommended that S 28 be amended to vest authority to administer the stockpiles in the President.

Background

The first stockpiling law, enacted in 1939, established a stockpile of strategic materials to meet national defense needs and free the United States from dependence on foreign supplies "in times of national emergency." Subsequent legislation, including the Strategic and Critical Materials Stockpiling Act of 1946, set up three separate major stockpiles: the national and supplemental stockpiles and the Defense Production Act inventory.

The national stockpile, the largest of the three, contained materials determined to be of critical necessity to the United States in time of emergency. The supplemental stockpile contained materials of both strategic and nonstrategic value acquired by the Government under the farm surplus disposal law -- the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (PL 480). This Act authorized barter agreements under which materials were obtained for the supplemental stockpile. The Defense Production Act inventory contained strategic and nonstrategic materials acquired by the Government under the Defense Production Act of 1950 and the Domestic Mineral Program Extension Act of 1953. These programs expanded the defense production base by authorizing Government loans and Government commitments to buy raw materials for defense use, stockpiling or resale.

Under existing law, affirmative action of Congress was required for disposal of materials in the national and supplemental stockpiles. In 1965 Congress approved 15 separate bills permitting disposal of 25 items. The items ranged from copper (210,000 tons), zinc (350,000 tons) and lead (150,000 tons) to the chemical hyoscine (2,100 ounces). The acquisition costs of the materials amounted to $988,799,910.

As reported by the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures, the cost value of materials in the national stockpile, the supplemental stockpile and Defense Production Act inventory as of Aug. 31, 1965, totaled $8,142,695,722.

Senate

After a two-year study of stockpiling practices the Senate Armed Services Committee May 26, 1964, reported a bill (S 2272) to revise the stockpiling laws. The Senate took no action on S 2272. (1964 Almanac p. 461)

The Committee Feb. 8, 1965, reported S 28 (S Rept 56), amended. It closely followed the provision of the 1964 bill. The report carried tables showing the following stockpile inventories and the market value, as of Sept. 30, 1964, of the excess over current objectives (estimated needs):

(in millions)

Stockpile Inventories	Short Tons	Excess	Value of Excess
National	26.6	6.5	$2,795
Supplemental	18.3	10.1	822
Def. Prod. Act	6.6	6.6	832
CCC	.4	.4	18
On order	1.3	1.3	67
Total	53.2	24.9	$4,534

The Committee added language to S 28 specifying that materials sold from the excess inventory must be disposed of "at fair market value." It defined this to mean "not less than the current domestic market price" unless the President determined that such a definition was "inconsistent with the purpose of this Act."

The report included a letter from the Budget Bureau saying that S 28 would "significantly improve stockpile policies and procedures," but recommending that the provision for Congressional veto of proposed disposals be eliminated. The Bureau's recommendation that the President merely be required to report disposals to Congress was not adopted.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate passed the bill by voice vote Feb. 9. In floor discussion, Sen. Stuart Symington (D Mo.), sponsor of S 28, said that the acquisition cost of materials on hand and on order was "more than $8.5 billion." Only $3.3 billion of this cost, Symington said, represented materials "now needed to meet stockpile objectives." Symington said that whereas "a sudden release of large quantities of these materials could seriously disrupt producers or consumers or allies of the United States," S 28 would permit an orderly disposal of surpluses under Congressional scrutiny.

Sen. Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) said that the provision allowing materials to be sold at less than the current market price if the President so directed "would give the President quite a few 'outs'." Symington replied that the bill made clear that the President would consider the interests of industry and the economy in selling stockpiled materials. He said that "at times there might be great surpluses of material...for which there would be no demand unless it were sold below a stated market price." One such material, Symington said, was natural rubber, for which there was no market "unless it be sold at a reduced price."

Major Provisions. As passed by the Senate, S 28 repealed the Strategic and Critical Materials Stockpiling Act. It consolidated the materials in the national and supplemental stockpiles and the Defense Production Act inventory into two stockpiles: the national stockpile and the materials reserve inventory. The national stockpile would contain strategic and critical materials needed to meet stockpile objectives. The reserve inventory would consist of currently held materials in excess of national stockpile objectives and materials acquired in the future under the Defense Production Act and Pl 480.

S 28 directed the President, within six months after enactment of the bill, to establish criteria for determining what materials would be needed in the event of war. After review of the criteria by Congress, the President was to determine the form, quality and quantity of each material needed for the national stockpile.

The bill authorized disposal of excess materials through sale or through exchange for materials needed in the national stockpile. But Congress was given a 100-day period in which either chamber could veto the proposed disposal.

The bill made the Renegotiation Act of 1951 (under which excess profits on defense work may be recovered by the Government) applicable to all contracts and subcontracts for the acquisition and storage of stockpile materials (existing law provided exemptions). In addition, it required that information about the classification and stockpile objectives of materials be available to the public unless the President found that classification of such information was necessary for national security. Such appropriations as were necessary to carry out the bill's provisions were authorized.

House

COMMITTEE -- Armed Services.

HELD HEARINGS -- July 14, 15, 20 and 21 on S 28.

TESTIMONY -- July 15 -- Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) said that when S 28 "seeks to shift from Congress to the Executive Branch the authority for making decisions as to which materials should be stockpiled, and when and how any stockpile materials could and should be disposed of, we are being asked to abdicate our basic, fundamental responsibility."

Rep. Laurence J. Burton (R Utah) said, "I think Congress was wise, when it enacted the stockpiling legislation in 1946, to keep control in its own hands so as to reassure the economy in terms of possible future disposals, and to assure the national security."

Rep. Ed Edmondson (D Okla.) said it would be a "tragic mistake" for Congress "to surrender to any bureau the legislative power over the stockpiles of the nation."

July 20 -- Phillip S. Hughes, assistant director for legislative action of the Bureau of the Budget, recommended enactment of legislation "along the lines" of S 28 but opposed the Congressional veto provision. He said, "We believe the carrying out of plans to dispose of excess materials is essentially an Executive action."

July 21 -- Ramsey Clark, Deputy Attorney General, opposed S 28 because "it in effect requires the Executive Branch to obtain the approval of the two houses of Congress each time it seeks to carry out the statute's direction. Rather than confining itself to its constitutional function of legislating, Congress seeks by this bill also to inject itself into, and retain a veto power over, the administration of the statute. Under it, it is the Congress, not the President, that has the ultimate power to decide in each case whether the statutory conditions have been met and whether any particular property should or should not be disposed of. Those are Executive functions, and their attempted exercise by Congress is a usurpation of powers assigned by the Constitution to the Executive Branch of the Government."

The House Committee took no further action on S 28 in 1965.

Aluminum, Copper Stockpiles

The Government, during a 12-day "aluminum war" late in 1965, for the first time used a U.S. stockpile to bring pressure on producers to rescind a price increase the Government believed was inflationary. The aluminum industry insisted that the price increase was justified, but the Government declared it was "unjustified" under the Government's "wage-price guideposts" policy.

The "war" opened on Oct. 29 when three aluminum producers announced a 2-percent price increase. The Government made it known that it was considering disposing of some of the aluminum stockpile. The Aluminum Co. of America, Alcoa, the largest U.S. aluminum producer, joined in the price increase Nov. 5.

The next day Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara announced that the Government would sell on the open market 200,000 tons of stockpiled aluminum in 1966. He asserted that the industry, in negotiations for a long-term disposal plan, "would not undertake the responsibility" of taking that amount off the Government's hands "at a time when defense needs were rising and industry operations were at a capacity." Simultaneously, Gardner Ackley, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, called the price increase "inflationary."

The Government Nov. 9 announced it would sell 100,000 tons of aluminum "immediately" and an additional 200,000 tons later. The next day the producers, led by Alcoa, capitulated and rescinded their price increase. The Administration, in turn, called off the immediate sale of 100,000 tons and agreed not to sell a full 200,000 tons in 1966.

During the period of the "aluminum war" President Johnson, recuperating in Texas from his operation, did not comment in public on the price increase. Only after the increase was rescinded did he speak out. He called it "an act of industrial statesmanship."

The aluminum the Administration told the producers it would sell was in the Defense Production Act (DPA) inventory. Materials in the national stockpile and the supplemental stockpile, under existing law, could not be sold without the approval of Congress, unless they were obsolete or were needed for the "common defense." But materials in the Defense Production Act inventory could be sold by the Administration as it pleased. As of July 31, 1965, there were 770,857 tons of aluminum in the DPA inventory and twice that amount in the other two stockpiles.

Copper Sale. The Administration Nov. 17 announced that it would sell 200,000 tons of copper from the U.S. stockpile to ease a copper shortage and to hold down prices. In contrast to the reaction of aluminum producers, domestic copper producers, aware that high prices threaten copper's position in competition with substitute metals, were pleased by the Government's decision.

The principal reason for the sale of copper was to relieve a shortage at a time when defense needs were rising sharply. Almost all the Government-held copper, unlike aluminum, was in the national stockpile (934,316 tons, as of July 31). However, President Johnson did not require the authorization of Congress to dispose of the copper because, under existing law, he could dispose of materials in the national stockpile to meet the needs of the "common defense."

The Administration's decision to sell 200,000 tons of copper resulted in a prompt drop in the free market price and a drop within three days in the price posted by major U.S. producers.

COAST GUARD BILLS

Congress in 1965 enacted two bills authorizing construction and procurement by the Coast Guard.

HR 4527 -- PL 89-13 authorized appropriations of $114,250,000 for the procurement of vessels and aircraft and construction of shore and offshore facilities for the Coast Guard in fiscal 1966. The bill provided the full $109,250,000 requested by the Administration for the construction of 14 vessels and the extension of the service life of others; the purchase of 17 helicopters and one long-range aircraft; and construction work at 21 shore and offshore establishments. In addition, the bill included a provision added by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee which authorized $5 million for preliminary work required to convert Fort Jay, in New York City, from its use by the Army to facilities usable by the Coast Guard.

HR 7855 -- PL 89-21 authorized appropriations of $6,260,000 for the additional construction in fiscal 1966 of 17 shallow-draft Coast Guard patrol cutters. The legislation was designed to permit replacement of 17 such vessels ordered by President Johnson to be transferred from Coast Guard operations along the East, West and Gulf Coasts to the Navy for use in waters adjacent to Viet Nam. The 17 cutters were in addition to the three new shallow-draft cutters authorized in the first bill.

The fiscal 1966 Treasury-Post Office appropriations bill (HR 7060 -- PL 89-57) carried $115,510,000 to fund the Coast Guard's procurement and construction programs authorized in the two bills above.

REGISTRATION UNDER SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES ACT HELD ILLEGAL

The Supreme Court Nov. 15, 1965, by an 8-0 vote held that members of the Communist Party of the U.S.A. could not constitutionally be required to register as such with the Justice Department under provisions of the Subversive Activities Control Act. The Court said such a requirement violated the members' 5th Amendment right not to incriminate themselves.

In 1964, the Court had let stand a lower court decision holding that the Party itself could not be required to register unless the Government proved that an individual member was willing to waive his 5th Amendment right and register the Party. (1964 Almanac p. 470) In a 1965 federal district court case, the Government produced witnesses who said they were willing to register. On Nov. 19 the jury found the Party guilty of failing to register. This was expected to be appealed to the Supreme Court.

The 1964 and 1965 Supreme Court decisions removed most of the enforcement provisions of the Subversive Activities Control Act, a title of the Internal Security Act of 1950. They also bore out the warning of then Attorney General Tom C. Clark who said, when the legislation was under consideration by Congress, that the membership registration provision might be read by courts as compelling self-incrimination. Justice Clark recalled his former position in a concurring opinion to the 1965 case.

Supreme Court Cases

The Supreme Court Oct. 18 heard oral arguments in the case of Albertson v. Subversive Activities Control Board. Petitioners were William Albertson and Roscoe Quincy Proctor, against whom the Attorney General invoked the membership registration provision (Section (13(a)) of the Act. The move came after the Communist Party was required by the Subversive Activities Control Board (SACB) to register with the Attorney General as a "Communist-action" organization under provisions of the Act; it failed to do so and members of the Party failed as individuals to register. In those circumstances, as provided in Section 13(a), the Attorney General obtained an order from the SACB requiring Albertson and Proctor to register.

John J. Abt, counsel for the petitioners, argued that the membership registration requirement was self-incriminating and would assist the Government in making out a criminal case against the registrant. He said the provision would "institutionalize McCarthyism" if upheld. The Justice Department argued that a provision in the law (Section 4(f)) prevented the registrant's disclosure from being used against him in a criminal proceeding, and defended the statute as a necessary means of disclosure that did not violate civil liberties. The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) filed a brief on behalf of Albertson and Proctor.

The Court, in its Nov. 15 opinion, held that the Board's order requiring Albertson and Proctor to register violated their 5th Amendment right against self-incrimination. The Court further said that the provision purporting to prohibit use of the registration information as evidence in any ensuing criminal prosecution was not a complete immunity.

In a concurring opinion, Justice Clark recalled that when he was Attorney General in 1948, he warned that a similar provision then under consideration in Congress possibly violated the 5th Amendment guarantee against compelled testimony. When the Act was passed in 1950, President Truman vetoed the bill as ill-advised, but Congress promptly overrode the veto. (Congress and the Nation p. 1956)

Justice William J. Brennan Jr., writing for the Court in the Albertson case, said that a Communist-action organization member forced to register as such might face severe criminal penalties under such laws as the Smith Act, which made it a crime to conspire to teach and advocate the overthrow of the Government by force and violence. The immunity provision of the Act, Justice Brennan said, would not prevent the Government from using the registration material for investigatory purposes. Furthermore, he wrote, the possibility of self-incrimination arose at the time of registration even though no criminal proceedings had been begun, since future criminal proceedings might result from such registration. The Justice Department had argued that the self-incrimination contention was premature in the Albertson case.

The decision in the Albertson case left the Government with only the remnants of enforcement provisions under the Act. After the Court in Communist Party of the United States v. SACB (1961) upheld provisions requiring the Party itself to register, a lower court reversed conviction of the Party on grounds that the Government failed to show that any member was freely willing to register the Party.

By stipulation, the outcome of the Albertson case affected similar proceedings against 41 individuals. Justice Byron R. White took no part in the case; he had been Deputy Attorney General in 1961-1962.

District Court Conviction

Four days after the Albertson decision a jury in federal district court in the District of Columbia Nov. 19 found the Party guilty of failing to register under provisions of the Act, despite the fact that Party members were willing to do so. District Judge William B. Jones promptly fined the Party the maximum amount permitted by law, $23,000.

The conviction was the second for the Party. After the Supreme Court in 1961 upheld a Subversive Activities Control Board order directing the Party to register, a federal jury found the Party guilty in 1961 of failing to do so. The Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in 1963 reversed that conviction, finding that the Government had failed to show that any member of the Party was willing to register it. The Supreme Court in 1964 upheld that finding.

In the 1965 conviction, the Government concentrated on showing that at least two persons, both admitted informants for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as well as a New York lawyer, were prepared to register the Party. The trial was held on a new indictment obtained from a federal grand jury Feb. 25, 1965, which amended the original indictment in the 1961 trial to allege that some member of the Party was willing to register it.

FREEDOM ACADEMY BILL REPORTED TO HOUSE

The House Un-American Activities Committee in 1965 reported a bill (HR 9713 -- H Rept 629) proposing the creation of a Freedom Commission to operate a Freedom Academy to conduct research and train Government personnel, private citizens and foreign students in "advanced techniques" of combating Communism. The Academy was envisioned as a means of dealing with Communist political and psychological warfare.

No floor action was taken on HR 9713, which was held up in the House Rules Committee.

Background

The idea of establishing a Freedom Academy apparently stemmed from a bipartisan group called the Orlando Committee formed in 1950 in Orlando, Fla., to study the teaching of Communism in public high schools. The group later made a study of Soviet and U.S. "political warfare" programs. In 1954 the Committee issued a report on this study and recommended that a Freedom Academy be created to conduct a research and training program in "non-military conflict."

As the cold war became more intense and the United States increased its commitments to nations resisting Communist aggression, the American public became more concerned with the country's ability to combat Communism in psychological and political warfare.

The first "Freedom Academy" bill was introduced in 1959 by Rep. A. Sydney Herlong Jr. (D Fla.). The Senate passed a companion bill (S 1689) in 1960, but no action was taken in the House. (1960 Almanac p. 84)

Similar bills were introduced in the House and Senate in the 87th and 88th Congresses, but action on the legislation was never taken. During the 88th Congress, the Senate Foreign Relations and the House Un-American Activities Committees held hearings on bills proposing the establishment of a Freedom Academy and on a Kennedy Administration bill to establish a National Academy of Foreign Affairs, which would have trained only employees of Government agencies involved in foreign affairs and would have been controlled by the Federal Government. (1963 Almanac p. 302)

1965 Developments

A bipartisan group of 13 Senators headed by Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) Feb. 19, 1965, introduced a bill (S 1232) to establish a Freedom Academy. No Senate hearings were held on it in 1965.

Nine bills to establish such an Academy were introduced in the House and the House Un-American Activities Committee held hearings on the bills intermittently between March 31 and May 14.

A subcommittee of the Un-American Activities Committee July 8 agreed to an amended version of a bill (HR 2215) introduced earlier by Rep. Richard H. Ichord (D Mo.) and Ichord later (July 8) introduced the amended version as a clean bill (HR 9713). This was the bill reported (H Rept 629) by the full Committee July 20 but not cleared by the House Rules Committee, presumably because of Administration opposition.

HR 9713, as reported, established as an independent federal agency a Freedom Commission of seven members, to be appointed by the President on a bipartisan basis and subject to Senate approval. The Commission was to be responsible for establishing a Freedom Academy to conduct research and train Government personnel, private citizens and foreign nationals in the political, psychological, economic and other non-military warfare waged by the Communists and in methods of combating such warfare. It was also to assist colleges in improving "their educational programs attuned to the global operational needs of the United States," the report said.

The bill also authorized establishment of an information center to disseminate information concerning the non-military struggle with Communism and establishment of an Advisory Committee of 20 members chosen from the Executive Branch, Congress and private life to oversee the activities of the Commission and Academy and to make recommendations annually to the President and Congress on improving activities under the act.

The report said the Committee favorably reported the bill "by unanimous vote after hearing scores of witnesses and hours of expert testimony." It said that the "challenge to the United States and its allies today is not to atomize the military installations and capital cities of world Communism...(but) to meet the Communists on all fields of battle in this new form of warfare and emerge victorious in order that nuclear war may be prevented."

Agency Views. The State Department, in a March 29 letter to the Committee, (1) questioned "whether comprehensive and realistic plans for dealing with the infinitely complex problems of U.S. foreign affairs can be developed by a new, separate Government agency, especially one without operational responsibilities"; (2) noted that while it is sometimes "useful" to train private citizens, the current "primary need...is to improve in all possible ways the training of Government personnel involved in the day-to-day operation of our foreign affairs"; (3) suggested that "more effective ways" could be found to spend the estimated $2 million annually which the Academy would cost; and (4) noted that "any effort to centralize and standardize dissemination of information" on ways to win the struggle against Communism "would appear to be a marked departure from the traditional role of the Federal Government in the field of political education."

In 1959, 1962 and 1964, the State Department also opposed the establishment of such an Academy, suggesting that it (1) would duplicate the research and educational opportunities offered by universities, the National and Service War Colleges, the Foreign Service Institute, other Government agencies and private organizations; (2) would not ensure programs "realistically geared to the actual problems, needs and policies of our Government"; (3) could, in its massive public information function, "dissipate the energies and complicate the functions of conducting intensive...programs for professional personnel under carefully designed security safeguards"; and (4) could be characterized by Soviet propaganda as a Cold War Institute "which would...give a completely incorrect connotation to the world of the U.S. concept of 'freedom'."

The Department of Defense, in an April 5, 1965, letter, said the "broad objectives" of the legislation were "praiseworthy" but the need for a new, independent agency was "questionable."

Although the Justice Department did not submit a letter in 1965, in past years it opposed the Freedom Academy as a duplication of efforts by existing agencies "in the security field."

Public Works and Resources

Air Pollution, Waste Disposal 780
Desalination Program 764
Fishing Bills 766
Highway Beautification 724
Highway Funds 734
Lead-Zinc Subsidies 786
Natural Beauty Program 722
Oceanography 762
Park and Recreation Bills 768
Water Legislation 739
Water Pollution 743

NATURAL BEAUTY SOUGHT AS U.S. GOAL

President Johnson Feb. 8, 1965, sent to Congress a Message on Natural Beauty, outlining a massive program to "introduce into all our planning, our programs, our building and our growth a conscious and active concern for the values of beauty." It marked the first time a President had enunciated enhancement of natural beauty as a national goal. (For text, see p. 1379)

Mr. Johnson signaled an era of "new conservation" -- a conservation whose concern was "not with nature alone, but with the total relation between man and the world around him." This conservation, the President said, "must be not just the classic conservation of protection and development, but a creative conservation of restoration and innovation."

The President sought legislation to beautify:

- The cities, through new programs for development of open spaces, and through establishment of a community extension program to focus the resources of universities on community problems.
- The countryside, through initiation of a "Parks for America Decade."
- The highways, through control of billboards and junkyards and expanded programs of landscape development.
- The rivers, through preservation of specified streams in their natural state.
- The total environment, through new controls over air and water pollution.

The President also called for administrative actions to control pollution and enhance natural beauty. He said he would call a White House Conference on Natural Beauty to explore and "produce new ideas and approaches for enhancing the beauty of America."

Throughout the year the President -- and the First Lady -- emphasized that beautification must be a continuous process on all levels -- federal, state, local and individual. In signing a bill Sept. 21 establishing the Assateague Island National Seashore in Maryland, Mr. Johnson said, "I intend to seek out what can still be saved, and preserve it. I intend to find those oases of natural beauty which should never have been lost, and reclaim them for all our people. Conservation has been in eclipse in this country ever since Theodore Roosevelt's day. It had barely gotten off the ground when Uncle Joe Cannon, the Speaker of the House in those days, issued his ultimatum: 'Not one cent for scenery.' Well, today we are repealing Cannon's law. We are declaring a new doctrine of conservation. Before my allotted time in office has run out, I hope to see the best and fairest regions of America a matter of daily concern in this Government."

Following are details of 1965 requests and actions:

Legislative Proposals

The Cities. The President asked Congress to expand the open space grant program, currently used only for acquisition of land, to permit development of the land as well. He called for three new matching grant programs to improve "the natural beauty of urban open space"; for landscaping, installation of outdoor lights and benches, creating attractive city-scapes along roads and in business areas; and for demonstration programs in city parks. These were authorized in the omnibus housing bill (HR 7984 -- PL 89-117). (See story p. 358)

He also asked for a community extension program to "bring the resources of the university to focus on problems of the community." The program was authorized in the Higher Education Act (HR 9567 -- PL 89-329). (See story p. 294)

The President asked Congress to support the National Trust for Historic Preservation in the United States by authorizing supplementary grants to help local authorities acquire, develop and manage private properties for such purposes. Congress took no action.

Finally, he asked for supplemental fiscal 1965 funds for grants to the states for training of local governmental employees needed for community development. Congress denied the request in the Second Supplemental Appropriations bill for fiscal 1965 (HR 7091). (See story p. 227)

The Countryside. The President requested full funding of the Land and Water Conservation Fund established in 1964 -- an "important step in making this a Parks-for-America decade." From the Fund, he proposed use of money to acquire land to establish 12 new parks, seashores and recreation areas once they were authorized. Congress in 1965 authorized establishment of four: Tocks Island National Recreation Area (which Congress renamed the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area), Pa. and N.J. (HR 89 -- PL 89-158); Spruce Knob-Seneca Rocks National Recreation Area, W. Va. (S 7 -- PL 89-207); Whiskeytown-Shasta-Trinity National Recreation Area, Calif. (HR 979 -- PL 89-336); and Assateague Island National Seashore, Md. and Va. (S 20 -- PL 89-195). (See story p. 768)

Action was not completed on bills to establish the other eight: Cape Lookout National Seashore, N.C. (S 251, HR 1784); Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore, Mich. (S 936); Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore, Ind. (S 360, HR 51); Oregon Dunes National Seashore, Ore. (S 250); Great Basin National Park, Nev. (S 499); Guadalupe Mountains National Park, Texas (S 295, HR 517); Bighorn Canyon National Recreation Area, Mont. and Wyo. (S 491, HR 2778); and Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area, Utah and Wyo. (S 92). (See story p. 768)

In another legislative request, Mr. Johnson urged authorization of a nationwide strip and surface mining study. The request was granted in the Appalachian Regional Development Act (S 3 -- PL 89-4). (See story p. 788)

Highways. The President gave highlights of his proposals for beautification of the highways in his Feb. 8 message, but specific plans were not spelled out until bills were submitted May 26. He asked Congress to require that states, as a condition of receiving federal-aid highway grants, institute controls over billboards and junkyards on their Interstate and primary roads; require states to use 3 percent of their federal-aid highway funds for landscaping and roadside development; and require that each state use one-third of its federal funds for secondary highways to construct scenic roads, access roads to scenic and recreational areas and landscaping and roadside facilities along federal-aid highways. The Highway Beautification Act of 1965 (S 2084 -- PL 89-285) was a heavily amended version of the draft legislation. It eliminated entirely the last request. (See story p. 724)

Rivers. The President called for legislation establishing a National Wild Rivers System. The Administration bill (S 1446) was reported to the Senate with amendments Sept. 28, but no further action was taken in 1965. (See story p. 768)

Pollution. The President proposed a number of new antipollution programs, emphasizing prevention as well as abatement of air and water pollution.

Clean Water -- He asked Congress to "provide, through the setting of effective water quality standards, combined with a swift and effective enforcement procedure, a national program to prevent water pollution at its source rather than attempting to cure pollution after it occurs"; increase grants and provide additional incentives for construction of multi-municipal waste treatment facilities; increase grants for state water pollution control programs; and provide a new "research and demonstration construction program leading to the solution of problems caused by the mixing of storm water runoff and sanitary wastes." Provisions of a bill (S 4 -- PL 89-234) enacted in 1965 embodied these objectives. (See story p. 743)

Clean Air -- The President asked Congress to amend the Clean Air Act of 1963 (PL 88-206) to permit the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare "to investigate potential air pollution problems before pollution happens, rather than having to wait until the damage occurs, as is now the case, and to make recommendations leading to the prevention of such pollution." He also said he would institute discussion "leading to an effective elimination or substantial reduction" of automobile exhaust pollution. In 1965, Congress amended the Clean Air Act in S 306 (PL 89-272) to direct the HEW Secretary to establish standards limiting the emission of air pollutants from new motor vehicles. (See story p. 780)

Solid Wastes -- The President recommended legislation to: aid states in developing comprehensive programs for solid waste disposal; provide for research and demonstration projects on methods of disposing of or salvaging solid wastes; and launch "a concentrated attack on the accumulation of junk cars by increasing research in the Department of the Interior leading to use of metal from scrap cars where promising leads already exist." The proposals were embodied in the air pollution bill (S 306 -- PL 89-272). (See story p. 780)

Pesticides -- The President called for legislation "to tighten control over the manufacture and use of agricultural chemicals, including licensing and factory inspection of manufacturers, clearly placing the burden of proof of safety on the proponent of the chemical rather than on the Government." No action was taken on the proposal, embodied in S 2470, in 1965. (See story p. 137)

Mr. Johnson also sought to eliminate the ceiling on funds for pesticide research. In PL 89-232, Congress raised the ceiling but did not eliminate it. (See story p. 137)

Finally, the President requested increased funds for studies of pesticides by the Departments of Agriculture, Interior and HEW, and for Agriculture Department efforts to reduce contamination from toxic chemicals. Congress generally acted favorably on these requests. (See stories p. 161, 149, 204)

Administrative Actions

Among the major administrative actions called for by the President were: a study by the Interior Department of the desirability of establishing a Redwood National Park in California; a "conservation inventory" by the Secretaries of Defense and Interior to determine what surplus military lands were suitable for "outdoor recreation, wildlife and conservation uses consistent with military requirements"; a study by the Secretary of Interior of the Potomac River basin development plan, with a view toward devising a program for cleaning the river and making it a model for cleaning and developing other rivers for scenic and recreational purposes; evolution by the Secretary of Interior of a program to encourage a national system of trails; and stepped-up efforts by all federal agencies to "improve measures to abate pollution caused by direct agency operation, contracts and cooperative agreements."

Mr. Johnson directed the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers to study "the use of economic incentives as a technique to stimulate pollution prevention and abatement." He instructed the Budget Bureau director and the director of the Office of Science and Technology to explore the adequacy of the current organization of pollution control and research activities.

White House Conference. At the President's request, panels of conservationists, industrialists, government officials and private citizens met May 25-26 at a White House Conference on Natural Beauty, chaired by Laurance S. Rockefeller. Among the topics the President proposed for discussion were: a solution to the problems of automobile junkyards; the possibility of underground installation of utility transmission lines; policies of taxation which would "not penalize or discourage conservation and the preservation of beauty"; areas in which the Federal Government could help communities develop their own programs of natural beauty; and the possibility of a national tree planting program.

The most significant legislative program emanating from the Conference was the President's highway beautification plan (see above). In a May 25 speech to the Conference, Mr. Johnson pointed to his Feb. 8 recommendations, many of which were endorsed by the Conference, and said as many of the other Conference recommendations "as feasible" would be included in his next State of the Union Message.

Progress Report. The President Oct. 2 made public a report on beautification efforts by the heads of the Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and HEW Departments, the Office of Economic Opportunity and the Housing and Home Finance Agency. Many of the actions had been recommended by the President or the Conference. Highlights:

All agencies concerned had increased enforcement of existing regulations, issued new guidelines and made efforts to stimulate beautification efforts, particularly by communities and individuals. The Government had begun detailed investigations of 132 surplus defense areas for possible recreation and conservation uses; surveyed the national forest trail system and its accommodations for hikers and riders; and added nine new areas to the National Park System. It had accelerated efforts to clean streams of both natural and industrial debris; expanded research on waste treatment and sewage disposal; and increased research on new processes to make it profitable to use junked motor vehicle bodies for scrap steel. The Federal Housing Administration had issued a regulation requiring home builders to put utilities underground and eliminate overhead wiring where feasible. Concurrently, the Interior Department had scheduled a new research program aimed at reducing the cost of underground transmission. The Department had also initiated studies of use of trash and garbage as fuels for operating desalting plants, with "beautification...a byproduct."

HIGHWAY BEAUTIFICATION ACT OF 1965

S 2084 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 709) Sept. 14, 1965.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate on a 63-14 roll-call vote Sept. 16. (See p. 1074)
- Reported, amended, by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 1084) Sept. 22.
- Passed, amended, by the House on a 245-138 roll-call vote Oct. 7. (See p. 1016)
- House amendments agreed to by the Senate by voice vote Oct. 13.

PL 89-285 -- Signed into law Oct. 22.

S 2084, the Highway Beautification Act of 1965, authorized a new program for beautifying the nation's federal-aid highways through removal of billboards, screening or removal of junkyards and landscaping of areas adjacent to the highways.

The Act authorized use of federal funds to help the states control billboards and junkyards along the 41,000 miles of Interstate System and 225,000 miles of primary (inter-city) highways across the country, except in specified commercial and industrial areas. It authorized $80 million over a two-year period (fiscal 1966-67) to pay the 75-percent federal share of the costs of compensating billboard and junkyard owners for removal, screening or landscaping required to make their properties conform to the bill's control standards. If a state failed to comply with the control requirements, after Jan. 1, 1968, the Secretary of Commerce could withhold 10 percent of the federal-aid funds to which the state would normally be entitled from the Highway Trust Fund. A five-year leeway was allowed for the removal of billboards and junkyards.

S 2084 also authorized appropriation of $240 million to the states in fiscal 1966-67, without a state matching requirement, for landscaping and development of rights-of-way and strips adjacent to all federal-aid roads -- Interstate, and primary, secondary and urban (ABC); also $5 million for administrative expenses under the bill.

Finally, the bill authorized appropriation of $500,000 to the Secretary of Commerce for study and coordination of traffic safety programs which had been authorized, but not funded, previously.

Divided Opinions. The final bill was neither as strong as conservationists would have liked nor as weak as many of the industries affected by its provisions would have preferred. Even before the President submitted his draft legislation to Congress, May 26, he reportedly inserted provisions to meet some of the industry objections; Congress made further changes in response to industry testimony (see below).

In signing S 2084 into law (PL 89-285) Oct. 22, President Johnson said the bill "does not represent everything that we wanted. It does not represent what we need. But it is a first step, and there will be other steps. For though we must crawl before we walk, we are going to walk."

The bill as enacted was a heavily revised version of the original Administration draft. Following are the major differences between the initial and final bills:

- The final bill financed the programs from the Treasury instead of from the Highway Trust Fund. The purpose of this Congressional change was to make sure that allotments for construction of highways were not cut back to finance scenic beauty.
- Congress totally rejected an Administration provision requiring states to spend one-third of their federal funds for secondary highways ("farm-to-market roads") to construct scenic roads and roads leading to recreational or scenic areas and for landscaping and roadside development along these highways. Secondary highways covered some 620,000 miles.
- S 2084 permitted the Secretary to withhold 10 percent of a state's highway funds for failure to comply with billboard and junkyard control requirements. Although the original bill had permitted withholding of 100 percent of these funds, the Administration later requested the change to 10 percent.
- The Administration bill would have relied on state police powers (their powers to protect the health, safety and welfare of their citizens) to control billboards and junkyards first and then, if this proved ineffective, would have allowed use of federal funds to compensate owners affected by the control requirements. The federal share would have been 90 percent on Interstate and 50 percent on primary highways. The final bill required federal funds for compensation in all cases, eliminating altogether the use of state police powers, and -- at the request of the Administration -- set the federal share at a flat 75 percent of compensation costs on both Interstate and primary highways.
- The final bill required control of billboards within 660 feet of the nearest edge of the highway right-of-way, instead of within 1,000 feet of the nearest edge of the pavement. The change was made by the Senate Committee to conform to regulations in effect for states receiving incentive payments for control of billboards under an earlier law. (See below.)
- Congress added a provision allowing junkyards in industrial areas. The Administration bill had required eventual removal or screening of all junkyards within 1,000 feet of an Interstate or primary highway.
- The final bill provided for judicial review of most of the Secretary's actions which might jeopardize a state's right to its full share of federal highway funds.

Pressures. The major amendments -- both those proposed by the Administration and those initiated in Congress -- were chiefly the result of intensive pressure from special interest groups.

The greatest over-all opposition was to the Administration's provisions financing the beautification programs from the Highway Trust Fund instead of the Treasury, and allowing the Federal Government to withhold a state's full federal allotment for failure to comply with the billboard and junkyard controls. Opponents of these provisions included the American Road Builders' Assn., Associated General Contractors of America Inc., American Assn. of State Highway Officials and the National Assn. of Counties.

Opponents of the billboard control section included the Roadside Business Assn., which asserted that beautification should be a local and state responsibility, and the American Motor Hotel Assn. The largest billboard organization, the Outdoor Advertising Assn. of America Inc., supported most of the section but did not want the Commerce Department alone to decide what were unzoned commercial and industrial areas.

Those opposed to the original junkyard control provisions included the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel, the National Assn. of Secondary Material Industries and the National Auto and Truck Wreckers Assn.

Proponents of stringent federal control standards (in commercial and industrial areas as well as outside those areas) and of stiff penalties for failure to comply included the Garden Club of America, the National Wildlife Federation and the Izaak Walton League.

Johnson Family Campaign. Both the President and Mrs. Johnson, who undertook a personal campaign in behalf of beautification, took an active interest in the highway bill before and during its legislative journey. Mr. Johnson requested highway beautification legislation in his Feb. 8 message to Congress on natural beauty and later in a May 26 letter accompanying his draft legislation. The fact that S 2084 was enacted at all in 1965 was due almost entirely to intensive Presidential pressure, particularly in the House. When the Public Works Committee, after completing hearings July 22, balked at sending the bill to the floor, the President persuaded the Committee to reopen hearings Sept. 3 and to report the bill Sept. 22, six days after the Senate passed it. Later, when the House threatened to delay final action by one day so that Members could attend Mr. Johnson's "Salute to Congress" on the night of Oct. 7, the President made it clear he wanted the bill passed that very night. Rep. William C. Cramer (R Fla.), ranking Republican on the Committee, Sept. 17 said he had "never before seen such pressures and arm twisting from the Executive Branch...as I have seen with respect to the highway beautification bill." He and other Members expressed similar sentiments on the floor Oct. 7.

Appropriations. Because S 2084 was not enacted until part-way through the fiscal year, the Administration did not ask Congress to appropriate the full amounts authorized for fiscal 1966. The requests totaled $93,040,000 and included $12 million for billboard and junkyard controls (of $40 million authorized); $80 million for landscaping (of $120 million authorized); $750,000 for administrative expenses (no specific amount was authorized for fiscal 1966, although the over-all limit was $5 million) and $290,000 for traffic safety programs (of $500,000 authorized over an indefinite period).

Acting on the requests, Congress in the General Supplemental Fiscal 1966 Appropriations bill (HR 11588 -- PL 89-309) appropriated a total of $71,040,000 including $10 million for billboard and junkyard controls, $60 million for landscaping, $750,000 for administrative expenses and $290,000 for traffic safety.

Provisions

As signed by the President, S 2084, the Highway Beautification Act of 1965:

Included a declaration of Congress that outdoor advertising in areas adjacent to the Interstate Highway System and the federal-aid primary road system should be controlled to protect the public investment in such highways, to promote the safety and recreational value of public travel and to preserve natural beauty. (The controls did not apply to federal-aid secondary and urban roads.)

Directed that 10 percent of federal-aid highway funds, payable on or after Jan. 1, 1968, be withheld from any state which the Secretary of Commerce determined had not made provision for effective control (as defined below) of the erection and maintenance along the Interstate System and the primary system of outdoor advertising signs, displays and devices within 660 feet of the nearest edge of the right-of-way and visible from the main traveled way of the system. Permitted withholding of such funds until the state provided for effective control. Provided for reapportionment of the withheld funds to the other states unless a court appeal was pending. Permitted the Secretary to suspend the withholding requirement if necessary in the public interest.

Stipulated that effective control meant that after Jan. 1, 1968, outdoor advertising (except in commercial and industrial areas -- see below) would be limited to (1) directional and other authorized official signs and notices, including signs pertaining to natural wonders and scenic and historical attractions, so long as they conformed to national standards to be promulgated by the Secretary under the Act; (2) signs, displays and devices advertising the sale or lease of property upon which they were located; and (3) signs, displays and devices advertising activities conducted on the property on which they were located.

Permitted erection and maintenance of off-premise signs, displays and devices -- whose size, lighting and spacing, consistent with customary use, were to be determined by agreement between the states and the Secretary -- within 660 feet of the nearest edge of the right-of-way adjacent to Interstate and primary roads, within areas zoned industrial or commercial by state law or within unzoned commercial or industrial areas determined by agreement between the states and the Secretary. Stipulated that the states had full authority to zone areas for commercial and industrial purposes and that their actions in that regard would be accepted for purposes of the bill.

Stipulated that removal of outdoor advertising which was in existence along the Interstate or primary system on Sept. 1, 1965, could not be required until July 1, 1970. Stipulated that if other outdoor advertising later was brought under these controls, it need not be removed until the end of the fifth year after it became nonconforming.

Directed the Secretary, in consultation with the states, to designate appropriate areas near interchanges on the Interstate System where signs giving specific information to the traveling public could be erected. Required that such signs conform to national standards promulgated by the Secretary.

Required payment of just compensation, with the federal share 75 percent, on removal of outdoor advertising which was lawfully (1) in existence on the date of enactment of the bill, (2) on any highway made a part of the Interstate or primary system between the date of enactment and Jan. 1, 1968, and (3) erected on or after Jan. 1, 1968.

Directed that all U.S. public lands or reservations adjacent to any portion of the Interstate and primary systems be controlled in accordance with the bill's requirements.

Permitted highway departments to maintain maps and allow informational directories and advertising pamphlets to be made available at safety rest areas. Permitted states, with approval of the Secretary, to establish information centers at these areas.

Stipulated that any state highway department which had entered into an agreement with the Secretary under PL 85-767 (which expired June 30, 1965) for control of outdoor advertising would be entitled to receive the bonus payments for billboard controls set forth in the agreement, but stipulated that no state would receive the payments unless it maintained either the controls under the agreement or the control required in S 2084, whichever was stricter. Made it clear that the bill did not prohibit a state from establishing stricter limitations than those established in the bill, and that it did not exempt from its outdoor advertising control requirements any state receiving bonus payments.

Provided for judicial review of appeals by the states contesting (1) the Secretary's determination to withhold funds for a state's failure to comply with billboard or junkyard control requirements, (2) the Secretary's failure to agree with the state on the size, lighting and spacing of signs, displays and devices, and (3) the Secretary's failure to agree on unzoned commercial or industrial areas in which signs could be erected. Stipulated that funds which the Secretary proposed to withhold from a state could not be reapportioned to the other states while the state's suit was pending. Made funds withheld from apportionment and subsequently apportioned or reapportioned available for three fiscal years after they were apportioned or reapportioned.

Authorized appropriation from the Treasury of $20 million in each of fiscal years 1966 and 1967 to implement the outdoor advertising control provisions.

Junkyards. Included a declaration of Congress that establishment and maintenance of junkyards in areas adjacent to the Interstate and primary systems should be controlled to protect the public investment in such highways, to promote the safety and recreational value of public travel and to preserve natural beauty. (The controls did not apply to federal-aid secondary and urban roads.)

Directed that 10 percent of federal-aid highway funds payable on or after Jan. 1, 1968, be withheld from any state which the Secretary determined had not made provision for effective control (as defined below) of the establishment and maintenance along the Interstate and primary systems of outdoor junkyards within 1,000 feet of the nearest edge of the right-of-way and visible from the main traveled way of the system. Permitted withholding of such funds until the state provided for effective control and provided for reapportionment of the withheld funds to the other states. Permitted the Secretary to suspend the withholding requirement if necessary in the public interest.

Specified that effective control meant that by Jan. 1, 1968, junkyards must be screened by natural objects, planting or fences or other appropriate means so as not to be visible from the main traveled way of the system, or must be removed from sight.

Included definitions of the terms junk, automobile graveyard and junkyard (which included garbage dumps and sanitary fills).

Permitted operation of junkyards, auto graveyards and scrap metal processing facilities within areas adjacent to the highway systems which were zoned industrial under state law or which were not zoned but were used for industrial activities, as determined by the states, subject to approval by the Secretary.

Delayed until July 1, 1970, the removal of any junkyard in existence on the date of enactment of the bill which did not conform to the Act's requirements and which the Secretary found could not be screened.

Made the federal share of landscaping and screening costs 75 percent.

Required payment of just compensation (federal share 75 percent) to the owner for the relocation or disposal of junkyards which were lawfully (1) in existence on the date of enactment of the bill, (2) on any highway made a part of the Interstate or primary system between the date of enactment and Jan. 1, 1968, and (3) established on or after Jan. 1, 1968.

Directed that all U.S. public lands or reservations adjacent to any portion of the Interstate and primary systems be controlled in accordance with the bill's requirements.

Made it clear that the bill did not prohibit a state from establishing standards imposing stricter limitations on junkyards along federal-aid highways than those established in the Act.

Authorized appropriation from the Treasury of $20 million in each of fiscal years 1966 and 1967 to implement the junkyard control provisions.

Landscaping, Scenic Enhancement. Authorized the Secretary to approve, as a part of the construction of federal-aid (Interstate and ABC) highways, the costs of landscape and roadside development, including provision of publicly owned and controlled rest and recreation areas and sanitary and other facilities reasonably necessary for the traveling public.

Required allocation to each state of an amount equal to 3 percent of the federal-aid highway funds apportioned to the state annually, without state matching, to be used for landscape and roadside development within the highway right-of-way and for acquisition of interests in and improvement of strips of land necessary to enhance scenic beauty adjacent to the highway, including the authorized rest and recreation areas. Permitted the Secretary to make exceptions if a state showed it did not need the funds.

Authorized appropriation from the Treasury of $120 million in each of fiscal years 1966 and 1967 for these purposes.

General Provisions. Directed the Secretary, in cooperation with state highway departments, to prepare and submit to Congress by Jan. 10, 1967, a detailed estimate of the cost of implementing the bill's provisions, a comprehensive study of the economic impact of the Act's programs on affected individuals and commercial and industrial enterprises, the effectiveness of the programs and alternate methods of accomplishing the Act's objectives. Required the Secretary, before promulgating standards, criteria and regulations for billboard and junkyard control, to hold public hearings in each state in order to gather all relevant information on which to base them. Required him to report to Congress by Jan. 10, 1967, all standards, criteria and regulations to be applied.

Authorized appropriation of $500,000 to the Secretary for study and coordination of traffic safety programs as authorized in PL 89-139. (See story p. 734)

Stipulated that nothing in the bill could be construed to authorize the use of eminent domain to acquire any dwelling (including related buildings).

Stipulated that the bill could not be construed to authorize private property to be taken or the reasonable and existing use restricted by such taking without just compensation as provided in the bill.

Authorized appropriation of $5 million from the Treasury for administrative expenses under the bill.

Background

Under existing highway laws, the Federal Government shared with the states the costs of construction of the Interstate and ABC (primary, secondary and urban) highway systems. The federal share of these programs (90 percent for Interstate, 50 percent for ABC highways) was paid from the Highway Trust Fund, a separate fund financed chiefly through federal revenues from gasoline, tire and other highway-user taxes. By law, payments from the Trust Fund could not exceed its revenues. (For details on Trust Fund finances and mileage in the federal-aid system, see story p. 734)

In 1958 Congress enacted two voluntary programs to encourage states to improve the appearance of their highway systems by controlling billboards and landscaping adjacent areas. Both programs were optional and were largely ineffective. Neither applied to the nation's junkyards, which the Commerce Department estimated to number 17,726.

The billboard law, enacted in 1958 (PL 85-381) and extended in 1963 (PL 88-157), gave a bonus to states which agreed to meet federal standards banning billboards within 660 feet of the right-of-way of their portion of Interstate (but not ABC) roads. These states could receive a federal payment of 90.5 percent (instead of 90 percent) of the cost of building the road. When the law expired June 30, 1965, 25 states had signed the agreements necessary to make them eligible for the bonuses, and by October 1965, 10 had actually received bonus payments for control of 209.2 miles of the 41,000-mile Interstate system. Lack of participation was attributed partly to the failure of some state legislatures to pass legislation prohibiting billboards in the prescribed areas and partly to the failure of other states to achieve effective compliance. (1963 Almanac p. 461)

The landscaping provision enacted in 1958 (PL 85-767) authorized states to use up to 3 percent of their allotments from the Highway Trust Fund to purchase strips of land alongside highways to preserve their scenic features. Until 1965, this provision was not used at all; in 1965, three states filed applications and funds were allocated to cover about 50 miles. The Commerce Department said that, in general, states preferred to use their entire federal allotment for highway construction and were reluctant to divert money to scenery.

Administration Proposals. In 1965, President Johnson sought to make highway beautification programs (including billboard control and landscaping) mandatory, rather than optional.

In his Feb. 8, 1965, message to Congress on natural beauty, the President unveiled his general proposals for control of billboards and junkyards and for landscaping and development of scenic roads. (For text of message, see p. 1379) His specific proposals were not submitted, however, until the concluding day of the May 25-26 White House Conference on Natural Beauty. At the conference, both conservationists and representatives of groups likely to be affected by highway beautification programs presented their views. (For major views, see House and Senate hearings, below.)

Mr. Johnson May 26 sent to Congress four draft bills on beautification. They were introduced in the House that day by Public Works Committee Chairman George H. Fallon (D Md.). HR 8487 required states to spend one-third of their federal funds for construction of secondary highways on scenic roads; HR 8489 prohibited outdoor advertising except within specified areas; HR 8491 required removal or screening of junkyards except in specified areas; HR 8493 required states to use 3 percent of their federal highway funds, without matching, for landscaping and roadside development. In the Senate, all four proposals were embodied in a single bill (S 2084), introduced June 3 by Chairman Jennings Randolph (D W.Va.) of the Public Works Subcommittee on Public Roads. (For full details of the draft bills, see Senate Action, below)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works, Public Roads Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- Aug. 10-13 on S 2084 and related bills to improve the beauty of U.S. highways.

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 10 -- Commerce Secretary John T. Connor said the voluntary programs to control billboards and preserve scenery along highways had failed and that U.S. taxpayers deserved safer, more attractive highways without so many "intrusions" from billboards.

M.L. Shadburn, president of the American Assn. of State Highway Officials, warned that the financing provisions of S 2084 "would divert funds from construction and would have the effect of increasing the next Interstate cost estimate and of decreasing the ABC and the states' construction programs." He said most state highway departments "vigorously oppose" the provision to require that one-third of funds for secondary roads be used for scenic roads and access to recreational areas. He urged modification of the "ultimatum features," requiring a cut-off of federal funds if states did not comply with billboard and junkyard controls, to a "token, but effective, penalty."

Aug. 11 -- Maj. Gen. Louis W. Prentiss (USA ret.), executive vice president of the American Road Builders Assn., supported the highway beautification program but endorsed the modifications proposed by the state highway officials. He suggested that only a one-year authorization be passed and the Commerce Department directed to prepare a full estimate of the costs of the program.

Arthur B. Hersberger, representing the American Petroleum Institute, criticized the billboard restrictions in S 2084, which he said would inconvenience motorists by denying them the services of businesses along highways and would have an adverse economic impact on highway enterprises.

Bernard F. Hillenbrand, representing the National Assn. of Counties, said the funds for highway beautification should be appropriated from the Treasury rather than from allotments from the Highway Trust Fund.

Phillip Tocker, president of the Outdoor Advertising Assn. of America Inc. (representing about 90 percent of outdoor advertisers), supported the proposed outdoor advertising provisions, which permitted billboards within areas zoned for commercial or industrial use, with one exception. He said the definition of areas not zoned but used for such purposes should be written into the law, and not left to the Secretary of Commerce to determine.

Aug. 12 -- James R. Hartzell, president of the Roadside Business Assn., composed of outdoor advertisers, sign manufacturers and users, opposed the billboard controls in S 2084. He said the Outdoor Advertising Assn. did not speak "for the majority" of outdoor advertisers "and certainly not for any part of the many industries which use outdoor advertising." (Continued on next page)

M. J. Mighdoll of the National Assn. of Secondary Material Industries protested that Title II of the bill on junkyards "would single out and seemingly punish" one industry while ignoring "unsightly industrial sites not involving scrap."

Mrs. Daniel McKeon, representing the Conservation Committee of the Garden Club of America, endorsed all of S 2084, except the exemption for billboards in commercial and industrial areas, which she said would result in "the overriding of state and local regulations which now protect important scenic roadsides from billboard plight." She said that that section offered a loophole by permitting strip zoning of highway roadsides to escape the ban on billboards.

Aug. 13 -- Louis S. Clapper, representing the National Wildlife Federation, said that "exceptions for areas zoned 'industrial' or 'commercial' will severely handicap the beautification program."

Mrs. Thomas Waller, president of the Garden Club of America, called the Commerce Department's Bureau of Roads "the chief spoiler of our conservation resources." She recommended that the Department of the Interior be given power to resolve highway problems involving conservation values, should a controversy arise between two governmental agencies.

Robert T. Dennis of the Izaak Walton League of America said S 2084 permitted "undesirable rezoning" and the relocating of junkyards to more rural sections if a program were not set up to find a final solution to the waste problem.

BILL REPORTED -- The Public Works Committee Sept. 14 reported S 2084 (S Rept 709) with extensive amendments. (For details of committee changes, see below) John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.) filed individual views to the report which were similar to the proposals he made on the Senate floor (below).

Senate Floor Action

After two days of debate, the Senate Sept. 16 passed the bill, with floor amendments, by a 63-14 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 1074)

The major floor amendment, endorsed by the Administration as a concession to opponents of the bill, reduced from 100 percent to 10 percent the amount of funds that could be cut off from states that did not comply with effective billboard and junkyard controls.

Just before the Senate began floor consideration, the White House submitted five amendments to the committee version which were then offered on the floor by bill manager Jennings Randolph (D W.Va.) and accepted by the Senate. These reduced substantially the penalties for a state's failure to comply with the billboard and junkyard control provisions, changed the formula for the federal-state share of compensation payments to billboard and junkyard owners, spelled out procedures for determining areas in which billboards would be allowed which virtually guaranteed that the Secretary had the final say, and nailed down a requirement that states could not weaken their own billboard control laws on Interstate highways if they were stricter than those in the bill.

Following are the principal Administration provisions, the changes made by the Committee, and the amendments added on the floor:

OUTDOOR ADVERTISING

Administration Proposals. The Administration's draft bill specified that a state would lose all its federal-aid highway funds after Jan. 1, 1968, if it did not prohibit outdoor advertising along Interstate and primary highways in areas within 1,000 feet of these roads and visible to passing motorists -- with the exception of directional and other official signs, signs advertising the sale or lease of, or activities conducted on, the property on which they were located, and signs in areas zoned by the states for or used predominantly for industrial or commercial activities as determined by the Secretary according to national standards which he was authorized to promulgate. Existing signs not covered in these exceptions would have to be removed by July 1, 1970. If a state submitted evidence that it was unable to secure control under its police powers, federal funds could be used to pay the federal share of costs of control through purchase or condemnation (the federal share being 90 percent on Interstate roads and 50 percent on primary roads). State highway departments were authorized to maintain maps and permit informational directories and advertising pamphlets to be made available at safety rest areas.

Committee Action. The Committee made extensive amendments in this section -- some to comply with existing billboard control provisions and others to ease the way for compliance. It gave the Secretary discretionary power to suspend the penalty of loss of federal funds if necessary in the public interest. In order to make the bill uniform with the 1958 law (PL 85-381) permitting bonus payment to states which agreed to limit outdoor advertising along Interstate highways, the Committee required control of advertising within 660 feet from the nearest edge of the right-of-way (instead of 1,000 feet from the pavement) of both Interstate and primary roads. In addition, the Committee directed the Secretary, in consultation with the states, to devise a system of signs near Interstate exchanges giving specific information needed by the traveling public. The Committee also left to the states the power to determine which unzoned areas would be excepted from the control provisions, as long as the state determinations were consistent with the purposes of the bill. (Though similar to the draft bill, this provision did not specify that the Secretary could in effect veto state determinations or set national standards.) It said the concept of zoning "more appropriately" belonged to the states, but the consistency provision would eliminate the possibility that the states might engage in "strip zoning," small areas along highways zoned in such a manner as to permit advertising. The Committee further amended the bill to make it clear that state standards established in order to qualify for bonuses under PL 85-381 could not be lowered under S 2084, and to allow a state to continue to receive bonus payments if it had already negotiated an agreement for the payments.

In a concession to billboard interests, the Committee specified that existing signs which violated the control requirements could not be required to be removed before July 1, 1970 (as in the Administration bill), or until the end of the fifth year after they became nonconforming, whichever was later. It said the "sole purpose" of the additional language was to provide a five-year grace period "for advertising structures which are on secondary roads which may later be designated as part of the primary system." In addition, it eliminated the provision for use of state police powers where possible to obtain control, and instead required use of federal funds for payment of the federal share (90 percent on Interstate roads, 50 percent on primary roads) of the costs of acquiring the rights -- thus guaranteeing compensation to the billboard interests.

Finally, the Committee set specific appropriations ceilings of $20 million in each of fiscal years 1966 and 1967, payable from the Treasury.

Floor Action. During two days of consideration of S 2084, the Senate accepted seven amendments dealing chiefly with outdoor advertising controls, and rejected five. Four of those accepted were offered by Randolph in behalf of the Administration. The first authorized the Secretary to withhold 10 percent (instead of 100 percent) of a state's federal-aid highway funds for failure to comply. Randolph Sept. 15 said the Administration felt loss of all funds was "a penalty far too severe for any state to suffer, whereas 10 percent is a reasonable penalty." The second amendment set a flat 75-percent federal share in the costs of compensating those affected by the billboard control requirements, replacing the original requirement for federal shares of 90 percent on Interstate and 50 percent on primary roads. (The amendment also applied to junkyard controls -- see below.) Randolph estimated the 75-25 matching requirement would save the states about $30 million for billboard controls and $10 million for junkyards.

The third Administration amendment specified that a state which had entered into an agreement for receiving bonus payments for control of billboards along its Interstate roads could still receive the payments if it maintained either the controls required in the agreement or the controls required under S 2084, whichever was stricter.

Though there was little controversy over the first three Administration amendments, the fourth was withdrawn Sept. 15 after heated debate over its potential effect and was submitted in revised form Sept. 16, when it barely gained approval by a 44-40 roll-call vote. The purpose of the amendment was to spell out the authority of both the Secretary and the states to determine the areas -- zoned and unzoned -- in which off-premise outdoor advertising would be permitted under the bill, as well as the types of advertising to be permitted. As approved, the amendment permitted any advertising in which size, lighting and spacing had been determined by agreement between the states and the Secretary. The advertising could be located in areas which had been zoned commercial or industrial by the states or in any unzoned commercial or industrial areas which were determined by agreement between the Secretary and the states. Randolph contended that the language of the amendment placed both parties "on an equal footing because it provides for mutual consideration." Hiram L. Fong (R Hawaii), an opponent, said the bargaining positions were not equal because the Secretary of Commerce still "holds in his hand the withholding power of 10 percent of the federal highway apportionment to a state for roadbuilding purposes." (For voting, see chart p. 1074)

Other amendments included one by John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.) which permitted the Secretary at his discretion to allow states a grace period before withholding federal funds for failure to comply (this also applied to the junkyard controls). Another, by Fong, provided for judicial review of the Secretary's action in withholding the funds. Both were agreed to by Randolph and accepted by voice votes.

A final amendment, offered by John J. Williams (R Del.) and accepted by voice vote, prohibited the Federal Government, after Jan. 1, 1968, from erecting signs or displays promoting any of its departments, agencies, programs, projects or expenditures.

Amendments Rejected. All five amendments rejected by the Senate would have applied chiefly to the billboard control provisions of the bill. The main one, offered by Cooper, would have allowed the Federal Government to pay 100 percent of the costs of compensating billboard owners for their losses in complying with control requirements (instead of requiring state matching). Cooper argued that the program was a national one whose full cost should be borne by the Government and that to require state participation on a mandatory basis (under penalty of withholding of federal funds from the state) constituted a sharp departure from other federal-aid programs under which state participation was voluntary. Randolph countered that the basic principle of the federal-aid highway program had been federal-state cooperation and a 100-percent federal payment "would relieve the states of any responsibility regarding a sound approach to just compensation and would tend to lead toward inflated compensation payments." The amendment was rejected by a 31-54 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 1074)

The Senate also rejected, by a 33-48 roll call, an amendment by Norris Cotton (R N.H.) to limit the Secretary's power in determining areas in which advertising would be permitted to the Interstate System and new (but not existing) primary roads. By a standing vote, it rejected an amendment by Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) to waive the requirement for agreements between the Secretary and the states on zoning of areas in which advertising would be permitted if the locations were within areas surrounding towns with population sizes spelled out in the amendment. Another Cooper amendment, rejected by a 29-45 roll call, would have made it clear that state billboard control laws could not be loosened if they were stricter than those in S 2084. Finally, the Senate rejected by voice vote an amendment by Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) to apply the control provisions to "scenic highways" designated by state governors instead of to all primary highways.

JUNKYARDS

Administration Proposals. The Administration bill provided that a state would lose all its federal-aid highway funds after Jan. 1, 1968, if it did not screen or remove from sight junkyards in areas within 1,000 feet of Interstate and primary roads and visible to motorists. Any junkyard which could not be screened could not be required to be removed until July 1, 1970. If a state could not provide for effective control through use of its police powers, federal funds could be used to pay the federal share (90 percent on Interstate roads, 50 percent on primary roads) of costs of control by purchase or condemnation and screening or removal and disposal.

Committee Action. The Committee added a provision permitting operation of junkyards, auto graveyards and scrap metal processing facilities within areas adjacent to the highways which were zoned industrial under state law or used predominantly for industrial activities. It provided that junkyard owners would pay the first $1,500 in screening costs, and the rest would be paid for through federal-state cost-sharing, as noted above. Finally, the Committee authorized appropriations from the Treasury of $20 million annually in fiscal 1966-67 for costs of the program.

Floor Action. Two of the Administration amendments applied to junkyards. One, which also covered billboards (above), provided for 75 percent federal-25 percent state sharing in the costs of compensating those affected by the junkyard control provisions. The other reduced the amount to be withheld from 100 percent of federal-aid funds to 10 percent. A third amendment by Cooper, which also covered billboards (above), allowed a grace period in the withholding of funds if the Secretary deemed it necessary in the national interest. All were accepted by voice votes.

HIGHWAY LANDSCAPING

Administration Proposals. The Administration bill permitted the Secretary to approve, as part of the costs of construction of federal-aid highways, the costs of landscape and roadside development, including acquisition and development of rest and recreation areas and other travel facilities. It also required the states to use 3 percent of their federal highway funds, without matching, for landscaping for the restoration, preservation and enhancement of scenic beauty adjacent to federal-aid highways.

Committee Action. The Committee deleted the requirement to use 3 percent of highway funds for landscaping and instead authorized appropriation from the Treasury of $120 million annually in fiscal 1966 and 1967.

Floor Action. No changes were made on the floor.

OTHER PROVISIONS

Administration Proposals. The Administration bill required states to spend one-third of their federal funds for secondary roads for construction of scenic roads and roads leading to recreational or scenic areas and for landscaping and roadside development.

Committee Action. The Committee dropped the requirement for spending on scenic roads because it would "create an unnecessary hardship on local bodies of government in their efforts to sustain their secondary road programs...already hard-pressed for sufficient funds."

Floor Action. No attempt was made on the floor to reinsert the scenic road provision. However, three amendments accepted by voice votes added new provisions to the bill. The first, by Dirksen, added a new title authorizing appropriation of $5 million for research and development of methods for disposition of scrapped motor vehicles. The second, by Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.), authorized appropriation of $500,000 for study and coordination of traffic safety authorized in S J Res 81 (PL 89-139). The third, offered by Dirksen and modified by Randolph, added a general provision stipulating that nothing in the bill could be construed to authorize taking of private property or restriction of its reasonable and existing use without just compensation (on a 75 percent federal-25 percent state basis). (For story on PL 89-139, see p. 734)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Sept. 15 -- Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Add a new title authorizing appropriation of $5 million to the Secretary of Commerce for research and development of methods for disposition of scrapped motor vehicles. Voice vote.

Jennings Randolph (D W.Va.) -- Permit withholding of 10 percent (instead of 100 percent) of the federal-aid highway funds to which a state was entitled, if it failed to provide for effective outdoor advertising controls. Voice.

Randolph -- Authorize compensation of those affected by the Act's requirements for removal of outdoor advertising or for landscaping, screening or removal of junkyards on a flat 75 percent federal-25 percent state basis (instead of on a 90-10 basis for Interstate highways and a 50-50 basis for other federal-aid highways). Voice.

Sept. 16 -- Randolph -- Permit withholding of 10 percent (instead of 100 percent) of the federal-aid highway funds to which a state was entitled, if it failed to provide for effective junkyard controls. Voice.

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- After Jan. 1, 1968, prohibit the Federal Government from erecting signs or displays promoting any of its departments, agencies, programs, projects or expenditures and direct the Secretary of Commerce to request the states to remove as soon as practicable all such signs. Voice.

Randolph -- Provide that a state which had entered into an agreement with the Secretary to control outdoor advertising on Interstate highways in order to receive bonus payments under existing law could receive the payments only if it maintained the controls required in the agreement or the controls required under the Act, whichever were stricter. Voice.

Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) -- Authorize appropriation of $500,000 to the Secretary of Commerce for a study and coordination of traffic safety programs authorized in PL 89-139. Voice.

Randolph -- Permit outdoor advertising whose size, lighting and space were determined by agreement between the states and the Secretary of Commerce within areas adjacent to the Interstate and primary systems which were zoned industrial or commercial by state law or in unzoned commercial or industrial areas determined by agreement by the Secretary and the states. (Also see Dirksen amendment, which was rejected, below) Roll call, 44-40.

Cooper -- Permit the Secretary of Commerce to allow states a grace period before withholding federal funds for failure to comply with the outdoor advertising or junkyard control provisions. Voice.

Dirksen -- Make it clear that the Act required payment of just compensation by the Federal Government for any private property taken or for any restrictions on the reasonable uses or enjoyment of such property. (This was modified by Randolph to require state matching of compensation payments -- see below) Voice.

Gordon Allott (R Colo.) -- Eliminate "ruins" from the Act's definition of junk. Standing.

Hiram L. Fong (R Hawaii) -- Provide for judicial review, with the burden of proof on the states, of the Secretary's action on withholding funds from states for failure to comply with billboard controls. Voice.

Randolph -- Make it clear that the Act required payment of just compensation, on a 75 percent federal-25 percent state basis, for any private property taken or for any restrictions on its reasonable use and enjoyment. (This modified the Dirksen amendment, above, providing for federal payment of the full costs.) Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Sept. 15 -- John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.) -- Permit the Federal Government to bear the full costs of compensating those affected by outdoor advertising regulations (instead of requiring state matching). Roll-call vote, 31-54.

Sept. 16 -- Norris Cotton (R N.H.) -- Limit the power of the Secretary of Commerce to override determinations of industrial or commercial areas by state legislatures to matters concerning the Interstate system and new construction in the Primary system (but not existing primary roads or improvements on them). Roll call, 33-48.

Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Amend the Randolph amendment providing for agreements between the Secretary of Commerce and the states on locations of outdoor advertising (above) by waiving the requirement for such agreements if the location was within specified areas based on the populations of the cities involved. Standing.

Cooper -- Make it clear that the billboard control provisions did not permit a reduction in standards established under applicable state laws or a reduction in standards on the erection and location of signs, displays and devices established in the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1958 (PL 85-767). Roll call, 29-45.

Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) -- In the section on outdoor advertising controls, replace all references to the primary system with the term "scenic highways" and require all governors, by June 30, 1966 to submit to the Secretary of Commerce a list of all highways in their states which had been designated scenic highways. Voice.

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works, Roads Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- July 20-22, Sept. 3 and 7 on four bills (HR 8487, HR 8489, HR 8491 and HR 8493) embodying the Administration's highway beautification proposals. The four bills contained the original provisions of S 2084. (For details, see Senate Action, above)

TESTIMONY -- July 20 -- Commerce Secretary John T. Connor said the existing provisions for voluntary billboard controls by the states on Interstate highways had proved "ineffective"; only 25 states had entered into agreements for control, and payments had been made for control of "less than 1 percent of the Interstate mileage already completed." The "traveling public has a right to effective control against intrusions of this kind which impair the use of a public facility," he said.

Evidence of the interest in junkyard control, he said, was the "fact that in some 29 states," legislation for junkyard control was introduced, and in six states was enacted.

In support of HR 8493 (landscaping), Connor said that because under existing law "the objective for which the acquisition may be made includes only the preservation, but not the enhancement or restoration, of scenic beauty," and because "the states have...preferred to use all their funds for highway construction, there has been only one request for extensive use of 3 percent funds."

Connor said HR 8487 (scenic highways) would "prompt the states to re-evaluate their secondary road programs, with a resulting and appropriate priority given to the development of scenic and recreational roads."

July 21 -- Maj. Gen. Louis W. Prentiss (USA, ret.) of the American Road Builders' Assn. called HR 8493 (landscaping) "an enlightened piece of legislation" but said it would require transfer of about $120 million a year from federal highway construction programs, representing "a new cost item which must be taken into account in the financing of the Interstate System." He said HR 8487 (scenic roads) "would lead to an impractical distribution of federal-aid secondary funds within a state" because the scenic counties which probably would receive the funds were likely to be the less populated ones.

W. Ray Rogers, spokesman for the Associated General Contractors of America Inc., "heartily" endorsed the "aims and purposes" of the highway beautification program but emphasized "that it should be financed by other means" than from the Highway Trust Fund.

M.L. Shadburn of the American Assn. of State Highway Officials suggested clarification of the areas zoned for commercial or industrial uses to prevent pressures on local governments to zone areas specifically to make them exempt; avoiding provisions which "might force junkyards to relocate on the secondary system or state highways that are not on the federal-aid systems"; and leaving use of funds for scenic enhancement optional with the states.

July 22 -- James R. Hartzell, president of the Roadside Business Assn., said the "only way in which the roadsides can be properly improved, effectively and with a due recognition of all of the many opposing values including beauty, is by the promotion of reasonable, yet effective, legislation at the state level."

Sept. 3 -- Spokesmen for the National Auto and Truck Wreckers Assn. and the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel opposed the auto graveyard bill (HR 8491) as not meeting its objectives.

The American Motor Hotel Assn. urged more outdoor advertising than HR 8489 permitted.

Sept. 7 -- Rep. Richard S. Schweiker (R Pa.) supported his bill (HR 8850) authorizing the Federal Government to use 1 percent of automobile excise tax revenues to make grants to states to implement plans for disposal of auto carcasses. (A similar proposal was made unsuccessfully in the Senate by Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.). See story p. 835)

BILL REPORTED. The Public Works Committee Sept. 22 reported S 2084 (H Rept 1084) with minor amendments. It contained all the Administration-requested changes made by the Senate. (For details of committee changes, see House Action below.)

Minority Views. Minority views were filed by GOP Reps. Cramer (Fla.), Harsha (Ohio), Grover (N.Y.), Halleck (Ind.), Reid (Ill.), McEwen (N.Y.) and Martin (Ala.). They protested that the bill was "a poorly thought out proposal which was brutally forced upon the...Committee by spokesmen for the Administration who wielded the power and influence of the White House...to make certain that the bill be reported, and reported now, regardless of the consequences." They objected that the bill: made withholding of funds mandatory even if a state could not comply with control requirements because of limitations in state constitutions; gave the Secretary "broad and inconsistent powers"; inadvertently gave the Secretary power to permit commercial advertising on highway rights-of-way; required elimination of outdoor advertising necessary for the traveling public; made inadequate provisions for compensation payments; contained no provision for removal of junkyards established in the future; made no provision for use of landscaping funds for landscaping and scenic enhancement within the highway rights-of-way; and authorized a new program whose ultimate cost was "unknown but certain to be massive" at a time when funds to meet other commitments, such as the war in Viet Nam, were at a premium.

In supplemental views, Rep. James C. Cleveland (R N.H.) concurred "generally" with these views.

Rules Committee Action. The House Rules Committee Sept. 30 voted 7-6 to grant a rule for floor consideration of S 2084.

House Floor Action

The House Oct. 7 passed S 2084 by a 245-138 roll-call vote. The House rejected, on a 153-230 roll call, a motion by William C. Cramer (R Fla.) to recommit the bill with instructions to insert language, in both the billboard and junkyard control sections, stipulating that the states would have full authority to determine the areas zoned or unzoned for commercial and industrial purposes where the control requirements would not apply. (For voting, see chart p. 1016)

Fearing a possible loss of votes overnight, bill sponsors pushed the measure through to final passage at 12:51 a.m. Oct. 8. The original plan had been to complete consideration in the regular session Oct. 8, allowing Members to attend the President's "Salute to Congress" on the night of Oct. 7. During the afternoon, however, word came from the White House that the President wanted the bill that night, and the House remained in session, watched from the galleries by wives in party dresses, while the Salute was delayed for hours and finally presented to a small group of Senators.

Republicans apparently considered the decision to pass the bill at midnight Oct. 7 the final straw. Cramer, ranking GOP member of the Public Works Committee, charged that the Committee could have written a "good bill" but because of intensive "arm-twisting" by the White House it "was not given an opportunity to work its will...so we are trying to do it on the floor of the House." Defeated on repeated efforts to amend the bill, the protesting minority forced time-consuming teller votes on several amendments. Charged with dilatory tactics, Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford (R Mich.) retorted that "there were no dilatory tactics begun by the leadership on this side of the aisle until there was an arbitrary decision on that side of the aisle to close off debate, to ramrod this legislation through without ample debate and proper consideration."

Following are the major House committee and floor changes in S 2084:

OUTDOOR ADVERTISING

Committee Changes. The Committee deleted two of the provisions added on the Senate floor. One authorized the Secretary to suspend withholding of funds from a state if necessary in the public interest. The other banned promotional signs of the Federal Government. The Committee revised the judicial review provision to spell out in detail the procedures to be followed before funds could be withheld for failure to comply with junkyard or billboard control requirements.

Floor Action. The House accepted three amendments to the billboard section. One, by Jim Wright (D Texas), reinstated the Senate provision allowing the Secretary to suspend withholding of funds.

The two other amendments affected the types and locations of advertising allowed under the bill. One, by Thomas N. Downing (D Va.), allowed official signs and notices pertaining to natural wonders, scenic and historical attractions. The other, by J. Russell Tuten (D Ga.), stipulated that the size, lighting and spacing of billboards must be consistent with customary use and made it clear that the states' zoning of areas for commercial and industrial purposes would be acceptable for purposes of the bill. Tuten said his amendment would spell out the intent of the Secretary, expressed in a Sept. 14 letter, to administer the provisions in this manner. (See box)

Cramer's recommittal motion (above) was designed to spell out this intent in regard to the junkyard provisions as well. He said he was "not accustomed to legislating according to executive letter," and the fact that the Secretary opposed including these provisions in the bill "clearly indicates to me that there is no intention to do what they say they will do in their letter." The House defeated five amendment proposals by Cramer to this section. The closest vote came on a proposal to eliminate the necessity for agreement between the Secretary and the states on designation of unzoned areas in which advertising would be permitted, leaving this authority solely to the states (rejected on a 113-145 teller vote).

Assurances on Billboards, Zoning

Secretary of Commerce Connor, in a Sept. 14 letter to the House Subcommittee on Roads, said that standards for billboards in commercial and industrial areas, zoned or unzoned, would be developed only after full consultation with the states, private business and the public. "It is the intention of the Administration that the regulations, insofar as they are consistent with the purposes of this Act, shall be helpful to the advertising industry," he said, and that standards on size would, as far as possible, be "consistent with standard size billboards in customary use."

He said that in reviewing a state's definition of areas used, but not zoned, for commercial or industrial activities, the Bureau of Public Roads would look for consistency with the standards the state used for zoning such areas.

JUNKYARDS

Committee Changes. As in the case of billboards, the Committee deleted the provision added on the Senate floor which permitted the Secretary to suspend the withholding of funds from states. The Committee also eliminated the Senate's requirement that junkyard owners pay the first $1,500 of the costs of landscaping and screening their junkyards (but not of removing them). The Committee authorized federal payment of 75 percent of the full costs. It added a requirement that the Secretary must approve a state's determination of unzoned industrial areas in which junkyards would be permitted. The Committee also included a statement that states were not prohibited from establishing stricter limits on junkyards than those established in the bill.

Floor Action. The only floor amendment adopted to this section reinstated the Secretary's authority to suspend withholding of funds.

The House again rejected several amendments by Rep. Cramer, including proposals to require federal payment of 75 percent of the costs if states used their police powers to prevent junkyards and to prohibit use of federal funds to relocate junkyards unless the new location was within an area suitable under the provisions of the bill.

HIGHWAY LANDSCAPING

Committee Changes. The Committee added authority for use of funds appropriated to a state for landscaping and scenic development for acquisition and development of publicly owned and controlled rest and recreation areas and sanitary and other facilities reasonably necessary to accommodate the traveling public.

Floor Action. The House adopted on a 140-135 teller vote an amendment by John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) to allow use of these landscaping funds within the highway right-of-way (as well as adjacent to it).

OTHER PROVISIONS

Committee Changes. The Senate's $5 million authorization for research on methods of disposing of scrapped motor vehicles was deleted. The Committee, however, authorized $5 million for administrative expenses in carrying out the Act. It also required that the Secretary of Commerce hold public hearings in each state before drawing up standards and regulations on advertising and junkyard controls. It added a stipulation that the bill did not authorize use of eminent domain to acquire any dwelling.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Oct. 7 -- Jim Wright (D Texas) -- Reinsert Senate provision giving the Secretary of Commerce discretion on the withholding of funds from states not complying with billboard control regulations. Voice vote.

J. Russell Tuten (D Ga.) -- Revise the billboard control provisions to stipulate that in commercial and industrial zones, requirements for size, lighting and spacing of signs would be consistent with customary use; that the states would have full authority to zone areas for commercial and industrial purposes and that the states' actions would be accepted for purposes of the bill. Standing, 122-112.

Thomas N. Downing (D Va.) -- Include in the outdoor advertising permissible on Interstate and primary highways official signs pertaining to natural wonders, scenic and historical attractions. Standing, 161-4.

Wright -- Reinsert Senate provision giving the Secretary discretion on the withholding of funds from states not complying with the junkyard control regulations. Voice.

John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) -- Permit states to use the federal funds provided by the bill for landscaping and roadside development within the highway right-of-way (as well as adjacent to it). Standing, 111-102; teller, 140-135.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Oct. 7 -- William C. Cramer (R Fla.) substitute for pending Wright amendment (above) -- Permit the Secretary of Commerce to suspend the withholding of funds from any state that could show it was unable to control outdoor advertising and if it were in the public interest. Standing vote, 42-105; teller, 49-121.

Cramer -- Permit outdoor advertising in areas zoned industrial or commercial by the states or in unzoned areas designated by the state legislatures to be used for industrial or commercial activities, in accordance with the state's general zoning criteria. (This would have replaced the bill's provisions for cooperation between the Secretary of Commerce and the states in establishing standards for outdoor advertising and determining unzoned areas in which advertising would be permitted.) Standing, 95-107; teller, 113-145.

Cramer -- Revise the Tuten amendment (above) to stipulate also that states would have full authority to determine what unzoned areas were used or intended for commercial or industrial use. Standing, 99-124; teller, 115-157.

Samuel S. Stratton (D N.Y.) substitute for pending Downing amendment (above) -- Include in the outdoor advertising permissible under the Act private or official signs relating to natural wonders and historic sites. Standing 71-135; teller, 84-149.

Cramer -- Require federal payment of 75 percent of the costs of state acquisition, through purchase or condemnation, of the right to advertise or regulate advertising in order to implement the advertising control regulations. Standing, 73-127; teller, 83-142.

Richard H. Ichord (D Mo.) -- In lieu of the bill's advertising provisions, permit the states to designate "control areas" along at least 90 percent of the Interstate and primary systems outside the zoned and unzoned commercial and industrial areas, and prohibit signs (except those permitted under the Act) in at least 75 percent of these areas. Accepted by standing vote, 119-111; rejected by teller, 140-153.

Robert Dole (R Kan.) -- Replace the word "Secretary" (of Commerce) throughout the bill with "Lady Bird" (Mrs. Johnson). Voice.

Robert C. McEwen (R N.Y.) -- Add to the signs allowed under the Act signs for camping, eating, entertainment or car service of interest to the traveling public, if they meet specified conditions. Standing, 74-134; teller, 77-145.

Cramer -- Specify that the Secretary was authorized to withhold only Interstate and primary road funds for a state's failure to comply with outdoor advertising controls. Standing, 64-152; teller, 71-149.

Thomas M. Pelly (R Wash.) -- In compensating billboard owners, require determination of compensation as of the date the billboard became nonconforming, deduct for delay in removing the sign and require federal payment of 100 percent of compensation for removal of billboards required under stricter state laws. Teller, 52-108.

Cramer substitute for second Wright amendment (above) -- Permit the Secretary of Commerce to suspend the withholding of funds from any state that could show it was unable to control junkyards and if it were in the public interest. Teller, 65-118.

Cramer -- Require federal payment of 75 percent of the costs of state acquisition, by purchase or condemnation, of the right to prevent or control junkyards in areas adjacent to Interstate or primary highways. Teller, 49-121.

Cramer -- Prohibit use of any federal funds to cover costs of junkyard relocation unless the new location was in an industrial, non-residential or non-scenic area and was either more than 1,000 feet from the nearest right-of-way line or was not visible from the main nearby federal-aid highway. Voice.

Cramer -- Specify that the Secretary was authorized to withhold only Interstate and primary road funds for a state's failure to comply with junkyard controls. Teller, 54-111.

Joe D. Waggonner Jr. (D La.) -- Delay by one year, to Jan. 10, 1968, the report by the Secretary of Commerce on standards, criteria, rules and regulations to be applied in carrying out the billboard and junkyard control provisions and make them effective automatically unless Congress disapproved within 45 days. Voice.

John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- Require that plans for highway projects be submitted to the Secretary of the Interior for his advice on whether they interfere with the conservation of fish and wildlife and recreation resources in the area. Standing, 92-141; teller, 104-147.

Neal Smith (D Iowa) -- Permit compensation to be paid landowners who gave easements to advertisers but did not actually have signs erected on their property. Voice.

Final Action

The Senate Oct. 13 agreed by voice vote to the House amendments to S 2084, clearing the bill for the President's signature.

HIGHWAY FUNDS AUTHORIZED FOR ONE YEAR

S J Res 81 -- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 187) May 13, 1965.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote May 14.
- Reported, amended, by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 681) July 26.
- Passed by the House, amended, by a 313-11 roll-call vote Aug. 2. (See p. 984)
- Conference report (H Rept 778) agreed to by the House and Senate by voice votes Aug. 12.

PL 89-139 -- Signed into law Aug. 28.

Congress in 1965 enacted temporary, one-year legislation to continue financing of the nation's Interstate Highway System. However, it took no action on President Johnson's proposals to meet the increasing costs of the program by extending the System's completion date and enacting additional user taxes on trucks.

Congress passed a bill (S J Res 81) which authorized apportionment among the states in fiscal 1967 of funds for the Interstate System. Another bill (HR 6548) to authorize apportionment for fiscal 1967-69 never emerged from committee because of inadequate tax revenues to pay rising costs of the System. The System is financed by taxes on highway users which go into the Highway Trust Fund. The major developments were as follows.

The Commerce Department Jan. 13 sent to Congress, as required by law, a revised cost estimate for completion of the 41,000-mile Interstate Highway System by 1972. The Department's report said that the cost had increased from $41 billion in 1961 to $46.8 billion, due primarily to improved design standards and higher costs of land acquisition and road construction. The report also recommended the method of apportioning funds authorized for the System among the states in fiscal 1967-69.

Congress was required by law to approve the Department's estimate before funds could be apportioned. However, the law also prohibited the Highway Trust Fund from operating at a deficit. Therefore, until additional revenues were provided to pay the additional $5 billion federal share of the System's increased costs, Congress could not approve the Department's cost estimate.

In order to meet the increased costs, President Johnson proposed (1) extending the completion date of the System by five months, from Sept. 30, 1972, until Feb. 28, 1973, and (2) imposing additional user taxes on heavy trucks. Congress did not take action on these proposals during 1965.

HR 6548 approved the Department's 1965 cost estimate, authorized apportionment of funds, and increased the existing highway construction appropriations authorization to cover the $5 billion increase in the federal share of the System's higher costs. At the end of 1965, the bill remained in the House Ways and Means Committee.

In order to continue construction of the System, Congress passed S J Res 81 which simply authorized apportionment of funds in fiscal 1967 on the basis of revenues available under existing taxes. However, in addition to the simple, one-year highway authorization, S J Res 81 contained a highway safety amendment added in the House under the sponsorship of John F. Baldwin (R Calif.). As finally approved, the amendment specified that each state "should" have a highway safety program, approved by the Secretary of Commerce, in operation by the end of 1967. The amendment specified that a program "should" be in accordance with standards set by the Secretary and thereby in effect authorized the Secretary to devise and promulgate such standards. They were to include vehicle safety, highway design and other matters (see provisions, below).

Although little noted at the time, the amendment took on increasing importance in 1966 when the Johnson Administration proposed a variety of legislation to improve highway and automobile safety and reduce traffic deaths. Government officials referred frequently to the amendment as the forerunner of the Administration's 1966 proposals. Lowell K. Bridwell, Deputy Under Secretary for Transportation in the Commerce Department, said in a speech in March 1966, "Congress registered its intent (on traffic safety) last session with the enactment of the Baldwin amendment which aims at assuring the establishment of effective traffic safety programs in all the states within two years." He said the Administration's 1966 proposals "represent a logical next step..."

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, S J Res 81:

Increased the amount of funds authorized to be appropriated from the Highway Trust Fund for the Interstate Highway System in fiscal 1967 from the existing $2.9 billion to $3 billion.

Authorized the Secretary of Commerce to apportion the fiscal 1967 funds among the states, but reserved the right to disapprove the Secretary's estimate of the cost of completing the Interstate System, which was submitted to Congress Jan. 13, 1965, pending Congressional action to provide additional revenues to meet the increased costs of the program that were indicated in the January estimate.

Stated the sense of Congress that the Commerce Department report to Congress in January 1968 and every two years thereafter on future U.S. highway needs.

Interstate Highway Authorizations

The table below shows the federal funds authorized for the Interstate Highway System (not including funds authorized for the System prior to 1956). HR 6548, which was not enacted in 1965, provided the additional authorization for the federal share of the increased construction costs of the System as estimated by the Commerce Department in January, 1965. S J Res 81, enacted as a temporary measure in lieu of HR 6548 when Congress failed to provide additional user tax revenues required by HR 6548, authorized an additional $100 million applicable only to fiscal 1967.

Fiscal years	Existing Law[1]	HR 6548	S J Res 81
1957-66	$21,900,000,000	$21,900,000,000	$21,900,000,000
1967	2,900,000,000	4,000,000,000	3,000,000,000
1968	3,000,000,000	4,000,000,000	3,000,000,000
1969	3,000,000,000	4,000,000,000	3,000,000,000
1970	3,000,000,000	4,000,000,000	3,000,000,000
1971	2,885,000,000	3,785,000,000	2,885,000,000
Total	$36,685,000,000	$41,685,000,000	$36,785,000,000

1 Federal Aid Highway Act of 1961.

Specified that each state, after Dec. 31, 1967, "should" have a highway safety program approved by the Secretary of Commerce. Specified that a safety program "should" be in accordance with uniform standards developed and approved by the Secretary and "should" include, among other things, provisions for an effective accident records system, and measures calculated to improve driver performance, vehicle safety, highway design and maintenance, traffic control and traffic surveillance to detect high accident locations. (The Highway Beautification Act -- PL 89-285 -- authorized $500,000 in appropriations to enable the Secretary to formulate standards and otherwise implement this provision.)

Background

REFERENCES -- Congress and the Nation, p. 524; 1956 Almanac p. 398; 1959 Almanac p. 285; 1961 Almanac p. 433.

Authorizations for federal-aid highway programs were originally made from general revenues of the Treasury. Although there were no clear Congressional guidelines, authorizations were usually made in amounts equal to the revenues collected by the Treasury from certain highway user taxes, such as those on motor fuels, tires and truck weights.

Congress in 1956 established a new method of financing -- the Highway Trust Fund -- when it fully authorized the 41,000-mile Interstate Highway building program. (The National System of Interstate and Defense Highways had originally been designated in 1944, but was not launched as a full-scale program with substantial federal financing until 1956.) Certain specific highway user taxes were to be fed into the Trust Fund for financing of the program, and the operation of the Fund was put outside the regular federal budget.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1956 and the Highway Revenue Act of 1956 (Titles I and II, respectively, of HR 10660 -- PL 84-627) authorized the biggest road-building program in U.S. history -- 41,000 miles of interstate highways costing an estimated $31 billion, with the Federal Government paying 90 percent of the total cost. The completion target date was 1972.

To finance the highway building program, PL 84-627 provided new or increased taxes, earmarked for the Highway Trust Fund, on the following items, scheduled to yield an estimated $14.8 billion over a 16-year period, through fiscal 1972: gasoline, diesel and special motor fuel taxes, excluding local transit vehicles; tire taxes; tire camelback (retread rubber); manufacturers' tax on trucks, buses and truck trailers; and taxes by weight on trucks and buses, excluding local transit vehicles, weighing over 26,000 pounds.

In addition, PL 84-627 transferred the income from several taxes from the Treasury's general fund to the Highway Trust Fund, including an existing 9-cent-a-pound tax on inner tubes and one-half of the 10-percent tax on the manufacturers' price of trucks, buses and trailers.

The law provided that the Highway Trust Fund could not operate at a deficit at any time, and stipulated that if the Secretary of the Treasury determined that payment of the full amounts apportioned to the states would create a deficit, the Secretary of Commerce was to reduce apportionments so that obligations could be paid as they came due.

LATER CHANGES

Subsequent to passage of the 1956 Act, Congress made several changes in the taxes that were diverted to the Highway Trust Fund. These amendments were enacted as estimates of the cost of the Interstate Highway System steadily rose to the 1961 estimate of $41 billion. Thus, in 1959 Congress passed a law (PL 86-242) which, among other things, added more revenue to the Fund by providing a temporary 1-cent-a-gallon increase (from 3 to 4 cents, for the period Oct. 1, 1959-June 30, 1961) in the federal tax on gasoline, diesel and special motor fuels. In addition, for the three fiscal years 1962-64, 5 percentage points of the federal excise tax on automobiles and 5 percentage points of the tax on auto parts and accessories were diverted from the Treasury's general fund to the Highway Trust Fund.

In 1961, at the request of President Kennedy, Congress passed a bill (HR 6713 --PL 87-61) providing additional revenue for the highway program. It continued the federal taxes on gasoline, diesel and special motor fuels at 4 cents a gallon through Oct. 1, 1972, and increased taxes on the following major items through the same date: tires -- 10 cents a pound (up from 8 cents); inner tubes -- 10 cents a pound (up from 9 cents); camelback (retreads) -- 5 cents a pound (up from 3 cents); weight taxes on trucks and buses, excluding local transit vehicles, weighing over 26,000 pounds -- $3 a thousand pounds (up from $1.50).

The law also transferred an additional 5 percentage points (to include the full 10 percent) of the federal excise on the manufacturers' price of trucks, buses and trailers from the Treasury's general fund to the Highway Trust Fund for the period July 1, 1962-Oct. 1, 1972, and repealed a provision of existing law that transferred 5 percentage points of the taxes on the manufacturers' price of automobiles, parts and accessories to the Trust Fund during fiscal years 1962-64.

INTERSTATE HIGHWAY COST ESTIMATE

The Commerce Department Jan. 13, 1965, transmitted to Congress a report outlining a revised cost estimate for the 41,000-mile National Defense and Interstate Highway System.

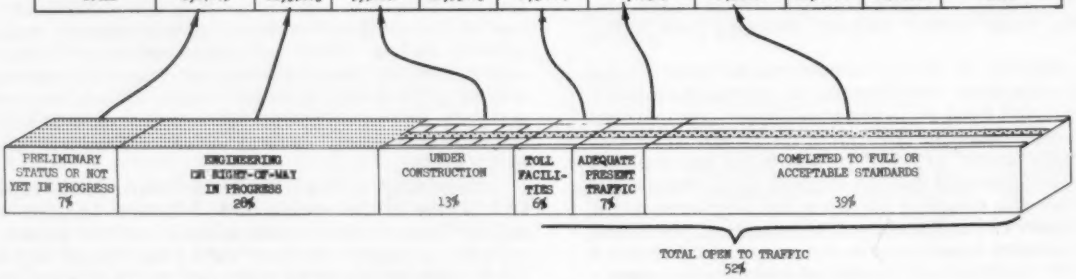
The cost estimate of the nationwide highway network had been placed at $41 billion in 1961. Congress had authorized expenditure of $37 billion as the federal share. The 1965 revised cost estimate was $46.8 billion -- a $5.8 billion increase. (This was composed of $5.6 billion attributable to highway construction and $200 million due to an increase in state highway planning and research, both a direct percentage of the total federal share of the estimate.) The federal share of the increase was to be $5 billion. In order to meet the new cost estimate, therefore, Congress had to authorize a $5 billion increase in the total federal share -- from $37 billion to $42 billion.

According to the Commerce Department report, $3.6 billion of the estimated $5.8 billion increase was due to "improvements incorporated into the system to provide increased service, safety and longer highway life." Approximately $2 billion of the increased costs resulted from higher costs for land acquisition, preliminary engineering and construction work. The remain-

THE NATIONAL SYSTEM OF INTERSTATE AND DEFENSE HIGHWAYS

IMPROVEMENT STATUS OF SYSTEM MILEAGE AS OF JAN 1, 1966

STATE	PRELIMINARY STATUS OR NOT YET IN PROGRESS 1/	WORK IN PROGRESS			OPEN TO TRAFFIC				TOTAL DESIGNATED SYSTEM MILEAGE	STATE
		ENGINEERING OR RIGHT-OF WAY	UNDER CONSTRUCTION	TOTAL UNDER WAY	TOLL FACILITIES	IMPROVED TO STANDARDS ADEQUATE FOR PRESENT TRAFFIC	COMPLETED TO FULL OR ACCEPTABLE STANDARDS	TOTAL OPEN TO TRAFFIC
Alabama	113.0	182.2	232.9	415.1	-	119.1	226.9	346.0	874.1	Alabama
Alaska	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	Alaska
Arizona	40.1	342.3	138.9	481.2	-	236.2	409.0	645.2	1,166.5	Arizona
Arkansas	13.8	234.6	94.2	328.8	-	13.0	164.7	177.7	520.3	Arkansas
California	-	837.6	334.7	1,172.3	10.2	329.4	653.2	992.8	2,165.1	California
Colorado	162.0	170.8	121.2	292.0	-	131.7	360.2	491.9	945.9	Colorado
Connecticut	-	35.9	25.9	61.8	16.0	35.8	182.0	233.8	295.6	Connecticut
Delaware	-	10.9	12.8	23.7	14.3	0.6	2.0	16.9	40.6	Delaware
Florida	342.6	117.9	219.4	337.3	45.0	-	426.5	471.5	1,151.4	Florida
Georgia	3.9	409.6	214.6	624.2	-	53.7	423.5	477.2	1,105.3	Georgia
Hawaii	8.2	28.4	8.0	36.4	-	3.0	1.0	4.0	48.6	Hawaii
Idaho	2.1	226.4	53.7	280.1	-	112.4	214.1	326.5	608.7	Idaho
Illinois	51.3	612.1	80.7	692.8	155.4	150.7	581.4	887.5	1,631.6	Illinois
Indiana	-	432.1	127.7	559.8	156.9	19.2	380.1	556.2	1,110.0	Indiana
Iowa	72.2	175.0	85.0	260.0	3.5	4.8	368.4	376.7	708.9	Iowa
Kansas	.8	143.9	69.3	213.2	187.0	25.9	372.1	585.0	799.0	Kansas
Kentucky	13.3	351.2	64.9	416.1	39.2	7.8	256.9	303.9	733.3	Kentucky
Louisiana	6.4	284.2	160.5	444.7	-	-	216.2	216.2	667.3	Louisiana
Maine	1.7	60.5	59.5	120.0	59.3	3.3	127.7	190.3	312.0	Maine
Maryland	25.9	49.3	28.1	77.4	52.9	93.6	104.8	251.3	354.6	Maryland
Massachusetts	4.3	88.6	46.2	134.8	133.8	31.5	151.1	316.4	455.5	Massachusetts
Michigan	11.3	217.0	64.2	281.2	4.9	5.0	779.4	789.3	1,081.8	Michigan
Minnesota	8.0	432.0	184.4	616.4	-	52.8	223.7	276.5	900.9	Minnesota
Mississippi	-	138.2	257.6	395.8	-	31.4	250.8	282.2	678.0	Mississippi
Missouri	11.2	328.1	74.3	402.4	3.0	155.0	548.0	706.0	1,119.6	Missouri
Montana	187.9	451.9	129.4	581.3	-	35.9	372.3	408.2	1,177.4	Montana
Nebraska	-	178.7	58.1	236.8	0.3	12.9	228.1	241.3	478.1	Nebraska
Nevada	-	187.7	88.9	276.6	-	3.6	254.5	258.1	534.7	Nevada
New Hampshire	49.2	18.3	10.9	29.2	22.0	3.5	110.1	135.6	214.0	New Hampshire
New Jersey	69.5	107.1	45.1	152.2	46.3	49.3	56.0	151.6	373.3	New Jersey
New Mexico	107.6	308.2	69.8	378.0	-	82.6	434.8	517.4	1,003.0	New Mexico
New York	35.0	111.5	178.9	290.4	499.5	49.2	360.2	908.9	1,234.3	New York
North Carolina	113.1	166.4	94.7	261.1	-	35.7	359.6	395.3	769.5	North Carolina
North Dakota	78.8	97.2	68.2	165.4	-	21.3	305.1	326.4	570.6	North Dakota
Ohio	42.7	340.1	194.9	535.0	205.9	35.8	706.8	948.5	1,526.2	Ohio
Oklahoma	-	204.8	43.9	248.7	174.0	14.5	358.0	546.5	795.2	Oklahoma
Oregon	50.0	65.3	27.5	92.8	0.8	100.3	487.2	588.3	731.1	Oregon
Pennsylvania	42.6	375.9	238.9	614.8	361.7	-	565.5	927.2	1,584.6	Pennsylvania
Rhode Island	-	29.0	9.7	38.7	-	0.3	32.2	32.5	71.2	Rhode Island
South Carolina	-	174.5	158.3	332.8	-	12.8	333.1	345.9	678.7	South Carolina
South Dakota	-	257.8	87.1	344.9	-	56.6	277.7	334.3	679.2	South Dakota
Tennessee	62.6	328.9	249.6	578.5	-	123.0	285.1	408.1	1,049.2	Tennessee
Texas	272.2	715.5	429.5	1,145.0	-	323.0	1,283.6	1,606.6	3,023.8	Texas
Utah	265.1	322.8	159.6	482.4	-	28.1	158.9	187.0	934.5	Utah
Vermont	-	174.0	37.3	211.3	-	-	109.3	109.3	320.6	Vermont
Virginia	35.9	350.5	177.6	528.1	38.6	42.1	414.4	495.1	1,059.1	Virginia
Washington	78.7	172.7	91.8	264.5	0.6	206.9	174.2	381.7	724.9	Washington
West Virginia	142.1	138.5	47.1	185.6	87.4	-	101.4	188.8	516.5	West Virginia
Wisconsin	-	101.9	50.2	152.1	-	2.0	304.5	306.5	458.6	Wisconsin
Wyoming	269.8	63.3	74.0	137.3	-	35.7	469.1	504.8	911.9	Wyoming
Dist. of Col.	14.1	5.0	0.3	5.3	-	2.9	7.0	9.9	29.3	Dist. of Col.
Pending	2/ 69.9	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	2/ 69.9	Pending
Total	2,878.9	11,356.3	5,580.0	16,936.3	2,318.5	2,893.9	15,972.4	21,184.8	41,000.0	Total



1/ Location studies and public hearings have been undertaken on many portions of the mileage in this column.
2/ Includes routes for which the final locations have not yet been determined.

ing $200 million in added costs resulted from revised "estimates for research and administration."

Although the report did not recommend ways of financing the added costs, it did note that the actual cost increase to the Federal Government would be only about $3.4 billion, since receipts from taxes currently levied to finance the federal share of the System were expected to increase with the proliferation of passenger cars and motor carriers.

The cost estimate was necessary as a basis for apportioning federal highway funds among the states in fiscal 1967, 1968 and 1969. The 1965 estimate was the third submitted to Congress. The first was submitted in January 1958 and provided the basis for apportioning funds in fiscal 1960, 1961 and 1962. The second estimate was submitted in January 1961 and covered fiscal 1963, 1964, 1965 and 1966. These estimates, which were the same, put the cost at $41 billion, of which $37 billion was the estimated federal share. Later estimates were to be submitted in 1968 and 1969.

HIGHWAY USER TAX PROPOSALS

President Johnson proposed to pay the increased costs of the Interstate Highway System (see above) by imposing additional user taxes on trucks and by extending the completion date of the System. Except for the transfer into the Highway Trust Fund of relatively small amounts of existing user tax revenues, Congress did not provide the additional financing necessary to meet the increased costs of constructing the Interstate System.

The need for additional highway revenues was noted by President Johnson in his Jan. 25 Budget Message. He said, "The estimated cost of completing the Interstate Highway System -- which is financed by highway user taxes -- has recently been increased by $5.8 billion. To avoid serious delay in completing the system, while remaining on a pay-as-you-go basis, I will include in my excise tax proposal specific recommendations for increasing certain highway user charges." (See text p. 1351)

The President's excise tax message was sent to Congress May 17. (See text p. 1404)

Mr. Johnson said that of the additional $5.8 billion in costs, $5 billion was to be paid by the Federal Government through the Highway Trust Fund. He said that existing user taxes would provide "almost" $2 billion of the increased cost. The other $3 billion was to be provided by two methods. First, he proposed extending the completion date of the System by five months, from Sept. 30, 1972, to Feb. 28, 1973; he said this would cover "most" of the extra cost. Secondly, he proposed enactment of additional user taxes on heavy trucks to produce an estimated $206 million annually until 1973. Specifically, he recommended: (1) an increase in the diesel fuel tax from 4 to 7 cents per gallon to produce $112 million annually; (2) an increase in the truck tax from $3 to $5 per thousand pounds on trucks having a taxable gross weight of at least 26,000 pounds to produce $70 million, and (3) an increase in the tax on tread rubber from 5 to 10 cents per pound to produce $24 million. Mr. Johnson said that federal highway studies "clearly show that heavy trucks are not paying fully for the additional cost of heavier pavement and other design features needed to carry them." At the same time, the President promised to recommend that the size and weight limits on trucks using Interstate highways be increased "as soon as just and appropriate user charges are enacted." The President also recommended that Congress approve the revised Interstate Highway cost estimate submitted by the Commerce Department in January and authorize the additional appropriations necessary to meet the higher cost.

Congress did not enact the President's user tax proposals and, therefore, could not approve the Commerce Department's revised cost estimate. However, in passing a bill providing many of Mr. Johnson's other excise tax requests, Congress transferred $70 million in highway user taxes from general revenues to the Highway Trust Fund. These were levies on truck parts and accessories ($20 million) and on lubricating oil used by highway motor vehicles ($50 million). (See story p. 835)

HIGHWAY FUNDS APPORTIONMENT (HR 6548)

Legislation was introduced in 1965 to apportion funds for the Interstate Highway System for a three-year period and to authorize increased appropriations to meet the expanded costs of the System. But the bill (HR 6548) was not reported because Congress did not act on the President's user tax proposals to pay the increased highway costs.

HR 6548 did two things. First, it gave Congressional approval to the Commerce Department's revised cost estimate for the Interstate System, which was sent to Congress in January, as the basis for apportioning federal funds for the System during fiscal 1967, 1968 and 1969. Secondly, it increased the amounts authorized to be appropriated for the System by $5 billion between fiscal 1967 and 1971. This was the federal share of the increased cost of completing the System (see above).

The House Public Works Committee approved HR 6548 June 24 and referred it to the Ways and Means Committee for review of its financial provisions. No further action was taken on it during 1965. (See below for GOP criticism of lack of action on the bill.)

ACTION ON S J RES 81

Senate

The Senate Public Works Committee May 13 reported a bill (S J Res 81) authorizing apportionment among the states in fiscal 1967 of funds for the Interstate Highway System. The Committee held hearings March 30 and 31 on the revised Interstate cost estimate submitted by the Commerce Department in January.

In its report (S Rept 187), the Committee said the 1965 estimate did not contain figures on the final cost of completing the system. The report said the construction costs would likely rise another $2.5 billion and the 1965 estimate did not include the cost of the Administration's highway beautification program. The report said that the Committee "thus infers" that the final cost of the System would be $3 billion higher than the estimate submitted to Congress in 1965. "The Committee has, therefore, withheld judgment on approval of the 1965 cost estimate" and instead approved a one-year apportionment in S J Res 81, the report said.

S J Res 81 authorized apportionment of $2.9 billion to the states for fiscal 1967. The Committee said it would resume consideration of the 1965 cost estimate and apportionment factors for fiscal 1968 and 1969 when Congress determined how to meet the anticipated deficit in the Highway Trust Fund. (Continued on next page)

The Senate May 14 passed S J Res 81 by voice vote and sent it to the House.

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

HELD HEARINGS -- March 23 and 24 on HR 6548 and similar legislation to approve the Commerce Department's 1965 revised cost estimate of the Interstate Highway System and authorize apportionment of funds among the states in fiscal 1967-69.

ACTION -- July 26 reported (H Rept 681) S J Res 81 with amendments. The report said that the Committee could not "at this time approve the new cost estimate" for the System because no action had been taken to provide the revenues necessary to meet the increased costs. The report said that S J Res 81 "will provide the basic amount needed for continued highway construction" so that the federal-aid highway program "may continue and not be brought to an abrupt halt."

The Committee approved several amendments to S J Res 81. They were:

Authorized Appropriations. The Committee increased the amount authorized to be appropriated for the System in fiscal 1967 from $2.9 billion to $3 billion. This was done on the basis of information from the Bureau of Public Roads that revenues available from the Highway Trust Fund under existing user taxes would be $100 million higher than previously estimated.

Baldwin Safety Amendment. The Committee adopted an amendment, sponsored by John F. Baldwin (R Calif.), which required a state to have a highway safety program in effect by Dec. 31, 1967, in order to qualify for any federal-aid highway funds, including those for the Interstate System. The amendment required that a state's program be approved by the Secretary of Commerce and be in accordance with uniform standards approved by the Secretary. Funds withheld from a state were to be distributed among other states.

Future Highway Needs. The Committee also amended the bill to direct the Secretary of Commerce to make a study of the needs of the Federal-Aid Highway System, including the Interstate System, after 1972, and to report to Congress by Jan. 1, 1967. The report noted that federal highway officials had told the Committee that a study could cover extension or improvement of the Interstate System, possible development of Interstate highways different from those currently being constructed, special urban highway problems, revision of the federal-aid primary and secondary classification systems, the relation between highway planning and technological developments, and highway financing. Federal officials also indicated that the cost of the study could be absorbed in existing budgets.

Supplemental Views. Republican members of the Committee (except for James C. Cleveland, N.H., who did not sign the views) said they supported S J Res 81 as a "stopgap" measure, but "with a deep sense of disappointment" because it did not provide the extra funds necessary to complete the Interstate System by 1972. They said S J Res 81 "ignores the latest cost estimate." They said that by 1972 the System would be $4.9 billion short of completion.

"The Administration is evidently more interested in promoting 'make work' programs, 'pork barrel' projects and vote-getting giveaway schemes, than it is in continuing a program of proven social, economic, lifesaving, and defense benefits to the nation," they said.

FLOOR ACTION. The House Aug. 2 passed S J Res 81 by a 313-11 roll-call vote after adopting the committee amendments. (For voting, see page 984)

During debate, William C. Cramer (R Fla.), ranking Republican member of the House Public Works Committee, expressed the hope that the House Ways and Means Committee would take action to provide for an increase in revenues to the Highway Trust Fund.

Conference Action

The House and Senate Aug. 12 by voice votes adopted the conference report (H Rept 778) on S J Res 81.

Conferees on the bill altered a House amendment which required a state to have a federally approved highway safety program by Dec. 31, 1967, in order to continue receiving federal highway funds. The conference bill included wording which said that each state "should" have a federally approved safety program by Dec. 31, 1967.

During brief House discussion of the report, John F. Baldwin (R Calif.), a participant in the conference, said Senate conferees believed that cutting off federal funds "might be too drastic" a penalty. John C. Kluczynski (D Ill.), also a conferee, said the Public Works Committee would review state highway safety programs in the future and that legislation would be introduced if needed.

Conferees also stated the "sense of Congress" that the Bureau of Public Roads provide estimates to Congress in January 1968 and every two years thereafter about future U.S. highway needs. The House had added to the Senate bill a provision for a "comprehensive study" of the needs of the federal-aid highway system after 1972.

Conferees accepted the House's $100 million increase in the amount authorized under existing law for apportionment among the states in fiscal 1967 for the Interstate System.

Both Senate and House bills permitted apportionment among the states of amounts authorized for the highway program; the House bill, in addition, increased the authorized amounts and included the sections on safety and future highway needs.

FUNDS FOR BALDWIN SAFETY AMENDMENT

S J Res 81 as signed into law included a provision sponsored by Rep. John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) which stated that each state "should" have a highway safety program by the end of 1967. The provision assigned to the Secretary of Commerce responsibility for developing and promulgating standards for the safety programs. (See details under House action and provisions, above.) However, S J Res 81 did not authorize appropriations to permit the Secretary to begin work on the standards. This oversight was corrected by including a provision in the Highway Beautification Act (S 2084 -- PL 89-285) authorizing $500,000 in appropriations for the traffic safety program. (See story p. 724)

Near the end of the session, the Administration requested $290,000 in supplemental appropriations for fiscal 1966 to begin work on the traffic safety program. Congress appropriated the full request in the General Supplemental Appropriations Bill, Fiscal 1966 (HR 11588), which was cleared Oct. 21. (See story p. 182)

MAJOR 1965 ACTIONS ON WATER LEGISLATION

Congress completed action in 1965 on an unusually large number of major bills dealing with water policy. It passed five Johnson Administration measures of broad national significance, plus numerous bills authorizing and funding specific water projects.

Of the five pieces of general legislation, three were aimed directly at solving one of the nation's most urgent natural resource problems--the need to assure an adequate supply of clean water for rapidly growing national needs of all types.

The three were the Water Quality Act, authorizing enforceable water purity standards to be set for all interstate waters, in order to combat pollution; the Water Resources Planning Act, providing for the creation of federal-state river basin planning commissions and giving statutory authority to the existing Federal Water Resources Council, with the over-all aim of maximizing existing water resources through coordinated development; and a bill stepping up the existing federal program of research on ways to convert salt water to sweet water and thus enlarge the water supply. Of these bills, the Water Quality Act was the most important; in fact, it was probably the single most important natural resource measure of any type enacted in 1965.

The other two general water bills passed in 1965 were the Federal Water Project Recreation Act, establishing, for the first time, a formal local cost-sharing requirement for recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement features of federal water projects built by the Army Engineers and Bureau of Reclamation; and a measure creating a new federal aid program for rural water supply and waste disposal systems.

Although it completed action on the five major general water bills described above, Congress failed to clear several other important general water measures. Bills to coordinate federal oceanography programs and to increase authorizations for the Small Reclamation Projects Act passed both chambers in different forms but went no further. A bill revising the 1964 Water Research Act passed the Senate but did not reach the House floor.

In the field of specific project authorizations, Congress completed the following actions in 1965: authorized three major new federal reclamation projects (Auburn-Folsom South, Garrison and Southern Nevada); passed an omnibus river-harbor-flood control authorization bill providing nearly $2 billion for new projects, and calling for a long-range plan to end further droughts in the Northeast; authorized $944 million in added Army Engineers spending for flood control and related work in 13 major river basins; appropriated funds to start construction of 62 Army Engineers and 7 Reclamation Bureau water projects that had been previously authorized; and changed some of the rules governing small watershed projects.

However, Congress did not take action on the perennial Central Arizona (Lower Colorado) and Nebraska Mid-State project proposals, and the House failed to complete action on four new reclamation authorizations passed by the Senate.

In related developments, the Public Land Law Review Commission, authorized early in 1964 (1964 Almanac p. 505), finally held its organization meeting July 14, 1965, and chose as chairman Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.); and President Johnson March 22 announced that the Colorado River salinity dispute with Mexico had been ended with an agreement to extend the drainage channel of the Wellton-Mohawk Irrigation District, Ariz., as far as Morelos Dam, Mexico. (For background, "Congress and the Nation," p. 805-6.)

Listed below are the major water bills considered by Congress in 1965, followed by a capsule summary of the bill or, if a detailed story on the bill appears elsewhere in this volume, by a page reference.

GENERAL LEGISLATION ENACTED

Water Quality Act. See p. 743

Water Resources Planning. See p. 759

Salt Water Conversion. See p. 764

Water Project Recreation. See p. 775

Rural Water Supply. See p. 138.

GENERAL LEGISLATION NOT COMPLETED

Oceanography Coordination. See p. 762.

Small Reclamation Projects. The Senate July 1 and the House Sept. 7 passed by voice votes different versions of a bill (S 602--S Rept 336, H Rept 894) increasing authorizations for the 1956 Small Reclamation Projects Act from $100 million to $200 million. Sponsors said all but $6 million of the initial $100 million was already used up. Under the Act, the Reclamation Bureau makes loans and grants to local groups wishing to build small reclamation projects (costing under $10 million) themselves.

The Senate version of S 602 contained two Administration-opposed provisions. One provided a new interest-rate formula for future loans made under the Act, the effect of which would be to reduce interest rates by one-half to 1 percent; the second raised the limit for federal aid to any one project from $5 million to $7.5 million. The Senate version also permitted federal advances for up to half the cost of project investigations, and exempted loan applications of less than $250,000 from certain requirements involving Congressional review. All these provisions were backed by the National Reclamation Assn., which claimed its Small Projects Committee actually drafted the initial Senate version of the bill.

The House version of the bill (based on HR 4851, a House bill reported Aug. 31) reduced the increase in the federal-aid limit to about $6 million, and dropped the interest-rate change, the advances for investigations and the exemptions from review. However, it added a provision extending the program to cover all 50 states (instead of just the 17 reclamation states). The bill did not go to conference in 1965. (A similar bill had died at the end of the 88th Congress; see 1964 Almanac p. 503)

Water Research. The Senate March 25 by voice vote passed an Administration-backed bill (S 22) raising to $5 million a year in fiscal 1966, and eventually to $10 million a year permanently, an existing $1 million annual authorization, provided by the Water Research Act of 1964, for Interior Department financial aid for water research. The bill also complied with a request by President Johnson, made when he signed the 1964 legislation, for elimination of a provision of the 1964 Act permitting the Interior and Insular Affairs Committees to veto any individual request for aid under the above authorization. There was no House action on S 22 or a similar House bill (HR 3606). (For background, see 1964 Almanac p. 507)

PROJECT AUTHORIZATIONS ENACTED

Auburn-Folsom South. The House June 16 and the Senate Aug. 20 passed by voice votes an Administration-backed bill (HR 485--H Rept 295, S Rept 312) authorizing the Interior Department's Reclamation Bureau to construct the Auburn-Folsom South unit of the Central Valley project, Calif., at a cost of $425 million. The President signed the bill Sept. 2 (PL 89-161). (For background, see 1964 Almanac p. 504.)

Of the total cost, $231,312,000 was for construction of the Auburn Dam and Reservoir and the remainder for supplemental facilities for irrigation, flood control, municipal and industrial water supply, recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement and a hydroelectric plant at Auburn Dam with an initial installed capacity of 240,000 kilowatts (which could be increased to 400,000 later if so authorized). The bill provided that the Interior Department should not build its own electric power transmission and distribution facilities to carry power from the dam to other areas if 50-year contracts with local public or private power transmission agencies could be obtained at less cost.

In supplemental views to the House report, Rep. John P. Saylor (R Pa.) supported the over-all bill but suggested two "basic flaws." He said the Interior Department had proposed "to extend the repayment period of existing Central Valley power units and use revenues from those units after they are paid out to provide financial assistance to the Auburn power facilities. This unilateral extension of the repayment period is...contrary to clearly established Congressional policies." In addition, he said that "far too many federal hydroelectric projects are being heavily subsidized by the nation's taxpayers by charging interest rates substantially below the cost to the Federal Government of obtaining the money." He said the bill failed to specify the interest rate to be charged, leaving it to the Administration to decide if below-cost interest rates would be applied.

Garrison Project. The House June 16 and the Senate July 22 passed by voice votes an Administration-endorsed bill (HR 237--H Rept 282, S Rept 470) authorizing the Reclamation Bureau to construct the Garrison diversion project, N.D., as part of the Missouri River Basin project. The President signed the bill Aug. 5 (PL 89-108).

The Garrison project, for which the bill authorized $207 million, would divert water from Garrison Dam to provide irrigation for 250,000 acres, plus municipal and industrial water supply for 14 towns and cities, fish and wildlife conservation and development, recreation and minor flood control benefits, but not electric power. The bulk of the cost, $198,578,000, was for irrigation.

The Garrison project had initially been authorized in the Flood Control Act of 1944, as amended. However, it had never been started, and, as a result of modifications in plans and also of 1964 legislation requiring reauthorization of all Missouri River Basin units not yet started, had to be reauthorized. (1964 Almanac p. 504)

A key provision of HR 237 as signed into law reduced from 3 percent to 2.5 percent the interest rates charged by the Government on the reimbursable costs of the power features of all Army Engineers hydroelectric plants in the Missouri River Basin Plan. The change was in line with a Dec. 17, 1963, recommendation of the Interior Department (which markets the power from these plants), and was designed--along with a slight increase in power rates which became effective in September 1965--to speed up repayment by power users of the capital costs of the hydroelectric plants. (Although interest rates would be reduced, actual power rates would not be, and the funds thus "saved" by reduction of the interest rates would be retained by the Government and counted as repayment of capital.) The ultimate aim of this provision was to pay off the capital costs of power features somewhat sooner than previously anticipated, so that power revenues could then be used to help pay off the costs of irrigation features of Missouri River Basin Plan units sooner than had been planned. The Department said that with this change, all the irrigation projects could be paid off in the usual 50-year repayment period.

Debate -- House sponsors said the project would permit more balanced agriculture and economic growth. Rep. Mark Andrews (R N.D.) said the water would help develop feed crops and consequently a livestock industry. He called the project "perfectly proper" because North Dakota gave up 548,000 acres for construction of the Garrison Reservoir "with a consequent loss of local tax revenue." The House report said the 2.5-percent interest rate on power features of Missouri River Basin Plan hydroelectric plants was the rate set for similar Engineers-built power systems in other areas at the time the Engineers built the Missouri Basin plants, and thus removed an inequity.

On the House floor, Odin Langen (R Minn.) objected to allotment of only one hour for debate, saying the bill was not being considered on its merits but was simply a pork barrel measure to be rushed through.

In minority views in the House report, Rep. John P. Saylor (Pa.) objected to establishment of the project because "even without interest, over a period of 60 years or more," only about $19 million of the irrigation costs could be repaid by water users and "the remainder will be charged against net power revenues that...are still no more than a gleam in the eye." He said "it makes no sense for the United States to be spending this sort of money on land that may grow alfalfa, oats, barley, flax, sugarbeets, potatoes and the like." Opposing the interest rate provision, Saylor said, "If it is now the desire of the Departments of the Interior and Army...to adopt subsidized interest rates, so be it. But then this subsidy should be recognized and called for what it is."

Southern Nevada Project. The Senate June 17 by voice vote passed a bill (S 32--S Rept 332) authorizing construction by the Reclamation Bureau of the Southern Nevada water project, at a cost of $81,003,000.

The House Oct. 7, by a 240-134 roll call, passed its own version of the bill (HR 2020--H Rept 1011), then substituted the provisions of its bill for those of S 32 and passed S 32 by voice vote. (For voting, see chart p. 1016)

The Senate Oct. 7 by voice vote agreed to the House amendments, and the President signed the bill Oct. 22 (PL 89-292). As enacted, the bill provided $81,003,000 for construction of the project entirely as a municipal and industrial water supply project, but with provision for inclusion of recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement features under the terms set forth in the 1965 Federal Water Project Recreation Act. When entirely completed, the project would permit diversion of 262,000-acre-feet of water from Lake Mead, the reservoir behind Hoover Dam on the Colorado River, to the populous area surrounding Las Vegas. Sen. Alan Bible (D Nev.) said total water drawn from the Colorado "will come from within the 300,000 acre-feet yearly allocated to Nevada in the recent Supreme Court case" (Arizona v. California) which determined how much water Arizona, California and Nevada were entitled to draw from the river.

Disputes -- The final bill also contained two controversial provisions. One, contained in both the earlier Senate and House versions, included an interest-rate formula under which Nevada would be required to pay interest currently computed at about 3-1/8 percent on federal money advanced for construction of the project and allocated to municipal and industrial water (i.e.--nearly the entire cost). Although supporting the project in general, the Interior Department and Budget Bureau strongly opposed the interest-rate formula as too low. They argued that since the project was entirely for municipal and industrial water supply purposes (with no irrigation features), the interest-rate formula should correspond to the rate (currently about 4 percent) which the Federal Government charged to cities elsewhere in the country when helping finance municipal water supply systems under the Community Facilities Program.

Rep. John W. Byrnes (R Wis.) Oct. 6 said that authorization of the project was, in effect, helping the Las Vegas area obtain municipal water by methods not available to other communities.

In a letter to the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee May 14, the Budget Bureau said it supported S 32 "only if amended to provide for" higher interest rates; in a July 26 letter to the House Interior Committee, the Bureau merely said "we strongly recommend" inclusion of a 4-percent formula. However, the final bill retained the 3-1/8-percent formula.

The second controversial provision was added in the House Committee at the request of Ely, Duncan and Bennett, a Washington, D.C., law firm representing Basic Management Inc. (a group of four water-using industrial firms in Nevada) and the Las Vegas Valley Water District. (See p. 1467, 1486 for lobbyist registrations.) This provision, in effect, protected the right of Basic Management to obtain 41,000 acre-feet of water annually, out of the total of 300,000 which Nevada was entitled to receive from the Colorado under the Supreme Court decision. Company spokesmen said that under previous arrangements and state law, the company was entitled to the water.

President Johnson Oct. 23, after signing S 32, said that the language affecting Basic Management might also apply to other firms and individuals claiming 60,000 to 70,000 acre-feet of water a year, and should be amended. Subsequently, Secretary of Interior Stewart L. Udall, March 1, 1966, submitted a draft bill (S 2999) entirely repealing the language affecting Basic Management. Udall assured Sen. Bible that contracts which he signed for delivery of Colorado River water to Nevada would recognize any priorities enjoyed by Basic Management under state law.

Rivers and Harbors. See p. 751.

River Basin Authorizations. The President June 18 signed a bill (HR 6755--PL 89-42), endorsed earlier by the Administration, authorizing $944 million in additional funds for 13 existing Army Engineers comprehensive river basin development plans. The money was intended to carry the 13 plans through the end of fiscal 1967, at which time new authorizations would be needed. (Note: In the 1936 and subsequent Flood Control Acts, Congress authorized numerous comprehensive river basin plans, involving flood control chiefly, of which 21 were still being worked on in 1965. However, Congress did not authorize appropriations covering all costs of the plans, only portions; it left additional funds for each basin to be authorized from time to time. The last previous basin authorizations were voted in 1963. See 1963 Almanac p. 454.)

Summary of Congressional Action -- As initially passed by the House by voice vote May 12, HR 6755 authorized $263 million for 10 basin plans. The Public Works Committee report (H Rept 309) said the bill was a stopgap measure to permit work on the 10 basins to continue through fiscal 1966.

The Senate passed HR 6755 by voice vote June 2 with amendments recommended by the Senate Public Works Committee in its May 27 report (S Rept 266) which: (1) added funds for three more basins (Alabama-Coosa, Great Lakes-Hudson River Waterway, Lower Mississippi); (2) authorized completion of work on the Great Lakes-Hudson River Waterway and the Los Angeles-San Gabriel River Basin, Calif.; (3) added funds in all cases to continue work to the end of fiscal 1967.

The House June 10 agreed by voice vote to the Senate amendments, clearing the bill for the President.

Funds Breakdown -- The final bill carried the following authorizations for river basin work:

Alabama-Coosa	$ 38,000,000
Arkansas River	290,000,000
Brazos River	14,000,000
Central and Southern Florida	30,000,000
Columbia River	223,000,000
Great Lakes-Hudson River Waterway	5,000,000
Los Angeles-San Gabriel	31,000,000
Lower Mississippi	53,000,000
Missouri River	116,000,000
Ohio River	89,000 000
Ouachita River	11,000,000
Upper Mississippi River	27,000,000
West Branch Susquehanna River	17,000,000
TOTAL	$944,000,000

New Starts. The fiscal 1966 Public Works Appropriations Act, signed into law Oct. 28 (HR 9220--PL 89-299), contained funds for a start of construction on 62 Army Engineers water projects, 7 Reclamation Bureau water projects, and one Tennessee Valley Authority water project (Tims Ford). Details:

Army Engineers--Of the 62 Army Engineers new starts, 11 were for projects with an ultimate cost of $25 million or more, and four of these contained major power features. The bill also carried regular funds for the first time for two Engineers major water and power projects which had been started recently under special arrangements: the West Point Reservoir, Ala.,-Ga., which received funds (as part of "Appalachia" allocations) for a new start in the Second Supplemental Appropriations Act signed into law April 30 (HR 7091--PL 89-16); and the Lower Granite Lock and Dam, Wash., which had been started at the directive of the Appropriations Committees with general funds not specifically appropriated for Lower Granite. Following is a list of the 11 new starts in HR 9220 on projects ultimately to cost more than $25 million, plus West Point and Lower Granite, with costs.

Project	Ultimate Cost
Libby Reservoir, Mont. (P)	$ 352 million
Lower Granite Lock & Dam, Wash. (P)	$ 181 million
*New Melones Reservoir, Calif. (P)	$ 129 million
*Kaw Reservoir, Okla.	$86.6 million
*Joanna (Clarence Cannon) Reservoir, Mo. (P)	$70.6 million
Hannibal Locks & Dam, Ohio-W.Va.	$69.2 million
*Kaskaskia River, Ill.	$65.6 million
West Point Reservoir, Ala.-Ga. (P)	$64.2 million
*Four River Basin, Fla.	$56.3 million
*Jones Bluff Lock & Dam, Ala. (P)	$52.6 million
Port Arthur & Vicinity, Texas	$40.6 million
*Hampton Roads, Va.	$32.7 million
*Melvern Reservoir, Kan.	$25.8 million

*Funds not requested by Administration

(P) Contains major power features

Reclamation Bureau -- HR 9220 provided funds for six Administration-requested new starts, plus one unrequested new start (Bonneville unit of the Central Utah project). Only Bonneville contained power features.

The new starts were: Bonneville; the Crooked River extension, Ore.; Dixie project, Utah (this project had initially been planned to contain power features, but the Reclamation Bureau dropped them); Bostwick Park, Colo.; Tehama-Colusa distribution systems, Central Valley project, Calif.; Stampede Division Facilities of Washoe project, Nev.-Calif.; and Westlands Irrigation District distribution and drainage facilities, Central Valley project, Calif. The Bureau also received funds for five new loans under its small loans program.

Small Watershed Projects. The Senate Oct. 21 and the House Oct. 22 by voice votes passed an Administration-endorsed bill (S 2679--S Rept 921, H Rept 1177) increasing the maximum permissible floodwater detention capacity of small watershed projects (built under the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act of 1954) from 5,000 acre-feet to 12,500 acre-feet. The President signed the bill Nov. 8 (PL 89-337). The bill did not increase the total permissible reservoir capacity, which remained at 25,000 acre-feet. The Senate report said the change in flood detention capacity would "permit the best use of available sites, reduce Government costs in some cases by reducing the number of flood detention structures needed, permit certain projects to be undertaken where the flood detention requirements of the only available sites were in excess of 5,000 acre-feet, and make it feasible to undertake certain projects which could not be undertaken unless the most economic sites were used." (For previous action, see 1964 Almanac p. 503.)

The Senate report contained the text of an agreement between the Soil Conservation Service (Agriculture Department), which administers the small watershed program, and the Army Engineers to end jurisdictional conflicts over flood control. The agreement, effective when S 2679 became law, said small watershed projects should be used "to provide protection for upstream agricultural flood plains and for those upstream urbanized areas where flood problems of minor magnitude exist," while Engineers flood control projects would "provide protection for downstream agricultural flood plains and for urbanized areas where flood problems of major magnitude exist."

PROJECT AUTHORIZATIONS NOT COMPLETED

Central Arizona. There was some progress but little action in 1965 on proposals to build the $1.3 billion Central Arizona (Lower Colorado River) project.

Early in the year, California and Arizona spokesmen resolved long-standing differences when Arizona authorities agreed to include in the bill a provision guaranteeing that in case of water shortages, California's claim to receive 4.4 million acre-feet of water a year from the Colorado River would take precedence over Arizona's claim to receive 1.2 million acre-feet needed for the Central Arizona project. On the basis of this understanding, spokesmen for the two states sponsored Administration-endorsed project bills (S 1019, HR 4671-4706, HR 9248) which authorized: (1) construction of the Central Arizona diversion unit, at a cost of $527 million, to bring 1.2 million acre-feet a year of water from the Colorado River to central and southern Arizona; (2) construction of the Bridge Canyon ($511 million) and Marble Canyon ($239 million) hydroelectric power dams on the Colorado. Revenue from sale of power from the two dams was eventually to be used to "import" at least 2.5 million acre-feet of water into the Colorado River Basin from sources outside the region (probably the Columbia River), in order to reduce water shortages.

Although California and Arizona backed the compromise bill, it met opposition from Colorado and other Upper Colorado River states which feared the project would reduce the amount of Colorado River water available to the Upper Basin states for future expansion of their water uses; from Columbia River water users, who feared loss of their own area's water as a result of the water-importation provisions of S 1019; and from conservation organizations, who said the two hydroelectric dams would spoil the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River. In the end, the only 1965 action was hearings by a House Interior and Insular Affairs Subcommittee from Aug. 23-Sept. 1. (For details, see 1965 Weekly Report p. 1791.)

Reclamation Projects. The Senate passed four reclamation project authorizations bills by voice vote, but there was no House action. The bills: (1) S 490, passed Feb. 10, authorizing the Manson unit, Chelan division, Chief Joseph Dam project, Wash., at a cost of $12.4 million; S 794, passed Feb. 10, authorizing Kennewick extension, Yakima project, Wash., at a cost of $5.2 million; S 254, passed April 1, authorizing the Tualatin reclamation project, Ore., at a cost of $23 million; and S 1088, passed July 29, authorizing the Touchet division, Walla Walla project, Wash., at a cost of $16,630,000.

ANTI-WATER POLLUTION LAW STRENGTHENED

S 4 -- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 10) Jan. 27, 1965.

- Passed by the Senate, amended, on a 68-8 roll-call vote Jan. 28. (See p. 1024)
- Reported, amended, by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 215) March 31.
- Passed by the House on a 396-0 roll-call vote April 28. (See p. 954)
- Conference report (H Rept 1022) agreed to by a 379-0 roll-call vote of the House Sept. 21 and by voice vote of the Senate Sept. 21. (See p. 1006)

PL 89-234 -- Signed into law Oct. 2.

Congress in 1965 passed Administration-endorsed legislation (S 4) significantly strengthening the federal anti-water pollution law. Supporters of S 4 called it a major new weapon to combat water pollution, one of the nation's most serious natural resource and environmental health problems.

The key section of S 4 required the states, in effect, to establish and enforce water quality standards (purity levels) for all interstate waters within their boundaries. If a state failed to take action by June 30, 1967, or if it set standards that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare considered too weak, then the Department would move in and set federal standards.

The establishment of water quality standards was designed to prevent pollution before it occurred. The existence for the first time of clear, prior standards of water purity would make it possible to determine, definitely and relatively easily, whether actual or proposed discharges of wastes and sewage by industrial plants, municipalities and others were causing or would cause unacceptable pollution in a given river or other interstate body of water. Preventive or abatement action could then be taken, either voluntarily or under state or federal compulsion. Under previous law, there were no pre-established purity levels. As a result, abatement action was not usually taken until the pollution had already reached an advanced stage -- a far more costly and difficult process. Sponsors of S 4 said that by establishing prior purity standards that would make it possible to determine comparatively easily whether a discharge would cause (or was causing) pollution, they hoped to encourage voluntary compliance and thus reduce the need for federal and state government compulsory abatement proceedings.

In addition to requiring the establishment of water quality standards, S 4 also strengthened measures to combat pollution which caused dirty shellfish; created a new Water Pollution Control Administration, within the HEW Department, to administer the anti-pollution program; raised to $150 million a year (from the previous $100 million) the annual authorization for federal grants for construction of community sewage treatment plants; and authorized $20 million a year during fiscal years 1966-69 for 50-50 federal matching grants to develop new methods of preventing pollution from storm sewers.

In appropriations action, Congress in the regular appropriations bill for the Department of HEW (PL 89-156) and in the general supplemental appropriations bill (PL 89-309) appropriated a total of $121 million for fiscal 1966 for community sewage treatment plant grants (out of the total of $150 million authorized for such grants). In addition, in PL 89-309 Congress appropriated the full $20 million authorized for fiscal 1966 for the storm sewer demonstrations. (See stories, p. 161, 182)

SIGNIFICANCE OF STANDARDS

The water quality standards authorized in S 4 were to be purity criteria against which streams could be checked regularly. Once the standards were established, federal and state authorities could move through various proceedings, including court action, to stop an individual, an industry, or a state or local government agency or municipality, from discharging matter into a stream which reduced the water quality below the established purity level. Under the previous law, there were no fixed standards of water quality. The absence of pre-established purity levels usually meant that abatement action was not instituted until pollution had reached a fairly advanced stage, and that what constituted pollution had to be determined on a case-by-case basis.

Under the water quality section of S 4, states were given initial jurisdiction over standards of all interstate bodies of water within their boundaries. However, if any state did not take acceptable action (as judged by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare) by June 30, 1967, the responsibility to establish standards for interstate waters within the state's boundaries automatically would be assumed by the Federal Government. The final bill did not give the states the alternative of choosing not to have water quality standards at all (as had been provided in the House version). The Federal Government was required to set standards if a state failed to do so.

S 4 was the latest in a long series of steps, beginning in 1948, to combat water pollution. Congress in 1948 gave the Federal Government the authority to take court action (following a formal governmental hearing) against anyone polluting an interstate body of water (defined as waters flowing from one state to another or forming the boundary between two or more states), provided the Governor of the state where the pollution originated consented to such action. In 1956, an informal conference was added to the abatement procedures and federal court action was permitted with prior consent either of the state of origin of pollution or of any state affected, instead of just the state of origin. In 1961, the requirement for state consent was dropped in any action where the pollution endangered the health and welfare of persons outside the state where the pollution originated, and the legislation was broadened to cover coastal and navigable waters, including navigable intrastate streams. If the pollution endangered only persons in the state where it originated, then the state's consent was required before the Federal Government could seek court action to compel abatement.

The 1965 bill streamlined enforcement procedures by providing for precise purity levels which could be used to check streams regularly. Violation of the standards would automatically lead to the institution of abatement procedures. Water quality standards would differ from stream to stream and even for parts of the same stream, but for the first time there would exist a clear, recognizable standard for all cases arising in a specific region. Water quality standards were intended to serve as both a warning and a goal to all potential polluters.

(Continued on next page)

DISPUTE OVER STANDARDS

The water quality section was the subject of major dispute. The House version of the bill favored state action only and would have given the states the right to exclude all standards, whether state or federal. The Senate version authorized imposition of federal standards if the states failed to set adequate standards themselves. The final bill was a victory for supporters of federal regulation and for the Senate position because, while it gave states the initial opportunity to act, it left the ultimate authority with the Federal Government -- both in passing on the state standards and in setting standards should states fail to act within the specified length of time.

A deadlock over the standards section tied up the bill in conference for more than four months. A similar dispute helped to kill a similar bill in the 88th Congress (1963-64).

President Johnson in his Feb. 8 Message on Natural Beauty called for the establishment of water quality standards. The Administration supported the Senate version of the standards provision during Congressional hearings on the bill (see below).

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS

Federal Installations. President Johnson Nov. 17, 1965, signed an Executive Order which required the head of each federal department and agency to examine all facilities under his jurisdiction and present to the Budget Bureau no later than July 1, 1966, "a phased and orderly plan for installing such improvements as may be needed to prevent water pollution." The order also required that provisions for pollution control be included in construction plans for all new federal installations. A bill (S 560) containing similar pollution-control requirements relating to both air pollution and water pollution from federal installations was passed by the Senate March 25, 1965, by voice vote, but there was no further action in 1965.

Detergents. The Soap and Detergent Assn., spokesman for the soap and detergent industry, May 21, 1965, announced that it had succeeded in developing detergents that would decompose relatively easily in water and therefore would not cause pollution, as had been the case with "hard" detergents previously in use. The association later said all large detergent companies had switched to the new type of detergent as of July 1. The switchover, achieved after a three-year industry research effort costing over $100 million, was a major factor in influencing Congress not to include in S 4 and other legislation proposals for federal controls on "hard" detergents.

PROVISIONS

As signed into law, S 4, the Water Quality Act of 1965, amended the Federal Water Pollution Act as follows:

Water Quality Standards. Directed each state to file with the HEW Secretary a letter of intent, within one year following passage of the bill, stating that it would, by June 30, 1967, (1) establish water quality standards for interstate waters or portions thereof within the state and (2) adopt a plan for implementation and enforcement of the standards.

Provided that the state standards would go into effect for the waters concerned if the Secretary found that they were adequate to protect the public health and welfare and that they met certain other criteria (see below for criteria).

Coverage

The water quality standards authorized by S 4 were narrower in the general scope of their coverage than the general pollution-abatement procedures which were already part of the Water Pollution Act.

Under S 4, water quality standards were to be set only for interstate bodies of water or portions of such waters within a state. Interstate waters were defined as rivers, lakes and any other waters that flowed across or formed part of state boundaries, including coastal waters. The general pollution-abatement provisions of the Act, on the other hand, applied not only to interstate waters, but also to all navigable waters, even if the latter were located wholly within one state.

Provided that if a state failed to establish and enforce such standards, or if the Secretary or the Governor of any affected state desired a revision in state standards, the HEW Secretary could propose water quality standards for interstate waters within the state following an informal conference with all parties concerned.

Provided that the federal standards would not take effect for six months and that during that period, the state involved could establish its own standards (which would have to be approved by the HEW Secretary as consistent with the definition below) or the state could ask for a public hearing on the federal standards. (The request could be made as late as 30 days after the end of the six months period.)

Required that the hearing be conducted before a board of at least five members, appointed by the HEW Secretary and made up of representatives of the Federal Government and the state. Provided that the state affected, the Department of Commerce and other affected federal agencies each would name one member of the board. Specified that a majority of the board could not be from the Department of HEW.

Directed the hearing board to make findings on the proposed federal standards and to approve or modify the standards. The standards, as approved or modified by the board, would become those applicable to the interstate waters of the state.

In the event that matter was discharged into the waters which reduced the water quality below the standards set by the Secretary or by a state under the procedures in S 4, the Secretary was authorized to use existing abatement procedures (informal conference, formal hearing and finally a federal court injunction) to halt the discharge. Where the case went as far as the courts, the latter were given the power to review the standards and to determine the "practicability" and "physical and economic feasibility" of the standards. Required that before abatement procedures were begun, the Secretary would have to notify the persons involved and allow 180 days for voluntary compliance.

Required that water quality standards established under S 4, either by a state government or by the Secretary, be such as to "protect the public health or welfare, enhance the quality of water and serve the purposes of this Act," taking into account the use and value of the water for water supply, fish and wildlife propagation, recreation, agricultural, industrial and other legitimate uses.

Shellfish. Authorized the Secretary to use all existing federal pollution abatement procedures, without having to obtain the consent of the Governor of the state involved, against pollution of any waters subject to the Water Pollution Act, if the pollution was causing dirty shellfish and thereby resulting in substantial economic injury to the marketing of shellfish in interstate commerce. Action without the Governor's consent was permitted under this provision even if the shellfish which were being dirtied and the source of the pollution were located in the same state. (For all other cases of pollution, action without the Governor's consent was permitted only where the source of the pollution and the product or persons affected were located in different states. This provision was intended primarily to permit action against pollution harmful to shellfish in certain East Coast bays.)

Administration. Authorized the establishment in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare of a new Federal Water Pollution Control Administration, and the appointment of a new, additional Assistant Secretary to supervise it -- all under the general authority of the Secretary of HEW. The new unit was intended to administer the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. (In practice, the Act had long been administered by the Public Health Service.)

Research and Development. Authorized appropriations of $20 million a year in fiscal years 1966-69 for federal matching grants to states, municipalities and interstate or intermunicipal agencies for projects to develop improved methods of preventing untreated sewage and wastes from being discharged into bays, rivers, etc., from storm water sewers or from combined storm and sanitary sewers. Also authorized the HEW Secretary to contract with public or private agencies, organizations or individuals for these purposes, to be financed from the $20 million authorized for grants. Provided that no more than 25 percent of the amount appropriated in any year for research and development could be used for the direct contracts executed by the Secretary (thus, in effect, reserving at least 75 percent of total funds for the grants). Required state approval of a project for which a grant was to be made and specified that the federal contribution to any project could not exceed 50 percent of its costs. Provided that no single grant or contract could receive funds in any fiscal year which exceeded 5 percent of the total funds available for that year under the research and development authorization.

Construction Grants. Increased the existing $100 million a year federal grant program for construction of community sewage treatment plants to $150 million a year, beginning in fiscal 1966. (Note: Under existing law, which was not changed by S 4, the entire construction grant section of the Act was to expire after fiscal 1967. S 4 merely increased the annual amount without extending the section beyond fiscal 1967.) Provided that the additional $50 million authorized by this provision be allocated to the states on the basis of population only.

Permitted the maximum federal grant for a single project to be 30 percent of the cost or $1.2 million, whichever was less (instead of 30 percent or $600,000); and for a joint project involving several communities, 30 percent or $4.8 million, whichever was less (instead of 30 percent or $2.4 million). Specified that the above per-project limit would not apply to projects financed out of the added $50 million authorization (see above), if the state government agreed to contribute to all such projects in a state an amount equal to the federal contribution. (Note: Normally, up to 30 percent of the cost of a project was borne by the Federal Government and the rest by a local community. This provision was intended to encourage the states to make contributions as well.)

Permitted the Secretary to increase the amount of grants for a plant by 10 percent if the plant was part of a comprehensive metropolitan development plan.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Congress and the Nation," p. 1132, 1134, 1137, 1139, 1143, 1150; 1964 Almanac p. 501; 1963 Almanac p. 240; 1961 Almanac p. 267; 1960 Almanac p. 520; 1956 Almanac p. 570; 1948 Almanac p. 152.

The Pollution Problem. In recent years, water pollution has become an increasingly serious problem-- in part because of increased pollution due to larger population, more discharges of sewage and industrial waste; in part because of growing needs for clean water for drinking and other municipal uses, agriculture and other purposes.

President Johnson, discussing the problem Feb. 8, 1965, in his Natural Beauty Message, said, "Every major river system is now polluted. Waterways that were once sources of pleasure and beauty and recreation are forbidden to human contact and objectionable to sight and smell. Furthermore, this pollution is costly, requiring expensive treatment for drinking water and inhibiting the operation and growth of industry."

A report issued by the Senate Public Works Committee in 1963 following a special study of water pollution stated that by the year 2000 the United States' need for water (expected to be 1,000 billion gallons a day) will have far outstripped the maximum amount of usable water (fit for municipal, industrial, or agricultural use) that will be available under the most ideal conditions -- 650 billion gallons a day. The solution to this problem is to reuse the available water. The more water is polluted, the less possible multiple use becomes; thus water must be kept as pollution-free as possible to ensure there will be enough. The report said, "It is obvious that (1) this nation must complete as rapidly as possible the engineering works necessary to capture the maximum 650 billion gallons a day and (2) it must treat water in such a way that each gallon is usable at least twice." The report said total dependable supply in 1960 was 315 billion gallons a day.

Water pollutants can be divided into three major general categories: municipal wastes, industrial wastes and land run-off. Municipal wastes (including some wastes from industrial plants) are largely organic domestic sewage and synthetic organic chemicals such as detergents. Industrial wastes include a variety of items, but mostly inorganic chemicals and mineral substances resulting from mining, manufacturing and oil refining processes. In addition, the increased temperature of water which has been used for industrial cooling purposes contributes to pollution in that it has harmful effects on fish and aquatic life. Land run-offs include pesticides, fertilizers and chemicals used on highways to give traction in bad weather.

Pollution has several general effects on water: it makes the water unfit for wildlife, unhealthy and/or unsavory, thus necessitating expensive treatment before the water involved is fit for use. Polluted water can become unfit for any or all of the following uses: drinking, industrial purposes, water sports and recreation, fishing and hunting and aesthetic appreciation. However, the Senate Committee report quoted above had a word of caution about going to the extreme: "To say that we must cease discharging wastes is unrealistic. The disposal of treated wastes from municipalities, communities, factories or farms through the medium of water is a necessary and legitimate use of this resource. However, there is a limit to which individuals or groups of individuals can go before their actions become detrimental to their neighbors; the problem, then, is when to establish the limit and how to develop effective means of enforcement and control."

Federal Legislation, 1948-61. Although Congress passed a bill relating to water pollution as early as 1886 (forbidding the dumping of impediments to navigation in New York harbor), it did not attempt a comprehensive national approach to the problem until 1948 when it enacted the first Water Pollution Control Act. The 1948 Act was subsequently amended in major respects in 1952, 1956 and 1961. The Act was concerned with two types of action: (1) formal pollution abatement procedures against industrial and public polluters and (2) federal assistance for construction of local sewage treatment facilities and for administration of state anti-pollution programs.

Abatement -- The 1948 Act directed the Justice Department -- with the consent of the state of origin -- to institute court action to stop pollution in interstate streams. A formal public hearing board was authorized to make recommendations to end the pollution. If the recommendations went unheeded, a federal court injunction could then be sought. The abatement procedures could be instituted either at state request or upon federal initiative (with state approval). In 1956, the Act was amended to allow federal court abatement suits with consent of either the state of origin of the pollution or any state affected by pollution originating in another state. An informal conference prior to the hearing also was added. Almost no abatement action was initiated between 1958 and 1956. Between 1956 and 1961, 13 abatement actions were begun -- seven upon federal initiative and six at state request.

In 1961, the abatement procedures were broadened to cover not only interstate waters, but also coastal waters and all navigable waters, even if the latter were located entirely within a single state. In addition, the 1961 amendments removed the requirement that the Federal Government receive state consent before proceeding with abatement actions (including requests for court injunctions) in cases where the pollution endangered the health and welfare of persons in a state other than the one in which the pollution originated. However, state consent was still required prior to federal abatement action in cases where the only persons endangered by the pollution were located in the state where the pollution originated. An additional 21 actions were begun between 1961 and early 1965, with 14 upon federal initiative and seven at state request.

In the entire history of the Act, only one abatement action reached the court stage -- that is, only one was not settled by the informal conference or the formal hearing. The one action that reached the state court was settled by a consent agreement.

Sewage Treatment -- The 1948 Act authorized $27.8 million annually in fiscal 1949-53 for loans to states for construction of sewage treatment plants, for grants to the states for development of anti-pollution activities, and for various studies and research. These authorizations were extended in 1952 to cover fiscal 1954-56. In 1956 the Act was amended to drop the construction loans, and instead to provide $50 million annually over a 10-year period in federal matching grants to local communities to finance construction of community sewage treatment facilities. In 1961, Congress increased the construction grants to $80 million in 1962, $90 million in 1963 and $100 million annually for fiscal 1964-67. Additional amounts were provided for research and demonstrations ($5 million a year) and for state administration of anti-pollution activities ($5 million a year).

Disputes on Administration -- Administration of the water pollution program became a subject of controversy. Beginning in 1948, federal water pollution control programs were administered by the Public Health Service. Some Congressmen felt water pollution abatement was being administered halfheartedly by the PHS which, they claimed, was more interested in other things. Congress in 1961 put water pollution control directly under the Secretary of HEW, intending him to create by administration a separate control agency within HEW. However, the Secretary merely reassigned water pollution to PHS, a branch of HEW. The Department opposed a separate water pollution agency while legislation was pending before Congress in 1963 and 1964. However, it did not oppose the separate agency provision in S 4. A Department spokesman told CQ the decision to support that aspect of the bill was made at a higher level.

1963-64 Proposals. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D - Maine) Jan. 31, 1963, introduced a bill (S 649) which authorized the HEW Secretary to set water quality standards for interstate waters, authorized the Secretary to issue rules and regulations preventing interstate marketing of detergents not meeting decomposability standards, established a separate water pollution control agency in HEW, increased the amount of grants allowed under existing law, and controlled pollution caused by federal installations.

During hearings by the Senate Public Works Committee, HEW Secretary Anthony J. Celebrezze testified that a separate Pollution Administration within HEW was not absolutely necessary, called for a flexible water quality standards provision (no one standard to apply on a nationwide basis) and a more cooperative approach to detergents. The Senate Oct. 16, 1963, passed S 649 by a 69-11 roll-call vote, and sent the bill to the House.

The House Public Works Committee Sept. 4, 1964, reported S 649, amended. The House version expanded authority of the Pollution Control Administration to include research and construction grants, but restricted the HEW Secretary's authority, allowing him to recommend (but not set) water quality standards. The House bill deleted the provisions dealing with detergents and federal installations. One provision inserted in Committee prohibited the construction or financing of an interceptor drain in northern California unless the Secretary of the Interior first obtained permission of the HEW Secretary and the HEW Secretary determined that discharge water from the drain would not pollute the receiving waters. Reportedly several Congressmen objected to this provision and, as a result, the Rules Committee failed to report S 649 to the House floor before adjournment of the 88th Congress. This provision was not contained in S 4 in 1965.

1965 Proposals. In preparing S 4 for presentation to the 89th Congress, Muskie eliminated sections originally contained in S 649, deleted by the House Committee, concerning "hard" detergents and pollution from federal installations. (For action on these issues, see second page of this story, above.)

In his Feb. 8, 1965, Natural Beauty Message to Congress, President Johnson called for enactment of water pollution legislation which would: (1) set "effective" water quality standards, thus giving the Government preventive as well as corrective powers; (2) increase federal grant ceilings for multi-municipal waste treatment construction projects; (3) increase grant ceilings for state pollution control programs (currently $5 million a year); and (4) promote research into the problems of mixed storm drainage and sanitary sewage systems. S 4, introduced Jan. 6, before the message, did all these things, except item 3. (For text of Message, see p. 1379.)

The key provision of S 4 authorized the Secretary of HEW to set water quality standards if a state failed to set adequate standards on its own initiative within a reasonable amount of time.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

HELD HEARINGS -- Jan. 18 on S 4.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 18 -- Assistant Secretary of HEW James M. Quigley presented a letter from HEW Secretary Anthony J. Celebrezze which said S 4 was "highly desirable." Quigley said HEW would "continue our support for the major objectives of this bill" and summarized recent HEW actions on problems of water pollution. He said that within the last 19 months, Secretary Celebrezze had called 15 enforcement conferences under the Water Pollution Control Act, construction of municipal sewage treatment facilities had "hit an all time high -- nearly $1.5 billion for the years 1963 and 1964," and several more major river basin studies and research projects had been started.

Testifying on behalf of the pulp and paper industry, William R. Adams, president of the St. Regis Paper Co. and director of the Pulp, Paper and Paperboard Institute (U.S.A.) Inc., said the industry had "no objection to strengthening the administration of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act" provided the "primary responsibility" for pollution control remained with the states. Adams discussed the great expense involved in instituting pollution controls and suggested: "The financial burden placed on industry of solving the pollution problem which would greatly benefit all the people could be lessened by tax treatment of the monies spent for these non-income producing facilities."

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown (D) urged increased federal support for state and local water pollution programs. Brown said: "We are now involved in a cooperative effort involving local, state and federal interests. The brunt of the financial burden is being borne at the local level. The load is currently increasing. . . .In summary, I believe it is reasonable to expect the Federal Government to step up its financial support concurrently." Brown also called for establishment of "a full-fledged regional water pollution control research laboratory" to study the feasibility of recycling waste water before it is dumped into the sea. He said, "It grieves me to see these valuable waters used but once, and then wasted to the sea. We need systems which would permit one or more cycles of reuse."

Speaking for the Manufacturing Chemists' Assn. Inc., A.J. vonFrank presented a statement criticizing several aspects of the bill, particularly Section 5, which gave the HEW Secretary power to set water quality standards. The statement said water quality requirements should be "considered on a stream-by-stream basis, and not as a single set of uniform standards applied across the board without regard to differing circumstances." It urged elimination of Section 5 as "unnecessary and superfluous for accelerated progress in solving the many but highly varied problems of water pollution control, and less likely to achieve the desired objective in a cooperative atmosphere than other available approaches." The statement also urged a larger role for the states in pollution control.

Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.), a member of the Public Works Committee, said he feared S 4 would give too much power to the Federal Government and particularly to the Secretary of HEW.

On behalf of the National Wildlife Federation, Louis S. Clapper, chief of Conservation Education for the Federation, said that speedy enactment of S 4 was "vital to control" of the pollution situation. He expressed the Federation's fear that the standards section (Section 5) might be used to "freeze or downgrade water quality," and expressed the hope that it might be used to "upgrade water quality, ideally to prevent water pollution." Clapper favored strong enforcement of pollution controls.

Bill Reported

The Committee Jan. 27 reported S 4 (S Rept 10) without amendments. The bill was reported 16-1, with only Sen. Cooper opposed.

Majority Views. The report said that in order to enhance "the quality and value of the nation's water resources," the bill established "a national policy for the prevention, control and abatement of water pollution through effective administration of its comprehensive authorities." By authorizing the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to establish water quality standards, the report said, the bill provided "a basis for preventive action and clear understanding of pollution abatement and control requirements." It said "there ought to be a constant effort to improve the quality of the water supply, it being recognized that the improvement of the quality of water makes it available for more uses."

Separate Views. In separate views, Sen. Cooper supported the intent of the bill but said the "states and other interested parties should be provided the right to appeal to the courts if the Secretary abuses his vast power" to establish water quality standards. He said that in 1963 state Governors and agency representatives testifying before the House Public Works Committee "were practically unanimous in opposing" the water quality standards section of the bill.

FLOOR ACTION

S 4 was passed Jan. 28 by a 68-8 roll call after a day of debate. (For voting, see chart p. 1024)

Three Senators who voted against a similar bill in 1963 (S 649), which had passed in 1963 by a 69-11 roll call, switched positions and supported S 4. They were Norris Cotton (R N.H.), Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) and Thruston B. Morton (R Ky.).

Before passage, the Senate adopted by voice vote the technical and clarifying committee amendments. The Senate also adopted two and rejected three floor amendments.

One rejected amendment, proposed by Sen. John G. Tower (R Texas), would have substituted for the provisions of S 4, the provisions of S 649 as reported by the House

Public Works Committee in 1964. It was rejected by a 15-62 roll-call vote. Tower said his amendment "simply removes from the (HEW) Secretary the authority to promulgate standards of water quality." Tower said the Secretary could recommend standards under his proposed substitute, but no standard could be enforced unless approved by a state governor or water pollution agency. Tower argued that a "large number of states" had opposed the strict federal authority over water quality standards proposed in S 4. In opposition to the Tower amendment, Muskie said that "for all practical purposes, (it) eliminates any power of the Secretary to establish water quality standards on interstate streams, and substitutes for it the dubious right to make recommendations."

The Senate also rejected, by a 29-54 roll-call vote, an amendment proposed by Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.). The amendment would have changed language in S 4 authorizing the HEW Secretary to establish water quality standards. The amendment would have more specifically defined the powers of the Secretary in establishing water quality standards, provided that the "practicability and economic feasibility" of attaining the standards be considered by the Secretary, and spelled out in greater detail the procedures under which standards were to be established. However, the Secretary still would have had the power to establish standards. Cooper said his proposal was "more limited" in scope than the Tower amendment, which he supported, but would assure the states of "the right of full administrative and judicial review" of water quality standards decisions by the Secretary. Cooper said that S 4 gave the Secretary of HEW a power "not matched, in my opinion, by the power of any other official in the Federal Government.... The power to zone interstate waters, and navigable waters adjacent to states, reaching our lakes and the ocean itself."

Following defeat of the Cooper amendment, the Senate adopted by a 75-0 roll call an amendment by Muskie which specified that any action by the Secretary in establishing water quality standards "shall be made in conformity with the Administrative Procedure Act." (The Act provides for certain procedures, such as public hearings and judicial review, to be followed by federal agencies in establishing regulations and taking other actions. Cooper's amendment provided for conformance with the Act, in addition to containing other provisions.)

The Senate also adopted, by a 50-28 roll-call vote, an amendment proposed by Russell B. Long (D La.) which required that the results (e.g. patents, copyrights, information) of research projects financed "in whole or in part" with federal funds under the Pollution Control Act must be "freely available" to the public. Only one Republican, Sen. Hiram L. Fong (Hawaii), voted for the amendment.

Jack Miller (R Iowa) said the difficulty with the Long amendment was that "merely because $1 of federal money goes to a research project, the entire result would have to go to the Federal Government." Before passing the Long amendment, the Senate by voice vote rejected an amendment by Miller (proposed as an amendment to Long's amendment) to "preserve" the Federal Government's "fair and equitable share" in the results of federally financed research projects.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S 4:

Authorized the establishment in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare of a new Federal Water Pollution Control Administration, and the appointment of a new additional Assistant Secretary to supervise it.

Authorized $20 million a year in fiscal years 1965-68 for 50-50 federal matching grants to demonstrate improved methods of preventing untreated sewage and wastes from being discharged into bays, rivers, etc., from storm water sewers or from combined storm and sanitary sewers.

In the existing $100 million a year grant program for construction of sewage treatment plants, permitted the maximum federal grant for a single project to be 30 percent of the cost or $1 million, whichever was less (instead of 30 percent or $600,000); and for a joint project involving several communities, 30 percent or $4 million (instead of 30 percent or $2.4 million). In addition, permitted the Secretary to increase the amount of these grants by 10 percent where the project was part of a comprehensive metropolitan development plan.

Directed the Secretary to use existing general pollution abatement procedures under the Act against pollution that was causing dirty shellfish and was thereby preventing the marketing of shellfish and shellfish products in interstate commerce.

Permitted the Secretary, if the states within a reasonable amount of time failed to set water quality standards which the Secretary considered adequate to protect the public health and welfare, to set such water quality standards himself for interstate waters and portions of such waters within a state. In the event anyone discharged matter into the waters that reduced their quality below the standards, the Secretary could seek to stop the discharge by employing the existing pollution-abatement procedures of the Water Pollution Act.

Required that the results (such as patents, processes, etc.) of research projects financed in whole or in part by federal grants under the Water Pollution Act be freely available to the general public.

Required that any action by the HEW Secretary in establishing water quality standards be made in conformity with the Administrative Procedure Act.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Jan. 28 -- Edmund S. Muskie (D Maine) -- Require that the establishment of federal water quality standards by the HEW Secretary be done in conformity with the Administrative Procedure Act. Roll-call vote, 75-0.

Russell B. Long (D La.) -- Require that the results of research projects financed in whole or in part by federal grants under the Act shall be freely available to the general public. Roll call, 50-28.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Jan. 28 -- John G. Tower (R Texas) -- Substitute for the provisions of S 4 the provisions contained in a similar water pollution control bill reported to the House in 1964. (The House bill contained many of the same provisions as S 4, but it did not give the HEW Secretary the authority to promulgate standards of water quality as did S 4; it only allowed him to recommend standards). Roll-call vote, 15-62.

John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.) -- Substitute for language in the bill wording which more specifically defined the powers of the HEW Secretary in establishing water quality standards, required that the "practicability and economic feasibility" of attaining the standards be considered, spelled out in more detail the procedures under which the standards would be established, and made the standards subject to judicial review. Roll call, 29-54.

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

HEARINGS -- Feb. 18-19 and 23 on HR 3988, which was similar, though not identical to S 4 as introduced. Like S 4, HR 3988 authorized the Secretary to set quality standards if the states failed to set adequate standards themselves.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 18 -- Rep. John A. Blatnik (D Minn.), sponsor of HR 3988, cited President Johnson's statements in support of increased federal action to curb water pollution. Blatnik said that since the Federal Water Pollution Control Act had been in effect, the situation had changed from one in which "untrammeled pollution threatened to foul the nation's waterways beyond hope of restoration, to a point where we are holding our own." He said that greater efforts to achieve water pollution control were needed at all levels of government, and by industry, private citizens and groups to cope with the "fantastic rate" of pollution resulting from population growth, urbanization, technological development, and a higher standard of living. Blatnik said he was sure the hearings would result in the Public Works Committee reporting "a strong bill to press the fight for clean water."

Rep. Richard L. Ottinger (D N.Y.) said that the present federal program of grants to communities for sewage treatment facilities "does not come close to meeting the needs of New York State," and that even with the higher ceilings provided in HR 3988 "the federal water pollution control program will be little more than a sigh in a hurricane." Ottinger said that almost two-thirds of all New York residents live in areas affected by water pollution and 1,167 communities and 760 industrial sources were still "pouring treated or untreated wastes, even raw sewage, into the state's waterways."

Feb. 19 -- Rep. Emilio Q Daddario (D Conn.) testified in opposition to a provision of S 4, added on the Senate floor, requiring that the results (patents, copyrights and information) of research projects financed in whole or in part by federal grants under the Act shall be freely available to the general public. Daddario said this provision would "neither protect the public nor improve the economy....it is damaging to both." He said the amendment would undercut existing federal patent policy.

David L. Gallagher, chairman of the National Assn. of Manufacturers' Subcommittee on Air and Water Resources, testified in opposition to S 4 and HR 3988. The NAM spokesman opposed in particular the provisions creating a new HEW Assistant Secretary to deal with water pollution control, authorizing the HEW Secretary to set standards of water quality for all interstate waters, and permitting the HEW Secretary to subpoena witnesses. Gallagher said transfer of water pollution administration from the Public Health Service to the new HEW agency was opposed by 24 states and would disrupt the "technical competence and sound working relationships" which the PHS had built up with the states and industry. He said the supoena provision was contrary to the philosophy of the primary responsibility of state and local governments. Opposing the water quality standards provision, Gallagher said the tendency of the administrator would be "to formulate uniform, nationwide rules," which would fail to take into consideration the differences among river basins and result in standards "harsh and unjust in some situations and perhaps too lax in others," producing "severe inequalities among the states." "For effective and realistic results in water pollution control, it would be far better to leave the actual formulation of regulations to the states," Gallagher said.

James M. Quigley, Assistant Secretary of HEW, said, "The standards that the Secretary would set would not necessarily be uniform for the entire river. As a matter of fact, they probably would not." He assured the Committee that it was the Secretary's "clear intent that if this legislation passes, that he would generally follow the administration pattern called for."

Feb. 23 -- New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller urged the Committee to increase the level of federal anti-pollution grants to the states from $100 million annually to $250 million a year. Rockefeller also requested a revised grant-in-aid formula which would permit the Government to pay 30 percent of New York's $1.7 billion program to clean up its streams and rivers, and eliminate ceilings on aid to one state or project.

Bill Reported

ACTION -- The Committee March 31 reported S 4 (H Rept 215) with amendments.

Amendments. The most important amendment dropped the Senate provision authorizing the Secretary to set water quality standards if the state failed to do so. Instead, the Committee merely required each state, within 90 days after enactment of the bill, to file notice of intention to set up water quality "criteria" by June 30, 1967, for interstate waters and portions of such waters in the state. If the state chose not to do so, it would be penalized by the loss of all federal grants under the Water Pollution Act, but the Secretary would not have any power to impose federal water quality standards. The Committee thus left the states free, in effect, to avoid the imposition of all water quality standards if they chose, at the price of losing the federal grants.

In other major amendments, the Committee increased the ceiling on construction grants from $1 million to $1.2 million for individual projects and from $4 million to $4.8 million for multi-community projects and increased grants for sewage treatment plants in fiscal 1966 and 1967 from $100 million a year to $150 million. The Committee added a housekeeping provision specifying that Public Health Service Officers who had been working on water pollution control could voluntarily transfer to the new Pollution Control Administration within HEW. The Committee eliminated a provision inserted on the Senate floor concerning patents resulting from research done with funds appropriated under the Act. The Committee also added a provision granting the HEW Secretary limited subpoena powers in connection with water pollution control hearings. The Committee also permitted the $20 million a year authorized to combat pollution from storm sewers to be used not only for research and demonstration grants, but also for direct contracts by the Secretary with research groups and others.

Majority Views. The Committee said further anti-pollution action was urgently needed, but it had dropped the Senate provision for mandatory water quality standards, in favor of its own provision, in order to give the states time to take action themselves. The Committee said it hoped all the states would do so, and it warned, in effect, that if state response were not good, the Committee would take up the matter again when it considered certain provisions of the Water Pollution Act that would require extension in the 1966 or 1967 sessions of Congress. A Committee source said "criteria" differed from "standards" and were more in the nature of a classification. He said the criteria would provide a basis for establishing standards.

Additional Views. The 11 Republican members of the House Public Works Committee submitted a separate statement supporting the Committee version of S 4. Although expressing reservations over the creation of a new Assistant Secretary of HEW and a separate water Pollution Control Administration, the Republicans endorsed elimination of the Senate quality standards provisions and called the Committee substitute a "vast improvement." They said it would "require the states themselves to take the necessary initial steps toward solving water pollution problems."

FLOOR ACTION

The House April 28 by a 396-0 roll call passed the House Public Works Committee's version of S 4, without adopting any floor amendments. (For voting, see chart, p. 954)

PROVISIONS -- See Bill Reported, above. The major difference between S 4 as passed by the House and Senate was the House's deletion of the Senate provision which permitted the HEW Secretary to set federal water quality standards if the states failed to take action.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

April 28 -- James C. Cleveland (R N.H.) -- Increase by an additional 15 percent federal grants for the construction of sewage treatment projects in deprived and disadvantaged areas not covered by the Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965. Voice vote.

Samuel S. Stratton (D N.Y.) -- Expand the definition of "sewage treatment works" to include "lateral and other connecting sewer lines." Voice.

Conference

REPORT. The conference report was filed Sept. 17 (H Rept 1022), nearly five months after House passage of the bill. A dispute over the water quality standards provision delayed agreement, but it was finally resolved. Conferees accepted, in effect, though with important procedural modifications, the basic Senate provision.

Quality Standards Provision -- Under the final water quality provision, each state was given the initial opportunity to set water quality standards for interstate waters and portions of interstate waters within the state. But if it did not by June 30, 1967, set standards considered adequate by the Secretary, the authority to establish standards automatically reverted to the Federal Government. The Secretary thus would have the power both to set standards when a state did not do so, or to supersede any state standards he thought too weak. Federal action was made subject to review by a joint federal-state conference board.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D Maine), sponsor of the bill in the Senate, said in discussion of the conference report that the measure was "a reasonable and sound compromise....in many respects an improvement over the original version."

Rep. John A. Blatnik (D Minn.), House sponsor of the legislation, said the conference version was "a better bill than either of the original two bills." He added, "Let it not be said that the states have not been given full power to establish for themselves" water quality standards. "States, municipalities, industries and all other affected parties have a full and fair opportunity to be heard in this very practical and workable procedure."

Rep. William C. Cramer (R Fla.), a member of the conference committee, said that prior to the time the Federal Government began court action against a violator of the standards, an informal hearing should be held with the violator in an attempt to resolve the problem. This, he said, was the intention of the bill. In answer to a question by Cramer, Blatnik said that all standards affecting an industry were subject to judicial review when the Federal Government brought suit against an industry for violating any of the standards.

Cramer said the "two principal points" which delayed conference agreement were the questions of full judicial review of the standards by the courts when the Government brought charges against a violator and assurances of an informal conference between the Federal Government and the violator prior to legal action being filed.

Other Provisions -- The conferees accepted a House provision increasing the grant authorization for 1966 and 1967 for community sewage treatment facilities from the existing level of $100 million a year to $150 million. They also accepted House provisions increasing the maximum permissible grant for a single project from $600,000 to $1.2 million, and for a multicommunity project from $2.4 million to $4.8 million (the Senate bill had made increases to $1 million and $4 million respectively); and cancelling these limits for grants made from within the added $50 million, if the state agreed to contribute to a community project an amount equal to the federal contribution.

Conferees eliminated a House provision authorizing the HEW Secretary to issue subpoenas for attendance and the production of evidence at hearings and dropped a Senate provision which required that all copyrights to the results of research financed with funds from grants under the Act be made available to the public free of charge.

Conferees accepted a House provision which authorized the HEW Secretary to contract with public or private agencies, organizations or individuals for development of improved methods of preventing untreated sewage and wastes from being discharged into bays, rivers, streams, and similar places from storm sewers or from combined storm and sanitary sewers. This was in addition to a provision in both bills providing federal grants for this purpose. Conferees said the $20 million a year authorized for the grants would be adequate to cover the direct contracts also. Since fiscal 1965 was already over, conferees changed the period of the authorization for these grants and contracts to $20 million a year for fiscal 1966-69, instead of fiscal 1965-68.

ACTION. The House Sept. 21 by a 379-0 roll call and the Senate Sept. 21 by voice vote agreed to the conference report on S 4. (For House voting, see chart p. 1006)

BILL SIGNED

President Johnson Oct. 2 signed S 4 into law (PL 89-234), saying, "With the signing of the Water Quality Act of 1965...I pledge you that we are going to reopen the Potomac for swimming by 1975. And within the next 25 years, we are going to repeat this effort in lakes and streams and other rivers across this country." He said there was "no excuse" for slaughterhouses, paper mills, chemical companies, oil refineries and communities to pollute rivers.

CONGRESS AUTHORIZES $2 BILLION IN NEW WATER PROJECTS

S 2300 -- Reported by the Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 464) July 19, 1965.

- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote July 27.
- Reported, amended, by the House Public Works Committee (H Rept 973) Sept. 9.
- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote Sept. 22. (For vote on amendment, see p. 1006)
- Conference report (H Rept 1170) agreed to by voice vote of the Senate Oct. 19 and by a 221-139 roll call of the House Oct. 20. (See p. 1020)

PL 89-298 -- Signed into law Oct. 27.

Congress in 1965 approved an omnibus bill (S 2300) authorizing construction by the Corps of Army Engineers of nearly $2 billion in new federal water projects. The bill also authorized the Army Engineers, in cooperation with other federal, state and local agencies, to draw up a long-range plan for reservoirs, aqueducts and water purification facilities needed to meet the water needs of the drought-ridden Northeast. (See p. 757 for discussion of Northeast drought.)

S 2300 was the first omnibus bill authorizing new Army Engineers river, harbor, flood control, beach erosion and hurricane protection projects since a similar 1962 measure.

The final bill contained projects for all but 10 states: Alaska, Delaware, Idaho, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Utah, Vermont, Wisconsin and Wyoming. Of the 149 authorizations in the bill for new projects or major modifications of existing projects, nearly a score had estimated total costs of $25 million or more. (See final provisions for list.)

Four of the projects authorized by the bill contained new federal hydroelectric power facilities, and for that reason were opposed by the private power industry and the United Mine Workers of America (Ind.). (See discussion of controversies, below.) The four projects were the $227 million Dickey-Lincoln School project on the St. John River, Maine (794,000 kilowatts installed capacity); the $88,653,000 Lazer Creek (87,000 KW) and Lower Auchumpkee (81,000 KW) reservoirs on the Flint River, Ga.; and the $133.6 million Rowlesburg dam and reservoir project on the Cheat River, W. Va. (provisionally authorized to contain a 350,000 KW pumped-storage system.)

The bill specified that the federal pumped-storage power system at Rowlesburg reservoir was to be built only if the Federal Power Commission turned down a pending application by the Monongahela Power Co. to build and operate the pumped storage system itself as a private power plant. (Under the Federal Power Act, any non-federal entity wishing to build a hydroelectric power project must first obtain approval of the FPC.) If the FPC, on the other hand, granted the company's application for private construction of the pumped storage power facility, then the Army Engineers would build the Rowlesburg dam and reservoir, but without the power facility; and in that case, the bill specified, the authorization would be only $88.4 million instead of $133.6 million.

Two other power projects were initially contained in the Senate version of S 2300 -- the $151 million Devils Jump project, Ky., and the $278 million Grand River project, Mo.-Iowa. The House eliminated Devils Jump, and, while retaining the over-all Grand River project, eliminated the power features and reduced the authorization for Grand River to $218 million. It said the power features of the Grand River project were of questionable economic merit and should be studied further -- as requested by the Budget Bureau -- before being authorized. The House position on the Devils Jump and Grand River projects was upheld in conference.

Additional noteworthy provisions of the final version of S 2300 authorized 33 flood control surveys and 18 navigation surveys; increased the size of certain small projects that could be built without any authorizations; permitted the Congressional Public Works Committees to authorize projects of under $10 million (a provision strongly opposed by President Johnson; see below for discussion); and, at the request of Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), attempted to force the Indiana Dunes bill to the House floor in 1966 by making federal funds for the Burns Waterway harbor, which was authorized in S 2300, contingent upon the Dunes bill being taken up by both chambers of Congress. (For discussion of Dunes bill and this provision of S 2300, see story p. 768.)

MAJOR CONTROVERSIES

Power Projects. The power projects in the bill were opposed by the private power industry as a form of subsidized Government competition in the power business; by the coal industry and by the United Mine Workers of America (Ind.), the union representing coal miners; as well as, in several cases, by some general business organizations like the Chamber of Commerce of the United States (on the same grounds as the power industry). The UMWA's position was that construction of hydroelectric plants would reduce the use of coal for power generation, and was particularly objectionable when the hydroelectric plant received a subsidy on construction costs in the form of Government interest charges lower than could be obtained in the commercial money markets. The power projects in the bill were supported, however, by the American Public Power Assn., National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn. and other public power advocates.

Dickey-Lincoln School Dispute -- By far the most hotly debated project in the bill was the Dickey-Lincoln School project on the St. John River, Maine. It was proposed in a July 9, 1965, Interior Department report to the President. Mr. Johnson July 10 endorsed the proposal, and July 12 transmitted it to Congress with a request for authorization. The final version of S 2300 contained the authorization as requested. The project involved construction at a cost of $227 million of the Dickey Dam, containing a 760,000 KW hydroelectric plant, and of the Lincoln School reregulating dam, with a 34,000 KW hydroelectric plant. The project was to be built by the Army Engineers, and the power (over 1 billion kilowatt hours annually) later marketed by the Interior Department. The Interior Department July 9 report also proposed an $87 million system of transmission lines to carry the power to Bangor and Boston, and suggested that this system could ultimately serve as the backbone of a New England extra high-voltage power grid which the Department proposed to study; however, the funds for the transmission system would not be sought until later, when the two dams were ready to begin producing power.

Supporters of the bill, including the Interior Department in its report, made clear that one of their major objectives in seeking the project was to bring federal power to New England for the first time. There were no other authorized federal power projects in New England, and only two, still unbuilt, in the rest of the Northeast. They said the "competition by comparison" that would be provided by a federal power plant in New England would help push down high power rates charged by private utilities in the area (28 percent above the national average), and thus stimulate economic growth and reduce consumer costs. The New England power grid contemplated in the Interior report was intended to bring power costs down through transmission linkups. The project was strongly supported by the APPA, NRECA and various local public power advocates in New England (including the Northeast Public Power Assn., formed June 17-18 at a meeting in Portland, Maine), who waged a heavy lobbying campaign in its behalf.

The private power industry, speaking through the Electric Coordinating Council of New England, the Edison Electric Institute and the National Assn. of Electric Companies, plus other groups like the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, strongly opposed the project and lobbied against it. They argued that it represented subsidized competition for private power; questioned whether it would produce power as cheaply as the Interior Department claimed (Interior said it would be able to sell power for 7-8 mills per kilowatt-hour to preference customers, compared with 9-20 mills being charged by existing private power companies); and claimed that private industry could supply equivalent amounts of energy and capacity for only $71 million by building a nuclear power plant and associated pumped storage system. The United Mine Workers of America (Ind.) and the coal industry, for reasons outlined above, also opposed the project; and they, together with private power and business spokesmen, lobbied heavily against the federal project. Many of the project's opponents said they regarded the central issue in the dispute to be whether a federal public power plant should be built in New England for the first time -- a prospect they disliked strongly.

Authorization of the project was included in the initial Senate version of S 2300 and was narrowly approved by the House Public Works Committee, 18-15 (D 18-4; R 0-11). (See House action, below, for individual positions in Committee vote.) On the House floor, however, opponents of the project eliminated it from the bill on a 207-185 (D 86-180; R 121-5) roll call in which both coal-area and New England Congressmen voted heavily in favor of killing the project. (For analysis of vote, see House floor action, below.) But the authorization was restored in conference, and the conference report passed the House handily without an attempt to remove the project from the final bill.

Behind the dispute over the Dickey-Lincoln School project lay a half-century of controversy over a related proposal -- first made in 1919 -- to harness the tides of Passamaquoddy Bay on the Maine-Canada coast for production of electric power. The essential question on that proposal was whether the economic benefits would equal the costs. After repeated studies over the years, most of which found the Passamaquoddy proposal infeasible, Secretary of Interior Stewart L. Udall July 15, 1963, reported to President Kennedy that a Passamaquoddy project would be feasible if combined with construction of federal hydroelectric power plants on the St. John River. However, a further study was undertaken.

Finally, on July 9, 1965, Udall submitted to President Johnson a new report which, as described earlier, was the basis for Mr. Johnson's request for the Dickey-Lincoln School authorization. Udall's report said that the Passamaquoddy tidal project by itself would have annual costs greater than annual benefits, and should be studied further; but that the Dickey-Lincoln School project, if built by itself, without being attached to the Passamaquoddy tidal project, would have a favorable ratio of benefits to costs and would be feasible. On this basis, Udall recommended and Mr. Johnson agreed that the Passamaquoddy project should be set aside for further study, and the Dickey-Lincoln School project should be authorized. (For early history of Passamaquoddy proposals, see "Congress and the Nation," p. 849, 870, 887.)

Rowlesburg Dispute - A second important power dispute involved the proposed federal pumped-storage hydroelectric plant at the Rowlesburg reservoir on the Cheat River, W.Va. For the general reasons outlined earlier, the United Mine Workers of America (UMWA) opposed authorizing the power plant, saying it and the coal industry had opposed the idea for over 20 years because it would reduce the amount of coal used.

The Rowlesburg dispute was complicated by the fact that the Monongahela Power Co. was seeking FPC permission to build the pumped-storage facility itself, in place of federal construction, and operate it as a private electric power plant. The UMWA told CQ that, as far as it was concerned, it did not favor hydroelectric systems regardless of whether privately built or federally built. However, the union indicated that, if the private plant were finally licensed at Rowlesburg, it hoped "union coal" would be used in the production of certain steam-generated electric power needed to operate the pumped-storage hydroelectric system. (In the proposed Rowlesburg plant, power from steam-electric plants in other areas would be transmitted into the Rowlesburg area and used to pump water up into a reservoir; the water would then be used to operate a hydroelectric generating facility. The union wanted assurances that the coal used to generate the power for pumping purposes would be from "union" mines.)

In the end, S 2300 authorized federal construction of the over-all Rowlesburg dam and reservoir project, but stipulated (in accord with the general position of the Budget Bureau) that the pumped-storage power features should be built by the Federal Government only if the FPC denied Monongahela Power Co.'s application for private construction. In Sept. 22 House debate, Rep. Harley O. Staggers (D W.Va.) said Monongahela had assured him that if its application were granted by the FPC, "100 percent union coal will be used...."

Small Project Authorizations. A second major controversy on S 2300 involved a provision inserted in the bill by the House Public Works Committee and retained in conference. It authorized the Army Engineers to build small water projects of all types -- up to $10 million in cost each -- without obtaining a full Congressional authorization, provided the proposed projects were approved by resolutions of the House and Senate Public Works Committees. In effect, this provision permitted projects of up to $10 million to be authorized by the Committees instead of requiring such projects to be authorized by acts of Congress signed by the President, which was the existing system. Appropriations for construction would still have to be provided in regular appropriations bills passed by Congress and signed by the President.

The House Committee said the new procedure would permit rapid authorization of small projects, instead of requiring them to be delayed until Congress took up omnibus river, harbor and flood control authorization bills, which normally were considered only once every two or three years.

President Johnson Oct. 26, however, before signing the bill, issued a strong statement condemning the new authorization procedure as intruding on the powers of the President by permitting projects to be authorized without the President having the opportunity to veto or approve the authorizing legislation. Mr. Johnson said the provision would "dilute and diminish" the powers of the Presidency, and therefore, if he were to be legally consistent, he should veto S 2300 and thus block the new procedure from coming into effect.

However, Mr. Johnson said, he had decided to sign the bill because the objectionable language in the bill was merely permissive -- it permitted the Engineers to build projects authorized only by the two Committees, but did not require the Engineers to do so. In 1966, he said, he would request legislation to repeal the objectionable authorization language for small projects, and in the meanwhile, he had ordered the Engineers not to make use of it.

PROVISIONS

As signed into law S 2300, the Flood Control, River and Harbor Acts of 1965, authorized:

Navigation projects (49 projects)	$ 343,338,000
Beach erosion projects (9 projects)	6,681,000
Flood control projects (91 projects)	1,635,766,000
TOTAL (149 projects)	$ 1,985,785,000

MAJOR PROJECTS

Following is a list of major projects (costing more than $25 million) authorized in S 2300:

Navigation

San Francisco Bay to Stockton, Calif.	$ 46,853,000
Burns Waterway, Ind.	25,000,000
New York Harbor anchorages, N.Y.	44,852,000
Trinity River, Texas (initial funds)	83,000,000
Newport News-Norfolk Harbor, Va.	25,600,000

Flood control (a (p) indicates power projects)

Gila River at Phoenix, Ariz.	58,310,000
Lazer Creek, Lower Auchumpkee Reservoirs, Flint River, Ga. (p)	88,653,000
Wabash River, Ind.	44,800,000
Wabash River, Ind. and Ill.	72,900,000
Walnut River, Kan.	66,036,000
Big Sandy River, Ky.	51,491,000
Lake Pontchartrain, La.	56,235,000
St. John River, Maine (p)	227,000,000
Mississippi River and tributaries, Ark., Miss., Mo., La., Ill., Ky., Tenn.	181,109,000
Grand River, Mo. and Iowa	218,009,000
Platte River, Mo. and Iowa	26,889,000
East Rockaway Inlet and Jamaica Bay, N.Y.	32,620,000
Cheat River, W.Va. (p)	133,548,000

The bill also:

Authorized the Corps of Engineers, in cooperation with federal, state and local agencies, to prepare a long-range plan in accordance with the Water Resources Planning Act (PL 89-80), to meet the water needs of the Northeastern United States. The plan could entail major reservoirs, water conveyance facilities between river basins and purification works.

Permitted the Corps to construct, operate and maintain any water resource development project if the estimated federal first cost of construction was less than $10 million and if the House and Senate Public Works Committees had approved the project.

Authorized up to $5 million a year for a program to control and eradicate obnoxious aquatic plant growths in U.S. waters.

Granted the consent of Congress to the state of Pennsylvania to construct a dam on the Susquehanna River near Sunbury, Pa.

Stipulated that no funds could be appropriated for construction of the Burns Waterway harbor until establishment of the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore had been voted on by both the House and Senate in the same congress.

Authorized $75,000 for a study of means to extend the navigation season on the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Seaway, including an investigation of de-icing systems.

Redesignated the Justice Reservoir on the Guyandot River, W.Va., as the R.D. Bailey Reservoir.

Redesignated the Joanna Dam and Reservoir on the Salt River, Mo., as the Clarence Cannon Dam and Reservoir.

Authorized the Secretary of Commerce to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans for a period of up to 50 years to help local areas meet their share of the costs of water resource projects if the local areas were eligible for assistance under the 1965 Public Works and Economic Development Act (PL 89-136). Authorized $10 million for these purposes in each of fiscal years 1966-70.

Authorized 33 flood control surveys and 18 navigation surveys.

Authorized $6 million for various Army Engineers water studies of the Chespeake Bay basin, including Baltimore harbor.

Raised the yearly limit for flood plain information studies authorized by the 1960 Flood Control Act from $1 million to $2.5 million.

Increased from $200,000 to $500,000 the maximum size of small navigation projects on which the Army Engineers, under authority granted by the 1960 River and Harbor Act, could undertake work without specific authorization of the project by Congress. Authorized the appropriation of up to $10 million in any year for all such small projects combined, instead of the $2 million maximum set in 1960.

Increased from $400,000 to $500,000 the maximum size of small beach erosion projects which the Engineers, under authority granted in the 1962 River and Harbor Act, could undertake without specific authorization of the project by Congress. Authorized the appropriation of up to $10 million in any year for all such projects combined, instead of the $3 million maximum set in 1962.

Senate

BACKGROUND -- Omnibus bills authorizing Army Engineers river, harbor, flood control, beach erosion and hurricane protection projects are normally enacted every two or three years; the last two before 1965 were in 1960 and 1962. (1960 Almanac p. 258; 1962 Almanac p. 457) However, new projects are sometimes also authorized in periodic bills authorizing new funds for continuing flood control and related work on the nation's major river basins. This was the case in 1963, when five new project authorizations were added to the river basin funds bill. (1963 Almanac p. 454)

Although authorized, the water projects may not be constructed until funds are voted for them by Congress in appropriations bills; provision of money to begin actual construction of an authorized water project is called a "new start." The appropriations are handled in annual public works appropriations bills.

COMMITTEE ACTION -- S 2300 was reported July 19 by the Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 464) authorizing 37 navigation projects, 8 beach erosion projects and 64 flood control projects (including hurricane protection and multipurpose), at an estimated cost of $1,968,485,500.

The reported bill contained six projects with hydroelectric power features: Dickey-Lincoln School on the St. John River, Maine, as requested by the President (inserted in the bill on a motion of Maine Democratic Sen. Edmund S. Muskie); the Lazer Creek and Lower Auchumpkee projects on the Flint River, Ga. (the Budget Bureau had said it did not oppose authorizations for these two projects, but that construction should not be undertaken until it was certain that the power features would be able to pay off costs allocated to power in 50 years with interest); the Rowlesburg dam and reservoir on the Cheat River, W.Va. (the Budget Bureau had favored deferring authorization of the power features until the FPC had acted one way or the other on the Monongahela Power Co.'s application for private construction of a pumped-storage system); the Devils Jump project, Ky.-Tenn. (the Budget Bureau did not oppose the authorization but said costs should be reallocated prior to construction); and the Grand River project, Mo.-Iowa (the Budget Bureau had said the power features should be deferred for further study).

The Committee expressed its "strong desire" that the requirements of PL 89-72, the Federal Water Project Recreation Act of 1965, which required local cost-sharing of recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement features of federal water projects, be applied "with flexibility" to certain flood protection programs, so that the inability of local interests to pay for separable recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement costs "should not result in the denial of flood protection afforded by projects which affect the areas involved." (See p. 775)

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate July 27 passed S 2300 by voice vote after adopting floor amendments which authorized four additional projects and thereby added $20,943,000 to the total authorizations in the bill, and which put the Rowlesburg pumped-storage plant authorization on a conditional basis, depending on FPC action.

The only controversy over S 2300 concerned an amendment by William Proxmire (D Wis.) which would have deleted 64 projects in 29 states costing $845,393,000 by eliminating all projects whose estimated benefits outweighed their estimated costs by less than 51 percent. The amendment was rejected by voice vote.

Proxmire objected that the bill contained projects whose benefits included recreation which provided no "monetary returns to the economy," and whose cost estimates were calculated on the basis of an interest rate below that actually charged and on the basis of a 100-year repayment period. He said the effect was a "subsidy" to beneficiaries of the projects; if the ratio was calculated this way, benefits would have to outweigh costs by 100 percent to justify construction, he argued. His amendment, he said, would "compel all questionable projects to be reexamined or abandoned."

Public Works Committee Chairman Pat McNamara (D Mich.) objected that "to arbitrarily set a benefit-cost ratio higher than parity would be unfair and inconsistent with sound public policy." Senior Committee Republican John Sherman Cooper (Ky.) added that many flood control projects had such high costs by themselves that they could not meet a justifiable cost-benefit ratio without including benefits like recreation, but without them "communities would continue to be washed away year after year." The amendment also was strongly opposed by Allen J. Ellender (D La.), chairman of the Public Works Appropriations Subcommittee.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S 2300 authorized:

Navigation projects (40)	$ 244,100,000
Beach erosion projects (8)	4,415,400
Flood control projects (65)	1,740,913,100
TOTAL	$1,989,428,500

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

July 27 -- Pat McNamara (D Mich.) -- Authorize a navigation project at Cedar River Harbor, Mich., at an estimated cost of $664,000. Voice vote.

Jennings Randolph (D W.Va.) -- In authorizing a $133,548,000 project for Rowlesburg dam and reservoir, W.Va., provide (1) that the power features would not be undertaken until the Federal Power Commission had completed action on pending applications for private development of the project's pumped-storage facility; (2) that if private development was authorized, S 2300's authority for the over-all project would not include federal power features and the estimated cost would be reduced to $88,402,000 and (3) that if the applications were dismissed by the FPC, federal construction would proceed. Voice.

Harrison A. Williams Jr. (D N.J.) -- Authorize a hurricane-flood control project at the Elizabeth River Basin, N.J., at an estimated cost of $9,769,000. Voice.

B. Everett Jordan (D N.C.) -- Authorize a navigation project on the Cape Fear River, N.C., at an estimated cost of $1,510,000. Voice.

Wayne Morse (D Ore.) -- Authorize a navigation project at Tillamook Bay and Bar, Ore., at an estimated cost of $9 million. Voice.

Jack Miller (R Iowa) -- Require that the portion of the flood control project on the Big Sioux River in Iowa and South Dakota extending above the city limits of Sioux City, Iowa, be compatible with fish and wildlife mitigation and flood control plans to be approved by both states. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

William Proxmire (D Wis.) -- Require that no project be undertaken if the ratio of benefits to costs, as determined by the Corps of Engineers, is less than 1.51 to 1.

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

ACTION -- Sept. 9 reported S 2300 (H Rept 973) by a vote of 21-12 (D 21-1; R 0-11). As reported, the bill authorized 141 projects at a cost of $1,970,228,000, including 47 navigation projects, 9 beach erosion and 85 flood control, hurricane protection and multiple-purpose.

Committee Changes. The reported bill retained four of the major power projects that had been approved by the Senate -- Dickey-Lincoln (St. John River), Lazer Creek, Lower Auchumpkee and Rowlesburg (Cheat River). But the House Committee dropped the $151 million Devils Jump, Ky.-Tenn., project, which had contained power features; and, while retaining the over-all Grand River project, Mo.-Iowa, reduced the authorization to $218 million and eliminated the power features pending further study, as requested by the Budget Bureau. The only other Senate project deleted from the bill was the $9 million Maumee River Basin flood control project, Ohio (which had no power features).

Voting on Power Projects -- In votes on specific power projects, the Committee voted to retain the Dickey-Lincoln School project in Maine, 18-15 (D 18-4; R 0-11), and to retain the Lazer Creek and Lower Auchumpkee authorizations, 17-13 (D 17-2; R 0-11).

Following was the breakdown on the 18-15 vote to approve the Dickey-Lincoln School project: FOR -- Blatnik (D Minn.); Jones (D Ala.); Kluczynski (D Ill.); Wright (D Texas); Gray (D Ill.); Edmondson (D Okla.); Johnson (D Calif.); Olsen (D Mont.); Tuten (D Ga.); Rivers (D Alaska); Roberts (D Texas); Everett (D Tenn.); McCarthy (D N.Y.); Kee (D W.Va.); Schmidhauser (D Iowa); Sweeney (D Ohio); Howard (D N.J.); and Dyal (D Calif.). AGAINST -- Fallon (D Md.); Clark (D Pa.); Dorn (D S.C.); Henderson (D N.C.); Cramer (R Fla.); Baldwin (R Calif.); Harsha (R Ohio); Kunkel (R Pa.); Grover (R N.Y.); Cleveland (R N.H.); Clausen (R Calif.); Halleck (R Ind.); Reid (R Ill.); McEwen (R N.Y.); and Martin (R Ala.).

The power projects in the bill were opposed by the private power industry and by the United Mine Workers of America (Ind.). The union, in its Sept. 15 UMWA Journal, said the White House exerted strong pressure, including "threats of retaliation" in connection with Government projects in Members' districts, in order to push the Dickey-Lincoln School project through the Committee. It called Rep. Harley O. Staggers (D W.Va.) "a principal lobbyist in behalf of the Rowlesburg Dam project despite UMWA opposition," and criticized Reps. Gray, Edmondson, Olsen, Rivers, Kee and Sweeney for supporting the Dickey-Lincoln School project and several of the other power projects in the bill although, the union said, these men came from coal areas. Gray, in a statement to CQ, said he really opposed the Dickey-Lincoln School project and had voted for it only in exchange for the killing of the Devils Jump project, which the union also opposed, and with the understanding that he would oppose the power projects on the floor. He added that he received a White House call requesting his support on certain projects, but denied threats of retaliation. Sweeney told CQ he had never been requested by the UMWA to oppose the projects, and said the union was "front running for private power."

Trinity River Project -- The Committee's major addition to the bill was the Trinity River project, Texas, providing navigation, flood control and water supply benefits at an over-all federal cost of $859,796,000. The project's navigation features were designed to permit barge traffic to move inland from the Texas Gulf coast to Fort Worth. The project was supported as beneficial to the Texas shipping industry, particularly as it would connect with the existing Gulf Intracoastal Waterway. Heavy opposition came from the railroad industry, which feared loss of freight business to the canal. Although authorizing the project, the Committee provided an initial appropriations authorization of only $83 million to get work started; added amounts would be voted from time to time. The Budget Bureau requested deferral of construction of the purely navigational features of the project until new benefit-cost ratios based on a 50-year useful period of operation could be drawn up. The Bureau pointed out that at the time the project was initially studied several years earlier, the navigation features showed a favorable benefit-cost ratio on the basis of a 100-year useful life -- the study criterion then temporarily in use -- but unfavorable (only 0.74 to 1) on the basis of a 50-year useful life. Since the Army Engineers were now again using a 50-year basis for all navigation benefit-cost ratio calculations, the Bureau recommended recalculation. (No major navigation project had ever been authorized on the basis of 100-year calculations.)

Other Major Actions -- The Committee also:

- Added a new title authorizing the Corps to prepare a long-range plan to meet the water needs of the Northeastern United States, using a system of major reservoirs, aqueducts between major river basins, and purification plants. The Committee said the lesson to be learned from the current drought in that region was "that the time has come when old policies must give way to new: Specifically, that the development of a megalopolis extending through a number of states will require the Federal Government to play a larger role in meeting the future needs of such areas for municipal and industrial water." It said "individual communities will no longer be able to meet the needs of their people" and that a regional plan could have "tremendous value in indicating an approach in other regions where the need for an assured water supply is imminent."
- Added a new provision "to make possible more expeditious authorization of relatively small water resource development projects" by permitting the Corps to construct a water project if the estimated federal first cost of construction was less than $10 million and if the House and Senate Public Works Committees had approved it.
- Said it intended to report an omnibus rivers, harbors and flood control authorization bill annually thereafter instead of every two to four years.

Supplemental Views. The 11 GOP Committee Members "strongly" opposed authorization of the Dickey-Lincoln, Rowlesburg and Flint River projects. They said Dickey-Lincoln was "strictly a power project" whose power benefits would be 97.8 percent of total benefits; it was based on "inadequate studies"; there were no plans to market the power; it was "questionable" whether the power could be sold at a price sufficient to repay the project costs because a sufficient price would be 15½ mills per kilowatt-hour which was substantially higher than the rate currently charged by private utility companies; and there were "cheaper alternatives" such as thermonuclear power which "could bring lower cost power to New England."

They objected that federal construction of the power features of the Rowlesburg project should not be authorized, "however conditionally, when private power interests are taking active measures to construct this project through private investment instead of at taxpayers' expense." Similarly, they supported private development by the Georgia Power Co. of the power features at the Lazer Creek and Lower Auchumpkee reservoirs in the Flint River Basin which were being authorized in S 2300, and of a third Flint River Basin reservoir, Spewrell Bluff, which had been authorized in the 1963 river basin bill.

In other supplemental views, Frank M. Clark (D Pa.) opposed the Dickey-Lincoln School project.

FLOOR ACTION

The House Sept. 22 passed S 2300 by voice vote. Before passage the House, on a 207-185 (D 86-180; R 121-5) roll call, gave the Administration a major defeat by agreeing to an amendment by Rep. Frank M. Clark (D Pa.) to delete the $227 million Dickey-Lincoln School hydroelectric power project on the St. John River, Maine. As a result of elimination of the project, the bill as passed by the House authorized only 140 projects at a cost of $1,743,228,000, instead of the larger amounts contained in the measure as previously reported. (For voting, see chart p. 1006)

Debate, Voting on Clark Amendment -- A heavy lobbying campaign against the Dickey-Lincoln School project was conducted by the UMWA, the coal industry and the private power industry. Authorization of the project was initially upheld when a Clark amendment to kill the project altogether was rejected on a 100-100 teller vote. However, Clark then offered a slightly modified proposal eliminating the project and it was adopted, first on a 132-130 teller vote, then on the 207-185 roll call.

On the roll call, the New England delegation voted 20-4 (D 14-2; R 6-2) to kill the project. The four New England Congressmen who voted in favor of retaining the project were: Hathaway (D Maine), who had worked consistently and effectively to win support for the project; Tupper (R Maine); Macdonald (D Mass.); and Stafford (R Vt.). The 20 New England Congressmen who voted to kill the project were: Daddario, Giaimo, Grabowski, Irwin, Monagan and St. Onge (all D Conn.); Boland, Burke, Donohue, O'Neill and Philbin (all D Mass.); Bates, Conte, Keith, Martin and Morse (all R Mass.); Fogarty and St. Germain (both D R.I.); Huot (D N.H.); and Cleveland (R N.H.). House Speaker John W. McCormack (D Mass.) did not vote (the Speaker normally does not participate in any votes).

The United Mine Workers of America Journal, in an analysis of the roll call, said that coal-area Congressmen throughout the country had supported the UMWA position and had voted to kill the Maine project by a 44-26 (D 20-25; R 24-1) margin. (See chart p. 389)

In support of deleting the project from the bill, Clark contended it would increase, rather than reduce, power rates in the area because high rates would have to be charged in order to repay project costs. In addition, he said, it would slow construction of thermonuclear power plants which held "the best prospects of reducing power costs" for the region and which used "many, many thousands of tons of coal."

Other Disputes -- In action on other power projects, the House rejected by voice vote an amendment to restore the Devils Jump, Ky.-Tenn., project to the bill; rejected by a 69-96 teller vote a John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) amendment to kill the authorization for the pumped-storage power facility at the Rowlesburg dam and reservoir, W.Va.; and rejected by an 87-134 teller vote an amendment by John C. Kunkel (R Pa.) to permit the Georgia Power Co. to build the Flint River power plants.

Baldwin said a federal pumped-storage facility at Rowlesburg should not be authorized until the FPC had acted on the private application to build the facility (a position also taken by the Budget Bureau). Even to authorize federal construction that was contingent upon the FPC turning down Monongahela Power's application (as the bill did as a result of the Randolph amendment in the Senate), Baldwin said, might prejudice the FPC decision. Rep. Staggers (D W.Va.), opposing the amendment, said his state should "not be deprived of this vital project because of the failure or inability of private industry to act promptly." He added that he had been assured by the Monongahela Co. that if its application were approved, "100 percent union coal will be used..."

The Flint River project also involved a public power dispute. Kunkel said private construction of the power features would result in a saving of $52 million for the Government, and private development would generate about $41 million over 50 years in additional federal taxes and about $2.3 million annually in fees for use of the federal dams. John J. Flynt Jr. (D Ga.), chief sponsor of the project, said federal construction of the power features would best assure full development of the river.

PROVISIONS - As passed by the House, S 2300 authorized:

Navigation project (47)	$ 341,388,000
Beach erosion projects (9)	6,681,000
Flood control projects (84)	1,395,159,000
TOTAL	$1,743,228,000

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Sept. 21 -- Robert E. Jones (D Ala.) -- Make clear that the water plan for the Northeastern states must be developed in accordance with the Water Resources Planning Act (PL 89-80). Voice vote.

Sept. 22 -- Ancher Nelsen (R Minn.) -- Authorize credit to local interests for work done since April 1, 1965, on a flood control project at Mankato, Minn., authorized in 1958. Voice.

Frank M. Clark (D Pa.) -- Delete the Dickey-Lincoln School project on the St. John River, Maine, and instead authorize the Corps to make a study of alternative methods of providing power, including thermonuclear power development, and report to Congress by March 30, 1966. Teller, 132-130; roll call, 207-185.

John A. Blatnik (D Minn.) -- Authorize navigation surveys at Popponesset Bay, Mass., and Marquette County, Mich. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Sept. 21 -- Tim Lee Carter (R Ky.) -- Authorize multiple-purpose project at Devils Jumps reservoir, Ky. and Tenn., at an estimated cost of $151 million. Voice.

Frank M. Clark (D Pa.) -- Delete the Dickey-Lincoln School project on the St. John River, Maine. Teller, 100-100.

Sept. 22 -- John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) -- Delete all authority for federal construction of a $45,146,000 pumped-storage facility at the Rowlesburg dam and reservoir, W.Va. Teller, 69-96.

John C. Kunkel (R Pa.) -- Authorize private construction and operation of power facilities at three reservoirs on the Flint River, Ga. (Lazer Creek and Lower Auchumpkee, authorized in S 2300, and Spewrell Bluff, authorized in 1963), if the private company was licensed by the Federal Power Commission within two years. Teller, 87-134.

James C. Cleveland (R N.H.) -- Delete authorization of $75,000 for a study of de-icing methods for use on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence Seaway. Voice.

Conference

REPORT. The conference report on S 2300 was filed Oct. 18 (H Rept 1170). It provided for 149 new projects or major modifications of existing projects, with authorization of $1,985,785,000. Following were the major conference decisions:

Power Projects -- The final bill authorized the Dickey-Lincoln School project, which had been included in the initial Senate bill but dropped on the House floor; the Lazer Creek and Lower Auchumpkee power projects; and the Rowlesburg pumped-storage facility (on the conditional basis described earlier). However, the conferees upheld the House in dropping the Devils Jump project altogether and in eliminating the power features of the Grand River project.

Trinity -- The conferees retained the Trinity River project, Texas, which had been added to the bill by the House Public Works Committee. But the conferees added a Budget Bureau-favored proviso that the purely navigational features not be constructed until further study of costs and allocations.

Other Projects -- The Senate's Maumee River project and the House's Waurika land acquisition provisions were dropped.

Northeast Water Study -- The conferees retained the House provision authorizing a long-range Northeast water study by the Army Engineers.

Small Project Authorizations -- They also retained the House provision permitting projects under $10 million to be authorized merely by resolutions of the House and Senate Public Works Committees.

Other -- A Senate provision relating to purchases of evidences of indebtedness and a House provision authorizing a Chesapeake Bay water study were retained with minor changes. (See "PROVISIONS," above, for details.)

ACTION. The Senate Oct. 19 by voice vote and the House Oct. 20 by a 221-139 (D 200-49; R 21-90) roll call agreed to the conference report, clearing the bill for the President. (For voting, see chart p. 1020)

The major House debate involved the Dickey-Lincoln School project. While no effort was made to recommit the conference report with instructions to kill the project, opponents of the project urged their colleagues to vote against the whole report. Bill sponsors, however, successfully urged support of the compromise bill, pointing out that it provided projects for 240 Congressional districts.

Discussing the Administration-opposed provision permitting the Public Works Committees to authorize small projects of $10 million and under, Rep. John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) said legal advisers from some executive agencies had "implied" to conferees "that they may recommend a veto because they feel that the constitutional powers of the Executive Branch may be jeopardized by this provision."

PRESIDENT'S COMMENTS. President Johnson signed the bill Oct. 27 (PL 89-298), after issuing an Oct. 26 statement saying he would ask Congress in 1966 for repeal of the provision on small project authorizations, and in the meanwhile had instructed the Army Engineers not to make use of the provision. (For details of statement, see "Major Controversies," above.)

NORTHEAST DROUGHT

A fourth successive year of drought in the Northeast brought federal action in 1965 to help relieve severe water shortages. The federal assistance took the form of financial and technical aid; a speedup of work on several federal water projects; and the initiation of several long-range water studies for the area.

BACKGROUND -- The drought started in October 1961. It was marked by below-average rainfall in much of the 13-state area from Maine to Virginia. With rainfall proving inadequate to replenish reservoirs depleted by heavy summertime use, water reserves dropped progressively. By the summer of 1965, water shortages became critical in parts of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and several other states. Some of the hardest-hit areas, like New York City and Philadelphia, installed water-saving schemes, such as campaigns to plug leaks or to limit the use of water for car-washing, watering of lawns and air conditioning.

While these efforts resulted in substantial savings of water, experts said that a fifth summer of drought conditions might have disastrous consequences for some of the areas involved unless additional steps were taken to capture and conserve all existing and potential supplies of water. Moreover, many contended, with population rising rapidly, long-range plans should be drafted to assure adequate water supplies through new reservoir construction, the cleaning up of polluted rivers and related methods.

FEDERAL ASSISTANCE

Action Initiated. In response to the conditions described above, President Johnson intervened with both long-term and short-term aid to the drought-stricken areas. The President July 14, 1965, directed the Federal Water Resources Council to undertake a rapid survey of ways to help relieve the Northeast water shortage. The Council's first report and recommendations were issued July 21, followed by a "situation report" Aug. 7 from the Secretary of Interior, Stewart L. Udall (chairman of the Council), containing further information and recommendations. The Council issued additional reports on the Northeast water situation on Sept. 7 and in 1966 (March 1). Nearly all the subsequent federal actions described immediately below were based on the July 21 and Aug. 7 reports.

Emergency Conference Actions. On the basis of the Water Resources Council's July 21 report and Udall's Aug. 7 "situation report," President Johnson invited the Governors of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, and the mayors of New York City, Philadelphia, Newark, Camden and Jersey City -- the hardest hit states and cities -- to an emergency water conference in the nation's capital which began Aug. 11. On Aug. 18, Mr. Johnson announced that the participants had reached agreement on a series of emergency measures to relieve water shortage problems. The details of the agreement, based in part on Council recommendations, were worked out by state and local officials in cooperation with "water crisis teams" under the direction of Udall and the Chief of Army Engineers. The actions taken in accord with the agreement were as follows:

(1) The President Aug. 18 declared portions of the states involved as a limited disaster area under the terms of the federal disaster relief law (PL 81-875, enacted originally in 1950). The President's action permitted the areas to receive special aid from the Office of Emergency Planning. The aid took the form of money for construction of some of the structures described below.

(2) The Army Engineers were instructed to install an emergency pump-pipeline system at Lake Hopatcong, N.J., to relieve the critical water situation in northern New Jersey. For the same purpose, the Interior Department was to drill emergency wells in the underground Passaic Lake to develop standby water supplies. These actions were subsequently taken with funds from OEP.

(3) The Federal Government further agreed to provide funds (through the OEP) to help Philadelphia speed up work on its Torresdale water intake in order to complete it by Dec. 1.

(4) New York State agreed to speed up a start of construction on New York City's Chelsea intake. Conference participants set the goal of completing the Chelsea intake within six months after construction began.

(5) New York City and Philadelphia ended a dispute over 200 million gallons of reservoir water from New York City reservoirs on the Delaware River, which New York had been releasing daily to keep salt water from backing up the Delaware River below Philadelphia. Philadelphia had wanted the releases continued lest the salt foul the Philadelphia water supply system, but New York City had contended it needed the water for its own uses. Under the Aug. 18 agreement, the 200 million gallons was to be held as an emergency "water bank" for use by either city if critically needed; and in the meanwhile, the Federal Government would help find alternative sources of water for release into the Delaware to protect Philadelphia from the backup of salt. (Subsequently, the Army Engineers put measures into effect at the Francis E. Walter flood control reservoir on the Lehigh River which provided water for additional Delaware River streamflow to protect Philadelphia; and the several private power companies agreed to release water from their reservoirs on the Delaware River system for similar purposes.)

(6) Several other measures, including efforts to conserve water within cities, were also agreed on.

President's Long-Range Requests. Most of the actions agreed upon Aug. 18 had an emergency character. At the Aug. 11 opening of the emergency water conference, Mr. Johnson also announced a series of long-range federal actions to help solve the Northeast's water problems on a permanent basis, as follows:

Water Project Speedup -- The President said he would ask Congress for special funds to speed up work or planning, or to initiate modifications, on several federal reservoirs being built or planned by the Army Engineers on the Delaware River and tributaries, with a view toward making more water storage capacity available sooner.

He specified that he would ask for: $400,000 more than previously budgeted for fiscal 1966 for the Tocks Island, Pa.-N.J.-New York, reservoir; $400,000 more for Beltzville reservoir, Pa.; $100,000 more for Blue Marsh reservoir, Pa.; $150,000 more for modification of Prompton reservoir, Pa.; and $200,000 more for Trexler reservoir, Pa. All these funds were requested by Mr. Johnson Aug. 13 (S Doc 48) and were subsequently added to the fiscal 1966 public works appropriations bill (HR 9220 -- PL 89-299) by the Senate Appropriations Committee and retained in conference on that bill, thus complying with Mr. Johnson's request.

Water Study -- Mr. Johnson also said he was "initiating" a $4 million study of Northeast water problems from Maine to Virginia. He was referring to the Army Engineers' proposed North Atlantic Regional Framework Study -- a broad general study (without specific project recommendations) of water resources and problems in the North Atlantic states. An authorization for the study (and for similar ones in other areas) was already contained in the version of the omnibus water project authorization bill (S 2300) reported in the Senate July 19. S 2300 as later signed into law (PL 89-298) retained this authorization. The President in his Aug. 13 request (S Doc 48) for a speedup on water projects also requested $61,000 (not previously budgeted) to initiate the North Atlantic Regional Framework Study. The funds were granted in the fiscal 1966 public works money bill (HR 9220 -- PL 89-299).

Pollution, Salinity Studies -- The President also said he had directed Dr. Donald F. Hornig, director of the Office of Science and Technology, to prepare two studies within the next six months: (1) a study, in cooperation with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, to produce a special plan for pollution control in the Northeast; and (2) a study, in cooperation with the Saline Water Office of the Interior Department, the Atomic Energy Commission and the Council of Economic Advisers, to "examine the potential of desalting" (saline water conversion plants) in the Northeast. Both studies had been completed as of March 28, 1966, but had not yet been released by the White House or any of the agencies involved.

Other Executive Actions. In other federal actions against the drought and its effects, the Agriculture Department made emergency loans to farmers affected by the drought; authorized grazing (normally forbidden) on conservation reserve lands where livestock was endangered by lack of forage; and provided other types of special agricultural assistance.

In addition, the Army Engineers, Weather Bureau, Geological Survey and other federal agencies provided continual technical assistance on water matters to the states, towns and cities of the Northeast with a view toward improving the gathering and conservation of water.

Special Northeast Project Study. In addition to the various studies and surveys described above, the House Public Works Committee Sept. 1 adopted a motion of Rep. Robert E. Jones (D Ala.) to add to the omnibus water projects bill (S 2300) a provision directing the Army Engineers, in cooperation with other federal, state and local officials, to work out a comprehensive regional plan -- including specific project recommendations -- to meet Northeastern water needs. The plan was to provide for: a system of major reservoirs; aqueducts and other water conveyance facilities to exchange water between various Northeastern river basins; and major water purification facilities. Jones' provision remained in the bill and was signed into law when S 2300 was approved by the President Oct. 27 (PL 89-298). The first funds for this study were requested ($76,000) in the President's Jan. 24, 1966, Budget document.

WATER RESOURCES PLANNING ACT PASSED BY CONGRESS

S 21 -- Reported, amended, by the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 68) Feb. 24, 1965.

● Passed by voice vote of the Senate Feb. 25.

HR 1111 -- Reported, amended, by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 169) March 15.

S 21 -- Passed, amended to include the provisions of HR 1111, by voice vote of the House March 31, after the House had passed HR 1111 by a 384-0 roll call. (See p. 946)

● Conference report (H Rept 603) agreed to by voice votes of the House July 13 and Senate July 14.

PL 89-80 -- Signed into law July 22.

President Johnson July 22 signed into law (PL 89-80) the Water Resources Planning Act (S 21), which provided for federal and regional coordination of plans for water resource development. Mr. Johnson called the measure "a valuable tool for planning what we are going to have to do at every level, federal, state and local." He said, "I think the day is past when the nation can afford to listen to, or laugh smugly with, those who have gone about slandering our water resources projects throughout the years as pork barrel and boondoggle."

S 21 gave statutory authority to the ad hoc Federal Water Resources Council and authorized creation of federal-state river basin planning commissions. It further authorized $5 million a year for 10 years (fiscal 1967-1976) in federal matching grants to states for planning of water resource programs. An additional authorization of $6,700,000 a year (with no termination date) was made for operation of the Act.

Supporters of S 21 said that proper utilization of the nation's water resources was vital because demand for water for industrial, municipal, recreation and agricultural purposes was expected to double in the next 15 years. The House report on the bill said that "as our limited water supplies dwindle in relation to our national needs, choices among alternative uses will have to be made." To achieve maximum benefits from existing water resources, S 21 set up the federal Council to coordinate federal water programs and to review plans drawn up by individual river basin commissions. The commissions were to coordinate federal, state and local water programs within each river basin.

S 21 was specifically requested by President Johnson in his Jan. 25, 1965, Budget Message. (See p. 1351) Both Mr. Johnson and his predecessor, John F. Kennedy, had previously requested similar legislation, arguing that in view of increasing demands for water, it was necessary to assure the best use of existing water resources through coordinated development and planning, instead of permitting federal, state, local and private groups each to proceed with its own (sometimes conflicting) projects. The 1961 Kennedy version of the legislation was blocked, however, by state fears that the river basin commissions and the Council might encroach upon state water rights or give the states insufficient voice in the development of coordinated river basin plans. The states particularly objected to a provision in the 1961 legislation which permitted the President to appoint all the members of the river basin commissions. The states argued that their interests would be represented adequately only if state members of the basin commissions were appointed by the states themselves.

As a result, the legislation was revised in 1963 to permit the states to appoint state members of the river basin planning commissions. While the 1963 bill failed to clear Congress, the revised appointment procedure helped to reduce state opposition.

Consequently, when S 21 was considered in 1965, with provisions which authorized the states to appoint state members of the river basin planning commissions, little opposition to the bill was expressed. S 21 also provided additional assurances to the states against encroachment on their rights by making clear that nothing in the bill was intended to alter existing jurisdiction over water resources planning, development and control; and that the bill did not empower the Council or basin commissions to authorize or build projects -- merely to carry on studies and planning activities.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, S 21, the Water Resources Planning Act:

Title I. Established a Federal Water Resources Council, composed of the Secretaries of Interior, Agriculture, Army and Health, Education and Welfare and the Chairman of the Federal Power Commission. The Council chairman would be designated by the President.

Directed the Council to assess biennially the adequacy of water supplies in each region of the United States; evaluate regional and river basin water plans in relation to water needs; coordinate the administration of federal water programs; and establish standards and procedures for federal water projects.

Title II. Authorized the President to establish regional federal-state river basin commissions to prepare and keep up-to-date comprehensive water resource plans. The President could establish a commission on the recommendation of the Water Resources Council or a state Governor, but each commission must be approved by half the states in the basin except for the Upper Colorado River and Columbia River Basins, where approval by three-fourths of the states was required. The commission chairman was to be appointed by the President, and the vice chairman to be elected by the state members. Each commission would include one representative of each interested federal agency, one member from each state in the basin, one from any interstate agency involved, and (where appropriate) one from the U.S. section of any international commission that had been created by a Senate-approved treaty that had jurisdiction over waters in the basin. State members were to be appointed by state Governors or by any other method which state law prescribed.

Directed each commission to coordinate federal, state, interstate, local and private water development plans for the basin; to prepare and keep up-to-date a comprehensive joint development plan, including an evaluation of alternative programs; and to establish priorities for the collection of basic data, for planning and for construction of projects. The comprehensive plans were to be submitted to the Water Resources Council.

Specified that the states and all other agencies represented on the commissions should have an opportunity to submit written comments on the final plan before it was forwarded to the Council. The commissions could then make any modifications they agreed upon, based on the comments. The comments would be made part of the final record submitted to the Council. Specified that where a commission failed to reach a consensus on particular points, both the federal chairman (on behalf of federal members) and the state vice chairman (on behalf of the state members) should submit their positions in writing as part of the record.

Provided that the federal chairman of each river basin commission should be paid by the Federal Government (at up to Grade GS-18 if full-time); that any federal agency representative or member of an international commission appointed to a river basin commission should be paid by the Federal Government; but that state members should be paid by the states, and interstate agency members by the interstate agency which they represented. Provided that each basin commission should determine what share of its expenses should be borne by the Federal Government (subject to approval of the Water Resources Council), with the remaining expenses "apportioned as the commission may determine" among the non-federal members.

Title III. Authorized federal grants of $5 million a year for 10 years (fiscal 1967-1976) to the states for planning of water and related land resource programs. The funds would be allotted by the Water Resources Council based on population, land area, need for planning and financial need of each state. In order to receive assistance, a state must include in its planning provisions for both intrastate and interstate waters, coordination with other state planning programs and coordination with federal-state recreation planning. The maximum federal share of each state program was set at 50 percent. In addition to the 50 states, funds were also made available to the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Title IV. Authorized $300,000 a year for operating expenses of the Council; $6 million for the Federal Government's share of the operation of river basin commissions; and $400,000 a year for administration of the grant program. No more than $750,000 a year would be available for the operation of any individual river basin commission.

Disclaimed any intention to "expand or diminish" existing federal and state jurisdiction or rights over water resources planning, development or control.

Declared that nothing in the Act authorized study of interbasin water transfers.

Background

REFERENCES -- "Congress and the Nation," p. 800-907; 1961 Almanac p. 452; 1962 Almanac p. 69; 1963 Almanac p. 467; 1964 Almanac p. 501.

Proposals for a central national water planning agency and for regional natural resources development or planning agencies, including river basin commissions, had a long history. During New Deal days, the National Resources Planning Board functioned from 1933-43 as federal coordinator of natural resource needs and plans for resources development, but it was killed by Congress in 1943 for fear of excessive centralization of power. Also during the New Deal period, a regional water development agency was set up for one area -- the Tennessee Valley Authority, authorized in 1933. Despite President Roosevelt's "Seven TVAs" message of June 3, 1937, and repeated requests by President Truman for establishment of similar agencies for the Columbia, Missouri and other river basins, no further regional development agencies were set up by Congress. The states feared encroachment on their water rights and powers; and both they and conservative groups feared increased centralization of power in the Federal Government.

Nevertheless, attempts were made to provide some form of coordinated water planning, at least for federal projects. On Dec. 29, 1943, a Federal Inter-Agency River Basin Committee was established, consisting of the heads of the major federal water agencies. The Committee was, in effect, an ad hoc grouping which attempted to coordinate the water projects and planning activities of the different federal water agencies. Its name was changed in 1954 to the Inter-Agency Committee on Water Resources. On Oct. 6, 1961, President Kennedy ordered the establishment of a Federal Water Resources Council, which he hoped would eventually become a real central water planning agency rather than just an ad hoc coordinating group. But in the absence of a Congressional funds authorization and specific statutory authority, the Council had no staff of its own and did not perform the functions of a true central planning agency.

In the meanwhile, numerous special study commissions, beginning with President Truman's Water Resources Policy Commission in its December 1950 report, recommended the establishment of river basin planning commissions. The latest such recommendation was that of the Senate Select Committee on National Water Resources in January 1961.

1961-64 Legislative Action. Bills to establish a national water resources council and create river basin commissions, as recommended by the Senate Select Committee on National Water Resources in 1961, were requested by President Kennedy in 1961 (S 2246, HR 8177) but received no action in 1961 or 1962. However, after the legislation was revised to permit the states to select their own members of the commissions (instead of having the President choose all river basin commission members), the Senate passed the new version of the bill (S 1111) Dec. 4, 1963. Though reported in the House Sept. 2, 1964, and endorsed by President Johnson, S 1111 failed to receive a rule for floor debate and died when the 88th Congress ended.

1965 Johnson Request. In his Jan. 25, 1965, Budget Message, President Johnson again asked action.

Senate

COMMITTEE ACTION. The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee Feb. 24 unanimously reported S 21 (S Rept 68). The Committee said the Senate Select Committee on National Water Resources, in its 1961 report, had made five recommendations: (1) federal-state development of comprehensive river basin plans; (2) federal grants to the states of $5 million a year for 10 years for water planning; (3) a major federal water research program; (4) biennial federal assessments of the water supply and demand situation in each major water region of the country; and (5) federal-state cooperation to encourage efficiency in water use and development. Recommendation No. 3, the Interior Committee report said, had been carried out by passage of the 1964 Water Resources Research Act. (1964 Almanac p. 507) All the remaining four recommendations would be carried out by S 21, the report said.

The report said the bill was not intended to alter existing federal or state water rights and authorities, or to supplant satisfactory existing river basin planning groups such as the TVA, Columbia Basin Inter-Agency Committee or Delaware Basin Compact Commission. (For Delaware Compact, see 1961 Almanac p. 454.)

Committee amendments to the bill were minor except for language specifying that the Columbia Basin's existing Permanent Engineering Board and various other international groups established under the 1961 Columbia River Basin Treaty should not be affected by the bill, and that the Upper and Lower Colorado River Basins were to be treated as separate basins.

FLOOR ACTION. The Senate Feb. 25 passed S 21 by voice vote, without floor amendments. The Senate version was basically similar to the final version later enacted into law. Both authorized $5 million a year for 10 years in grants to the states for planning (as requested by the Administration); however, the Senate version authorized $10 million a year for contributions to basin commissions, administrative costs and the expenses of the Federal Water Resources Council, while the final version provided only $6,700,000 for these items. (The Administration bill had not specified any amounts for these activities, merely authorizing "such sums as may be necessary.")

House

COMMITTEE ACTION. The House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee March 15 reported (H Rept 169) with minor amendments the companion bill (HR 1111) to S 21. The Committee retained the $5 million annual grants to the states for planning. But it provided $150,000 a year for the Council, $6 million a year for the federal share of river basin commission costs, and $400,000 a year for administrative costs -- a total of $6,550,000 a year for these three items instead of the Senate's $10 million. The Committee said that HR 1111 provided the "comprehensive planning" necessary to resolve the problems of future water supply and various water use requirements.

FLOOR ACTION. The House March 31 passed HR 1111 by a roll call of 384-0, without opposition. After the roll call, the House by voice vote amended S 21 to include the provisions of HR 1111, then passed S 21 by voice vote. (For voting, see chart p. 946)

Conference

REPORT. The conference report on S 21 was filed July 8 (H Rept 603). Major decisions:

- Followed the House financing provisions, but doubled the House's $150,000 a year for the Council, thus providing, in the final bill: $5 million a year for 10 years for grants to the states for planning; $300,000 a year for the Council's expenses; $6 million a year for federal contributions to the river basin commissions; and $400,000 a year for administration of the planning grant program.
- Added a provision, which was in neither the Senate nor the House version, stating that the Act did not authorize studies on transfers of water between river basins. However, Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.), chairman of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, said during floor debate, "There is no intention to indicate such studies are not needed.... It (the provision) simply means that the authority for such studies must be based upon other than this legislation." The provision was added at the behest of Western Senators.
- Accepted the Senate provision that the Columbia River Basin Treaty was not to be affected by the legislation. A spokesman for the House Interior Committee said that agreement on this provision and the one on inter-basin transfer of water was necessary before Western Senators would agree to having the Columbia River Basin included in the over-all scope of the bill.
- Deleted a House provision requiring the Water Resources Council to hold public hearings in connection with the establishment of principles, standards and procedures for federal participation in the preparation of river basin plans and for the formulation and evaluation of federal water projects.

ACTION. The House July 13 and the Senate July 14 agreed by voice votes to the conference report.

COULEE POWER PLANT

A proposal by President Johnson to authorize a third hydroelectric power plant at the Reclamation Bureau's Grand Coulee Dam on the Columbia River in Washington passed the Senate in 1965, but was not reported in the House.

The measure (S 1761) was approved by voice vote of the Senate June 16.

Before passage, the Senate by voice vote adopted an amendment by Gordon Allott (R Colo.) authorizing up to $364,310,000 for construction of the power plant. The figure was based on costs estimated in April 1964. On offering the amendment, Allott, a member of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, said the Committee had been following "a uniform policy of not making open-end authorizations.... This is the stock language which we have included in other similar reclamation bills." Committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.) agreed to the amendment.

S 1761 had a threefold purpose: to avoid a power shortage predicted for the Pacific Northwest by 1973; to provide additional peaking power for the Southwest through the Pacific Northwest-Pacific Southwest interties; and to enable the U.S. to take full advantage of additional water storage resulting from construction of dams under the 1961 Columbia River Treaty with Canada. The proposed plant would add 3.6 million kilowatts to the 2-million kilowatt capacity of the existing plants, making the Columbia Basin hydroelectric development project the largest in the world. The cost of the plant was repayable with interest over a 50-year period, and revenues were expected to exceed repayments by nearly $1 million annually.

BACKGROUND -- President Johnson April 13 endorsed S 1761 and said construction of the power plant was "the next logical step" following: (1) the 1964 Canadian ratification of the 1961 Columbia River Treaty for cooperative development of the Columbia River and (2) Congressional approval in August 1964, of a four-line extra-high voltage transmission intertie between the Pacific Northwest and Pacific Southwest, which would help provide the means to market power from Grand Coulee in other areas. (1964 Almanac p. 493, 497)

The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee June 10 reported S 1761 without amendment (S Rept 314). It said the bill was supported by all federal agencies and private utilities involved.

NO FINAL ACTION TAKEN ON OCEANOGRAPHY BILL

S 944 -- Reported, amended, by the Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 528) July 29, 1965.

- Passed by voice vote of the Senate Aug. 5.
- Reported, amended, by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee (H Rept 1025) Sept. 17.
- Passed by voice vote of the House Sept. 20.

Administration opposition to a key Senate provision blocked final 1965 action on the federal oceanography coordination bill (S 944). The bill was passed by the Senate and the House in different forms, but did not go to conference in 1965. Its chief sponsor was Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.).

The general aims of S 944 were to upgrade and stimulate federal oceanography efforts, and at the same time improve coordination of existing federal oceanography programs, by enacting a single governing statute that would (1) outline clearly the nation's broad purposes and goals in oceanography; (2) provide specific statutory guidance on objectives for a wide variety of oceanography programs already being conducted (at a cost of about $140 million a year) by more than 20 different federal agencies under scattered authorities; (3) concentrate in a single office or officer of the Government statutory responsibility to coordinate the different agency programs and to advance the over-all state of oceanography.

To achieve these general aims, both the Senate and the House versions of S 944 contained statements outlining broad national goals and program objectives in oceanography; authorized the creation of a special study commission to survey the national oceanography effort and draft recommendations within 18 months for improvements; and authorized funds (Senate, $1 million a year; House, $1.5 million) for centralized planning and coordination of the existing programs.

DISPUTED PROVISION

Where the House and Senate versions differed sharply was on a Senate provision--which was deleted by the House--to establish a Cabinet-level National Council on Marine Resources and Engineering Development in the Executive Office of the President. The Council was to be headed by the Vice President and was to be given statutory authority to coordinate, stimulate and give direction to the activities of the different federal oceanography agencies.

Senate sponsors of the provision argued that only a Council consisting of Cabinet officers, having its own permanent paid staff and having co-equal rank with the other major offices in the Executive Office of the President, would have sufficient prestige and authority to perform the necessary coordinating and planning functions and to upgrade the general status of oceanography among federal scientific programs. They said the existing group responsible for coordinating the various oceanography programs of the different federal agencies (the Interagency Committee on Oceanography) had no staff of its own on a permanent basis, had no statutory powers, had little status and was far below the Cabinet level -- all of which put it in a weak position in its efforts to coordinate programs and advance oceanography. Senate backers of the proposed Council said it would be basically similar to the existing National Aeronautics and Space Council.

The Administration opposed creation of a statutory Council. Spokesmen for the Commerce Department, Budget Bureau and Office of Science and Technology said that the Interagency Committee on Oceanography was doing a good job of coordinating the oceanography activities of the different agencies and should not be supplanted. The Interagency Committee, created in 1959, consisted of representatives of the Coast Guard, Navy, Interior and Commerce Departments and other agencies which carried on specific oceanography programs. The Interagency Committee put out a report each year outlining a proposed over-all oceanography program and budget for the coming year. The Interagency Committee was part of the Federal Council for Science and Technology, a group created by Executive Order in 1959 and headed by Dr. Donald F. Hornig. Hornig was director of the Office of Science and Technology in the Executive Office of the President and as such was the President's chief science adviser. The Interagency Committee was, in effect, subordinate to Hornig and the Office of Science and Technology. The Senate's proposed statutory Council on oceanography would be independent of the Office of Science and Technology and equal to it in rank.

Administration spokesmen said that if it was desired to write a basic statute governing federal activities in the field of oceanography, then the new law should not establish a statutory Council, as did the Senate version of the bill, but should simply vest oceanography planning and coordinating functions in the President and permit him to delegate them as he saw fit. The House version of S 944 complied with the Administration request on these points.

Background

REFERENCES-"Congress and the Nation," p. 943; 1961 Almanac p. 341; 1962 Almanac p. 472; 1963 Almanac p. 460; 1964 Almanac p. 502.

Oceanography received relatively little federal attention until the later 1950s. By then it had become increasingly clear that knowledge about such matters as undersea communications, tides, mineral and food resources were of vital importance for defense and economic purposes.

As a result, spending by federal agencies for oceanography activities began to rise rapidly. Less than $10 million in fiscal 1953, total federal oceanography spending rose to $137.6 million in fiscal 1966. (Earlier estimates put fiscal 1966 higher--at $141.6 million--but the actual figure was $137.6 million.)

In 1959, the Interagency Committee on Oceanography was established to coordinate oceanography activities.

In 1960, Sen. Magnuson and others began to work for legislation to create a basic over-all oceanography statute and to designate a central body with statutory authority to coordinate federal oceanography activities. A bill (S 2692) to this effect was passed by the Senate in 1960 but died through House inaction; a similar bill (S 901) passed by the Senate in 1961 was cleared by the House in 1962 but vetoed by President Kennedy without comment. The Eisenhower Administration in 1960 and the Kennedy Administration in 1961-62 opposed the bills. According to some sources, the Administration in 1961-62 feared that too much public focus on the defense aspects of oceanography would result from the bill. Later Administration comments indicated that Mr. Kennedy's 1962 veto stemmed at least in part from the fact that the 1961-1962 legislation vested coordinating powers in the Office of Science and Technology, rather than directly in the President himself. In 1963, a bill (HR 6997) vesting coordinating powers directly in the President was passed by the House Aug. 5 with Administration support, but died through Senate inaction in 1963 - 1964.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Commerce.

ACTION -- July 29 reported S 944 (S Rept 528) with amendments. The Committee said it had rejected the idea--proposed by some but opposed by the Administration--to establish a federal agency that would take over the direct conduct and administration of all oceanography activities now performed by different federal agencies.

The Committee did, however, include in the bill the Administration-opposed provision to create a statutory, Cabinet-level National Council in the Executive Office of the President to coordinate oceanography programs of the various federal agencies. A letter from the Commerce Department said it "strongly" favored the objectives of the bill but opposed creation of a statutory Council. Instead, it said, coordinating powers should be vested in the President who could then make his own administrative arrangements. If this were done, the letter said, "we would favor the bill." The letter added, "The Interagency Committee on Oceanography has had considerable success in coordinating and stimulating federal oceanographic activities, and we are therefore not aware of overriding reasons for replacing it."

Floor Action

The Senate Aug. 5 passed S 944 without floor amendments.

During the debate, a bipartisan group of Senators supported the bill and complained of a lack of direction in existing federal marine science programs. No opposition was expressed. Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.), in support of the bill, said, "In fiscal year 1966 there will be an expenditure of approximately $141.6 million for the Government's oceanographic programs. This money will be divided between some six executive departments and 22 agencies both for ongoing and new programs. Whether this level of spending has been set too high or too low, and I would suspect the latter, or whether this money will be spent efficiently in terms of national goals, we do not know...We have no explicit statement in law of our over-all goal. We have no real national oceanographic program. We have an oceanographic jigsaw without a frame." Sen. Norris Cotton (R N.H.) said the Administration was "drifting aimlessly on an ocean of indecision, with no plans and no program for marine resource development."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S 944:

Declared that the purposes of federal oceanographic activities were to accelerate development and knowledge of marine resources, encourage private investment in exploration and development, preserve the U.S. role as a leader in the field of marine science, advance education and training in marine science, develop oceanography equipment, and provide for coordinated federal activities and international cooperation in oceanography.

Established in the Executive Office of the President a National Council on Marine Resources and Engineering Development consisting of top federal officials and anyone else the President wished to appoint, and a staff, to develop a comprehensive U.S. oceanography program and to coordinate and review marine science activities conducted by the various federal agencies. Federal officials would include the Vice President (as chairman), the Secretaries of State, Navy, Commerce, Interior and H.E.W., the Atomic Energy Commission chairman and National Science Foundation director.

Established, at the President's discretion, a temporary 15-member Commission on Marine Science, Engineering and Resources, composed of experts, to assist the President and the Council. Of the 15 members, five could be from the Government, five from private industry, and five from universities and research groups.

Authorized the Commission to make recommendations, within 18 months of its creation, for the most effective federal organizational structure for oceanographic activities and for the encouragement of private investment in that area. It would then go out of existence.

Directed the President to transmit to Congress annually a report on federal oceanographic activities with an evaluation of how they met the objectives set forth under the bill. Required that the report contain an estimate of funding requirements of each federal agency for marine science activities, but not contain information classified for national security reasons.

Authorized up to $1 million annually to carry out the purposes of the bill.

House

COMMITTEE -- Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

ACTION -- Sept. 17 reported S 944 (H Rept 1025) with major amendments, as follows:

- Dropped the Senate provision for a statutory Council on Marine Resources and Engineering in the Executive Office of the President and, instead, vested all responsibilities for planning and coordinating oceanography activities in the President. This change complied with the position of the Administration, which had endorsed HR 2218, a bill vesting these powers and responsibilities directly in the President.
- Made establishment of the study Commission on Marine Science, Engineering and Resources mandatory, instead of discretionary with the President.
- Did not specify how many members of the Commission were to be from Government, how many from business and how many from academic life, as had the Senate bill. Raised the annual funds authorization to carry out the bill to $1.5 million, instead of $1 million.

Floor Action

The House Sept. 20 passed the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee version of S 944 by voice vote, without floor amendments. Floor manager Alton Lennon (D N.C.) said the bill would "provide force and cohesion" to the existing Government oceanography programs.

DESALINATION PROGRAM

S 24 -- Reported by Senate Interor and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 319) June 14, 1965.
● Passed by voice vote of the Senate June 16.
HR 7092 -- Reported by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 594) July 7.
S 24 -- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote July 12.
● Conference report (H Rept 720) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate Aug. 5.
PL 89-118 -- Signed into law Aug. 11.

At the request of President Johnson, Congress in 1965 approved a large increase in the research program to develop low-cost water desalination methods. The President Aug. 11 said he was determined on a "great breakthrough" in the program before 1970. Congress, however, did not vote the funds for the five-year program he requested.

The Senate version of S 24 extended the desalination program for five years, from fiscal 1968 through fiscal 1972, and authorized the additional $200 million Mr. Johnson requested for the program. The House, however, insisted on a year-by-year review and approved only a $10 million increase for the last year of the existing law, fiscal 1967. In conference, the Senate agreed to a one-year, $15 million increase and won approval of the five-year extension but without specific authorization of funds for those years. The President's program was approved "for planning purposes," however, conferees said. Subsequently, Congress appropriated $23,151,000 for the Interior Department's Office of Saline Water in fiscal 1966, almost a 50 percent increase over fiscal 1965 funds.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, S 24:

Extended the federal saline water program from June 30, 1967, through June 30, 1972.

Increased the existing fiscal 1967 authorization by $15 million (an additional $20 million previously authorized was still available for appropriation).

Required specific authorizations in the future for fiscal 1968-1972 funds but, by setting a maximum $185 million for this period, indicated approval of the broad five-year plan submitted by the Administration.

Amended the basic law to permit testing and development of modules and components for desalination plants (existing law mentioned only testing by laboratory or pilot plant).

Background

REFERENCES -- Congress and the Nation p. 939-941; 1961 Almanac p. 448-450.

The federal saline water program began in 1952. In that year, Congress authorized $2 million in appropriations for a five-year program of research on converting sea and brackish water into fresh water. Administration of the new program was assigned to the Secretary of Interior, who then created an Office of Saline Water within the Department to carry out the new program.

Behind the initiation of the saline water program lay widespread fears of future water shortages in the United States. The need for fresh water was expected to rise sharply during the second half of the 20th century. One group, the Senate Select Committee on National Water Resources, estimated in its Jan. 30, 1961, final report that U.S. water use would jump from 300.3 billion gallons daily (gross withdrawals) in 1954 to 888.4 billion by the year 2000. If a low-cost method of converting sea and brackish water into fresh water could be found, it was contended, then the nation would have an important reserve against the day when the supply of natural fresh water might prove inadequate.

The 1952 law creating the saline water program was supplemented by additional legislation in 1955, 1958 and 1961. The 1955 and 1961 measures provided funds to broaden the research program and to continue it in existence until June 30, 1967.

Demonstration Plants. The 1958 legislation authorized $10 million for the construction of five federal saline water demonstration plants, which were subsequently built and put into operation.

The five plants were constructed by the Interior Department for $6,378,428. The states contributed $900,000 of that total. Three plants were to demonstrate sea water conversion, and the other two, brackish water conversion.

The first plant, dedicated in 1961 at Freeport, Texas, cost $1,255,712. It converts 1 million gallons per day of sea water by long-tube vertical distillation.

A 250,000 gallon per day plant was built at Webster, S.D., in 1961 for $433,470. It converts brackish water by electrodialysis and produces all water for the city.

In 1962, a plant was dedicated at San Diego, Calif., to convert sea water by multistage flash. The $1,663,246 plant, converting 1 million gallons per day, was dismantled Feb. 26, 1964, and taken to the U.S. Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, after the water supply at the base was cut off by the Cuban government. A new plant was to be built at San Diego.

In 1963, a plant to convert brackish water was dedicated at Roswell, N.M. Costing $1,794,000, the plant was to convert 1 million gallons of water per day by vapor compression but ran into numerous difficulties.

A sea water conversion plant was completed in 1964 at Wrightsville Beach, N.C. The $1,232,000 pilot plant was to convert 200,000 gallons per day by direct freezing, but by 1965 was not operating successfully.

COST PROBLEM

When the federal saline water program began in 1952, it cost from $4 per 1,000 gallons upward to convert salt water to fresh water, too costly to compete with natural fresh water. The program was designed to make salt water economically competitive with fresh water.

Large cost reductions were made, but in 1964 it still cost $1-to-$1.25 per 1,000 gallons to convert salt water. In the early 1960s, fresh water for drinking cost an average of 35 cents per 1,000 gallons, including delivery costs. The price was lower in many areas, and water for irrigation cost only up to 12 cents per 1,000 gallons. It was considered technically possible to use nuclear power to convert salt water for 39 to 45 cents per 1,000 gallons, including delivery costs, but this still was more costly than fresh water in most of the country.

On March 23, 1964, the Office of Science and Technology reported that a high-level research and development program could develop by 1975 combined nuclear energy-salt water conversion plants capable of producing 500 to 800 million gallons of water per day for 20 to 25 cents per 1,000 gallons, plus delivery costs. This would make converted salt water competitive with fresh water in many areas for municipal water supplies, but still too costly for irrigation.

The Interior Department announced Aug. 18, 1964, the signing of an agreement with the Atomic Energy Commission and the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California to study a nuclear energy-salt water conversion plant. If feasible, the plant would supply 50 million to 150 million gallons per day and generate 150,000 to 750,000 kilowatts of energy. The study was designed to determine the costs of producing water and electricity and whether the plant would be economically feasible.

SPEED-UP PLANNED

On July 25 the President ordered the Interior Department and Atomic Energy Commission to develop a plan for an "aggressive and imaginative program" to develop desalination on a large scale. The agencies' report, released Oct. 26, proposed a speeded-up research and development program that would lead to an economically competitive method of desalting water. The report recommended continuation through fiscal 1972 of the 1961 law (PL 87-295) which enlarged and extended the existing saline water research program through June 30, 1967, and a $200 million increase in the authorization. (1961 Almanac p. 448)

In a statement accompanying the report, the President said water shortages had hampered economic development in some sections of the United States and were even more serious in arid developing countries, "where future economic growth is absolutely dependent upon finding new sources of water." Within 10 years, he said, "desalted water will be the cheapest, and in some cases the only way to obtain new water supplies in some areas."

Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall Nov. 20 announced Administration plans for a "crash" program of water desalination. Following a meeting with President Johnson, Udall said the President had "called for an all-out effort" to produce low-cost fresh water from sea water.

On the foreign front, the U.S. Government in 1964 signed agreements for cooperative research on desalination with the governments of Great Britain, Israel and the Soviet Union.

Senate

In a letter to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House March 29, 1965, President Johnson urged action on the Oct. 26, 1964 report of the Secretary of Interior and Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. Draft legislation accompanying the letter proposed to expand, extend and accelerate the salt water conversion research and development that was being conducted by the Department of Interior under the Anderson-Aspinall Act of 1961 (PL 87-295).

Mr. Johnson said, "The legislative proposal would increase by $200 million the $75 million appropriation authorization provided in the 1961 Act and extend through 1972 the time during which the authorized funds would be available...." (For text, see p. 1424)

Bill Reported. The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee reported the Administration bill (S 24 -- S Rept 319) without amendment June 14. The bill had been introduced Jan. 6 by Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.), sponsor of the 1961 Act.

The Committee report said the bill would "permit roughly a fourfold expansion" of the desalination research program and was "intended to lead, within the next few years, to recommendations for the construction of one or more large-scale desalting plants that can fill a real need through the production of (fresh) water for the growing population and industry of America."

The report said large electric power-salt water conversion plants could produce fresh water at a cost of 30 to 35 cents per 1,000 gallons and power at 3 mills per kilowatt but added: "Such costs for water, however, can only be achieved by the construction of a desalting plant about 100 times larger than any yet constructed."

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate June 16 passed S 24 by voice vote and sent it to the House. Referring to the five-year authorization in the bill, Sen. Anderson said S 24 did not constitute a "blank check" to the Interior Department because the Senate Interior Committee planned annual hearings on the state and progress of the desalination program.

House

Bill Reported. The House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee July 7 reported (H Rept 594) a greatly amended version of the Administration's bill (HR 7092), introduced by Chairman Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.), co-sponsor with Sen. Anderson of the 1961 Act.

The Committee amended the bill to provide only a $10 million authorization increase for the remaining year of the 1961 Act, fiscal 1967.

The report said the Committee would "not approve a blank check for $200 million" for an expanded program. "The Committee must retain its legislative responsibility for establishing the guidelines and the direction which the program is to take at this critical stage when it is proposed to be greatly accelerated," the report said. The Committee was particularly interested in making sure that the Government's efforts were focused only on advancing "the art of desalination," while local governments and industry undertook operating responsibilities.

The program was sufficiently detailed for fiscal 1967, the Committee said, to warrant an increase in the authorization ($10 million in new authorization plus carryover of $20 million previously authorized). This was to expand research "modestly" and provide $5.5 million to begin development work on a module for large plants (a 17-million-gallon per day hydraulic system was planned under the bill's new authority for developing modules and components for plants).

FLOOR ACTION

The House July 12 accepted the Committee's bill and substituted its text for that of the Senate's language, S 24, as amended, then was passed by voice vote and sent to conference.

In brief floor discussion, Chairman Aspinall said the Committee recognized the need for extension and expansion of the program, but had denied the $200 million because it felt Congress should oversee and act on the program on a year-by-year basis. He said close oversight would give Congress a voice in potential policy problems such as a balance between basic research and plant development or the question of where federal and local responsibility for projects began and ended.

Conference

REPORT -- Conferees Aug. 3 filed a conference report (H Rept 720) which accepted the House Committee's insistence on only a one-year authorization (raised to $15 million) but also accepted the Senate's five-year extension of the program (fiscal 1968-72) and gave a general endorsement to the planned expansion. Funds for fiscal 1968-72 were to be authorized "hereafter," the bill read, and were "not to exceed $185 million," the sum planned by the Administration.

The report said, "The adoption of this language is not to be interpreted as a lack of confidence in the Executive Branch. The inclusion of the $185 million figure indicates approval for planning purposes of the full program recommended by the President." However, the policy decisions to be made over the next five years "are primarily the responsibility of Congress" and therefore the conferees wished the Interior Department to present a detailed program "on a year-by-year basis."

ACTION -- The conference report was agreed to, without opposition, by voice votes of the House and Senate Aug. 5.

PRESIDENT OUTLINES GOALS

When President Johnson signed S 24 into law Aug. 11 (PL 89-118), he set forth the following goals:

1. Construction by 1970 of desalting plants that will "bridge the gap" between the current 1 million gallon-per-day plants and the 100 million gallon capability "that we must have."

2. Development by 1968 -- or sooner -- of plants from 1 to 10 million gallons per day to meet the needs of small towns and cities, and for use on farms to desalt brackish well water.

3. Development of processes to convert brackish groundwater which underlies 2 million square miles of the United States from the Appalachians to the Rockies.

4. Sharing of newly developed technology with other countries.

International Conference. In an address to delegates of 64 nations attending the First International Symposium on Water Desalination in Washington, D.C., President Johnson Oct. 7 announced the beginning of a "Water for Peace" program. The President said that under the program the United States would join in a "massive cooperative international effort" to improve the worldwide water situation. The President also announced that he would present to the next session of Congress legislation relating to the construction of "prototype" desalination plants "to make the fullest use of our technological discoveries." Mr. Johnson said the United States was prepared to "contribute its share of the resources needed for an international crash program to deal with world water resources."

Delegates witnessed the signing by President Johnson and Mexico's President Diaz Ordaz of a desalination agreement providing for a joint study of the possibility of using nuclear energy on an economically feasible basis, to supply fresh water and electricity in arid areas near the U.S.-Mexican border.

FISHING BILLS

Congress in 1965 enacted two bills which provided financial backing and protective conservation measures for the U.S. fishing industry.

S 998 (PL 89-85) extended for five years the Interior Department's loan program for the commercial fishing fleet. HR 23 (PL 89-304) authorized the initiation of a cooperative conservation and development program for the nation's anadromous fishery resources.

A third bill, S 1734, designed to protect the domestic fishery resources in coastal waters and on the high seas against depredations by Japanese fishermen, was passed only by the Senate.

Fishing Boat Loans

The Administration-backed S 998 authorized an appropriation of $20 million to extend the fishery loan program administered by the Interior Department's Bureau of Commercial Fisheries through June 30, 1970.

The bill also expanded the scope of the program to permit loans to be made regardless of whether the applicant intended the vessel to replace an existing boat, as had been previously required.

BACKGROUND. The U.S. fishing fleet suffered a steady decline in the years following World War II, due chiefly to its antiquated condition and high costs compared with the fleets of other nations. (For Congressional action during this period, see Congress and the Nation, p. 1068-1072.)

In the Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956 (PL 84-1024) Congress authorized $10 million to start a revolving loan fund from which the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries could provide U.S. commercial fishermen with 10-year loans for the improvement, replacement and repair of fishing vessels and equipment. (1956 Almanac p. 591)

In 1958, Congress (in PL 85-888) increased the revolving fund to $20 million for the remaining seven years of the program. Through Jan 31, 1966, the Secretary of the Interior had received 1,759 loan applications totaling $44,777,000, and had approved 900 applications for loans totaling $19,627,000. The current interest rate was 5 percent.

Closely related to the loan fund was the Interior Department's fishing vessel subsidy program, which was first set up in 1960 and reinstated in 1964.

The U.S. Fishing Fleet Improvement Act of 1960 (PL 86-516) authorized the Secretary of the Interior to provide a maximum subsidy of one-third the cost of constructing fishing vessels in domestic shipyards. The subsidies were considered necessary because American fishermen by law must use vessels built only in U.S. shipyards. These are substantially more expensive than vessels built abroad, giving foreign competitors a cost advantage that enables them to operate more cheaply. (1960 Almanac p. 269)

PL 86-516 expired June 12, 1963. In 1964, Congress passed the Fishing Vessel Construction Subsidy Act (PL 88-498) which renewed and expanded the 1960 law by increasing the maximum subsidy from one-third to one-half the construction costs. The new five-year program authorized a $10 million appropriation annually and repealed a provision of the 1960 Act which had in effect limited the subsidies to the New England fishing fleet. (1964 Almanac p. 511)

Under the new law, through Dec. 31, 1965, the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries had received 56 applications for construction subsidies and had approved 25 of them.

ACTION ON S 998. At the request of Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall, Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.), chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, Feb. 4 introduced S 998.

The Senate Commerce Committee June 14 reported the bill (S Rept 325) with amendments which expanded the program to permit loans for new fishing vessels not previously eligible. The Senate June 16 passed the bill by voice vote with the committee amendments.

The House July 12 passed S 998 by voice vote. In floor discussion of the bill, Rep. John D. Dingell (D Mich.) said that "because of the hazardous nature of the fishing industry, most lending institutions are either unwilling or unable to take the risk involved in long-term financing of fishing vessels and equipment." He said the five-year extension of the loan program "would be of great benefit in restoring our commercial fishing fleet, while at the same time providing needed financial assistance to our commercial fishermen."

S 998 was signed into law July 24 (PL 89-85).

Anadromous Fish Conservation

HR 23 authorized the Secretary of Interior to initiate with states or other non-federal interests a cooperative program for the conservation, development and enhancement of the nation's anadromous and Great Lakes fishery resources. The bill authorized $25 million in federal funds over the period ending June 30, 1970, to pay up to one-half the cost of projects. Not more than $1 million could be spent in any one state annually.

HR 23 also required the Secretary to make recommendations to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare concerning the control of polluting substances detrimental to fish and wildlife in interstate and navigable waters.

Anadromous fish are born in fresh water, migrate to salt water and then return to fresh water to spawn and die. They include, among others, salmon, shad, striped bass, alewives and, under HR 23, similar fish in the Great Lakes. Considered valuable both commercially and for recreational purposes, the fish had been depleted in recent years by pollution, dams, channel improvements, ship traffic and over-fishing.

BACKGROUND. HR 23 was designed along the general concepts of the broader Commercial Fisheries Research and Development Act (PL 88-309) passed by Congress in 1964. PL 88-309 authorized a five-year, $28,250,000 program to promote commercial fisheries research and development projects for all species of fish.

Anadromous fish were included under the 1964 law for their commercial value. Legislators, however, felt there was a need for a separate program authorizing additional funds to redevelop the anadromous fish from both the commercial and sporting viewpoints. Such a bill (HR 2392) was passed by the House in 1964 but was not acted upon in the Senate before adjournment of the 88th Congress. (1964 Almanac p. 511, 513)

ACTION ON HR 23. The House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee Sept. 15 reported HR 23 (H Rept 1007), which had been introduced by Rep. Dingell. The House Sept. 20 passed the bill by voice vote.

HR 23 was reported Oct. 11 with amendments by the Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 860). The Senate Oct. 13 agreed to the amendments and passed the bill by voice vote. The amendments were minor changes. One said more clearly that the bill did not apply to the area to which the existing Columbia River salmon program applied, and another limited the amount which could be received by any state in any one year to $1 million -- although allowing, as did the House bill, any state to receive $5 million over the life of the program.

The House Oct. 14 by voice vote concurred in the Senate amendments. HR 23 was signed into law Oct. 30 (PL 89-304).

U.S. Fishery Resources

The unwillingness of Japanese fishermen to agree to limit substantially their catch of North Pacific salmon led to Senate passage of S 1734. The bill permitted the President to increase the duty on fishery imports from any country up to 50 percent above their July 1, 1934, levels when the Secretary of the Interior determined that that country's fishing vessels were being used in such a manner as to diminish the effectiveness of U.S. fishery conservation programs. The House refused to accept the bill on grounds that, because of its tariff provisions, it should have originated in the House in compliance with the revenue-raising section of Article I of the Constitution.

BACKGROUND. Earlier legislation authorizing the President to impose economic sanctions on nations violating fish conservation agreements was passed in 1962 in the Trade Expansion Act (PL 87-794) and in PL 87-814, amending the 1959 Tuna Conventions Act. (1962 Almanac p. 252)

In 1964 Congress enacted a law (PL 88-308) imposing penalties on foreign vessels that fished within U.S. territorial waters or took shellfish and other fish from the U.S. Continental Shelf. (1964 Almanac p. 512)

ACTION ON S 1734. The Senate Commerce Committee May 18 unanimously reported S 1734 (S Rept 194) with amendments. The Committee heard objections to the bill from two groups. The Japan Fisheries Assn. stated that a unilateral attempt by the United States to "exclude Japan from fishing salmon of North American origin" would jeopardize current efforts to renegotiate the North Pacific Fisheries Convention. The American Seafood Distributors Assn. testified that if the bill were passed and high import duties imposed on fishery imports from Japan, "its end result would be to increase prices to the American consumer...." The State Department did not take a stand on S 1734.

The major committee amendment broadened the scope of the bill to protect all domestic fishery resources instead of just North Pacific salmon.

The Senate passed the bill May 19 by voice vote. In brief discussion, Sen. E. L. Bartlett (D Alaska) said S 1734 had "particular importance to the Alaska fishing industry, which has seen the number of Pacific salmon depleted because of wasteful high sea operations by the Japanese." He said Japanese officials had refused "even to sit down and talk," and that passage of the bill might convince them "that the time has come to negotiate sound conservation policies."

The House May 20 adopted H Res 397 by voice vote, refusing to accept S 1734 on grounds that under the Constitution the legislation had to originate in the House. There was no further action on the bill in 1965.

MAJOR PARK, RECREATION LEGISLATION OF 1965

Congress in 1965 built a substantial record in the field of parks and outdoor recreation.

● It completed action on five of 15 Administration-endorsed bills providing for the establishment and financing of major new park or outdoor recreation units in the National Park System and the national forests. Of the remaining 10 measures, the Senate passed five in 1965 but the House took no action. Only a few of these bills were controversial; delays on the others resulted chiefly from the heavy Congressional workload.

Fourteen of the 15 bills contained authorizations specifically requested by President Johnson in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message and in May 11 remarks concerning Ellis Island. The 15th, proposing to create the St. Croix National Scenic Riverway, was endorsed by the Budget Bureau. (See p. 1379 for text of Natural Beauty Message.)

The five major bills on park and recreation units on which Congress completed action in 1965 provided for: (1) Establishment of the Delaware Water Gap (Tocks Island) National Recreation Area, N.J.-Pa. (2) Establishment of the Assateague National Seashore, Md.-Va. (3) Establishment of the Whiskeytown-Shasta-Trinity National Recreation Area, Calif. (4) Establishment of the Spruce Knob-Seneca Rocks National Recreation Area, W.Va. (5) Authorization of $6 million for the development of Ellis Island, in New York harbor, for park purposes.

● Congress also completed action on 14 measures creating minor new units in the National Park System or national forests or enlarging existing units. Although not specifically requested by the President, all 14 bills had Administration endorsement.

● Congress enacted two pieces of general park-and-recreation legislation (dealing with recreation facilities at federal water projects and concessions in the National Park System), and took partial action on a third (authorizing protection for species of fish and wildlife in danger of extinction). The bill on recreation facilities at federal water projects was of major long-range significance. It was an attempt to resolve a long-standing question about how much of the cost of such recreation facilities should be borne by the local community, and how much by the Federal Government. The bill established the first uniform federal-local cost-sharing formula for recreation facilities at federal water projects.

Action on the 15 bills dealing with specific major park and recreation units, and on the 14 bills dealing with specific minor units, is described directly below. The general bills dealing with water project recreation facilities, park concessions and endangered species are covered in separate stories on p. 775, 778 and 779. (For summary of 1964 action on parks and recreation, see 1964 Almanac p. 474.)

Note: Regardless of title ("national park," "national seashore," "national lakeshore," "national recreation area," etc.), all the units described below were essentially park-type areas which were being set aside to preserve or develop their scenic, geologic, recreational or historic qualities.

MAJOR UNITS AUTHORIZED

Delaware Gap Recreation Area. With little debate, Congress passed legislation (HR 89), requested by the President in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message, authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to establish the Delaware Water Gap (Tocks Island) National Recreation Area. The bill was passed by voice votes of the House July 12 and Senate Aug. 13. The House Aug. 17 concurred in a minor Senate amendment by voice vote. The President signed the bill Sept. 1 (PL 89-158).

Description of Project, Provisions -- The new national recreation area was the first authorized east of the Mississippi. It was to consist of 72,000 acres of land and water, including several dozen small natural lakes and the 12,000-acre reservoir being formed by construction of the Tocks Island Dam by the Army Engineers. Plans to create the new recreation area had been active since at least 1962, when Congress authorized federal construction of the Tocks Island Dam on the Delaware River at the northern corner of the New Jersey-Pennsylvania border, about 95 miles north of Philadelphia and 75 west of New York. (1962 Almanac p. 457)

The reservoir itself was to be 37 miles long, with 100 acres of shoreline. The 1965 legislation authorized the Army Engineers to acquire 47,675 acres of surrounding land, mostly privately owned, which, when added to the land already acquired for the reservoir and to the surface area of the reservoir, would total about 72,000 acres. This area would be turned over to the Secretary of the Interior to be administered as a national recreation area. HR 89 directed the Secretary to administer the area for the purpose of providing public outdoor recreation benefits (such as swimming, fishing, camping); scenic, scientific and historic features; and such uses of natural resources as did not interfere with the above purposes. He could allow hunting and fishing in some areas.

The bill authorized $37,412,000 for land acquisition by the Army Engineers, plus $18,200,000 for construction of recreational and related facilities by the Interior Department. Areas authorized for inclusion were all in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, but HR 89 authorized studies to determine whether lands upstream, in New York State, should be added later.

The new national recreation area was intended to provide a major outdoor recreation facility for one of the nation's most crowded areas. The Senate report (S Rept 598) said the new recreation area had 30 million persons living within easy driving distance, would have 10 million visitors a year within a few years and 150,000 a day during the summer peak.

Assateague National Seashore. A second major new public park and recreation area requested by the President in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message and subsequently authorized in 1965 was Assateague Island National Seashore, consisting of the 35-mile-long Assateague Island and surrounding waters off the coasts of Maryland and Virginia. The authorizing legislation (S 20) was passed by voice vote of the Senate June 17, and passed with amendments -- based on the provisions of a corresponding House bill (HR 2071) -- by voice vote of the House Sept. 7.

The Senate Sept. 15 agreed by voice vote to the House amendments. The President Sept. 21 signed S 20 into law (PL 89-195).

Description of Project -- The new national seashore was to include 39,630 acres of land and water, including all of Assateague Island itself. Of the 19,096 land acres, 9,453 were already owned by the Federal Government, 922 were owned by the states of Maryland and Virginia, and 8,721 were in private ownership. The Federal Government already maintained Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge on about six miles of the southern end of the island. Maryland was developing about 9 miles at the northern end as a state park. The remaining part was under limited private development. The House report (H Rept 893) said only 16 private summer cottages and 14 hunting lodges had actually been built.

Sen. Daniel B. Brewster (D Md.), one of the bill's sponsors, said Assateague was "the largest remaining undeveloped seashore between Cape Cod and Cape Hatteras," and within a 250-mile radius of the island there were about 34 million people. He said 3 million visitors a year were anticipated by 1975.

Debate -- Sponsors of the bill said preservation of Assateague as a national seashore was urgent because of the great need for recreation in the crowded East; because Assateague was one of the few remaining available shore areas; and because Maryland court rulings which required the state health department to grant permits for private water and sewage disposal systems on the island, coupled with completion of bridges granting ready access, would make rapid private development inevitable unless federal action were taken right away. The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee report (S 331) said the "principal opposition" to S 20 came from the officials of Worcester County, Md., within which much of the island was located, who feared loss of tax revenues, and from "many of the lot owners who make up the membership of the Ocean Beach Club Inc." The Committee was "sympathetic to their desire for private development," but in view of the limited existing development, it felt that "the public interest could best be served by the creation of the national seashore."

Provisions -- The final bill authorized the Interior Department, in order to establish the seashore, to acquire the privately owned land by whatever methods necessary (although allowing those with lodges and cottages to retain residence rights for 25 years for non-commercial purposes), and to acquire state-owned lands with the consent of the states involved. For land acquisition, the bill authorized $16,250,000; and for the development of recreational and related facilities, whatever amounts might prove necessary. The bill contemplated that Maryland would continue to develop a state park at the northern end of the island, and it authorized the Secretary of the Interior to continue to operate the Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge at the southern end. The bill permitted the Secretary to allow hunting and fishing under certain conditions, and directed him to administer the new seashore, in general, for public outdoor recreation purposes (particularly the use of outstanding ocean beaches) and conservation of natural features.

The bill authorized the Secretary to acquire the bridge connecting to the mainland at the southern end of the island; and to pay the State of Maryland $1 million or two-thirds of the cost of a bridge connecting to the mainland at the northern end (whichever was less), if the state agreed to operate the bridge toll-free.

The final bill also authorized the Secretary to build a road connecting the above two access bridges, but left the route to him. The House report said that, to avoid running the road down the island through the existing wildlife refuge, it might be necessary to route parts of it off the island itself. The final provision was acceptable to conservation groups, which had feared that the original Senate provision on this point might require a road running through the refuge, thus spoiling the refuge.

The bill also authorized the Secretary to set aside areas in the Maryland and Virginia portions of the island for concessioners to operate public accommodations for visitors, including overnight accommodations.

President's Remarks -- President Johnson, signing the bill Sept. 21, said he had asked Interior Department and other federal officials "to put under the microscope every acre" of land at Defense Department installations which had been declared surplus to defense uses, in order to see if that land might be useful for park and recreation purposes.

Whiskeytown-Shasta-Trinity. A third major addition to federal park and recreation areas authorized in 1965 was the Whiskeytown-Shasta-Trinity National Recreation Area in northern California. Establishment of the area was requested by the President in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message. The authorizing legislation (HR 797) was passed by voice votes of the House July 12 and the Senate Oct. 21, and signed into law by President Johnson Nov. 8 (PL 89-336).

Description of Project -- The new recreation area, designed chiefly for water-based outdoor recreation, was to consist of three noncontiguous units -- Whiskeytown, Shasta and Trinity -- surrounding reclamation reservoirs at the northern end of California's Central Valley, 200 miles north of San Francisco and 300 miles south of Portland, Ore. The Whiskeytown unit, which included the Whiskeytown reservoir, would total about 42,000 acres of land and water; the Shasta unit, which included the Shasta reservoir, about 129,000 acres; and the Trinity unit, which included the Clair Engle (formerly Trinity) and Lewiston reservoirs, about 83,500 acres -- a grand total of 255,000 acres of land and water for the three units combined. The shorelines in the four reservoirs totaled 560 miles.

Of the 255,000 acres in the three units, about 184,600 were already owned by the Federal Government, and another 1,250 acres by the State of California. The remaining 70,000 acres, chiefly privately owned, would be acquired by purchase and condemnation.

The Whiskeytown unit was to be administered by the Interior Department. The Shasta and Trinity units (which were mostly within the existing Agriculture Department-administered Shasta-Trinity National Forest) were to be administered by the Agriculture Department.

Debate -- The House report (H Rept 535) said the new recreation area would serve San Francisco; Portland, Ore.; Reno, Nev.; and a number of other cities. The report said the area would "serve the same purposes as the Delaware Valley Area will serve in the East -- namely, preserving in comparatively undeveloped condition large open acres of land, centered on federal reservoir developments, in order to provide outdoor recreation opportunities for millions...." It estimated that use would reach 5-1/4 million visitor-days a year by 1975.

(Continued on next page)

Provisions -- The final bill authorized the establishment of the Whiskeytown-Shasta-Trinity National Recreation Area, and directed the Interior Department to administer the Whiskeytown unit and the Agriculture Department to administer the Shasta and Trinity units. The bill authorized $21.6 million for land acquisition by the two agencies, plus $22.7 million for development of recreational and other facilities.

The Interior and Agriculture Secretaries, each within his own area of jurisdiction, were authorized to acquire lands and other property necessary for establishment of the area, reserving for the current owner any interests or right of use which they deemed appropriate. No property owned by California or its political subdivisions could be acquired without the owner's consent. Owners of improved residential property which was acquired could retain the right of use and occupancy for specified periods; such property could not be acquired without the owner's consent if its use conformed to local zoning laws approved by the appropriate Secretary. The Secretaries were directed to administer the area to provide for outdoor recreation, conservation of scenic, scientific, historic and other values contributing to the public enjoyment and use and disposal of renewable natural resources which would not impair preservation of the other values. Hunting and fishing could be permitted, but mineral development was prohibited except where the Interior Secretary permitted removal of nonleasable minerals which would not be seriously inconsistent with the purposes of the area.

Spruce Knob Recreation Area. Still a fourth major park-type area requested by President Johnson in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message was the Spruce Knob-Seneca Rocks National Recreation Area in West Virginia, in the drainage area of the south branch of the Potomac River. Legislation authorizing establishment of the area was passed (S 7) by voice votes of the Senate July 23 and the House Sept. 7 (after the House had substituted the provisions of a similar House bill, HR 10330). The Senate Sept. 14 agreed to the House amendments by voice vote. The President signed S 7 into law Sept. 28 (PL 89-207).

Description of Project -- The new recreation area was to be administered by the Agriculture Department. It was to consist of 100,000 acres, including Spruce Knob, Seneca Rocks and other natural formations. About 82 percent of the total area was forested. Of the 100,000 acres, 40,000 were federal lands which lay within the existing Monongahela National Forest and were already administered by the Agriculture Department's Forest Service, primarily for forest and scenic purposes and only secondarily for recreation. An additional 56,000 acres lay within the exterior boundaries of the Monongahela National Forest but were privately owned. The remaining 4,000 acres were privately owned lands outside the Monongahela National Forest boundaries. All these private lands would be acquired by the Agriculture Department. Sponsors said the area had outstanding potential for winter and summer outdoor sports. They said 27 million people lived within 100 miles of the area, 60 million within 300 miles. Anticipated use was 1 million visitor-days annually by 1970.

Provisions -- The final bill authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to establish and administer the Spruce Knob-Seneca Rocks National Recreation Area; directed him to develop winter and summer outdoor recreation facilities; and in administering the area, to seek to provide public outdoor recreation benefits, to conserve scenic, scientific and historic values, and to permit the use of natural resources where this would not interfere with recreational development. Hunting and fishing were to be permitted under certain conditions. The bill did not authorize any specific amounts of money, but the estimated cost of land was $3.5 million and of development of facilities, $16,280,000.

Ellis Island. President Johnson in a May 11 proclamation ended 12 years of uncertainty over the fate of Ellis Island, the former immigration center in New York harbor, by making the 27.5-acre island a part of Statue of Liberty National Monument. (The Statue of Liberty was located on a nearby island in the harbor and had had the status of a national monument since 1924.) The President's action was taken under the Antiquities Act of 1906, which authorized the President by proclamation to set aside federal lands, if they were outstanding for some scenic or historic quality, as "national monuments," to be administered under the general laws applicable to national parks and to be safeguarded from commercial exploitation or ruin. In his May 11 proclamation, the President specified that no funds should be spent to develop facilities for sightseeing on Ellis Island unless authorized by Congress. In signing the proclamation, the President remarked that he was asking Congress to authorize the necessary development funds.

Subsequently, Congress without dispute passed by voice votes of the House July 12 and the Senate Aug. 3 a bill (H J Res 454) authorizing $6 million for development of facilities on Ellis Island, of which no more than $3 million was to be available during the first five years after enactment of the bill. The President signed H J Res 454 Aug. 17 (PL 89-129).

Description of Project -- Ellis Island was the nation's major immigration depot from 1892-1954. During that time, more than 16 million persons (or 70 percent of all immigrants during that period) entered the United States through Ellis Island. With declining immigration, the depot was shut down as an immigration center in 1954, but Ellis Island remained in federal hands, unused. The Senate report on the bill (S Rept 508) said none of the proposals for disposal of the island "has received as wide support as has the proposal to retain it in federal ownership and to develop it as part of the National Park System."

The Committee said the funds authorized by H J Res 454 would be used to rehabilitate the main immigration building as a public museum, to restore the ferry basin, seawall and utilities, to landscape the grounds for public park use with emphasis on the island's history, and to provide restaurant facilities.

MAJOR UNITS NOT AUTHORIZED

Cape Lookout Seashore. Congress failed to complete action in 1965 on a bill (S 251) authorizing the Cape Lookout National Seashore. Creation of the seashore was requested by President Johnson in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message. The Senate passed S 251 July 27 by voice vote, but the House did not take action in 1965. (However, the House subsequently passed S 251, amended, Feb. 16, 1966, and the bill was cleared Feb. 28, 1966.)

As passed by the Senate (and subsequently by the House in 1966), S 251 authorized the creation of a 30,000-acre national seashore (of which 10,000 acres would be water) along a 58-mile stretch of the North Carolina coast, beginning at Ocracoke Inlet (just south of the existing Cape Hatteras National Seashore) and running southward to Beaufort Inlet. Nearly all of the land area for the Cape Lookout Seashore was to be donated by North Carolina. S 251 authorized $3.2 million for acquiring the approximately 2,700 acres of private land to be purchased, and for development costs in the first five years.

Indiana Dunes. The Senate June 21 by voice vote passed a bill (S 360), requested by the President in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message, authorizing the Interior Secretary to establish an 11,292-acre Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore along Indiana's Lake Michigan shoreline between Gary and Michigan City. The bill authorized $23 million for acquisition of the necessary acreage, which, according to the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee June 16 report (S Rept 334), included exceptional sand dunes, marshes, a white sandy beach and other areas "ideally suited" for swimming, hiking, fishing and other outdoor recreation and scenic uses. It estimated attendance of 1.2 million by the sixth year and 2 million by the 15th.

Although passed by the Senate, S 360 and companion House bills (HR 51, others) received no House action in 1965 and were still pending at the end of the 1965 session. However, House action in 1966 appeared likely because of a provision, inserted in the 1965 omnibus rivers and harbors authorization bill (S 2300 -- PL 89-298), which, in effect, made federal financing for the Burns Waterway harbor, Ind., a project which was authorized in S 2300, contingent upon the Dunes bill reaching the House floor in 1966. (For details, see below.) The House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee early in 1966 said it hoped to take action of some type on the Dunes bill in 1966.

Background -- Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) was the long-time sponsor of Dunes bills (since 1958). He said preservation of the Dunes area was desirable in order to put aside as a national park (or national lakeshore, or some similar unit) a natural area outstanding for recreation and scenic purposes which was accessible to a large population from surrounding cities such as Chicago. (Population within 100 miles was put at 9.5 million in 1965.)

However, action on Douglas' proposals was repeatedly blocked by the Indiana delegation to Congress because the area which Douglas proposed for the Dunes park included (1) land which steel companies, notably Bethlehem and National, said they needed for expansion, and (2) the site of the proposed Burns Waterway (Burns Ditch) harbor, Ind., which had been proposed for Army Engineers construction on the Lake Michigan shore and which was strongly favored by the steel companies and other local interests.

In 1963, at the direction of President Kennedy, a compromise proposal was worked out by Elmer B. Staats, deputy director of the Budget Bureau, and Lee C. White, a member of the White House staff. The basic terms were that neither the Burns Waterway harbor project nor the Dunes lakeshore would be authorized unless the other was also. This compromise was accepted by Douglas and many of the Democratic Members of the Indiana delegation. New legislation was drafted which, in effect, removed from the proposed Dunes area the site of the Burns Waterway harbor project and also much of the land which Bethlehem and National Steel were using for expansion. This proposal did not remove the opposition to the bill of Rep. Charles A. Halleck (R Ind.), in whose district the proposed Dunes lakeshore was to be located. Nor did it remove the dissatisfaction of the Inland Steel Co., which objected to inclusion within the proposed lakeshore of a tract of Inland property which the company wanted for expansion.

Despite the objections of Inland to this provision, the compromise bill (S 2249) was passed by voice vote of the Senate Sept. 29, 1964. However, there was no House action in 1964, and S 2249 died at the end of the 88th Congress. (1964 Almanac p. 476)

1965 Dunes Bill -- In 1965, the way appeared open for the 1963 compromise to come to fruition. The Administration supported both the authorization for the $25-million Burns Waterway harbor project which was included in the omnibus water projects bill (S 2300), and the new Douglas bill (S 360) authorizing an Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore. S 360 was essentially the same as the legislation that had passed the Senate in the previous Congress. It did not include in the proposed lakeshore the area needed for the Burns Waterway harbor project. Nor did it include the land Bethlehem and National were using for expansion. However, it did include the 750-acre tract owned by Inland Steel, despite a Feb. 8 letter from Indiana Gov. Roger D. Branigin (D) asking that the Inland property not be included. Since 1963, the law firm of Sidley, Austin, Burgess and Smith, in which former Postmaster General (1961-63) J. Edward Day was a senior partner, had represented Inland in lobbying efforts against inclusion of the Inland land. Day told CQ at the end of February 1966 that Inland did not oppose the lakeshore as a whole, only inclusion of Inland's 750 acres.

Debate on S 360 -- The June 21, 1965, Senate passage of the Dunes bill (S 360) came with relatively little opposition. However, Sens. Milward L. Simpson (R Wyo.), Paul J. Fannin (R Ariz.) and Gordon Allott (R Colo.) filed minority views in the June 16 Senate report on the bill (S Rept 334). They opposed the inclusion in the lakeshore of certain noncontiguous tracts (including Inland Steel's 750-acre tract). They said the "patchwork taking (of land) authorized by this bill may later be used as a precedent to take the best part of a landowner's holdings and leave him with only the scraps." "If it is desirable to preserve these tracts," they said, Indiana "should take the initiative."

Douglas, explaining why the lakeshore included Inland Steel's 750 acres, but not the National and Bethlehem land, said, "The simple difference between the lands excluded from the park and the Inland property is that the former are adjacent to the proposed harbor and have factories on them, while the latter are separated from the harbor by industrial and residential developments, are not developed, and are vital to the establishment of the park."

In further defense of including the noncontiguous tracts, Douglas said "it is because of the years of delay and compromises which were forced on us by the ever-increasing industrial encroachments upon the Dunes, and the acquiescence of Congress in them, that we now have to settle for portions of the whole which we once could have saved." The bill was also supported by Indiana Sens. Birch Bayh (D) and Vance Hartke (D).

Burns Waterway Proviso in S 2300 -- Douglas and his supporters had hoped that by the time the 1965 omnibus water project bill (S 2300) was taken up, action would be completed on S 360. That would have enabled Douglas to support wholeheartedly the authorization in S 2300 for the Burns Waterway harbor. However, when this eventuality did not prove out, Douglas, with Administration acquiescence, persuaded the Senate Public Works Committee to insert in S 2300 a provision stating that "funds appropriated for construction of (the Burns Waterway harbor) project shall not be utilized until such time as the Indiana Dunes have been preserved and protected as a national lakeshore by act of Congress."

The House Public Works Committee, however, reportedly at the insistence of Halleck (a Committee member), who had voiced his continued opposition to Dunes legislation at a Feb. 8 Senate hearing, dropped this provision, and instead inserted language which, the Committee said, "makes it clear that authorization of the (Burns Waterway harbor) project shall not adversely affect or otherwise prejudice the establishment of an Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore."

Douglas and his backers said this revision was unacceptable. They threatened to try to delete the Burns Waterway harbor authorization altogether in conference on S 2300 unless Douglas' original provision was restored. Douglas received backing on this position from some Administration sources and from several of the conferees on the bill. Sen. Pat McNamara (D Mich.), the Public Works Committee chairman, reportedly was ready to drop the entire Burns Waterway harbor authorization from the bill.

As a result, Sen. Birch Bayh (D Ind.), sponsor of the Burns Waterway harbor project and also a Committee member, eventually worked out compromise language with Douglas. The compromise left the Burns Waterway harbor authorization in the final conference version of S 2300, but made appropriation of any federal funds for the project contingent upon both chambers of Congress getting a chance to vote on an Indiana Dunes bill during the same Congress. (The language did not require that both chambers pass a Dunes bill before the Burns funds could be appropriated, only that both chambers get an opportunity to vote on such a bill.) Though not as strong as Douglas' earlier language, the final language was considered strong enough to encourage support for a vote on the Dunes bill in 1966 by all those anxious to get the Burns Waterway harbor project under way and financed.

One result of the final proviso in S 2300 was a petition, late in 1965, sponsored by Rep. J. Edward Roush (D Ind.) and signed by all Democratic Indiana Members of the House, asking House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee Chairman Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) to permit action on the Dunes bill in the House in 1966.

Bighorn Canyon. The Senate Feb. 10 by voice vote passed a bill (S 491), requested by the President in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message, authorizing the establishment of the Bighorn Canyon National Recreation Area in south central Montana and north central Wyoming. The measure set aside 63,300 acres along the Bighorn River, covering approximately one-third of the 195-mile shoreline to be created by the reservoir behind the federal Yellowtail Dam, near Hardin, Mont., scheduled for 1966 completion. Over 90 percent of the land was already federally owned. S 491 authorized $355,000 for acquisition of the privately owned land.

Sponsors of the bill said they were anxious to "nail down" the land by designating it as a national recreation area by law, lest the Federal Government begin disposing of it for other purposes once Yellowtail Dam was completed. However, there was no action on a companion House measure (HR 2778) in 1965.

Early in 1966, the four Senators from Wyoming and Montana Feb. 14 wrote House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee Chairman Aspinall requesting action on the Bighorn proposal. In a Feb. 25 reply to Sen. Mike Mansfield (D Mont.), Aspinall said he agreed that the lands should be set aside while still available, and he hoped his Committee could take care of the legislation in 1966. Several sources told CQ that while there was no particular objection to the Bighorn proposal, other bills had higher priority for 1966 action by Aspinall's Committee.

Background -- A similar bill (S 2048) was passed by the Senate Aug. 5, 1964, but died when the House took no action. (1964 Almanac p. 476)

Sleeping Bear Lakeshore. The Senate Aug. 26 by voice vote passed a bill (S 936) authorizing the Secretary of Interior to establish a 46,100-acre Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore on the northwest shore of the Lower Peninsula of Michigan. The lakeshore was to include 5,300 acres on South Manitou Island in Lake Michigan. S 936 authorized $9.5 million for land acquisition and $14.5 million for development of the lakeshore for recreation and other purposes. Establishment of the lakeshore was requested by the President in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message.

There was no House action on S 936 in 1965, but House Interior Committee Chairman Aspinall reportedly planned to give the bill high priority in 1966.

Background -- Earlier proposals sponsored by Sen. Philip A. Hart (D Mich.) called for a Sleeping Bear Lakeshore totaling 77,000 acres. However, protests from property owners led to the removal from the bill of 31,000 acres of highly developed resort areas surrounding three inland lakes. A Sleeping Bear bill containing 47,600 acres (S 792) passed the Senate Dec. 19, 1963. But S 792 died at the end of the 88th Congress through House inaction, partly because of opposition from Rep. Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.), in whose district the proposed lakeshore was located. Griffin favored a 37,000-acre lakeshore. (1964 Almanac p. 476)

Debate -- During 1965 debate on S 936, sponsors said it did not include the 31,000 acres of resort areas. Hart claimed "growing support for this proposal in Michigan, including recently the backing" of Gov. George W. Romney (R). In minority views in the Senate report on the bill (S Rept 644), however, Sens. Milward L. Simpson (R Wyo.), Paul J. Fannin (R Ariz.), Gordon Allott (R Colo.) and Len B. Jordan (R Idaho) said the beauty of the area was already being preserved by its citizens and the state, and there was no evidence to justify "the condemnation of all these privately owned lands." They also said the bill did not protect against loss of revenues by school districts and local governments in the area, and recommended "some type" of payment to replace lost revenues.

Rep. Griffin said the outstanding bond issues of two school districts might be endangered if part of their taxable land were taken for a lakeshore, and therefore some form of payment in lieu of taxes was needed. Griffin also objected to certain aspects of the condemnation proceedings. He said he hoped for amendments.

Wild Rivers System. The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee Sept. 28 reported a bill (S 1446 -- S Rept 792) establishing a National Wild Rivers System. The bill, which designated five rivers for immediate inclusion in the system and 11 additional rivers for possible future inclusion, embodied a request made by the President in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message.

There was no further action on S 1446 in 1965, but the Senate passed the measure by a 71-1 roll call Jan. 19, 1966, after adopting several floor amendments. However, the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee failed to schedule 1966 action on S 1446 or a companion House bill (HR 11395) at its Jan. 18, 1966, organizational meeting, and Chairman Aspinall was reported as saying the House "has no interest in this bill."

S 1446 was the outgrowth of a 1962 recommendation of the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission that "certain rivers of unusual scientific, esthetic and recreation value should be allowed to remain in their free-flowing state and natural setting without man-made alterations." In 1963-64 the Secretaries of Agriculture and Interior undertook a wild rivers study on which the President's Feb. 8, 1965, recommendation and S 1446 were based. The legislation met some opposition from commercial interests.

In minority views in the Senate report, Sens. Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.), Allott (R Colo.), Jordan (R Idaho), Simpson (R Wyo.) and Fannin (R Ariz.) objected to immediate inclusion of the Salmon and Clearwater Rivers in the system, saying the "full economic shock" would be borne by Idaho alone, and therefore should be studied more first. But the majority said the Salmon and Clearwater were included for immediate designation because they "more than any others typify the national wild rivers concept."

Provisions -- As reported, S 1446 established a National Wild Rivers System initially including segments of five rivers: the Salmon and Clearwater, Idaho; the Rogue, Ore.; the Rio Grande, N.M.; and the Eleven Point, Mo. It provided for studies of the possibility of future inclusion of 11 more: the Buffalo, Tenn.; the Cacapon, W.Va.; the Green, Wyo.; the Hudson, N.Y.; the Missouri, Mont.; the Niobrara, Neb.; the Skagit, Wash.; the Susquehanna, N.Y. and Pa.; the Wolf, Wis.; the Suwannee, Ga. and Fla.; and the Youghiogheny, Md. and Pa. The system was to be administered for water conservation and preservation of scenic, fish, wildlife and outdoor recreation values. Each river was to be administered either separately or jointly by the Interior and Agriculture Secretaries and the states involved. Existing water rights would be maintained, and existing activities such as mining and grazing would be allowed as long as they did not interfere with the purposes of the system.

The bill authorized such sums as were necessary to implement the provisions. The report estimated the first five-year cost at $14,273,000 for land acquisition and development and $1,794,000 for administration.

St. Croix Riverway. The Senate Sept. 8 by voice vote passed an Administration-backed bill (S 897) establishing the St. Croix National Scenic Riverway in Minnesota and Wisconsin. Although the Administration draft Wild Rivers bill (S 1446, see above) did not include the St. Croix in the Wild Rivers System, the Budget Bureau April 22 wrote the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee that it was in "full accord" with the designation of the St. Croix and Namekagon Rivers (also covered by S 897) as a wild river. It said "the characteristics of these streams fully warrant their inclusion in the National Wild Rivers System," as S 897, in effect, proposed.

Backers of S 897 said changes in the bill made by Sen. Walter F. Mondale (D Minn.) and Rep. Joseph E. Karth (D Minn.), two of its chief sponsors, prior to Senate action had eliminated some controversial features and made it no longer applicable to land within cities and villages and to certain existing industrial and commercial developments. However, there was no action in 1965 on House versions of the bill (HR 8325, 9913, 9914, 10121, 10477). The St. Croix bills reportedly had a low position on House Interior Committee Chairman Aspinall's 1966 priority list.

Provisions -- As passed by the Senate, S 897 authorized a St. Croix Riverway consisting of up to 85,000 acres of land and 21,200 acres of water, including 152 miles of the St. Croix River and 90 miles of its tributary, the Namekagon River. The bill authorized $6.5 million for land acquisition and development.

Under the bill the upper portion of the St. Croix extending north from Taylors Falls, Minn., to Gordon, Wis., and most of the Namekagon would be preserved as scenic wild rivers. The more highly developed southern part of the St. Croix, extending south from Taylors Falls to its confluence with the Mississippi River, would be developed primarily for outdoor recreation purposes.

New hydroelectric power projects on the rivers would be forbidden without the specific approval of Congress.

Oregon Dunes. Although the President, in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message, requested creation of an Oregon Dunes National Seashore, neither the House nor the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committees approved bills carrying out his request (S 250, HR 7524) in 1965. The legislation, sponsored by Sen. Maurine B. Neuberger (D Ore.) and Rep. Robert B. Duncan (D Ore.), in whose district the seashore was to be located, authorized $1.5 million for land acquisition to establish a 30,000-acre Oregon Dunes National Seashore along 31 miles of Oregon's Pacific coastline.

Long supported by the National Park Service, the Oregon Dunes proposal, from the time it was first introduced in 1959, had met opposition from existing and potential private developers in the area. Originally conceived as 44,000 acres in size, the proposed seashore was scaled down to 30,000 acres at Duncan's request and was eventually reported in the Senate (S 1137) in 1963 when sponsored by Mrs. Neuberger, but further action in the 88th Congress was blocked by the objections of Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) to the condemnation procedures in the bill. (1964 Almanac p. 476)

In 1965, Morse continued his opposition to the condemnation features, proposing that the Secretary of Interior first be required to negotiate for purchase of the lands. The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee reportedly was reluctant to take up the bill as long as Oregon's two Senators disagreed on the provisions. However, the House Interior Committee gave the bill high priority for 1966.

Guadalupe Mountains Park. The President in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message asked Congress to establish Guadalupe Mountains National Park, Texas. However, other than a one-day Senate hearing July 21, no action was taken in 1965 on bills (S 295, HR 517, HR 698) to create the park which were introduced by Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough and Reps. Joe R. Pool and Richard C. White (all D Texas). The proposal reportedly had low priority in both the House and Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committees in 1965 but was scheduled for consideration in the House Committee in 1966. As introduced, the bill authorized whatever funds were necessary for the establishment of a 76,302-acre national park east of El Paso. The major purpose was to preserve geologic and scenic features. Yarborough's similar bill in the 88th Congress had received no action.

Great Basin Park. The President in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message asked Congress to establish the Great Basin National Park, Nev. However, there was no action in 1965 on bills (S 499, HR 6122) sponsored by Sen. Alan Bible (D Nev.) and Rep. Walter S. Baring (D Nev.) to create the park. The Senate Jan. 25, 1962, had passed a Bible bill (S 1760) similar to S 499, but there was no further action in that Congress (the 87th).

Delay on the bill was due in part to differences between the Bible and Baring bills. The Bible measure, which was supported by the Administration and by Sen. Howard W. Cannon (D Nev.), called for a park of 123,260 acres adjacent to the Nevada-Utah boundary near Baker, Nev. Bible said it included outstanding examples of rock, geologic structure, vegetation and wildlife, which were typical of the large Great Basin area of the western United States -- an area which encompassed about 100 smaller basins and surrounding mountains and which covered most of Nevada, western Utah and portions of Oregon and California. The Baring measure provided for a park of 55,000 acres. An additional roadblock was the desire of some local interests to retain mineral operations in the proposed park.

Flaming Gorge Recreation Area. Congress took no action in 1965 on a proposal by President Johnson in his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message to create the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area in Utah and Wyoming, around the site of the federal Flaming Gorge Dam and reservoir. Although bills to authorize the recreation area were introduced (S 92, HR 4419, HR 6489) by Sen. Gale McGee (D Wyo.) and Reps. Teno Roncalio (D Wyo.) and David S. King (D Utah), the Interior Department and Budget Bureau failed to send reports on the bills to the House and Senate Interior Committees until early 1966, thus delaying any possible action in 1965.

MINOR UNITS AUTHORIZED

Jefferson Expansion Memorial. The Senate June 17 by voice vote and the House Oct. 1 by a 250-12 roll call passed identical Administration-endorsed bills (S 1576, HR 6519) increasing federal appropriations for the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial at old St. Louis, Mo., by $6 million -- to $23,250,000 -- in order to permit completion of the Memorial. The Memorial was designed to commemorate U.S. expansion westward. After passing HR 6519, the House vacated passage and instead passed S 1576 by voice vote. The bill was signed Oct. 19 (PL 89-269). (For House roll call, see chart p. 1014)

Agate Beds Monument. The President June 5 signed an Administration-endorsed bill (S 339 -- PL 89-33) authorizing the establishment of a 3,150-acre Agate Fossil Beds National Monument in Sioux County, Neb., to preserve the fossils of animals that lived 15 million years ago. The bill authorized $301,150 for land acquisition and $1,842,000 for development.

Nez Perce Historical Park. Signed May 15 was an Administration-backed bill (S 60 -- PL 89-19) authorizing the creation of Nez Perce National Historical Park in the Idaho panhandle, to commemorate historical events connected with the Nez Perce Indians. The bill authorized $630,000 for the purchase of 1,500 acres outright and scenic easements on another 1,500 acres, plus $1,337,000 for development costs.

Hoover Birthplace. An Administration-endorsed bill signed Aug. 12 (HR 8111 -- PL 89-119) authorized establishment of the Herbert Hoover National Historic Site -- a 200-acre area in West Branch, Iowa, containing the cottage in which the former President (R 1929-33) was born, his grave and the Herbert Hoover Library. The bill authorized $1,650,000 for all basic costs.

Golden Spike Site. The President July 30 signed into law an Administration-backed bill (S 26 -- PL 89-102) authorizing establishment of Golden Spike National Historic Site, Utah, to commemorate completion of the first transcontinental railroad on May 10, 1869. S 26 authorized $1,168,000 for land and development.

Great Falls Property. An Administration-endorsed bill (S 1065 -- PL 89-255), signed Oct. 10, authorized the Interior Secretary to obtain, by exchange of land and by a payment of up to $1 million, a 783-acre tract of land on the Virginia side of the Potomac River's Great Falls for addition to the George Washington Memorial Parkway, Va.

Hubbell Trading Post. An Administration-endorsed bill (HR 3320 -- PL 89-148), signed Aug. 28, authorized $952,000 for creation of the 160-acre Hubbell Trading Post National Historic Site, Ariz.

Kansas Sites. The President Aug. 31 signed an Administration-backed bill (HR 7181 -- PL 89-155) authorizing the Interior Secretary to obtain and mark certain sites in Kansas connected with the Abolitionist period. The bill authorized $805,700 for basic costs.

Roger Williams Memorial. An Administration-endorsed bill (HR 7919 -- PL 89-293), signed Oct. 22, authorized creation of a five-acre Roger Williams Memorial in Providence, R.I., at a cost of $700,000.

Pecos Monument. The President June 28 signed an Administration-endorsed bill (HR 3165 -- PL 89-54) authorizing $500,000 to establish the Pecos National Monument, N.M., on 342 acres of donated land, to preserve a Spanish mission and Indian pueblo.

Priest Lake. An Administration-backed bill (S 435 -- PL 89-39), signed June 14, authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to acquire approximately 417 acres of land on the shores of Upper Priest Lake, Idaho, and add it to nearby Kaniksu National Forest, in order to prevent extensive commercial development of one of the last natural lake shore areas in the panhandle of northern Idaho. The second supplemental funds bill for fiscal 1965 (HR 7091 -- PL 89-16, signed April 30) had already provided funds for the purchase ($500,000).

Alibates Flint Quarries. The President Aug. 31 signed an Administration-endorsed bill (HR 881 -- PL 89-154) authorizing establishment of the 230-acre Alibates Flint Quarries and Texas Panhandle Pueblo Culture National Monument, Potter County, Texas, at a cost of $5,000 for new land and $260,000 for development. Most of the land already was Government-owned.

Other. Also enacted in 1965 were two bills (HR 903 -- PL 89-111; HR 9417 -- PL 89-250), endorsed by the Administration, making changes in the boundaries of Kings Canyon National Park, Calif., and Jewel Cave National Monument, S.D., respectively.

COST-SHARING RULES SET FOR WATER PROJECT RECREATION

S 1229 -- Reported, amended, by the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 149) April 7, 1965.

- Passed by the Senate by voice vote April 13.

HR 5269 -- Reported, amended, by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 254) April 27.

S 1229 -- Passed, amended, by the House by voice vote May 18.

- Conference report (H Rept 538) agreed to by voice votes of the House June 23 and the Senate June 25.

PL 89-72 -- Signed into law July 9.

Congress in 1965 passed an Administration bill (S 1229) establishing, for the first time, a uniform federal-local cost-sharing formula for recreation facilities and fish and wildlife enhancement features at federal water projects. The formula applied only to projects built by the Interior Department's Reclamation Bureau and by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers -- the nation's two major water project construction agencies. Sponsors said projects of other agencies were not suited to the type of cost-sharing provided by the bill.

Explanation of Formula. S 1229 provided that the Reclamation Bureau and Army Engineers henceforth would not normally include recreation or fish and wildlife enhancement facilities in water projects unless the state or some local public agency -- in advance of Congressional authorization of the project -- agreed to pay part of the capital costs of the facilities, and also agreed to operate the facilities once in existence.

Once such an agreement was obtained, the following cost-sharing rules applied:

(1) The Federal Government would pay all "joint project costs" at the water project which were allocated to recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement. Joint project costs are costs, such as those for portions of the reservoir and basic dam structure, which cannot be attributed solely to any one purpose of the project; however, it is possible, on the basis of certain formulas, to allocate the joint project costs among the different project purposes, such as flood control, irrigation, electric power, recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement. This provision of S 1229 required the Federal Government to pay all of whatever part of the joint project costs were allocated to recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement.

(2) In addition, the Federal Government would pay up to one-half of the "separable costs" for recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement. Separable costs are those easily attributable to one purpose of the project. In the case of recreation, for example, separable costs would include costs of picnic tables, boat launching ramps, additional reservoir capacity for fishing purposes and similar items.

(3) The non-federal local public agency would pay the remaining separable costs of the recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement facilities, plus all subsequent operation and maintenance costs of the facilities. It could charge admission to the facilities to recoup its share of the separable costs.

If no local agency agreed to participate in the cost-sharing, then the Reclamation Bureau or Army Engineers would not include recreation or fish and wildlife-aiding features in the project; they could include only "minimum basic facilities" for public health and safety at a nominal cost (guard rails, turn-arounds at the ends of roads, sanitation facilities). This limitation could be abrogated only in rare special cases, for example, where Congress decided that a water project was suitable for all-federal development as a "national recreation area" or part of the national forests.

Objectives of Bill. S 1229 had two major objectives: to provide a uniform federal-local cost-sharing formula; and to shift a substantial portion of recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement costs at federal water projects to the states and localities, in order to reduce the burden on the Treasury. It had long been accepted that local residents and users, who enjoyed easy access and therefore benefited most from inclusion of recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement features, should bear a portion of their cost. However, while the Army Engineers and Reclamation Bureau in recent years had frequently been including such facilities in their projects, often at great cost, there were no uniform cost-sharing requirements. The two agencies operated under rules that differed not only as between the agencies, but in some cases for different projects built by the same agency. In most cases, there was little or no substantial local cost-sharing. S 1229 was an attempt to fix federal-local cost-sharing requirements that would apply uniformly both to Army Engineers and Reclamation Bureau projects; that would be fair to the localities; and that would require the localities, nevertheless, to bear a substantial portion of the costs. If local public groups did not wish to assume a fair share of the costs of recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement facilities at federal water projects, the bill said (in effect), then the Federal Government simply would not provide the facilities.

S 1229 also granted specific statutory authority to certain procedures already in use, such as including recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement costs and benefits in cost-benefit ratios. In addition, it provided limited authority for the Interior Secretary to add recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement facilities to reclamation projects already in existence at the time the bill was passed if they had no such facilities.

Other Important Provisions. Mitigation -- The cost-sharing formula described above applied only to facilities for recreation and facilities for fish and wildlife enhancement (development of new, additional fish and wildlife resources). It did not apply to project features designed merely to preserve already existing fish and wildlife resources against damage resulting from construction of the project. Under previous law, rules on the cost of mitigating such damage were different for the Reclamation Bureau and Army Engineers. S 1229 provided that henceforth, both agencies should use the rule previously used only by the Engineers, namely, that the cost of mitigating damage to existing fish and wildlife resources should be distributed among the other project purposes (electric power, flood control, navigation, etc.) for the purpose of determining the portion the Federal Government should pay and the portion to be reimbursed by local water and power users. (Under existing law, costs attributable to navigation and flood control were borne entirely by the Federal Government; those attributable to power, municipal and industrial water supply were repayable with interest by users of the power and water; those attributable to irrigation were repayable without interest.)

Feasibility Reports -- An additional important provision of S 1229 forbade the Reclamation Bureau to undertake any further feasibility studies on water projects unless the study was specifically authorized by Congress. A feasibility study is a major economic and engineering study, on the basis of which a project is recommended to Congress for authorization. The bill did not forbid less detailed preliminary studies.

The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee reportedly inserted the feasibility study provision not only to give Congress more day-to-day control over Reclamation Bureau studies, but also specifically to give the Committee chairman, Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.), a chance to pass on any Reclamation Bureau studies of proposals to divert water from the Columbia River System, in Jackson's home area, to the arid Pacific Southwest, in connection with the proposed Lower Colorado River Basin project. (See p. 742)

PROVISIONS

As signed into law, S 1229, the Federal Water Project Recreation Act:

Specified that the bill did not apply to the Tennessee Valley Authority or to projects built under the 1954 Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act (Small Watershed Act) or the 1956 Small Reclamation Projects Act.

Provided that recreation, and fish and wildlife enhancement, be given "full consideration" for the investigation and planning of any federal water project.

Directed federal construction agencies, prior to the authorization by Congress of any new federal water projects, to seek written agreements from non-federal public bodies to share the cost of developing the recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement potential of the projects and to undertake administration of the resulting recreation and fish and wildlife areas. (Non-federal cost-sharing would not be required for a variety of small federal water projects -- beach erosion, hurricane protection, small boat harbor, non-reservoir local flood control -- or for projects, such as those connected with national recreation areas or national forests, which were suited to federal management.)

Provided that when a non-federal public body made such an agreement: (1) The federal construction agency would take into account the economic benefits of recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement in determining the cost-benefit ratio of the project. (The costs attributable to the two purposes could not exceed 50 percent of the total project cost except in the case of projects for the enhancement of anadromous fish -- salt-water fish that breed in fresh-water streams -- and shrimp, and the conservation of migratory birds protected by treaty.) (2) The federal construction agency would bear all of the joint costs allocated to recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement, and up to half the separable costs of these items. (3) The non-federal public body would pay the remaining portion of the separable costs, plus all subsequent operation and maintenance costs.

Permitted the non-federal public body to make its payments for its share of the separable costs in the form of cash, land, or facilities. Alternatively, it could request the federal construction agency to lay out the money for the non-federal public body's share, with the agreement that the latter would repay the total to the Federal Government, with interest, within 50 years of the first use of the facilities.

Authorized a non-federal public body to charge admission to defray its share of a project's costs, provided the schedule of fees could be reviewed and renegotiated by the Government at least once in every five years.

Stated that, in the absence of a cost-sharing agreement, the federal agency could not make any special provision for recreation or fish and wildlife enhancement beyond minimum facilities for public health and safety -- except in the rare special cases where it was decided the area was suitable for federal management.

Provided that the federal construction agency could acquire land to protect the recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement potential pending an agreement on cost-sharing. If within 10 years no non-federal public body had signed the required cost-sharing agreement, the land could be (1) used by the agency for any authorized purpose, (2) sold to the previous owner, (3) consigned to another agency or (4) conveyed to the General Services Administration for disposal. Proceeds from the sale of the land would go to the Land and Water Conservation Fund.

Provided that the Land and Water Conservation Fund could not be used to pay for recreation costs of federal projects where cost-sharing was in effect.

Limited to $28 million (for all projects combined) expenditures by water project construction agencies for lands at federal water projects obtained exclusively for the purpose of establishing new migratory waterfowl refuges, but made the limitation inapplicable where the object was simply to prevent damage to existing waterfowl as a result of construction of a project.

Authorized the Secretary of Interior to add recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement facilities at any existing reservoir "heretofore constructed" by his department or administered by him (i.e., reservoirs already in existence at the time the bill was passed) except those within national wildlife refuges, provided (1) he obtained a cost-sharing agreement with a local non-federal agency similar to those required for inclusion of such facilities in new water projects; and (2) the federal share of the cost of the facilities and any land acquired for the facilities at any one existing reservoir would not exceed $100,000.

Effective July 1, 1966, barred the Interior Department from preparing feasibility reports on reclamation projects unless the report was first authorized by Congress.

Provided that, henceforth, the cost of preventing damages to existing fish and wildlife resources from construction of Army Engineers and Reclamation Bureau water projects should be distributed among the other project purposes in order to determine reimbursability.

Summary of 1965 Action

BACKGROUND. The Flood Control Act of 1944 gave the Army Engineers authority to provide recreation development at reservoir projects and the 1962 Rivers, Harbors and Flood Control Acts permitted inclusion of recreation development, although the Army frequently sought local reimbursement for part of these costs, on a project-by-project basis. The Interior Department, meanwhile, had no general authority for recreation development. But Congress sometimes authorized inclusion of recreation costs in individual projects built by the Reclamation Bureau. Both agencies had authority, under the 1958 Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act (PL 85-624), to include facilities in water projects both to mitigate damage to existing fish and wildlife resources from construction of the project and also to provide for enhancement (development of new fish and wildlife resources).

In 1963, the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee called on the Administration to draft legislation establishing a single policy on inclusion of recreation development and fish and wildlife enhancement in federal multiple-purpose water projects. A draft bill was forwarded to Congress in November 1963 and the House Committee March 3, 1964, reported it as HR 9032 (H Rept 1161, 88th Congress). No further action was taken on the bill in 1964. (For details of formula and other provisions, see 1964 Weekly Report p. 1304)

1965 Proposal. In February letters to the House and Senate Interior Committees, the Budget Bureau said that experience in planning on the basis of the formula proposed by HR 9032 had "brought to light...difficulties" in establishing cost-sharing. The Bureau recommended a new approach to sharing the cost between the Federal Government and non-federal public agencies. The new Administration approach stated that the Federal Government would pay all the joint project costs allocated to recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement, but only up to half the separable project costs allocated to those purposes. The Administration bill was introduced in 1965 as S 1229 in the Senate and HR 5269 in the House.

SENATE ACTION. The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee April 7 reported S 1229 (S Rept 149) with amendments. The Senate April 13 passed the Committee's version by voice vote with no further changes. Despite the Committee's amendments, the Senate version of the bill was substantially the same as the Administration proposals and the final bill. (For details of amendments, see Conference.) The report said the bill would "encourage...non-federal development and operation of recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement features."

HOUSE ACTION. The House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee April 27 reported HR 5269 (H Rept 254) with amendments, one of which permitted the combined recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement costs of a federal water project to be as high as 50 percent, of total project cost, but no higher. The House May 18 passed S 1229 by voice vote, after first substituting for its provisions the Committee's version of HR 5269. As passed the bill was substantially the same as the Administration draft and the final bill. (For details of amendments, see Conference.) Interior Committee Chairman Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) said rising public demands for outdoor recreation facilities had raised the question of "to what extent and under what conditions the Federal Government should include recreation development" in water projects. He said that "during the past 10 years" the question had been treated in different ways by different agencies; the bill was an attempt to provide a uniform standard. Rep. John P. Saylor (R Pa.) protested that the bill would allow agencies to allocate up to 50 percent of a project's costs to recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement -- twice the highest previous allocation.

CONFERENCE REPORT. The conference report (H Rept 538), filed June 22, resolved five major differences:

(1) The Administration bill had provided that when a federal water project agency acquired lands to increase the recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement potential of a project, but no local agency had come forward for cost-sharing purposes within 10 years, the lands should be sold, leased or disposed of to other federal agencies, non-federal agencies, or persons for recreational use or other uses not conflicting with the project. The Senate version revised this to give the former owner an opportunity to repurchase, before the land could be put to any other use or disposed of. The House version provided that the land could be used for other purposes by the agency holding it, or transferred to some other federal agency for some lawful use, or leased to non-federal public bodies, or disposed of. The conference provision allowed, in order of priority: use by the agency for other purposes; resale to the prior owner; transfer to some other federal agency or lease to a non-federal public agency; or disposal by the General Services Administration.

(2) The Administration and House bills had placed a $28 million ceiling on spending for lands acquired by water project agencies for the sole purpose of establishing migratory waterfowl refuges. The Senate had dropped this provision. It was restored in conference, with the note that it was to be understood as a ceiling, not an authorization.

(3) The Administration had requested that the Interior Department be authorized to add recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement facilities, and to acquire land for such facilities, at any existing or future department water project where they did not exist. The Senate version limited any such addition to existing projects, placed a ceiling of $50,000 per project on such additions, and struck out the land-acquisition authority. The House version restored the basic Administration provision, but provided that no funds could be appropriated for land acquisition until 60 days' notice had been given Congress and then only if neither Interior Committee disapproved. The final bill removed the notice requirements and the veto power of the Committees, and permitted additions (including land acquisition) only at existing projects (constructed before the bill became effective), only under cost-sharing agreements with local public agencies, and only if the federal share was $100,000 or less.

(4) The Senate had added to the original bill the requirement that feasibility studies of any reclamation projects be authorized by an act of Congress or by a resolution of either Interior Committee. (A similar requirement already applied for the Army Engineers, involving the Public Works Committees.) The House had dropped the provision. The conferees restored it, but retained only the language permitting studies to be authorized by an act of Congress (thus eliminating language on Committee resolutions).

(5) The House version of S 1229 had added a provision permitting recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement costs to total up to 50 percent of the over-all cost of a water project, but no more. Conferees retained this provision, with an exception where the project was for enhancement of anadromous fisheries, shrimp, or conservation of migratory birds protected by treaty.

CONFERENCE ACTION. The House June 23 and the Senate June 25 agreed to the conference report by voice vote.

NATIONAL PARK CONCESSIONS

HR 2091 -- Reported, amended, by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 591) July 7, 1965.
- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote Sept. 14. (For roll call on recommittal motion, see p. 1002)
- Reported by the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 765) Sept. 22.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Sept. 23.

PL 89-249 -- Signed into law Oct. 9.

Congress in 1965 enacted legislation (HR 2091) establishing, by statute, policies for concessioners in areas administered by the Interior Department's National Park Service. Most of the policies outlined in the bill had actually been followed in practice since Oct. 13, 1950, when the Interior Department issued a formal statement of policy on National Park System concessions.

The key provisions of HR 2091 gave concessioners a "possessory interest" in buildings and other improvements they constructed with the Interior Department's approval in park areas, and guaranteed them compensation if the property were taken over by the Department or transferred to another concessioner. The bill also granted various types of preferences to established concessioners.

Although backed by the Interior Department, the bill did not receive Budget Bureau endorsement, and it was actively opposed by the House Government Operations Committee. The Budget Bureau, while it did not formally oppose the substance of HR 2091, indicated that it preferred to set concessioner policy within the context of a broad, over-all approach covering all federal lands containing park and recreation facilities, rather than proceeding on a piecemeal basis to set concessioner policy only for lands within the National Park System. The Government Operations Committee took a similar position, arguing that action on HR 2091 should wait until the whole problem of federal policies for concessioners at all federal park and recreation areas could be considered at one time. The Committee also objected to what it termed possible monopoly characteristics of certain concessions permitted by the bill.

President Johnson, in signing the bill Oct. 9, indicated that he backed the Budget Bureau's position. Mr. Johnson said, "It is not enough... to establish such policies for one department alone. Both the Agriculture Department and the Corps of Engineers provide recreational opportunities for millions of Americans each year. To the extent that it is practical to do so, the Government should have a common policy governing concessions on federally owned lands."

Mr. Johnson said he had requested the Budget Bureau Director to study concession policy "and to recommend a common approach to the granting of concessions by all federal agencies." He said the recommendations were to be ready by April 1, 1966. In the meanwhile, he said, he had asked the Interior Department to limit all new concession arrangements at National Park System units to one year, so that, in effect, policies could be changed if new legislation were recommended and adopted which superseded HR 2091.

PROVISIONS--As signed into law, HR 2091, in its major provisions:

Granted to concessioners a "possessory interest" in any structures, fixtures or improvements which they acquired or constructed in the National Park System with the approval of the Interior Secretary.

Authorized compensation for the possessory interest if taken by the Government for its own use.

Authorized (but did not require) inclusion in concession contracts of provisions assuring concessioners of "adequate protection against loss of investment" under certain circumstances (e.g.--if, as a result of decisions of the Secretary and National Park Service, the concession were transferred to another concessioner, or had to be shut down, or curtailed or moved).

Permitted the Interior Secretary to limit the number of concessioners operating in any unit of the Park System.

Allowed the Secretary to grant preferences to established concessioners for renewal or negotiation of contracts or provision of additional facilities.

Granted statutory authority for certain other policies for concessions in the National Park System.

House

COMMITTEE ACTION. HR 2091 was reported July 7 (H Rept 591) by the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee. The report contained a letter from the Interior Department supporting enactment, but saying the Budget Bureau had pointed out "that should an overall policy be developed for the management of concessions generally throughout the Government, the provisions of HR 2091 would have to be reconsidered in the light of that policy." A letter from the Comptroller General suggested that some of the policies in the bill "would prevent the Congress from exercising adequate control over this Park Service activity and would provide certain considerations to concessioners which have not been fully justified as to need in all instances."

FLOOR ACTION. The House Sept. 14 by voice vote passed HR 2091 with a minor floor amendment. Before passage, the House rejected by a 73-298 roll call a motion by H.R. Gross (R Iowa) to recommit (kill) the bill. (For voting, see chart p. 1002)

Chairman Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee explained that increasing numbers of visitors to national parks were creating an urgent need for a variety of facilities like hotels, cafeterias and gift shops which could not be provided by the Government and therefore must be furnished through private investment. However, he said, potential private investors were having difficulty obtaining long-term financing from lending institutions, largely because the Government held legal title to any improvements in the parks and retained supervisory rights over concession services. HR 2091, he said, was designed to establish a flexible policy creating "an atmosphere of assurance that the investor -- whether he be an investor of equity capital or an institutional lender -- will probably earn a fair return on his money over a reasonably long period of time."

Opposition to the bill centered chiefly on two propositions: that Congress should establish concession policies on a Government-wide basis, as suggested by the Budget Bureau, instead of taking the piecemeal approach of HR 2091 as requested by the Interior Department; and that the bill would remove competition from park concession contracts and legalize monopolies in the Park System. Both arguments were set forth in a letter from William L. Dawson (D Ill.), chairman of the Government Operations Committee, which was inserted in the Congressional Record, and were propounded on the floor by Jack Brooks (D Texas), a member of that Committee.

Aspinall conceded that the two Committees had "come to an honest impasse" on the subject, but suggested that the idea of an over-all policy had "been kicking around for at least 10 years and nothing has happened" while the need for clarification of park policy "is too great and the problems to be handled in HR 2091 have been hanging in the fire much too long to be delayed any longer."

Before passing the bill the House accepted by voice vote an amendment by Aspinall to give the General Accounting Office the right to examine the books of any concessioner for up to five years after close of a concessioner's business year. It rejected, on a 40-69 standing vote, an amendment by Gross to delete the section guaranteeing concessions protection against loss of investment in specified circumstances.

Senate

COMMITTEE ACTION. The Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee Sept. 22 reported HR 2091 (S Rept 765) without amendments.

FLOOR ACTION. The Senate Sept. 23 passed HR 2091 by voice vote, without floor amendments, clearing it for the President's signature.

THREATENED SPECIES

HR 9424 -- Reported, amended, by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee (H Rept 1168) Oct. 15, 1965.
Passed by the House by voice vote Oct. 18.

The House Oct. 18 by voice vote passed a bill (HR 9424) directing the Secretary of the Interior to take various special actions to protect species of fish and wildlife threatened with extinction.

The measure had been requested in a June 5 letter from the Interior Department, and had the backing of all national and international fish and wildlife conservation organizations, Congressional sponsors said. There was little House debate and no objections were expressed on the House floor. Estimated cost of the bill was $4 million a year.

The Senate did not act on HR 9424 before the 1965 session ended, although the Senate Commerce Merchant Marine and Fisheries Subcommittee Aug. 12 held a hearing on a companion Senate bill (S 2217).

During the House floor debate on HR 9424, Rep. John D. Dingell (D Mich.) said that U.S. economic growth had caused the extermination of some 24 birds and 12 mammals native to the country and Puerto Rico. Included were the passenger pigeon, heath hen, Carolina parakeet, spotted Hawaiian rail, eastern elk, Texas and California grizzly bears and the Badlands bighorn sheep. Dingell also said that some 35 other types of mammals and 30 to 40 birds would become extinct unless sufficient habitat was provided to maintain them. Among the animals and birds considered by conservationists to be threatened with extinction were the whooping crane, trumpeter swan, prairie chicken, California condor, Kenai moose, Kodiak bear, Key deer, fur seal and American bison.

BACKGROUND -- HR 9424 was reported (H Rept 1168) Oct. 15 by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee. The Committee made various changes in the bill, one of which deleted language dealing with federal mining laws. Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.), chairman of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, had requested the deletion because he said the subject was under his Committee's jurisdiction and was being studied by the Public Land Law Review Commission established by Congress in 1964. (1964 Almanac p. 505)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 9424 contained the following major provisions:

Directed the Secretary of the Interior, after consultation with the states, to designate species of fish and wildlife that are regarded as threatened with extinction.

Directed the Secretary to use existing law (the Migratory Bird Conservation Act, the Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956, and the Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act) to conserve, protect, restore and propagate endangered species through such activities as research, studies and land acquisition.

Authorized the Secretary, for the first time, to acquire lands or interests in lands to conserve, protect, restore and propagate species of native fish threatened with extinction.

Specifically authorized use of funds from the Land and Water Conservation Fund to acquire lands and waters and interests in lands and waters for the purposes of the legislation. Specified that this provision did not limit the Secretary's authority to use funds under other existing laws to acquire land. (The provision was a restatement of a section in the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1964 (PL 88-578) and did not alter or amend the 1964 law.)

Directed the Secretary to cooperate with states and enter into agreements with states in the management and administration of areas intended to protect endangered species.

Designated as the "National Wildlife Refuge System" the areas administered by the Secretary as wildlife refuges, areas for the protection and conservation of fish and wildlife threatened with extinction, wildlife ranges, game ranges, wildlife management areas, and waterfowl production areas. (This was done for the purpose of consolidating existing authorities of the Secretary in managing these areas, all of which -- except for the category established by the bill to protect nearly extinct species -- were already in existence. In practice, these areas were administered by the Secretary through the Fish and Wildlife Service.)

In administering the National Wildlife Refuge System, authorized the Secretary: to contract with private individuals or agencies for provision of public accommodations; to accept gifts of money to be used to acquire or manage lands in the System; to acquire lands by exchange (a) for lands under his jurisdiction or (b) for the right to remove products (such as hay or timber) from the lands within the System.

Permitted use of any areas within the System for any purpose, including hunting, fishing and public recreation and accommodations, as long as the uses did not interfere with protection of fish and wildlife as intended under the bill.

AUTO POLLUTION, WASTE DISPOSAL ACT PASSED

S 306 -- Reported by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 192) May 14, 1965.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote May 18.
- Reported, amended, by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 899) Aug. 31.
- Passed by the House by a 294-4 roll-call vote Sept. 24 (See p. 1008)
- Senate agreed to House amendments by voice vote Oct. 1.

PL 89-272 -- Signed into law Oct. 20.

Congress in 1965 passed a bill (S 306) to control air pollution caused by automotive exhaust and to authorize a national research program for disposal of solid wastes. The bill also provided for procedures (culminating in legal action) to be taken against international air pollution originating in the United States.

The measure essentially was two separate bills -- the air pollution section which became a new title in the Clean Air Act of 1963 and the solid waste section.

The car exhaust provisions at first were opposed by the Administration which preferred to have the latitude to reach agreements with the automobile industry on control of exhausts and objected to the time schedule in the original version of the legislation. The Administration subsequently altered its position and supported the entire bill. The final version of the bill contained no deadline for implementation of the standards. Mr. Johnson called for solid waste legislation in his Natural Beauty Message.

The new law authorized the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to set standards limiting the amount of carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons or other air pollutants that could be contained in the exhaust from gasoline or diesel-powered cars, trucks and buses. The standards were to apply only to new vehicles. (Manufacturers were expected to install "blowby" devices or make engine modifications in order to meet the standards.) The Secretary March 29, 1966, set standards for most gasoline vehicles (see p. 785), but -- as intended by the bill's sponsors -- delayed setting diesel standards pending further knowledge of diesels.

The vehicle exhaust provisions reflected increasing public concern over automobile air pollution. Congress, in 1964 legislation, had required the General Services Administration to set exhaust standards for cars it bought for the Government. (See p. 786)

The solid waste section represented the first major legislation in this particular area. It authorized an expenditure of $92.5 million during fiscal 1966-69 for research into developing better methods of disposing of solid wastes -- discarded matters such as garbage, rubbish, ashes, demolition debris, abandoned automobile hulks, old refrigerators and the wastes from slaughterhouses, canneries, and manufacturing plants.

The international pollution provision added a new dimension to federal pollution abatement. It permitted use of existing procedures (previously limited to interstate and intrastate pollution) for abatement of international pollution originating in the United States. An HEW spokesman told CQ the legislation had been sought by Canada to enable the United States to take action against pollution affecting that country. The main pollution problem was in Windsor, Ont., which is directly across from Detroit.

The fiscal 1966 general supplemental appropriations bill (PL 89-309), signed into law Oct. 31, contained $470,000 for initiation of the motor vehicle exhaust regulatory program, $155,000 for studies on the abatement of international air pollution and the prevention of air pollution problems, $4 million for grants to encourage the development of new and improved methods of solid waste disposal and $1.4 million for grants to demonstrate the economic feasibility of methods of utilizing scrap automobiles. (See p. 182)

PROVISIONS

As signed into law, PL 89-272 contained the following major provisions:

Motor Vehicle Air Pollution Control Act. (This was designated as Title II of the Clean Air Act of 1963.) Directed the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to establish as soon as practicable standards applicable to emission of substances from new motor vehicles or new motor vehicle engines which caused or contributed to, or were likely to cause or contribute to, air pollution endangering the health or welfare of humans. Required the Secretary to take into consideration technological feasibility and economic cost in establishing standards.

Prohibited the domestic sale, manufacture for domestic sale, or importation of any vehicle or vehicle engine not in conformity with the regulations. Provided fines of up to $1,000 for each new motor vehicle or new motor vehicle engine which was manufactured or sold in violation of the regulations.

Provided that sample vehicles or engines could be submitted to the HEW Secretary, who would conduct tests and, if the sample passed the tests, issue a certificate of compliance to cover all vehicles or engines of the same production model.

In cases of air pollution affecting a foreign country, directed the Secretary to call a conference of state and local air pollution agencies in the area where the pollution originates and to invite the affected foreign country to participate in the conference; authorized a legal suit to be brought to abate air pollution affecting another country.

Authorized accelerated federal research to reduce sulfur oxide emissions from fuel combustion sources (such as heating plants in buildings and electric generating plants), and to extract sulfur from fuels.

Authorized appropriations of $470,000 in fiscal 1966, $845,000 in fiscal 1967, $1,195,000 for fiscal 1968 and $1,470,000 in fiscal 1969 to carry out the Motor Vehicle Air Pollution Control Act.

Solid Waste Disposal Act. Specified that the purpose of the new Act was to begin a national research and development program for new and improved methods of solid waste disposal and to provide technical and financial aid to state and local governments in developing, establishing and conducting solid waste disposal programs.

Split responsibility for the solid waste disposal program between the Departments of HEW and the Interior, with Interior having responsibility over problems of solid waste resulting from the extraction, processing, or utilization of minerals or fossil fuels and the HEW Secretary having jurisdiction over all other aspects.

Defined "solid waste" to mean garbage, refuse and other discarded solid materials, including solid-waste materials resulting from industrial, commercial and agricultural operations and from community activities; specified that it did not include solids or dissolved material in domestic sewage or other significant pollutants in water resources.

Authorized grants to (or contracts with) public and private agencies and institutions and individuals for research, training projects, surveys and demonstrations, including construction of facilities (but limited grants for construction to no more than two-thirds of the project's cost).

Authorized grants to state and interstate agencies for up to 50 percent of the cost of making surveys of solid-waste disposal practices and problems within the jurisdictional areas of such states or agencies and of developing solid-waste disposal plans.

Authorized appropriations of $7 million in fiscal 1966, $14 million in fiscal 1967, $19.2 million in fiscal 1968, and $20 million in fiscal 1969 to the Secretary of HEW to implement the Act.

Authorized appropriations of $3 million in fiscal 1966, $6 million in fiscal 1967, $10.8 million in fiscal 1968, and $12.5 million in fiscal 1969 to the Secretary of the Interior to implement the Act.

Required that all information, uses, processes, patents and other developments resulting from activities conducted with a grant under the Act be readily available on fair and equitable terms to industries involved in solid-waste disposal or waste-disposal equipment manufacturing. In carrying out this provision, required federal officials to follow a Government patent policy promulgated by President Kennedy on Oct. 10, 1963. (See p. 887)

Background

REFERENCE -- 1963 Almanac p. 236.

Air pollution had been an increasing problem for decades, causing ill health to people and considerable property damage. Long a problem in industrial urban areas, by 1965 it was also common in rural sections of the country.

The main source of air pollution was the burning of fuels -- coal, oil and natural gas for heat and power; gasoline and diesel fuel oil for transportation. Odors, dust and chemical substances released into the air by industrial plants also contributed to pollution.

Though some municipal programs to combat air pollution were begun before World War II, states did not begin acting on the problem until the late 1940's. The Federal Government entered the picture in 1955 with passage of the Air Pollution Control Act (PL 84-159) which authorized the Public Health Service to undertake a coordinated program of air pollution studies, operating through its own facilities and through grants to states, localities, and public and private institutions. The measure authorized $5 million a year for the five fiscal years 1956-60 for the costs of the program. Congress in 1959 extended the program through June 30, 1964.

In 1963, Congress passed the Clean Air Act (PL 88-206) providing for an expanded and strengthened program. It provided a series of steps, culminating in legal action, which a state, municipality or the Federal Government could take to bring an end to air pollution; but in the case of intrastate pollution, the Federal Government could act only at the request of a state's governor. The legislation authorized $95 million for matching grants to state, local and interstate agencies through 1967. The grants were for establishing and improving programs of air pollution prevention and control. The legislation also required the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) to submit semi-annual reports to Congress on elimination of exhaust pollution, with the first report due in December 1964.

AIR POLLUTION REPORTS

The Special Air and Water Pollution Subcommittee of the Senate Public Works Committee Nov. 23, 1964, released a report entitled "Steps Toward Cleaner Air."

Recommendations. The Subcommittee's 1964 report recommended legislation to deal with specific pollution problems:

- Automobile exhaust: Establish minimum national standards limiting exhaust emissions of air pollutants (primarily of hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide) from gasoline-powered motor vehicles patterned after requirements of a recently enacted California statute;
- Diesel exhaust: Direct the Federal Government to establish criteria for allowable exhaust emissions from diesel-powered vehicles;
- Solid waste disposal; Authorize grants to municipalities for construction of solid waste (rubbish and garbage) disposal facilities; financial assistance would be based on local ordinances to prevent open burning and control other sources of pollution;
- Research: Establish a Federal Air Pollution Control Laboratory within HEW, equipped and staffed for research on all air pollution control problems;
- Sulfur oxides: Authorize establishment of a technical committee, composed of representatives of HEW, the coal, petroleum and electric power industries, the Federal Power Commission and the Bureau of Mines to investigate development of improved, low-cost techniques to reduce sulfur oxides produced by the combustion of sulfur-containing fuels.

The report also recommended: (1) that the HEW Secretary prepare suggested state and municipal laws, regulations and ordinances to encourage uniform air pollution control activities within "air shed" areas, particularly where such "sheds" are interstate; and (2) that the President call a conference of federal and industry officials to coordinate efforts to control pollution from jet aircraft, rocket and missile testing and experimental fuel uses.

Findings. The Subcommittee emphasized the "primary importance" of pollution from automobile exhaust. It estimated that the approximately 82,500,000 automobiles, trucks and buses in the United States consumed about 65 million gallons of fuel a year, annually polluting the air with more than 14 million tons of hydrocarbons, 4 million tons of nitrogen oxides and 75 million tons of carbon monoxide.

The report noted that the new California pollution control law had forced the automobile industry to plan the production of cars for sale in that state which are equipped with exhaust control devices, beginning with the 1966 model year. But automobile industry representatives testified that the industry "would not voluntarily provide automobiles meeting California's standards on a nationwide basis," the report said.

The report said that automobile exhausts "constitute a major proportion of the community air pollution problem in all large cities in the nation," and "the technological skills and equipment needed (to reduce air pollution from cars) have passed the research stage. The Subcommittee can see no valid reason to delay further the adoption of control measures as an integral part of every new automobile manufactured in the United States. If the industry can, as it does, make major changes in the appearance of automobiles almost annually, and if it can, as it does, announce advances in performance with impressive regularity, it certainly can also incorporate promptly the adjustments and equipment necessary to reduce exhaust emissions."

The Subcommittee report said that while diesel-engine exhausts, although more disagreeable, were less noxious and detrimental than gasoline-engine exhausts, the likely increase in use of diesel engines warranted the "same relative degree of attention" to control measures given to gasoline exhausts.

Car Exhaust. An auto exhaust pollution report to Congress (required by the Clean Air Act) by the Department of HEW in December 1964 stated that "smog is a problem of growing national importance" attributable largely to automotive exhausts. Biological studies, the report said, show that auto emissions "produce adverse health effects." HEW Secretary Anthony J. Celebrezze was reported as saying in January 1965 that legislation in the field of auto emissions was needed.

BILL INTRODUCED; PRESIDENT'S REQUESTS

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D Maine), chairman of the Special Air and Water Pollution Subcommittee of the Senate Public Works Committee, Jan. 7, 1965, introduced S 306 with 20 cosponsors.

President Johnson's Jan. 25 Budget requested appropriations of $24.4 million for air pollution control activities of the Public Health Service during fiscal 1966.

In his Feb. 8 Natural Beauty Message, the President requested amendment of the 1963 Clean Air Act to permit the HEW Secretary "to investigate potential air pollution problems before pollution happens, rather than having to wait until the damage occurs, as is now the case, and to make recommendations leading to the prevention of such pollution." Mr. Johnson said he also would institute discussions "leading to an effective elimination or substantial reduction" of automobile exhaust pollution.

Mr. Johnson further recommended legislation to: "(1) Assist the states in developing comprehensive programs for some forms of solid waste disposal (2) Provide for research and demonstration projects leading to more effective methods for disposing of or salvaging solid wastes and (3) Launch a concentrated attack on the accumulation of junk cars by increasing research in the Department of the Interior leading to use of metal from scrap cars where promising leads already exist." (See p. 722; text p. 1379)

For Administration's position on S 306, see Senate Committee testimony, below.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works, Special Air and Water Pollution Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- April 6-9 on S 306 to control air pollution from automotive exhaust and to authorize a program for disposal of solid wastes. The bill directed the HEW Secretary to prescribe standards limiting the emission of air pollutants from new motor vehicles sold in the United States, whether manufactured domestically or abroad. The standards were to be effective not later than Nov. 1, 1966. The bill also authorized construction of a Federal Air Pollution Control Laboratory.

TESTIMONY -- April 6 -- Assistant Secretary of HEW James M. Quigley, testifying on behalf of the Administration, said the controls contained in S 306 were premature considering the current state of research on the causes and control of automotive air pollution. Quigley said that current federal authority was adequate and further legislation on air pollution control should be delayed until completion of further research. He said that President Johnson planned to meet with automobile industry representatives and other interested groups to discuss the pollution problem. Quigley said, "Since such a meeting could clearly open the way to a new appraisal by all concerned of the automobile exhaust problem and action required to control it, we do not recommend enactment of regulatory legislation at this time....We have no objection to a Congressional directive for accelerated research, but we suggest that it be couched broadly enough to permit changes in the direction of our efforts as dictated by new developments and new research needs."

April 7 -- The Subcommittee held hearings in Detroit to take testimony from representatives of the automobile industry.

Harry A. Williams, managing director of the Automobile Manufacturers Assn., said, "The combined efforts of government and industry pose questions which should be answered before new legislation is considered." However, Williams said the auto manufacturers, "given sufficient time," could equip new vehicles with exhaust control systems that would meet the requirements of S 306.

Harry F. Barr, vice president of General Motors, said, "The proposed standards and effective dates should be set by administrative rather than legislative decisions." He said GM would need two years to meet nationwide standards based on the pattern set in California.

Muskie said, "The existence of the problem is so clear that it is hardly necessary to wait for laboratory technicians to make their findings before taking action. I agree that the problem has not been totally explored. But we should act before the situation worsens."

April 9 -- Quigley returned to the Subcommittee to dispel press reports (based upon his previous testimony) that the Administration, in spite of Mr. Johnson's Natural Beauty Message, was against exhaust pollution controls. He said the Administration was reluctant to endorse the bill because of the detailed standards and the time schedule proposed. But he added that "clearly, action must be taken." He said that if the Subcommittee decided that legislation is the "appropriate approach," the Administration and HEW "want to work hand and glove with the Committee because our objectives are identical." HEW Secretary Anthony J. Celebrezze in an April 13 letter said, "We wholeheartedly endorse legislation which would provide authority for the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to establish, by regulation, standards for exhaust pollutant emissions. Time limitations for the application of such standards should be sufficiently flexible to permit them to be applied as early as possible... Testimony has indicated that, based on present information, it would be technologically feasible to apply adequate control systems to the vehicles produced in the 1968 model year."

ACTION -- The Committee May 14 reported S 306 (S Rept 192). In response to Administration requests, specific limitations on allowable crankcase and exhaust emissions were dropped in favor of discretionary power for the HEW Secretary to set standards.

The Nov. 1, 1966, deadline for emission standards was moved back to Sept. 1, 1967, with the Secretary granted discretion to apply standards earlier.

As introduced, S 306 had proposed a program of grants to municipalities for construction of solid waste disposal facilities, with appropriations authorizations of $100 million annually for fiscal 1966-68. This provision was replaced by a research and development program in Title II of the bill as reported, which was based on an Administration draft bill submitted April 13.

At the request of the Administration, the Committee also dropped a provision for grants to state agencies for inspection of exhaust control devices installed on vehicles. In its April 5 report, HEW had proposed deferment of this program because appropriate inspection devices were not available and organizational arrangements required further consideration.

A technical committee for development of techniques to reduce emission of oxides of sulfur from sulfur-containing fuels was deleted from the bill by the Committee because the Administration favored administrative action under existing Clean Air Act authority.

The Committee said that in all hearings since 1963 automotive exhaust from some 84 million automobiles, trucks and buses was cited as responsible for about 50 percent of the national air pollution problem. On the basis of testimony from the automotive industry, the Committee concluded that California's standards of 275 parts per million of hydrocarbons and not more than 1.5 percent by volume of carbon monoxide could be met by the manufacturers. The manner of meeting the standards, the Committee said, should be left to the manufacturer. The Committee found the estimated cost of automotive pollution equipment "modest and commensurate with the need to reduce this major source of air pollution." The report called for research to find means, not yet available, for controlling harmful emissions in addition to hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide.

The Committee said it was "disappointed that the Department (HEW) has not been more active in pursuing the abatement courses provided" in the Clean Air Act.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate May 18 passed S 306 by voice vote and without debate.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S 306:

Motor Vehicle Air Pollution Control Act. Directed the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, giving "appropriate consideration to technological feasibility and economic costs," to set standards for emission of air pollutants from new gasoline-powered vehicles, to be effective not later than Sept. 1, 1967.

Directed the Secretary to recommend additional legislation to regulate pollution from diesel-powered vehicles by Jan. 31, 1967.

Prohibited the domestic sale, manufacture for domestic sale, or importation of any affected vehicle or vehicle engine not in conformity with the regulations. Provided fines of up to $1,000 for each new motor vehicle or new motor vehicle engine which was manufactured or sold in violation of the regulations.

Provided for inspection by HEW officials of factories, warehouses and other premises where vehicles are held prior to sale to ascertain compliance with the regulations.

In cases of air pollution affecting a foreign country, directed the Secretary to call a conference of state and local air pollution agencies in the area where the pollution originates and to invite the affected foreign country to participate in the conference; authorized the Attorney General to bring suit on behalf of the United States if the conference and subsequent proceedings failed to prompt action to abate the pollution. (Similar procedures were already available under the Clean Air Act in cases of pollution originating in one state and affecting another.)

Authorized research on control of automotive pollutants as part of HEW's air pollution research program.

Authorized construction of a Federal Air Pollution Control Laboratory.

Solid Waste Disposal Act. Specified that the purpose of the new Act was to begin a national research and development program for new and improved methods of solid waste disposal and to provide technical and financial aid to state and local governments in developing, establishing and conducting solid waste disposal programs.

Directed the HEW Secretary to conduct and encourage research, investigations, experiments, training, demonstrations, surveys and studies about solid waste disposal. Authorized the Secretary to carry out these responsibilities in various ways, including:

Grants-in-aid to (or contracts with) public and private agencies and institutions and individuals for research and training projects (limited amounts obligated under the provision to 25 percent of the amount appropriated annually for the Act -- see below).

Grants to state, municipal, interstate and intermunicipal agencies for solid waste demonstration projects, with the following restrictions: limited the federal share of such projects to not more than two-thirds of the cost; restricted such spending to a maximum of 12.5 percent in any one state; prohibited such grants to municipalities without adequate laws controlling pollution by disposal of solid wastes; required the Secretary to consult with the Governors of the affected states, or an official designated by them, before making such grants available.

Authorized use of up to 10 percent of annual appropriations under the Solid Waste Disposal Act for grants to state or interstate air pollution control agencies for up to two-thirds of the cost of solid waste disposal surveys and planning.

Required that any information, copyrights, patents, etc., resulting from research and development financed by appropriations under the Act, be made freely available to the public.

Authorized appropriations for the Waste Disposal Act of $20 million annually in fiscal 1966 and 1967.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

ACTION -- Aug. 31 reported S 306 (H Rept 899) with amendments.

Changes in Senate Bill. The Committee made the following major changes in the Senate version of S 306:

● The Committee deleted the deadlines provided in the Senate version for establishment of standards for automotive exhaust emissions. Instead, the Secretary of HEW was directed to develop standards "as soon as practicable" and to set the deadlines for compliance "after consideration of the period reasonably necessary for industry compliance."

● Instead of factory inspection by HEW officials to insure compliance with the standards for automotive exhaust emissions, the Committee provided that sample vehicles could be submitted to HEW, which would issue a certificate of compliance to cover all vehicles of the same production model.

● The Committee directed that special attention be given to developing improved, low-cost techniques for reducing sulfur-oxide emissions from sulfur-containing fuels. But it eliminated a provision for an Air Pollution Control Laboratory.

● The Committee authorized appropriations of $96,480,000 over four years for the automotive air pollution control program and the solid waste disposal research program, with the bulk of the funds going to the latter. It split responsibility for the solid waste disposal program between the Departments of HEW and the Interior. The Senate had authorized $40 million over two years for the solid waste disposal program, under HEW alone.

Majority Views. The report said the technical knowledge and skills to reduce motor vehicle pollution were currently available and public concern with pollution was clearly increasing. The report said, "It is apparent that the establishment of federal standards...is preferable to regulation by individual states. The high rate of mobility of automobiles suggests that anything short of nationwide control would scarcely be adequate."

On the need to improve techniques for reducing sulfur oxide emissions, the report said, "The oxides of sulfur are one of the most widespread of all classes of air pollutants and they are among the most injurious to human health and the most damaging to property and vegetation." (Major sources of sulfur oxide emissions are soft coal and residual fuel oil, both of which were widely used to heat buildings and, in the case of coal, to fuel steam-electric generating plants. Existing techniques for controlling pollution by such fuels were considered by industry to be prohibitively expensive.)

The report criticized as too stringent a standard being considered by the Budget Bureau for permissible sulfur oxide emissions from new federal installations. The proposed standard had been attacked by coal companies and residual fuel oil importers, who said that as a practical matter, it would "eliminate the use of coal or imported residual fuel oil in new federal installations" and force the use of natural gas. (See box)

The report included a letter to the Committee from Wilbur J. Cohen, Under Secretary of HEW, saying that the Budget Bureau and HEW had concluded that "sulfur dioxide standards for federal installations should not be promulgated at this time, but that further consideration and study will be necessary."

Solid waste disposal, although a less recognized area, was not a lesser health problem, the report said. "The dimensions of the problem are staggering. Available data indicate that current production of solid wastes in urban communities amounts to a half billion pounds daily," and this total would triple by 1980. It said the problem could not be met without federal assistance,

Pollution at Federal Sites

Efforts were made in both the Executive Branch and in Congress during 1965 to establish air pollution controls for new federal installations. Although no final action was taken, standards were expected to be issued in 1966.

A heated controversy surrounded the 1965 efforts to establish the federal-installation standards by administrative action. The Bureau of the Budget in July 1964 issued a directive requiring design and construction estimates for new federal buildings to include air and water pollution control systems. The directive could not be put into effect, however, until standards were approved. Toward this end, the Public Health Service in December 1964 drafted air pollution control standards and submitted them to the Budget Bureau for approval. The proposed standards, regarded by the coal and oil industries as unnecessarily stiff, drew considerable criticism and the Budget Bureau took no action on them during 1965. (However, President Johnson Nov. 17 issued an Executive Order establishing water standards at federal sites. See p. 744)

The proposed PHS air pollution standards limited emission of sulfur dioxide released in the air to not more than one pound of oxide per million BTU heat input for all new federal installations in certain large metropolitan areas. This meant that oil and coal burned by new federal facilities could not have a sulfur content of more than 0.7 percent.

The oil and coal industries vigorously opposed the standards. The coal industry claimed that too much of the coal being mined currently would not meet the standards and that efforts to refine substandard coal would be prohibitively expensive. The oil industry held similar views about its product. In addition, the industries feared that such standards eventually would be extended to existing federal structures and by other levels of government to existing and new structures, private as well as public. The industries wanted the Government to provide funds for research on reducing the sulfur content of fuels.

Joseph E. Moody, president of the National Coal Policy Conference Inc., June 16 said that the standards "would rule out coal as a fuel for use in power generation (and) could jeopardize the nation's supply of low cost electricity." Moody said the standards would exclude about 96 percent of the total U.S. coal supply.

The Interior Department's Bureau of Mines reportedly was opposed to the PHS order.

(In his 1966 Economic Message to Congress, President Johnson Jan. 27, 1966, said he would issue an Executive Order covering air pollution from federal installations.)

In Congress in 1965, the Senate March 25 by a voice vote passed a bill (S 560) which authorized the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to set both air and water pollution control standards for all federal installations. No action occurred in the House.

since the disposal of solid wastes was straining the resources of state and local agencies. As few technological advances had been made in this field in recent years, there was a primary need for a federally-financed national research program, the report concluded.

Minority Views. Republican Reps. William L. Springer (Ill.), J. Arthur Younger (Calif.), Samuel L. Devine (Ohio), James Harvey (Mich.), Ancher Nelsen (Minn.), Willard S. Curtin (Pa.), and Glenn Cunningham (Neb.) agreed that the bill reported seemed "sensible" and "fair to all" as far as air pollution problems were concerned. As far as the solid waste proposals were concerned, they said, whatever needed to be done in this area by federal departments could be "done without more authority or the expenditure of an additional $92.5 million." They said the problem was essentially a "function of state, regional, and local agencies...no case has been made for federal action or the expenditure of funds in this field."

FLOOR ACTION

The House Sept. 24 passed S 306 by a 294-4 roll-call vote. Voting against the bill were Robert Dole (R Kan.), Paul Findley (R Ill.), W.R. Poage (D Texas) and Graham Purcell (D Texas). (For voting, see chart p. 1008)

Prior to passage, the House defeated by an 80-220 roll-call vote a motion to recommit the bill to the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee with instructions to delete the solid waste provisions. A floor amendment to delete these provisions had been rejected earlier by a 29-101 standing vote.

The measure was passed as rewritten by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee with only one minor amendment accepted on the floor.

The one floor amendment accepted, which was offered by Emilio Q. Daddario (D Conn.), required that federal officials in carrying out a patent provision in the bill follow an existing Government patent policy. The committee patent provisions replaced a Senate patent provision. (See p. 887)

Most of the debate centered around the section on solid wastes. In defense of the section, Oren Harris (D Ark.) said, "What is the use of having a beautification program...if at the same time we are going to permit a situation to exist where there is no proper method for dealing with...rubbish."

Harris added that "it is not the intention (of the Act) to take over the problem of waste disposal. The program is designed to find new ways, methods and techniques of disposing of solid wastes."

Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) criticized the authorization of $92.5 million for solid waste disposal research: "It is very clear...that there is no coordination of this suggested program here and of the programs that exist."

PROVISIONS -- See final provisions.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Sept. 24 -- Emilio Q. Daddario (D Conn.) -- Require federal officials in carrying out the patent provision of the bill to follow a Government patent policy promulgated by President Kennedy on Oct. 10, 1963. Voice vote.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Sept. 24 -- Ancher Nelsen (R Minn.) -- Delete the Solid Waste Disposal Act provisions from the bill. Standing vote, 29-101.

Final Action

The Senate Oct. 1 by voice vote concurred in House amendments to S 306.

In signing the bill into law (PL 89-272) on Oct. 20, Mr. Johnson said, "We made a hopeful beginning toward solving this (pollution) problem with the Clean Air Act of 1963. Today, with the signing of the Clean Air Act Amendments and the Solid Waste Disposal Act, we are redoubling our efforts." He added, "This Act will require all 1968 model automobiles -- including the foreign models that are sold here -- to meet federal control standards for exhaust."

CAR POLLUTION STANDARDS SET

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare March 29, 1966, published final standards limiting discharge of two air pollutants from the exhaust systems of new motor vehicles or motor vehicle engines. The standards also required automobile manufacturers to eliminate any existing crankcase blowby emission of pollutants in their engines.

The standards applied to most new gasoline powered motor vehicles and engines, beginning with the 1968 model year. The standards did not apply to (1) motor vehicles with an engine cylinder displacement of less than 50 cubic inches, (2) motorcycles, and (3) large commercial vehicles (over one-half ton). Industry spokesmen estimated that devices to control pollution emission would add from $10 to $50 to the price of 1968 models, depending on the engine size of the model and on the type of control device adopted by individual manufacturers.

The standards were published in accordance with PL 89-272. HEW had published draft standards Dec. 31, 1965.

In an introduction to the final standards published in the Federal Register, HEW said comments from foreign and domestic automobile manufacturers had indicated that the draft standards set unduly severe regulations on small automobile engines. Accordingly, the standards were revised to account for three engine-size categories. Other revisions were also made.

The final standards were very similar to automobile exhaust standards adopted by California in 1964. The California standards took effect in 1965, for most 1966 model automobiles sold in that state.

STANDARDS -- The HEW standards regulated discharge of two air pollutants: hydrocarbons, an ingredient in the formation of photochemical smog which can produce discomfort, eye irritation and plant damage; and carbon monoxide, a poisonous gas. Discharge of these pollutants was to be regulated on either a parts per million or percentage of volume basis, over an engine "life" of 100,000 miles of normal operation in an urban area. Discharge limits:

1. For vehicles with an engine cylinder displacement of 50-100 cubic inches, the limits were 410 parts per million of hydrocarbons, and 2.3 percent by volume of carbon monoxide.

2. For vehicles with an engine cylinder displacement in excess of 100 cubic inches but not more than 140 cubic inches, the limits were 350 parts per million of hydrocarbons, and 2.0 percent by volume of carbon monoxide.

3. For vehicles with an engine cylinder displacement of more than 140 cubic inches, the limits were 275 parts per million of hydrocarbons, and 1.5 percent by volume of carbon monoxide.

(Most imported cars, such as Volkswagens and Simcas, were in the first category. Some imported cars were in the second and third categories. Domestically made cars almost without exception were in the third category, as were half-ton and smaller pick-up trucks.)

HEW also set standards for testing new engines, procedures for issuing compliance certificates, and appeals procedures in case of HEW determination that an engine type had not met exhaust standards.

Standards for Government Cars. The General Services Administration, the Federal Government's main purchasing agent, Jan. 26, 1965, published an order which specified that, beginning with the 1967 model year, motor vehicles purchased by it would have to have exhaust pollution control equipment and 16 safety features listed in the order. The only other large Government purchaser of automobiles was the military -- not covered by the order. Legislation enacted in 1964 (PL 88-515) authorized the standards for vehicles purchased by the Federal Government. (For list of requirements, see 1964 Almanac p. 273.)

The GSA requirement on exhaust emissions was based on standards set in 1964 by California. Exhausts from engines could not contain more than 275 parts per million of hydrocarbons and 1.5 percent carbon monoxide. The final version of the GSA standards was published June 30.

OTHER RELATED DEVELOPMENTS

Auto Safety, Pollution Tax. An unsuccessful attempt was made in the Senate in June to force automobile manufacturers to install safety and pollution control devices in all cars beginning with the 1968 model year. The attempt was made by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) during consideration of a bill (HR 8371) to reduce or eliminate $4.7 billion in federal excise taxes, including those on the purchase of automobiles. The Administration had proposed eliminating the 10 percent automobile tax. The Senate adopted a Ribicoff amendment which made elimination of 4 percent of the existing tax contingent upon manufacturers' installing the same safety and pollution-control devices which the General Services Administration in January required on automobiles purchased by the Federal Government. Ribicoff's amendment was dropped from the final bill by Senate-House conferees. (See story p. 835)

Pollution Tax Proposed. The President's Science Advisory Committee Nov. 5 recommended that the Federal Government consider instituting a tax on those who pollute the country's air, water and land. The Committee suggested a system of "effluent charges" to tax polluters and a tax on junk automobiles to cut down on the number of auto junkyards. In a statement issued with the report, Mr. Johnson said he had asked the appropriate federal departments and agencies to study the Committee's recommendations and "report to me on the ways in which we can move to cope with the problems." Mr. Johnson added, "We will need increased basic research in a variety of specific areas, including soil pollution and the effects of air pollutants on man. I intend to give high priority to increasing the numbers and quality of the scientists and engineers working on problems related to the control and management of pollution."

LEAD, ZINC SUBSIDIES

HR 5842 -- Reported by House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (H Rept 362) May 20, 1965.
- Passed by voice vote of the House June 7.
- Reported by Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee (S Rept 757) Sept. 20.
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate Sept. 22.

PL 89-238 -- Signed into law Oct. 5.

Congress in 1965 enacted legislation (HR 5842 -- PL 89-238) extending the Lead-Zinc Small Producers Stabilization Act of 1961 (PL 87-347) for four years, through Dec. 31, 1969.

The bill also provided for stabilization payments in a calendar year on up to 1,200 tons each of lead and zinc for any one producer (current law limited payments to 600 tons of each metal); limited to $2.5 million the total amount of payments in any one year; and redefined "small domestic producers" to simplify administrative procedures, with an additional stipulation that any firm which was a subsidiary of or controlled by a large producer was excluded from the program. The effective date of the bill was Jan. 1, 1966.

Under the 1961 Act, small domestic producers of lead and zinc were paid a subsidy for what they produced based on the difference between the current market price of lead and zinc and the statutory stabilization price of 14-1/2 cents per pound. The current price was 14-1/2 cents per pound or more; therefore, no payments were being made.

The 1961 Act also authorized payments of $16,500,000 over a four-year period; actual payments amounted to $2,132,305. Under HR 5842, payments over the next four-year period would not exceed $10 million.

The Senate report stated that a "long-term solution to the problems in the lead-zinc industry resulting from violent price fluctuations and their effect on production must be developed for the benefit of the entire industry and the country." In addition, the report said the 1961 Act itself "needs to be broadened" so that its benefits would extend to the bona fide small producers not currently eligible. The current requirement, the report said, that at least 50 percent of a mine's production be lead and zinc had excluded "many bona fide producers of lead and zinc in states where such metals are found for the most part in conjunction with other metals." The Interior Department supported the bill in a May 7 letter to the Committee. (1961 Almanac p. 489; 1963 Almanac p. 466)

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- June 8 -- In a report requested by President Johnson, the Tariff Commission strongly criticized the existing quotas on lead and zinc imports. Imposed by executive order of President Eisenhower in 1958, the quotas limited imports to 80 percent of the yearly average for the period 1953-57. The Commission said whereas the quotas were imposed when domestic producers were suffering from depressed prices, the producers' competitive position had improved and "most domestic producers will probably be in a stronger position to meet future import competition without import quota restrictions than in the past." It added that the rigid quotas had often placed supply problems on domestic smelters who relied on imports of ores from abroad, because some countries could not export enough lead and zinc to fill their quotas and meet U.S. demands.

Taxes and Economic Policy

Appalachia Program 788
Balance of Payments 865
Bank Mergers 848
Coinage System 882
Common-site Picketing 832
Copyright Law 922
Depressed Areas 798
Discount Rate Increase 877
Excise Tax Reductions 835
Federal Power Bills 892
Gold Cover 879
High-speed Transportation 901
Manpower Training 810
Maritime Policy 911
Minimum Wage 858
Patent Policy 887
Right-to-work Repeal 818
Service Contract Wages 817
State Technical Services 918

$1.1 BILLION APPALACHIA AID BILL APPROVED

S 3 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 13) Jan. 27, 1965.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate on a 62-22 roll-call vote Feb. 1. (See p. 1025)
- Reported by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 51) Feb. 17.
- Passed by the House on a 257-165 roll-call vote March 3. (See p. 940)

PL 89-4 -- Signed into law March 9.

Passage of S 3, President Johnson's Appalachian Regional Development Act, authorized $1,092,400,000 for the development of the economically depressed 12-state Appalachian region. The Act was the first Great Society measure to clear the 89th Congress. President Johnson proposed the assistance program in 1964, and at a news conference in November of that year said that Appalachian aid was a high priority item which should receive quick attention in 1965.

Although the Senate approved an Appalachian bill in 1964, by a 45-13 roll call, the House did not act on a companion bill. Supporters in the House said a majority favored the program, but it was not certain that enough members could be produced in the closing days of the 88th Congress to approve the measure.

The 1965 bill, slightly amended in the Senate and passed without change by the House, was opposed by a majority of Republicans in both chambers.

Republicans called S 3 "a boondoggle" and "pork barrel" and charged that the White House had ordered the Democrats to get the bill through the House without change to avoid its going back to the Senate and perhaps to a conference.

The purpose of the Appalachia-aid bill was to help the Appalachia region, one of the nation's poorest, to emerge permanently from a condition of backwardness and poverty. Toward this end, the bill relied on two major approaches: (1) creation of a federal-state regional commission to help draw up coordinated regional economic development plans for the area; and (2) authorization of special federal financial aid to help the area obtain the primary public facilities needed as a basis for economic expansion (such as roads and health facilities), and to help the area restore some of the natural resources ravaged by neglect and misuse (such as timber and water resources and land ruined by strip mining or poor agricultural practices).

S 3 established an Appalachian Regional Commission to coordinate the projects authorized by the bill and to develop an economic program for 360 counties with a population of about 16 million persons. The area covered all of West Virginia and portions of Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. In addition, S 3 allowed the Commission to add 13 New York counties to the program. Inclusion of these counties was announced by the Commission Aug. 18, thus adding a 12th state to the program.

The bill authorized a total of $840 million in federal grants over the six-year period ending June 30, 1971, to pay up to 70 percent of the cost of building 2,350 miles of development highways and 1,000 miles of local access roads in the region. The Appalachian states would contribute a minimum of $360 million for the highways. These highways would be in addition to all other highways built with assistance received under other federal road programs. In addition to the road funds, S 3 authorized a variety of special projects (in addition to any projects which might be undertaken under other existing federal programs) including construction of health facilities and vocational schools, land improvement, reclamation of mining areas and development of timber and water resources. The bill authorized $252.4 million to cover the federal contributions to these projects during the first two years of the program (through the end of fiscal 1967). Additional funds would be authorized later for subsequent years.

The bill provided that the Appalachian Regional Development Act would terminate July 1, 1971. Total federal expenditures for the six-year program (including both the initial $1,092,400,000 authorizations and the additional funds to be sought after fiscal 1967) were expected to be about $2 billion.

Related Developments

Co-Chairmen Appointed. In accord with provisions of the bill calling for the Appalachian Regional Commission to be headed by two co-chairmen -- one a "federal co-chairman" to be named by the President, and the other a "state co-chairman" to be named by the participating states--President Johnson appointed as the federal co-chairman John L. Sweeney, former chairman of the Federal Development Planning Committee for Appalachia. Sweeney was confirmed by the Senate April 1. The participating states April 19 named Georgia Gov. Carl E. Sanders (D) as the state co-chairman. He was succeeded as state co-chairman July 1 by Kentucky Gov. Edward T. Breathitt (D).

Funds Provided. To get the Appalachia-aid program under way, President Johnson requested an appropriation of $362,636,000, and Congress in the Second Supplemental Appropriations Act for fiscal 1965 (HR 7091--PL 89-16), signed into law April 30, provided nearly all he asked--$349,688,000. The largest items in the appropriation were $200 million for highways, $45 million for grant-in-aid supplements, $21 million for hospital construction and $16 million for restoration of mining areas. In most cases, the funds in HR 7091 were intended to carry the program to the end of fiscal 1966. Additional appropriations were to be made later, after the initial funds provided in the supplemental bill were used up.

Commission Actions. In its first broad action, the Appalachian Regional Commission May 12 recommended 992 miles of Appalachian development highway corridors, at an eventual cost of $485 million. The Commission also recommended an immediate start on mining area restoration, sewage treatment works and vocational area facilities.

Similar General Legislation. Congress later in 1965, at President Johnson's request, passed the Public Works and Economic Development Act (S 1648 -- PL 89-136), which authorized programs for various other "underdeveloped" or depressed areas of the nation similar to that provided for Appalachia in S 3. (See story p. 798.)

Provisions

As signed into law, S 3, the Appalachian Regional Development Act, contained the following provisions:

Title I - Appalachian Regional Commission. Created an Appalachian Regional Commission composed of one federal member, to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, and the governor or his representative from each state covered by the act. Decisions would require the approval of the federal representative and a majority of the state representatives. The Commission would prepare programs for the economic development of the region, conduct research, formulate interstate compacts, encourage private investment in the area and formation of local development districts, coordinate Appalachian programs, provide a forum for discussion of Appalachian policy and make recommendations to the President and the states regarding the program. The bill provided $2.2 million for the administrative expenses of the Commission through June 30, 1967, after which the expenses would be shared equally by the Federal Government and the states, plus $200,000 for the staff of the federal member (also called the "federal co-chairman"). (These funds would come out of the total of $252.4 million authorized in Title IV, below.)

Title II - Special Appalachian Programs. Authorized appropriations of $840 million over the period ending June 30, 1971, for construction of up to 2,350 miles of development highways in the region and -- in addition -- up to 1,000 miles of local access road. The Commission would recommend the location of the highways and roads, and state members of the Commission would be required to consult with their state highway departments before voting on road plans. The Secretary of Commerce would approve, reject or modify the recommendations.

Permitted the states, in building the roads, to give preference to local mineral resources; and permitted the Secretary of Commerce to require the use of coal derivatives in construction of up to 10 percent of the roads. Federal aid to any road project could not exceed 50 percent of the cost, except where the Secretary of Commerce determined--on the basis of Commission recommendations--that a higher percentage was needed to further the purposes of the Act, in which case the federal share could go as high as 70 percent.

Authorized various other special programs (as described below) and provided the amounts shown to cover the costs of such programs through June 30, 1967. (These amounts would come out of the $252.4 million authorized in Title IV, below.)

- Authorized up to $41 million in grants for construction of multicounty demonstration health facilities, including hospitals and diagnostic and treatment centers. Grants for construction could not exceed 80 percent of the project cost. Authorized up to $28 million for operation of health facilities during the first two years of operation. Federal grants for operation could cover up to 100 percent of the costs during the first two years of operation and up to 50 percent the following three years. No grants for operation would be made thereafter. (Continued on next page)

Funds Authorized

As signed into law, S 3 authorized $1,092,400,000 in federal aid to Appalachia. All the aid funds authorized in the bill were to be in addition to any federal assistance Appalachia-area states and local government agencies were receiving under existing national programs of similar character.

Of the total provided by S 3, $840 million was for special highway construction projects and was intended to cover the entire period (slightly over six years) from the enactment of the bill to its expiration on June 30, 1971. (These funds would come from appropriations from general revenues, not from the Federal Highway Trust Fund.)

The remaining $252.4 million provided by S 3 was for a variety of special projects, and was intended to cover the costs of these projects only from passage of the bill to June 30, 1967, a little over two years. Additional authorizations would be required for these projects over the final four years of the Act (June 30, 1967, to June 30, 1971).

The figures below give a breakdown of authorizations in the final bill by purpose and period of time covered. It should be noted that the Administration's initial version of S 3, as introduced, contained authorizations identical to the final ones shown below, with two exceptions: the initial Administration version did not carry $200,000 for the federal co-chairman's staff; and it authorized only $21.5 million for mining area restoration (instead of the $36.5 million carried by the final version of the bill). The final bill, with its total of $1,092,400,000 in authorizations, thus was $15.2 million greater than the initial Administration request of $1,077,200,000.

Purpose of Funds	Period Covered	Total Authorized for Period
Highway construction	To June 30, 1971	$ 840,000,000
Expenses of Appalachian Commission	To June 30, 1967	2,200,000
Federal Co-chairman's staff	To June 30, 1967	200,000
Demonstration health facilities - construction	To June 30, 1967	41,000,000
Demonstration health facilities - operations	To June 30, 1967	28,000,000
Conservation	To June 30, 1967	17,000,000
Timber aid	To June 30, 1967	5,000,000
Mining area restoration	To June 30, 1967	36,500,000
Water resource survey	To June 30, 1967	5,000,000
Vocational education facilities	To June 30, 1967	16,000,000
Sewage treatment works	To June 30, 1967	6,000,000
Grant-in-aid supplements	To June 30, 1967	90,000,000
Expenses of local development districts, research	To June 30, 1967	5,500,000
	TOTAL	$1,092,400,000

Authorized up to $17 million in grants to control and prevent erosion and sediment damages in the region and to promote the conservation and development of soil and water resources. The Secretary of Agriculture was authorized to enter into conservation agreements of up to 10 years with landowners. Grants to any landowner could not exceed 80 percent of the costs of improving and developing not more than 50 acres of land.

Authorized up to $5 million for fiscal 1966-67 for loans to establish timber development organizations, which would carry out programs to improve timber productivity and quality. The loans would cover up to 50 percent of the initial costs of the organizations. The Secretary of Agriculture would provide technical assistance to the organizations.

Authorized up to $36.5 million in grants to states to seal and fill voids in abandoned coal mines, to reclaim and rehabilitate existing strip and surface mines, to extinguish underground and outcrop mine fires and expand and accelerate fish and wildlife restoration projects in connection with mining area restoration. The grants could not exceed 75 percent of the costs and could only be used for projects on publicly owned land. (Reclamation of privately owned strip-mined areas was barred until authorized by law after completion of a study of the problem of strip-mined lands that was provided for in the bill.) The bill required the Secretary of the Interior to make a comprehensive, long-range study for the purposes of reclaiming and rehabilitating strip-and surface-mining areas in the United States. The Secretary's study and recommendations would be completed for submission to Congress by the President by July 1, 1967.

Authorized the Secretary of the Army to prepare a plan for the development, control and efficient use of water and related resources in the region; authorized up to $5 million for the study, which would be completed for submission to Congress by the President by Dec. 31, 1968.

MODIFICATIONS OF EXISTING PROGRAMS

Authorized up to $16 million in grants to supplement Vocational Education Act funds for construction, in the Appalachian region, of vocational schools.

Authorized a supplement of up to $6 million in grants for construction of sewage treatment works authorized by the Federal Water Pollution Control Act.

Amended the Housing Act of 1954 to make the Appalachian Regional Commission an eligible agency to receive comprehensive planning grants under that Act.

Authorized up to $90 million for a special fund to be established by the Secretary of Commerce to increase the federal share under existing grant-in-aid programs to permit Appalachian communities and states to take advantage of the programs. The federal contribution for any of these programs could not exceed 80 percent of the cost. The authorization was limited to those federal programs that provided grant funds for construction and equipment of facilities and acquisition of land and not for operation. The grant-in-aid programs included such legislation as the Library Services Act, Federal Airport Act, National Defense Education Act of 1958 and Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Provided that no state would be eligible for the federal Appalachian program unless state expenditures for benefit of the Appalachian area within the state were maintained at a specified level; provided that no project in the program could be undertaken within a state without the state's consent; provided that no funds would be authorized for projects that would relocate facilities from one area to another.

Barred use of funds under the Act to build industrial and commercial facilities, electric power facilities or gas facilities.

Title III - Administration. Defined the local units to which the Commission would extend assistance through the state governments; provided that local development districts would have to be certified by the state governments.

Authorized up to $5.5 million for initial administrative expenses of local development districts and for research grants to public or private organizations to further the purposes of the Act. Grants to the local development districts could cover no more than 75 percent of their expenses in any one fiscal year and could not be made to any one district for a period in excess of three years. Patents, processes, information and similar results of work done under the federal research grants would be available freely to the public.

Provided that applications for benefits under the Act could be made only by a state, a political subdivision of a state or a local development district.

Permitted such benefits to be extended only for programs and projects approved by the Commission and by the state member of the Commission from the area involved.

Title IV - Appropriations and Miscellaneous. Authorized appropriations of $252.4 million in the period from enactment of the bill to June 30, 1967, for the programs enumerated in all the sections of the bill except the section providing highway funds. (The $840 million in appropriations authorized for highways was in addition to the $252.4 million. The $252.4 million total figure included $200,000 for administrative expenses of the office of the federal representative on the Commission.)

Applied the prevailing wage requirements of the Davis-Bacon Act to construction work receiving federal aid under the bill.

Designated 360 counties in 11 states as eligible for assistance under the Act. Directed the Commission to consider--in consultation with New York's Governor or an official designated by him--whether a group of southern New York counties "contiguous" to the Appalachian region (including other counties next to the immediately contiguous counties) should be brought into the program and to invite the state to join if the Commission decided the addition would further the purposes of the act.

Provided that the Act would terminate July 1, 1971.

Background

REFERENCES -- For detailed history of proposals for Appalachia aid prior to 1965, see 1964 Almanac p. 288.

Governors of Appalachian states became concerned in the late 1950s with the depressed economic conditions in the Appalachian region and began holding joint meetings to discuss their common problems. This led to the formation of the Conference of Appalachian Governors May 20, 1960, at Annapolis, Md., at a meeting called by Gov. J. Millard Tawes (D Md.).

The Conference, Oct. 18, 1960, meeting at Lexington, Ky., issued a resolution calling for a "special regional program of development" involving "local, state and federal governments, and both public and private forces."

Following additional studies, including one submitted to President Johnson April 9, 1964, by an Appalachian Regional (Study) Commission appointed one year earlier by the late President John F. Kennedy, Mr. Johnson April 28, 1964, sent Congress a request to authorize special aid to the region.

The Senate Sept. 25, 1964, by a 45-13 roll call, passed an Appalachia bill hewing closely to Mr. Johnson's requests and providing $1.1 billion over a six-year period.

But the bill failed to reach the House floor in 1964, although reported by the House Public Works Committee and cleared for floor debate by the Rules Committee. As a result, both the Senate and House bills died when the 88th Congress adjourned. The President at a Nov. 28, 1964, press conference indicated that Appalachia aid would be a top priority for his Administration in the 89th Congress which was to convene in January 1965.

Subsequently, Sen. Jennings Randolph (D W.Va.) Jan. 6, 1965, introduced the Administration's new Appalachia-aid bill (S 3) calling for $1,077,200,000 in federal aid authorizations, and President Johnson in his Jan. 25 Budget Message asked for its enactment. House Public Works Committee Chairman George H. Fallon (D Md.) introduced the House version of the Administration bill (HR 4).

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

HELD HEARINGS -- Jan. 19 and 21 on S 3.

As introduced, S 3 made three major changes from the bill passed by the Senate in 1964: (1) The addition of 500 miles of local access roads, bringing the total of local roads to 1,000 miles. Development roads would remain at 2,350 miles, and total cost of the road program would still be $840 million. An Administration official explained that local roads would cost only about half of original estimates because some states planned to build local roads of lower standards. (2) Introduction of a $17 million land improvement and erosion control program to replace a $17 million pastureland development program deleted from the 1964 bill by the Senate due to opposition from cattle interests. (3) Restricting timber development organizations (TDO) to nonprofit corporations. TDOs would be cooperative groups of landowners carrying out timber improvement programs.

TESTIMONY -- Jan. 19 -- John L. Sweeney, chairman of the Federal Development Planning Committee for Appalachia under the Commerce Department, emphasized that the primary responsibility for projects under the Act would rest with the states and that all projects must be approved by the state involved. "Coordination will be the key word of the Appalachian Regional Commission (the federal-state body that would supervise the program) -- coordination among the Appalachian states, the federal agencies, the private and public institutions of the region and local communities and organizations."

Sweeney said: "The neglect which has determined the present condition of Appalachia cannot be allowed to continue.... This legislation seeks to provide for Appalachia not the means for support, but more important, the tools for development."

North Carolina Gov. Dan K. Moore (D) endorsed S 3 "as a means to help the people of our Appalachian area help themselves." He said the road-building proposals "strike at the very heart of the problem" and that the federal-state effort "would provide a joint approach which should prove most valuable."

Hamilton K. Pyles, deputy chief, U.S. Forest Service, said the timber development organizations could be an "effective vehicle for helping small owners...improve the productivity and quality of their woodlands." He said the landowners would determine the character of the TDOs, which could seek physical consolidation of woodlands and purchase land from owners wishing to sell.

Dr. James G. Yoho, professor of forest economics, Duke University, said the TDOs resembled forest cooperatives, which had a long history of failure. He suggested that the chances of success for the TDOs would be enhanced if Agricultural Conservation Program funds from the Agriculture Department were available for a "significant portion of the costs of their forest improvement work." But he doubted that the increased timber supply that could be generated by the TDOs would help Appalachia unless a way was found to stimulate demand for forest products. He suggested that the Regional Commission be given power to encourage consolidation and improvement of wood processing industries in the Appalachian region. He also favored encouragement of more applied research in the forest products industris.

H.S. Mersereau, representing the Forest Industries Council (lumber, pulpwood and paper industries), questioned the power of TDOs to acquire forest lands. "We... wonder how this organization can help individual timber growers secure the best market for their products if the TDO is purchasing its own forest lands and growing and marketing substantial volumes of its own timber in competition with those of its clients."

Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.), a Committee member and co-sponsor of S 3, said he also opposed the woodland-acquiring power because it could result in the small landowner losing a vital source of income.

Tennessee Gov. Frank G. Clement (D) endorsed S 3.

Jan. 21 -- Sen. Philip A. Hart (D Mich.) spoke in behalf of his amendment to include in the bill an economic development program for sections of Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin. (See below) He said there was "a striking similarity" between the depressed conditions in Appalachia and the Upper Great Lakes area.

Gov. William W. Scranton (R Pa.) said S 3 did not include adequate authorization for reclaiming strip-mined areas and eliminating water pollution from acid mine drainage. He recommended that an additional $15 million be included in the bill for these purposes and that strip mine reclamation projects be started immediately after enactment of the bill.

Kentucky Gov. Edward T. Breathitt (D) said, "In a region with as much need and deprivation as Appalachia, it is almost superfluous to say that this program is more necessary now than a year ago. Unfortunately, this actually is the situation.... While it might appear that this legislation is special action to favor some at the expense of the majority, I think the Appalachian approach to regional problems will pay dividends to other parts of these United States.... The total outlay requested in this bill is small...compared to the possible gains to be realized."

Georgia Gov. Carl E. Sanders (D) said state initiative was behind the Appalachian program. "I am sure that the other governors of the Appalachian states share my conviction that this program will become the Nation's outstanding example of local-state-federal cooperation." However, Sanders said he was concerned that the federal representatives on the Appalachian Regional Commission would be full-time personnel while the state representatives might be only part-time personnel. He recommended that S 3 require that the state representatives work full time on the Commission.

Sen. Daniel B. Brewster (D Md.), a co-sponsor of S 3, said the program was "essential to the economic future" of the three Maryland counties covered.

Rep. Charles McC. Mathias Jr. (R Md.) said the program would meet the basic needs of the Appalachian area and give the region "a substantial push forward."

West Virginia Gov. Hulett C. Smith (D) endorsed the bill but suggested (1) that additional federal matching funds be provided to assure that the 1,000 miles of local access roads would be of high quality; if the additional funds were not provided, then only 500 miles of local roads should be built; (2) that a study be made of all natural resources in the region instead of just the coal industry; (3) that $100 million for Accelerated Public Works projects be authorized for Appalachia; (4) that grants be provided for Appalachian communities with a population of less than 25,000 to enable them to hire administrators to initiate urban renewal programs; (5) that a total of $300 million be authorized for the next five or six years to supplement existing federal grant-in-aid programs for the benefit of Appalachia. S 3 authorized $90 million for this purpose to cover fiscal 1966 and 1967.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D Maine), a member of the Committee, objected to Gov. Smith's suggestion that $100 million be authorized for Accelerated Public Works projects in Appalachia alone. He said the Accelerated Public Works program should be for the entire nation.

Robert Holcomb, president, National Independent Coal Operators Assn., said the bill provided no direct aid to the coal industry, which was "the one industry capable of bringing prosperity back to large regions of Appalachia." He asked that $5 million be authorized for setting up cooperative agencies that would carry out programs to achieve improved coal productivity and increased return for coal operators. The agencies would be similar to the proposed timber development organizations.

Virginia Gov. Albertis S. Harrison Jr. (D) submitted a statement summarizing the conditions in Virginia's Appalachian counties and action taken by the state to help these counties. The value of the Appalachian program "is that it represents a concerted effort in attempting to alleviate the conditions found in the Appalachian region," he said. "...The necessary essentials for improving the development potential of Appalachia are covered by the Act."

Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes (R) submitted a request that four more Ohio counties, Carroll, Coshocton, Holmes and Tuscarawas, be added to the 24 Ohio counties already included in the bill.

The National Assn. of Manufacturers (NAM) submitted a statement criticizing the proposed aid program. It said "the best hope for the Appalachian region is for further investment in job-creating facilities by private business" and that the Government should take steps, such as another tax cut, to encourage the expansion of job-producing, private enterprises. "It is by...decentralized and voluntary type of action, rather than by the intrusion of federal bureaucracy, that economic growth has been achieved in the country at large and is being achieved in Appalachia," the statement said. "The approach represented by S 3 might well impede, rather than assist, progress along these lines." The NAM charged that the proposed program would "create temporary artificial market forces" which eventually would lead to economic waste, would discourage local initiative and would be dominated by the Federal Government.

The statement also said that private capital was moving into Appalachia more and more because of available manpower and natural resources. It concluded that the "economic picture makes it difficult to see any justification for identifying this as a separate region for development -- to the neglect of all others."

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Jan. 15 -- Sen. Hart introduced in the Senate an amendment to S 3 to initiate an economic development program for an 80-county area covering Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin. The amendment provided authorization of $10 million for fiscal 1966 to set up an Upper Great Lakes Development Authority. The Authority would authorize studies in resource, industrial, community and economic development; coordinate local, state and federal efforts; develop plans for land use and public works; encourage private investment and formation of local development districts and formulate for Congress a program of development projects. An immediate specific project would be the preparation of plans for a "Lake Superior Scenic Highway."

Jan. 19 -- Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.) introduced an amendment to S 3 to authorize immediate planning for the economic development of up to six other depressed areas in the United States. The amendment would establish in the Executive Office of the President a Regional Action Plan Administrator, who would administer the program and designate the regions for which development programs would be made. The regions would have to meet certain criteria, such as having a lagging economy. Each plan could cost no more than $2.5 million and would be completed within 18 months of passage of the Appalachian bill. The amendment authorized a total of $10 million for the plans.

Sen. Nelson said his amendment might apply to the upper Great Lakes area, the Ozarks, the northwestern mountain regions, upper New England, parts of the Deep South and the high plateau area covering Utah, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona.

Jan. 22 -- Sen. George McGovern (D S.D.) introduced a bill (S 662) to provide an economic development program for North and South Dakota and portions of Wyoming and Montana. The bill provided for an Upper Great Plains Regional Development Commission, which would plan developments in the area, encourage private investment and interstate cooperation, support local development districts, carry out research and formulate federal projects for the area. The measure authorized $10 million annually for the Commission. Projects developed by the Commission would be financed separately.

Bill Reported

The Senate Public Works Committee Jan. 27 reported S 3 (S Rept 13) with minor amendments. As reported, the bill was substantially the same measure as passed by the Senate in 1964 and as requested by Mr. Johnson earlier in 1965.

Majority Views. The Committee approved authorizations totaling $1,092,400,000, which was $15.2 million more than requested by the Administration; $15 million of the increase was for additional strip mine reclamation, sought by Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton.

The Committee also revised S 3 to emphasize land stabilization and erosion and sediment control in the land improvement program and raised from 25 to 50 acres the amount of land on a single farm that would be eligible for land improvement payments. The Committee rejected amendments to expand the economic development program to include other areas but said the Administration had indicated it would ask Congressional action on other regional problems.

Individual Views. Sen. J. Caleb Boggs (R Del.) said the bill would "open the floodgates for countless segments" of the country to ask the Federal Government for aid, instead of developing regional self-help programs.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Feb. 1 passed S 3, amended, by a 62-22 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 1025) The major floor amendment made it possible for 13 New York counties to become eligible for benefits under the program (see below). As passed by the Senate, the bill authorized $1,092,400,000.

Several proposals to expand the bill to other regions of the country were headed off when Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) told the Senate that the Administration was working on other regional economic development programs that would probably be submitted to Congress "before too many weeks have passed." A Jan. 27 letter from the Budget Bureau to Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D Maine), which was read into the record during debate, stated that the Administration "intends to propose very shortly, as part of the extension and improvement of the area redevelopment program, measures to encourage and assist regional planning for redevelopment of distressed areas." However, Sen. John L. McClellan (D Ark.) asked for a vote on his amendment to include an economic development program for the Ozarks region. The amendment was rejected by voice vote. Several Senators spoke in behalf of development programs for other areas.

In accord with the plans revealed in debate on S 3, the President later submitted and Congress passed separate legislation providing $3.25 billion for aid to other depressed areas of the nation similar to that provided in S 3 for Appalachia. (See p. 798)

DISCUSSION OF AMENDMENTS

The Senate rejected, 28-56 (D 8-49; R 20-7), an amendment by Sen. Roman L. Hruska (R Neb.) to delete the land improvement provision which authorized $17 million in federal grants to landowners for soil conservation and erosion control projects. Hruska said the provision was virtually the same section that was deleted from the Appalachia bill by the Senate in 1964. The 1964 section provided grants to assist landowners in developing pastureland for livestock. Hruska said the land improvement program would result in an increase in cattle production and seriously affect the beef industry that already was burdened by overproduction.

Sen. Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) said the land improvement program would result in "transferring pockets of poverty from Appalachia out into the range and cattle country of America."

Sen. Jennings Randolph (D W.Va.), floor manager of S 3, denied the program would be a "threat" to the beef industry. He said the improved land would probably be used for such things as orchards.

Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.), a co-sponsor of S 3, said the improvement program would be limited to 50 acres per farm and that not much cattle could be raised on that size tract.

The Senate, by voice vote, accepted an amendment by Sen. Robert F. Kennedy (D N.Y.) and modified by Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) directing the Commission to consider including southern New York in the Appalachian program. Under the amendment, the Commission would consult with the New York Governor in determining whether the area should be brought in. Javits' modification specifically required consultation with the Governor. If the Commission decided the region should be included, it then would invite the state to join the program.

Kennedy listed 13 New York counties with 199,000 families that would be considered. He said the area was a "poor" region and was part of the Appalachian mountain chain. "...The Governor (Nelson A. Rockefeller, R) of my state, regardless of the poverty found in these counties, has not seen fit to agree to their inclusion in the bill," he said.

Cooper said the area perhaps should be included in the program but that the initiative for inclusion should be taken by the state and not by Congress or the Commission. Randolph accepted the amendment.

(The southern tier of New York was included in the original concept of the Appalachian development program, and New York was represented at the initial meetings of Governors from Appalachian states and of the Conference of Appalachian Governors, formed in 1960. A Conference official told CQ that Rockefeller in late 1960 informed the Conference that New York was sympathetic with the program but could not take part on a full-time basis because of other commitments. Rockefeller requested that New York be permitted to send observers to Conference meetings. The Conference, however, decided that all participation should be full time, and New York dropped out of the program.)

The Senate accepted by voice vote an amendment by Sen. Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) that prohibited use of S 3 funds for reclamation of privately owned land damaged by strip-mining operations until a study could be made of the over-all problem of strip-mining.

Lausche said it would be "the height of folly" to use public funds for reclamation of private property. "... The moneys ought not to be spent in restoring land owned by the very entities that destroyed the land," he said. "...Unless my amendment is adopted, the money of taxpayers will be used to reclaim, repair, and make right what the strip miners themselves should have done." The amendment would not prevent reclamation of publicly owned strip-mined areas. Randolph accepted the amendment.

The Senate also accepted by voice vote an amendment by Majority Whip Russell B. Long (D La.) requiring that the results (such as patents, processes, information) of work done with Government research funds under the program be available freely to the general public. The amendment was similar to one Long added

Jan. 28 to an Administration-backed bill (S 4) that amended the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. (See p. 743)

Long said federal funds should benefit all citizens and not just private interests. Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) objected that the amendment would limit the Government in getting "the best qualified sources" for research and development contracts.

VOTING

Senate Democrats in 1965 voted for S 3 by a 51-7 margin, increasing their support for the program from 1964 when they approved the Appalachia bill 32-5. Sen. William Proxmire (D Wis.) again was the only Northern Democrat to vote against the measure. Six Southern Democrats -- Byrd (Va.), Eastland (Miss.), Ellender (La.), McClellan (Ark.), Robertson (Va.) and Stennis (Miss.) -- also voted against S 3. Senate Republicans voted 11-15 against S 3, thus removing the bipartisan label that was attached to the 1964 bill. Senate Republicans voted for that measure 13-8.

Four Senators, all Republicans, switched their votes from 1964. Everett McKinley Dirksen (Ill.), the minority leader, and Wallace F. Bennett (Utah) changed from opposition to support. Sen. Len B. Jordan (Idaho) and Milton R. Young (N.D.) changed from support to opposition. Lausche, who was paired against the bill in 1964, voted for the new measure.

All eight freshman Senators voted on S 3 along party lines. Three Senators from states that would benefit from the Appalachian program voted against S 3. They were Democrats Harry Flood Byrd and A. Willis Robertson of Virginia and Republican Strom Thurmond of South Carolina. They all also opposed the 1964 bill.

PROVISIONS -- See final Provisions, p. 789.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Feb. 1 -- Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) -- Prohibit use of funds authorized under the bill for the reclamation of privately owned strip-mined areas until authorized by law after completion of a study of the problem of strip-mined lands. (The study was provided for by another section of the bill.) Voice vote.

Robert F. Kennedy (D N.Y.), as modified by Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) -- Direct the Appalachia Commission to consider -- in consultation with New York's Governor or an official designated by the Governor -- whether a group of New York counties "contiguous" to the Appalachian region (including other counties next to the immediately contiguous counties) should be included in the program and to invite the state to join if the Commission decided the addition would further the purposes of the Act. (The original amendment did not require consultation with New York's Governor.) Voice.

Russell B. Long (D La.) -- Provide that the results (such as patents, processes and information) of work done under the program's federal research grants be made available freely to the public. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Feb. 1--John L. McClellan (D Ark.) -- Provide an economic development program for the Ozark region, to include portions of Arkansas, Missouri and Oklahoma. Voice vote.

Jack Miller (R Iowa) -- Limit the program, except highway construction, to those Appalachian counties that were classified as distressed under the Area Redevelopment Act. Highway funds to non-ARA counties would be granted on the same formula used for highway aid throughout the nation. Voice.

Roman L. Hruska (R Neb.) -- Delete authorization of $17 million for grants to landowners to assist in the control and prevention of erosion and sediment damages in the region and to promote the conservation and development of soil and water resources. Roll-call vote, 28-56.

DEBATE -- Jan. 29 -- Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.) -- "...While it is a regional program, it is a program of national importance. It is designed to bring, in time, this area toward parity with other more developed areas of the United States, and thus contribute to the national strength."

Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D La.) questioned whether programs in the Appalachian bill could not be carried out under existing laws. He also complained that the act would provide preferential treatment for one area and that the Commission would be federally dominated.

Sen. Pat McNamara (D Mich.) -- "...Despite the existence of the (other) programs, despite the use of the programs in the Appalachian area, the use of the programs is still insufficient."

Sen. Jennings Randolph (D W.Va.) said Appalachia had 8.5 percent of the nation's population but was receiving less than 5 percent of federal expenditures, excluding trust funds. "Therefore the preferential treatment argument is not a bona fide argument against the bill."

Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.) suggested a federal tax on strip-mining operations to finance reclamation.

Feb. 1 -- Sen. Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- "I hope that those who administer the program will keep in mind that these funds are for relief and to help people in these counties, and not to set up as large a payroll as possible."

Sen. John L. McClellan (D Ark.) -- "Let us amend the Appalachia bill so as to take care of the Ozarks...before we pass the bill. Or let us send the whole package back to the Committee on Public Works with instructions to report the bill back to the Senate with adequate provisions to assist other sections of the country which have comparable situations."

Sen. Jack Miller (R Iowa) said the bill would provide aid to at least 67 counties that could not qualify as distressed counties under the definition of the Area Redevelopment Act. "I cannot in good conscience vote to tax the people of Iowa in order to give preferential treatment to counties in other states which cannot qualify as distressed counties."

Sen. Daniel B. Brewster (D Md.) -- "It has been authoritatively estimated that our gross national product would be $12 billion higher this year if Appalachia's economy was equal to the national level. Our nation cannot afford to continue supporting such an economic burden."

Sen. Gordon Allott (R Colo.) -- "I am convinced that the whole concept of the bill...is to create an unprecedented opportunity for logrolling. Federal funds will gush forth without the restraint of reason."

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works, ad hoc subcommittee on Appalachia.

HELD HEARINGS -- Feb. 3-5 on S 3.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 3 -- John L. Sweeney, chairman of the Federal Development Planning Committee for Appalachia under the Commerce Department, said funds would be requested to supplement certain existing federal programs, in addition to those listed in the bill, to help the Appalachian region. The bill, he explained, contained only those programs requiring new legislative authorization or modification of existing authorizations. Federal programs not included in the bill but which would be supplemented to help Appalachia included water projects carried out by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Soil Conservation Service of the Agriculture Department, timber marketing research, construction of roads in the National Forests, Farmers Home Administration loans, and various mining area restoration projects. Sweeney estimated that $50 million would be needed to supplement these programs in fiscal 1966 to help the Appalachian area.

Rep. William C. Cramer (R Fla.), ranking minority member of the subcommittee, said the federal representative on the Commission would have as much veto power over proposed projects as Russia had in the United Nations. He said the proposal would set a "new precedent" in enlarging federal power by giving the federal representative "an absolute veto."

Sweeney said the states also would have veto power since a state could reject a project recommended by the Commission.

Feb. 5 -- Charles A. Robinson Jr., engineer for the National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn., complained that the proposal contained no programs to increase the use of coal. He suggested that a federal corporation be authorized to build coal-fired steam electric stations in Appalachia and to market the power from the stations. Surplus revenue from operation of the power stations would be used to pay back the federal grants made under the Appalachian program.

Other testimony was similar to that given in the Senate hearings.

Bill Reported

The House Public Works Committee Feb. 17 reported S 3 (H Rept 51), without amendment, by a 24-9 vote. Two Republicans from Appalachian states, John C. Kunkel (Pa.) and William H. Harsha (Ohio), joined 22 Democrats on the Committee to approve S 3. Nine Republicans voted against the bill. As reported, S 3 authorized $1,092,400,000.

The Committee rejected 18 amendments offered by Republicans. The major GOP amendment would have extended aid to all depressed regions of the country rather than just Appalachia. This amendment was proposed by William C. Cramer (Fla.), who said he would offer it on the floor. It was backed by House Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford (R Mich.).

Cramer complained of "steamroller tactics" used by the Democratic majority on the Committee to head off amendments. "I'm deeply concerned that the bulldozer had such a heavy head of steam that not a single amendment offered by the minority was adopted," he said. The Committee majority, he continued, "apparently acted on direct orders of the White House" and "refused to cross a T or dot an I."

Rep. Cramer's amendment called for $995 million for a two-year program to aid depressed regions throughout the country. The Administration's six-year Appalachian program was expected to cost about $2 billion in federal funds.

The Republican proposal did not provide federal grants for operation of health facilities but authorized $82 million for construction and equipment of such facilities. The Administration's bill provided $41 million in grants for construction and $28 million for operation of health facilities. The GOP amendment also omitted the Administration plan providing $17 million for land-improvement and erosion-control projects. The amendment proposed to put the economic development programs under existing federal agencies instead of creating a regional commission as provided by the Appalachian bill.

Majority Views. The Committee said S 3 sought to build a foundation for the future economic growth of the Appalachian region.

The report said the program was not preferential treatment for one part of the country but "rather a redress of the basic past shortcomings of federal spending policies in the region." The Committee noted that Appalachia contained 8.5 percent of the nation's population but was receiving only 5 percent of total federal expenditures. "S 3 is simply the opening step in a campaign to bring the Appalachian region and the people of Appalachia up to the same economic level as the rest of the citizens of the United States," the report said.

The Committee said it recognized the needs of other areas and praised the regional approach of economic development as "the most feasible and the most workable method." It said the President had promised to submit other regional economic development programs to Congress.

Minority Views. Nine of the Committee's 11 Republican Members signed minority views opposing S 3. The two not signing were Kunkel (Pa.) and Harsha.

The minority group said that S 3: would provide preferential treatment for one region; contained no standards to determine which Appalachian areas should receive aid; gave no justification for inclusion of all of the 360 counties in the program; would increase cropland and pastureland production at a time when there was an overproduction of beef and crops and when the Government was paying for the retirement of cropland; would in effect reenact for Appalachia the "discredited and ineffectual" accelerated public works program; could result in creation of facilities and services duplicating those of the Tennessee Valley Authority in the Appalachia area; would permit federal domination of the program; and included some provisions that should be handled by other House committees.

The highway program was especially discriminatory, the Republicans said, because it authorized an amount for road construction in the Appalachian region ($840 million for a six-year program) almost equal to the annual federal road construction expenditures ($1 billion) for all 50 states for primary and secondary roads.

The minority group also argued that the program was based on outdated statistics and on the questionable premise that an annual family income of $3,000 constituted poverty.

Additional Views. Five minority members, William C. Cramer (Fla.), the ranking Republican Member, James R. Grover Jr. (N.Y.), James C. Cleveland (N.H.), Don

H. Clausen (Calif.) and Robert C. McEwen (N.Y.) recommended that a bill (HR 4466) containing Cramer's proposed amendment be substituted for S 3.

In separate views, Cleveland said S 3 was "an act of piracy" because it would draw jobs and industries away from other areas of the country.

FLOOR ACTION

The House March 3 passed S 3 without amendments by a 257-165 roll-call vote. The action sent S 3 to the President, authorizing $1,092,400,000. (For voting, see chart p. 940)

The House approved the measure after three days of debate. House Democrats defeated 17 attempts by Republicans, and one Democrat, to alter the bill.

Twenty-five House Republicans joined 232 Democrats to vote for passage of S 3. Forty-one Southern Democrats and 15 Northern Democrats voted with 109 Republicans against the bill. Fifty-nine Southern Democrats and 173 Northern Democrats voted in favor.

Of the 124 Representatives from the Appalachian states (there was one vacant seat), 66 Democrats and 18 Republicans voted for S 3, and 14 Democrats and 24 Republicans voted against it. Two did not vote.

The Republicans' major effort to amend S 3 was an attempt to replace its provisions with the text of a bill (HR 4466) introduced Feb. 8 by William C. Cramer (R Fla.) which provided $995 million for a two-year economic development program for all depressed areas in the nation. The House March 2 defeated, by a 65-152 standing vote, an amendment by Cramer to substitute HR 4466 for S 3; on March 3, it rejected, by a 100-323 roll-call vote, a motion by Cramer to recommit S 3 to the House Public Works Committee with instructions that it be reported back with an amendment to replace its provisions with HR 4466.

The votes on the Republican amendments (which were not record votes) were mainly along party lines. The House Republican Policy Committee March 1 voted to oppose S 3 and to support Cramer's bill.

Only eight Democrats voted in favor of Cramer's recommittal motion. They were: Abernethy (Miss.), Baring (Nev.), Dowdy (Texas), Passman (La.), Pool (Texas), Walker (N.M.), Whitten (Miss.) and Williams (Miss.). All also voted against passage.

GOP Criticisms. Cramer, who led the Republican fight against S 3, said it was obvious that the Democrats intended "to deny any amendments offered to this bill regardless of merit" and that orders had come from the White House for the Democrats to clear the bill through the House.

Cramer noted that another House Member, whom he did not identify, said: "It now looks like we have the great stampede rather than the Great Society." Cramer added: "...This is a travesty on the legislative process, that this body should rubber stamp a bill of this significance, in which three major amendments were made on the floor in the other body without too much discussion, and numerous other amendments were made in committee by the other body, yet we are forced to accept it, rubberstamp it, regardless."

Edward J. Gurney (R Fla.) said the House Democrats' action made him "a little ashamed" to serve in the House. "It (S 3) will be signed into law speedily enough... but for heaven's sake, let us retain a little self respect and independence as a legislative body and have the courage to do some things on our own once in awhile."

Majority Leader Carl Albert (D Okla.) denied that the GOP amendments had merit. "We are moving this bill because this bill has been properly considered and should be adopted and sent to the President today."

Major Amendments. Cramer said HR 4466 would benefit 1,400 economically depressed areas. Most of the funds, $800 million, was for 10,000 miles of new highways. The remainder of the money was to go for projects similar to those covered by S 3. However, HR 4466 made no provisions for local access roads, funds for operating health facilities, a land improvement program, or a regional commission. HR 4466 limited aid to those counties that could qualify as economically depressed under the accelerated public works program.

Jim Wright (D Texas) said the substitute bill "would have us take these basic programs that were designed specifically to cure the evils which have caused a drag upon Appalachia, and just divide them up and scatter them throughout the country in a willy-nilly or a sort of scattergun approach."

House Speaker John W. McCormack (D Mass.) said he was sure that Cramer "would rise in indignation" if federal projects in Florida were called "pork barrel."

Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford (R Mich.) said the Republican substitute "cleans up" the Administration bill and deleted those programs that could not be justified. He said he had "a sneaking suspicion that there may be something other than merit involved in the legislation (S 3). It may be a product of politics."

Most of the 15 other Republican amendments sought to carry out principles embodied in HR 4466 by either deleting or limiting certain programs in S 3. Democrats generally countered that the GOP amendments either would hurt the bill or were not needed.

Cramer offered additional amendments to kill authorization for $28 million to provide 100-percent federal grants to operate local demonstration health facilities and authorization for $90 million to increase the federal contribution under existing federal grant-in-aid programs so that Appalachian communities could take advantage of them.

Cramer argued that the 100-percent operational grants were a step toward "socialized medicine." He said the increase in the grant-in-aid program was "simply a back-door reenactment" of the accelerated public works program. He said S 3 proponents wanted this section the most because "this is where the grab bag money is."

James C. Cleveland (R N.H.) proposed an amendment to knock out the land improvement and soil conservation program. He said the program would increase cropland and pastureland production at a time when there already was an overproduction of beef and crops.

John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) offered an amendment to restrict the assistance, except for the highway funds, to those Appalachian counties qualifying as economically depressed under the accelerated public works program. He said 76 counties covered by the bill could not be considered as depressed.

One of the longest debates during House consideration of S 3 came over an amendment by a Democrat, Emilio Q. Daddario (Conn.). Daddario's amendment would have deleted the requirement that all patents and processes developed with S 3 federal research funds be made available to the general public and substituted language to permit the Government to determine when it would acquire rights to such processes. Daddario said his amendment would conform with a patent policy laid down by President Kennedy in 1963 and currently observed by all federal agencies. The language dealing with patents in S 3 was added to the original bill in the Senate by Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.), the Majority Whip.

Daddario said the S 3 provision was "the work of one man (Long)" and that it would harm the Government's present "effective" patent policy. Daddario's amendment was supported by many House Republicans. Ford called the Senate's acceptance of Long's amendment "unwise" and said Daddario's proposal should "be universally agreed to." Albert said adoption of the amendment would "delay" and "frustrate" the bill. It was rejected on a 91-151 teller vote.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

March 2 -- William C. Cramer (R Fla.) -- Substitute for the provisions of S 3, HR 4466 which provided $995 million for a two-year economic development program for all depressed areas in the country. Standing vote, 65-152.

Cramer -- Provide that decisions of the Appalachian Regional Commission require only a simple majority vote of the members rather than a vote of the federal representative and of a majority of the states. Standing, 66-118.

John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) -- Delete authorization for the 1,000 miles of local access roads and reduce the total highway authorization from $840 million to $805 million. Voice vote.

Cramer -- Require states or local governments to build the local access roads to certain established standards and to maintain them. Teller vote, 47-128.

John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- Raise the maximum matching ratio of federal highway funds from 70 to 90 percent. Voice.

March 3 -- Cramer -- Limit the federal share of matching road funds to 50 percent unless a state does not have "the economic and financial capacity" to pay half the cost. Voice.

Cramer -- Delete authorization for $28 million to provide grants of up to 100 percent for operation of demonstration health facilities. Voice.

Cramer -- Require that funds received by the health facilities from state and local governments, private organizations and individuals be deducted before 100-percent federal operational grants are provided. Standing, 20-57.

James C. Cleveland (R N.H.) -- Delete the land improvement and soil conservation program. Teller, 56-132.

Cramer -- Prohibit farmers and landowners with an annual income of more than $3,000 from receiving aid under the land improvement program. Voice.

Robert H. Michel (R Ill.) -- Require that the study provided by the bill on mining area reclamation be completed by July 1, 1966, rather than July 1, 1967. Voice.

Cramer -- Delete authorization for $90 million to increase, for the benefit of the Appalachian region, the federal share under existing grant-in-aid programs. Voice.

Emilio Q. Daddario (D Conn.) -- Delete requirement that all patents and processes developed with federal research funds be made available to the general public and substitute language that would permit the Government to determine when it would acquire rights to such inventions. Teller, 91-151.

Cramer -- Specify that grants to local development districts go only to those counties covered by the bill. Voice.

Baldwin -- Limit assistance, except highway funds, to those counties qualifying as economically depressed under the accelerated public works program. Standing, 65-172.

Robert C. McEwen (R N.Y.) -- List 12 New York counties that would be considered for inclusion in the Appalachian program. (S 3 said portions of New York would be considered but did not spell out which counties.) Voice.

McEwen -- Specify that New York be allowed to take part in the program on an equal (rather than "an appropriate") basis with the other states. Voice.

President Signs Bill. Signing S 3 into law (PL 89-4) March 9, President Johnson said the bill "may well outlive many others in its lasting contribution to the well-being of our nation." He said the measure had been originated by the Governors of the Appalachian states working with the Federal Government, and was the "truest example of creative federalism in our times."

SECURITIES FEES

HR 7169 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 1015) Sept. 16, 1965.
S 1707 -- Reported by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 812) Oct. 1.
HR 7169 -- Passed by voice vote of the House Oct. 5.
● Passed by voice vote of the Senate Oct. 6.
PL 89-289 -- Signed into law Oct. 22.

HR 7169, an Administration-backed bill, amended the Securities Act of 1933 by doubling the registration fees for offerings of securities and by raising the minimum fee from $25 to $100. Registration fees were increased from 10 cents per $1,000 of securities offered, to 20 cents for each $1,000 of securities. The changes were effective Jan. 1, 1966.

The new law was expected to produce an additional $1,790,000 in fees collected by the Securities and Exchange Commission annually, for a $5,090,000 total annual collection by the Commission. This would equal one-third of the SEC's annual appropriations from Congress. The fees are transmitted to the general fund of the Treasury.

Under the Securities Act of 1933, which set the fees later increased by HR 7169, firms issuing public offerings of securities are required to file registration statements with the SEC giving financial and other data about the securities offerings.

In signing the bill into law (PL 89-289), President Johnson said the increase in fees was "a modest one when compared to the benefits enjoyed by the thousands of investors who are protected by our securities laws. These are the same persons who, in the long run, will bear the burden of the increased fees." The President noted that this was in accord with his Budget Message request that citizens "who enjoy special benefits should bear a fair share of the costs."

NEW AID PROGRAM VOTED FOR DEPRESSED AREAS

S 1648 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Public Works Committee (S Rept 193) May 14, 1965.
- Passed by the Senate on a 71-12 roll-call vote June 1. (See p. 1043)
- Reported, amended, by House Public Works Committee (H Rept 539) June 22.
- Passed, amended, by the House by a 246-138 roll-call vote Aug. 12. (See p. 990)
- Senate agreed to House amendments by voice vote Aug. 16

PL 89-136 --Signed into law Aug. 26.

With the passage of S 1648, the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, the Federal Government launched a major program to help the approximately 27 million people living in economically depressed areas throughout the nation. Depressed areas are areas of chronic, long-term high unemployment and low living standards, usually due to structural faults in the local economy, the absence of basic public facilities needed to sustain commerce and industry, or the decay or obsolescence of formerly active business enterprises.

The Act, requested by President Johnson, provided $3.25 billion over the five fiscal years 1966-70 for grants and loans for public works, development and technical assistance and other projects, to stimulate long-term and lasting economic growth in areas plagued by chronic unemployment.

As enacted into law, S 1648 relied on three basic federal approaches toward aiding depressed areas:

(1) Encouraging economically depressed communities to draft and carry out economic development plans that would help them emerge into a condition of healthy economic growth. Wherever possible, such plans were to be on a regional or multi-county basis, rather than a single-county basis.

(2) Helping depressed communities to finance construction of the basic public facilities (such as harbors, sewage plants, access roads, industrial parks) that would make the community attractive to private investment and would thus help foster economic growth.

(3) Providing special financial aid to private firms to encourage them to build plants and businesses in depressed areas.

The large-scale spending for public facilities authorized by the bill also had the effect of creating immediate job opportunities in areas of high unemployment and low economic levels.

One important new departure in the bill was the Title IV aid provision to foster the growth of economically sound towns and small cities which had a potential for substantial economic growth that would help nearby depressed areas. It was believed that, in many cases, a depressed area would benefit far more if expansion were encouraged in a nearby area with a potential for "healthy" growth than if Government aid went solely for projects in the depressed area itself.

The final provisions of S 1648 constituted in part a reenactment and broadening of the Kennedy Administration's 1961 Area Redevelopment Act, which expired Aug. 31, 1965. However, the provisions for construction of public works in depressed areas, particularly the $500 million a year in grants authorized in Title I, also were based on the approach used in the 1962 Public Works Acceleration Act (which had provided $900 million in federal aid for immediate acceleration of job-creating public works projects in high-unemployment areas). In addition, the stress on regional and multi-county economic planning in S 1648 followed a pattern set in the Appalachia-aid bill passed earlier in 1965. (See story p. 788)

Although S 1648 passed both chambers of Congress by comfortable margins and with relatively few changes from the Administration's initial requests, the bill was sharply criticized by some Republicans as really offering "nothing to correct or solve" regional economic growth problems. They also said it could lead to "pirating" of industry away from established locations into redevelopment areas. They further charged that the Area Redevelopment Program, upon which S 1648 was primarily based, had frittered away federal funds on isolated small projects which had not really led to economic growth in the areas involved.

The bill's supporters responded that the structural economic changes in depressed areas that would be made possible by the bill would, in fact, go far toward helping solve regional growth problems; that precautions would be taken against "pirating" of industry; and that the wasting of funds on isolated small projects would be avoided because of the heavy emphasis in S 1648 on regional and multi-county economic plans. For the most part, they said, funds under the bill would be available only for projects consistent with economic development plans designed to foster long-term growth. To receive aid for a sewage project, for example, it would not be sufficient that the community merely need such a project for its own uses; it would have to show that the project was consistent with a development plan that would encourage economic growth.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS

ARA Extension, Expiration. Prior to final enactment of S 1648, Congress June 24 passed a temporary, two-month extension of the 1961 Area Redevelopment Act.

The resolution extending the 1961 Act (H J Res 541) was passed by the House June 24 by a 224-167 (D 208-51; R 16-116) roll call and by the Senate June 24 by voice vote, and signed into law (PL 89-55) June 30. (For voting, see chart p. 974.)

H J Res 541 continued the Area Redevelopment Act until Aug. 31, 1965, at which time it expired. It otherwise would have expired June 30, 1965. In House debate, Wright Patman (D Texas) said the purpose of the resolution was "to prevent a lapse in the economic redevelopment of...a large number of distressed communities" until such time as S 1648, which, in effect, created a successor program, went into effect.

Opposing the extension, William B. Widnall (R N.J.) said, "Neither the ARA's past record nor its present status justify any extension of time for this agency. It is a matter of public record and public knowledge that ARA has done less with more money than almost any other bureaucratic agency in history."

New Agency Created. On Sept.1, the day after the Area Redevelopment Act finally lapsed and the Area Redevelopment Administration went out of existence, there came into being in the Commerce Department a new agency--the Economic Development Administration--

(Continued on p. 800)

Major Programs in Final Bill

Title I, Development Grants. Provided $500 million a year in fiscal years 1966-69 for federal matching grants to local public agencies and non-profit groups for construction of public works and development facilities that would foster the economic growth of economically depressed areas and help provide job opportunities. Only areas which had drawn up an over-all economic development plan acceptable to the Secretary of Commerce were eligible for aid, and only for projects consistent with the plan.

Title I and the bill as a whole were designed primarily (1) to encourage economically depressed communities to draft and carry out economic development plans that would help them emerge from a depressed condition; and (2) to provide financial aid in the construction of public facilities (the basic economic "infrastructure") that would make the community attractive to private investment.

Examples of public works and development facilities that could be built or obtained with Title I funds: water works, water and sewer lines, waste treatment plants and health facilities; streets and roads needed for commercial and industrial development; harbor facilities, reservoirs, railroad sidings, airports and industrial parks (land improvement and site utilities); tourist facilities; area vocational schools; land for the above. Funds would not be available for construction of court houses, town halls, swimming pools unrelated to tourism, or playgrounds.

Title II, Development Loans. Provided $170 million a year in fiscal years 1966-70 for (1) federal loans for the same purposes, agencies and facilities covered by Title I; and (2) federal loans and loan guarantees to both public and private borrowers for acquisition and development of land, buildings, machinery and equipment for industrial and commercial use in economically depressed areas.

Title III, Technical Assistance. Provided $25 million a year in fiscal 1966-70 for federal technical assistance, research and informational aid to economically depressed areas and to other areas needing such aid to improve their economic position.

Title IV, Development Districts. Provided $50 million a year in fiscal 1967-70 in federal grants, loans and loan guarantees for growth projects in towns, small cities and other "economic development centers" which had a population of less than 250,000, which (even if not in a depressed condition themselves) had a potential for economic growth that would aid nearby economically depressed areas, and which were associated with such areas in multi-county economic development districts having over-all development plans.

Title V, Regional Planning. Encouraged the states to set up multi-state regional commissions to plan and foster economic development programs in depressed regions (such as northern New England), and provided $15 million a year in fiscal 1966-70 for federal technical advice and planning aid to the commissions.

Bills Compared

The Administration version of S 1648 authorized $460 million for fiscal 1966 (the first year of the new program), including $5 million for a special form of aid to depressed areas called "interest-reduction" payments. The $460 million was to rise in stages to a permanent level of $535 million a year as a result of (1) addition in fiscal 1967 of a permanent new authorization of $50 million a year for aid to development districts (Title IV of the bill); and (2) an increase of $5 million each year in the authorization for interest-reduction payments, until a permanent level of $30 million a year was reached. (For explanation of the interest-reduction payments, see Johnson Requests, p. 805.)

The Senate version of S 1648 authorized $615 million for fiscal 1966, including interest-reduction payments. The same increases that were in the Administration bill brought the annual authorization in the Senate version to $685 million by fiscal 1970. The larger authorizations in the Senate bill expired at the end of fiscal 1970.

The House and final provisions of S 1648 dropped the interest-reduction payments and authorized funds only for fiscal 1966-70: fiscal 1966, $710 million; 1967-69, $760 million a year; 1970, when development grants were to cease, $260 million.

In the chart below, all authorizations expire in the last year shown unless otherwise indicated.

Millions of Dollars

	Johnson Request	Senate Bill	House and Final Bill
Title I (Development Grants)
Fiscal 1966	$250	$400	$500
1967	$250	$400	$500
1968	$250	$400	$500
1969	$250	$400	$500
1970	$250*	$400	--
Title II (Development Loans)
Fiscal 1966	$170	$170	$170
1967	$170	$170	$170
1968	$170	$170	$170
1969	$170	$170	$170
1970	$170*	$170	$170
Title II (Interest Reduction)
Fiscal 1966	$ 5	$ 5	--
1967	$10	$10	--
1968	$15	$15	--
1969	$20	$20	--
1970	$25	$25	--
Title III (Technical Assistance)
Fiscal 1966	$20	$25	$25
1967	$20	$25	$25
1968	$20	$25	$25
1969	$20	$25	$25
1970	$20*	$25	$25
Title IV (Development Districts)
Fiscal 1966	--	--	--
1967	$50	$50	$50
1968	$50	$50	$50
1969	$50	$50	$50
1970	$50*	$50*	$50
Title V (Regional Planning Aid)
Fiscal 1966	$15	$15	$15
1967	$15	$15	$15
1968	$15	$15	$15
1969	$15	$15	$15
1970	$15*	$15*	$15

 And annually thereafter.*

 Would eventually level off at $30 million a year permanently.*

(Continued from p. 798)

which was, in effect, the successor to the Area Redevelopment Administration and which was charged with responsibility for administering the Public Works and Economic Development Administration Act. The Economic Development Administration took over the personnel of the old Area Redevelopment Administration. Although the provisions of S 1648 called for appointment both of an Assistant Secretary of Commerce to supervise the new program and an Administrator to run the new agency, only the latter was appointed by President Johnson up to the time of Congressional adjournment Oct. 23. (William L. Batt Jr., former Administrator of the Area Redevelopment Administration, did not stay on, leaving Sept. 13.) Mr. Johnson's appointee as Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Economic Development was Eugene P. Foley, formerly Small Business Administrator. He was confirmed Sept. 2.

Funds Provided. The supplemental appropriations bill (HR 11588) cleared by Congress Oct. 21 carried $332,425,000 for the new Economic Development Administration for fiscal 1966, compared with $393,250,000 requested by the Administration. (See breakdown of funds, p. 182.)

PROVISIONS

As signed into law, S 1648 contained the following:

Title I -- Development Grants. Authorized the Secretary of Commerce, following application by a state or political subdivision, Indian tribe, or non-profit organization representing a redevelopment area or part thereof, to make direct grants for four years of up to 50 percent of the total cost for needed public works and public service or development facilities in redevelopment areas, if he found, among other things, that a project would expand opportunities for industries and commercial enterprises, assist in the creation of long-term employment, primarily benefit the long-term unemployed and members of low-income families or substantially further the objectives of the antipoverty law.

Made eligible for the grants areas defined as "redevelopment areas" because of high long-term unemployment, low median income and other factors (see Title IV for details) and areas of substantial unemployment during the preceding calendar year.

Permitted the grants to be made only to otherwise eligible areas which had drawn up over-all economic development plans accepted by the Secretary, and only for projects consistent with the plans.

Authorized the Secretary of Commerce to make supplementary grants to enable states and other entities within redevelopment areas to take advantage of other specified federal grant-in-aid programs and of direct grants under the Title for which they were eligible but could not supply the required matching share.

Stipulated that combined direct and supplemental grants could not exceed 80 percent of the cost of a project.

Stipulated that in prescribing regulations and procedures to carry out the grant program, the Secretary should consider, among other relevant factors, the rate and duration of unemployment and the income levels of families in eligible areas.

Stipulated that except for projects specifically authorized by Congress, no development grants would be extended for facilities which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility regulated by a state or federal body, unless the regulatory body determined that there was a need for an increase in such service which the existing utility was unable or unwilling to meet.

Directed the Secretary to prescribe regulations assuring that appropriate local governmental authorities were given a reasonable opportunity to review and comment upon proposed projects.

Limited funds that could be provided to any one state to a maximum of 15 percent of the amount appropriated under the Title.

Stipulated that no funds authorized by the Title could be spent for any project within the Appalachian region, as defined in the Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965, which was approved for assistance under that Act.

Authorized an annual appropriation of $500 million for fiscal years 1966-69.

Barred financial aid under any title of the Act for sewer or other waste disposal facilities unless the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare certified that waste material to be carried by such facilities would be adequately treated, so as to meet federal, state, interstate or local water quality standards, before being discharged into any public waterway.

Title II -- Development Loans. Authorized the Secretary of Commerce, following application by a state or political subdivision, Indian tribe, or non-profit organization representing a redevelopment area or part thereof, to make loans or purchase evidence of indebtedness for the same purposes as under Title I, if he made the same findings as under Title I plus findings that (1) the requested funds were not otherwise available on terms to permit accomplishment of the project; (2) the amount of the loan plus other available funds were adequate to ensure completion of the project; (3) there was a reasonable expectation of repayment; and (4) the area had an approved over-all economic development program and the project was consistent with it.

Limited loans, including renewals or extensions, to a maximum of 40 years, subject to an extension or renewal of up to 10 years if that would aid in the orderly liquidation of the loan or evidence of indebtedness.

Stipulated that loans should bear an interest rate determined by the Secretary, based upon the current average market yields of U.S. Government obligations of comparable remaining maturities, less up to one-half of 1 percent. (As of mid-1965, this would have meant an interest rate to borrowers of 3-5/8 percent.)

Stipulated that, except for projects specifically authorized by Congress, no public works and development facility loans would be extended for facilities which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility regulated by a state or federal body, unless the regulatory body determined that there was a need for an increase in service which the existing utility was unable or unwilling to meet.

Directed the Secretary to prescribe regulations assuring that appropriate local governmental authorities were given a reasonable opportunity to review and comment on proposed projects.

Industrial-Commercial Aid. Also authorized the Secretary to make loans and purchase evidences of indebtedness for the purchase and development of land and facilities in redevelopment areas for industrial or commercial uses and, upon application by private lending institutions, to guarantee loans for working capital made to private borrowers in connection with projects in redevelopment areas, provided that no such guarantee could exceed 90 percent of the unpaid balance of a loan.

Stipulated that in determining the terms and conditions for such assistance, the Secretary was subject to restrictions to the effect that: (1) Such assistance could not be extended to assist establishments relocating from one area to another (except in establishment of new branches, affiliates or subsidiaries) or to assist subcontractors whose purpose was to divest other contractors or subcontractors of contracts previously customarily performed by them; (2) assistance could be extended only to applicants approved by an agency or instrumentality of the state or political subdivision; (3) the project for which assistance was sought was "reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area"; (4) financial assistance was not otherwise available on terms permitting accomplishment of the project; (5) the Secretary could not make any loan without a participation unless he determined the loan could not be made on a participation basis; (6) no evidence of indebtedness could be purchased and no loans made or guaranteed unless it was determined that there was a reasonable assurance of repayment; (7) no loans, including renewals or extensions, could be made for a period longer than 25 years, subject to an extension or renewal of up to 10 years if that would aid in the orderly liquidation of the loan; (8) loans should bear an interest rate not less than a rate determined by the Secretary, based on the same calculation as for development loans (see this title, above), but without the one-half of 1-percent reduction (thus producing a rate of 4-1/8 percent as of mid-1965), plus additional charges, if any, to cover such other costs of the program as the Secretary determined to be consistent with its purpose; (9) federal loan aid should not exceed 65 percent of the aggregate cost of the project, with the rest to be supplied by loans from local banks or other nonfederal sources (20 percent), and by equity capital or secured loans from state and local agencies and businesses (15 percent); (10) unless the requirement was waived by the Secretary because a local area was in an especially dire financial condition, state and local agencies should be required to bear at least one-third (5 percent of aggregate costs) of the 15-percent share required in condition 9, above (in the old Area Redevelopment Act the minimum state-local government share was higher -- 10 percent of aggregate costs); (11) agencies and business putting up the 15-percent share in condition 9, above, should be permitted to receive principal repayments concurrently with repayments on the federal investment (instead of having to wait until the entire federal loan had been repaid, as required under the old Area Redevelopment Act); (12) no such assistance should be extended unless the Secretary had approved an over-all program for the economic development of the area.

Established an economic development revolving fund in the Treasury with loan funds obtained under the provisions of the Act plus repayments and collections received. Made the fund available to the Secretary for the purpose of extending assistance under Title II and the development district provisions of Title IV. Stipulated that repayment of outstanding obligations under the Area Redevelopment Act of 1961 was to be credited to the fund.

Funds. Authorized such sums as were necessary for all the aid in Title II, but provided that annual appropriations for purchasing evidences of indebtedness, making and participating in loans and guaranteeing loans should not exceed $170 million a year for fiscal years 1966-70.

Title III -- Technical Assistance. Authorized the Secretary to provide to areas designated as redevelopment areas, and to other areas which he found to have substantial need, technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment. Stipulated that such assistance should include project planning and feasibility studies, management and operational assistance and studies evaluating the needs of, and potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Provided that the Secretary could, at his discretion, require repayment of such assistance and prescribe the terms and conditions of repayment.

Authorized the Secretary to make grants to defray up to 75 percent of the administrative expenses of organizations which he determined to be qualified to receive technical assistance grants. Stipulated that where practicable, grants authorized for administrative expenses should be in conjunction with other available planning grants.

Directed the Secretary, in cooperation with other agencies having similar functions, to establish, conduct and publicize a continuing program of study, training and research to (1) help determine the causes of unemployment, underemployment, underdevelopment and chronic depression in various areas of the country; (2) help formulate and implement national, state and local programs to raise income levels and otherwise produce solutions to the problems resulting from these conditions; and (3) assist in providing the personnel needed to conduct such programs.

Directed the Secretary to furnish interested individuals, communities, industries and enterprises in redevelopment areas and other areas any assistance, technical information, market research or other forms of assistance, information or advice which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment.

Also directed the Secretary to establish an independent study board of Government and non-Government experts to investigate the effects of Government procurement, scientific, technical and related policies upon regional economic development. Authorized the Secretary to compensate non-Government members of the board at rates up to $100 per day. Directed the board to report its findings and recommendations for the better coordination of such policies to the Secretary, who would transmit the report to Congress within two years after enactment of the Act.

Authorized an annual appropriation of $25 million to carry out the program authorized under the Title in fiscal years 1966-70.

Title IV -- Area and District Eligibility. Directed the Secretary to designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas in which he determined that there had existed substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period and those in which he determined there had been a substantial loss of population due to lack of employment opportunity. Stipulated that this should include areas where (1) the Secretary of Labor found the current unemployment rate to be 6 percent or more and (2) the Secretary of Labor found that the annual average unemployment rate had been at least 50 percent above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, 75 percent above average for two of the preceding three years or 100 percent above average for one of the preceding two years.

Also directed the Secretary to designate as redevelopment areas (1) those additional areas with a median family income not in excess of 40 percent of the national median (2) additional federal or state Indian reservations or trust or restricted Indian-owned land areas which the Secretary, after consultation with the Secretary of the Interior or an appropriate state agency, determined to manifest the greatest degree of economic distress; (3) additional areas, upon their request, in which the Secretary determined that the loss, curtailment or closing of a major source of employment had caused within three years prior to, or threatened to cause within three years after, the date of the request an unusual and abrupt rise in unemployment causing the unemployment rate for the areas to exceed the national average by 50 percent or more; (4) additional areas which were designated redevelopment areas under the Area Redevelopment Act on or after March 1, 1965, provided that, in an annual review of their eligibility, such areas qualified for designation under the other standards of economic need.

Stipulated that the size and boundaries of redevelopment areas would be determined by the Secretary, but provided that (1) no area would be designated until it had an approved over-all economic development program; (2) any area which did not submit an acceptable over-all economic development program within a reasonable time after notification of eligibility for designation would not be designated prior to the next annual review of eligibility; (3) no area would be designated which did not have a population of at least 1,500 persons, except for Indian areas determined to manifest a high degree of economic distress, which had to have a population of not less than 1,000 persons; (4) except for such Indian areas and those suffering the loss of a major source of employment, no area would be designated which was smaller than a "labor area" (as defined by the Secretary of Labor), a county or a municipality with a population of over 250,000, whichever in the opinion of the Secretary was appropriate.

Upon the request of the Secretary of Commerce, authorized the Secretaries of Labor, Agriculture and Interior, and other heads of agencies as may be appropriate, to conduct such special studies, obtain such information, and compile and furnish to the Secretary of Commerce such data as he deemed necessary to enable him to make determinations for eligibility. Directed the Secretary of Commerce to reimburse when appropriate, from funds appropriated to carry out the Act, these other officers for any such expenditures incurred by them.

Stipulated that if a state had no designated redevelopment area, the Secretary would designate an area in that state which in his opinion most nearly qualified under the eligibility provisions, but that an area so designated would have its eligibility terminated if another area within the state became qualified or was designated as a redevelopment area.

Provided that the Secretary would conduct an annual review of all areas designated redevelopment areas and, on the basis thereof, would terminate or modify the designations in accordance with objective standards which he would prescribe by regulation. Stipulated that no area previously designated would retain its designated status unless it maintained a currently approved over-all economic development program. Also stipulated that no termination of eligibility would (1) be made without 30 days' prior notification to the area concerned; (2) affect the validity of any application filed, or contract or undertaking entered into, prior to such termination; (3) prevent an area from subsequently being redesignated a redevelopment area if the Secretary determined it to have again become eligible; or (4) be made in the case of any designated area where the Secretary determined that an improvement in the unemployment rate was primarily the result of increased employment in occupations not likely to be permanent.

Development Districts. In order that economic development projects of broader geographical significance could be planned and carried out, authorized the Secretary to designate "economic development districts" within the United States with the concurrence of the states in which such districts would be located if a proposed district (1) was of sufficient size or population, and contained sufficient resources, to foster economic development on a scale involving more than a single redevelopment area; (2) contained two or more redevelopment areas; (3) contained one or more redevelopment areas or economic development centers identified in an approved district over-all economic development program as having sufficient size and potential to foster the economic growth activities necessary to alleviate the distress of the redevelopment areas within the district; and (4) had an over-all economic development program which included adequate land use and transportation planning and contained a specific program for district cooperation, self-help and public investment and was approved by the state or states affected and by the Secretary.

Also authorized the Secretary to designate as "economic development centers" such areas as he deemed appropriate, if a proposed center (1) had been identified and included in an approved district over-all economic development program and recommended by the state or states affected for such designation; (2) was geographically and economically so related to the district that its economic growth could reasonably be expected to contribute significantly to the alleviation of distress in the redevelopment areas of the district; and (3) did not have a population in excess of 250,000 according to the last preceding federal census.

Authorized the Secretary to provide assistance in accordance with the criteria for development grants and for public works and development facility loans and guarantees for projects in economic development centers if (1) a project would further the objectives of the over-all economic development program of the district in which it was to be located; (2) a project would enhance the economic growth potential of the district or result in additional long-term employment opportunities commensurate with the amount of federal financial assistance requested; and (3) the amount of federal financial assistance requested was reasonably related to the size, population and economic needs of the district.

Further authorized the Secretary, subject to the required 20-percent non-federal share for any project, to increase the amount of direct grant assistance authorized under Title I for projects within redevelopment areas by up to 10 percent of the aggregate cost of any such project, in accordance with such regulations as he prescribed, if (1) the redevelopment area was situated within a designated economic development district and was actively participating in the economic development activities of the district and (2) the project was consistent with an approved district over-all economic development program.

Authorized the Secretary, in designating economic development districts and approving district economic development programs, to (1) invite the states to draw up proposed district boundaries and identify potential economic development centers; (2) cooperate with the states in sponsoring and assisting district economic planning and development groups and in assisting such groups to formulate over-all development programs; and (3) encourage participation by appropriate local governmental authorities in such economic development districts.

Directed the Secretary to prescribe by regulation standards for the termination or modification of economic development districts and economic development centers.

Authorized an annual appropriation of $50 million for fiscal years 1967-70 for projects in economic development centers.

Title V -- Regional Action Planning Commissions. Authorized the Secretary to designate "economic development regions" within the United States, with the concurrence of the states in which such regions would be wholly or partially located, if he found that (1) there was a relationship between the areas within such region geographically, culturally, historically and economically, and (2) with the exception of Alaska and Hawaii, the region was within contiguous states, and (3) that the region had lagged behind the nation in economic development, taking into consideration, in addition to other determinations, the facts that (a) the rate of unemployment was substantially above the national rate; (b) the median level of family income was significantly below the national median; (c) the level of housing, health and educational facilities was substantially below the national average; (d) the area's economy had traditionally been dominated by only one or two industries, which were in a state of long-term decline; (e) the rate of outmigration of labor or capital or both was substantial; (f) the area was adversely affected by changing industrial technology; (g) the area was adversely affected by changes in national defense facilities or production; and (h) indices of regional production indicated a growth rate substantially below the national average.

Directed the Secretary, upon designation of development regions, to invite and encourage the states wholly or partially located within such regions to establish appropriate multistate regional commissions.

Stipulated that each commission would be composed of one federal member, appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, and one member from each participating state in the region.

Provided that decisions by a regional commission would require the affirmative vote of the federal member and of a majority (or at least one if there were only two) of the state members.

Authorized the Secretary, if he found that Alaska or Hawaii met the requirements for an economic development region, to establish a commission for either state in a manner agreeable to him and to the governor of the affected state.

Directed the commissions to (1) advise and assist the Secretary in identifying optimum boundaries for multistate economic development regions; (2) initiate and coordinate the preparation of long-range economic development programs for such regions; (3) foster surveys and studies to provide data required for the preparation of specific plans and programs for the development of such regions; (4) advise and assist the Secretary and the states concerned in the initiation and coordination of economic development districts; (5) promote increased private investment in such regions; (6) prepare legislative and other recommendations with respect to both short-range and long-range programs and projects for federal, state and local agencies; (7) develop, on a continuing basis, comprehensive and coordinated plans and programs and establish priorities thereunder; (8) conduct and sponsor investigations, research and studies, including an inventory and analysis of the region, and sponsor demonstration projects designed to foster regional productivity and growth; (9) review and study federal, state and local private programs and, where appropriate, recommend modifications or additions which would increase their effectiveness in the region; (10) formulate and recommend, where appropriate, interstate compacts and other forms of interstate cooperation, and work with state and local agencies in developing appropriate model legislation; and (11) provide a forum for consideration of problems of the region and proposed solutions.

Directed the Secretary to present plans and proposals of the commissions for review by the federal agencies primarily concerned, and then, together with the recommendations of such agencies, to the President.

Authorized regional commissions to make additional recommendations to the state governors and appropriate local officials with respect to (1) the expenditure of funds by federal, state and local departments and agencies in their regions and (2) such additional federal, state and local legislation or administrative actions as they deemed necessary to further the purposes of the Act.

In developing recommendations for programs and projects for future regional economic development, and establishing within those recommendations a priority, directed the Secretary to encourage each regional commission to follow procedures that would ensure consideration of (1) the relationship of a project or class of projects to over-all regional development; (2) the population and area to be served by a project or class of projects; (3) the relative financial resources available to the state or political subdivisions or instrumentalities thereof which sought to undertake a project; (4) the importance of a project or class of projects which may be in competition for the same funds; and (5) the prospects that a project, on a continuing rather than a temporary basis, would improve the opportunity for employment, the average level of income or the economic and social development of the area served.

Authorized the Secretary to provide to the commissions technical assistance which would be useful in aiding them to carry out their functions. Stated that such assistance should include studies and plans evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such region.

(Continued on next page)

Stipulated that for the period ending June 30 of the second full fiscal year following the date of establishment of a commission, the Federal Government would pay the administrative expenses of each commission. Also stipulated that thereafter, not more than 50 percent of such expenses could be paid by the Federal Government, and that in determining the non-federal share of expenses, the Secretary should consider all contributions in cash and in kind.

Authorized annual appropriation of $15 million for fiscal years 1966-1970 for regional technical and planning assistance, including paying the administrative expenses of regional commissions.

Directed that each regional commission would report annually each fiscal year to Congress with respect to its activities and recommendations for programs, with the first report made for the first year in which a commission was in existence for more than three months.

Title VI -- Administration. Stipulated that the Secretary of Commerce would administer the Act, with the assistance of an Assistant Secretary to be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. Also stipulated that the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, would appoint an Administrator for Economic Development, who would perform such duties as assigned by the Secretary.

Directed the Secretary to appoint a 25-member National Public Advisory Committee on Regional Economic Development with representatives of labor, management, agriculture, state and local governments and the public. Stipulated that the Committee should hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year, and that the Committee, or a subcommittee thereof, should from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under the Act.

Title VII -- Miscellaneous. Stipulated that no financial assistance under the Act should be extended to any project when the result would be to increase the production of goods or the availability of services or facilities when there was not sufficient demand for such goods, services or facilities to employ the efficient capacity of existing competitive enterprises.

Directed the Secretary to report annually to Congress on his operations under the Act, beginning with fiscal 1966.

Authorized appropriation of such sums as were necessary to carry out those provisions of the Act for which specific authority for appropriations was not otherwise provided.

Applied Davis-Bacon Act prevailing wage and hour requirements to projects receiving aid under the bill.

Background

REFERENCES -- 1956 Almanac p. 517; 1958 Almanac p. 147; 1959 Almanac p. 221; 1960 Almanac p. 292; 1961 Almanac p. 247; 1962 Almanac p. 440; 1963 Almanac p. 563, 568; 1964 Almanac p. 294.

ANTECEDENTS OF S 1648

1961 ARA Program. A long struggle by Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) and others for special federal aid to economically depressed areas was successful in 1961. Congress, with the endorsement of the Kennedy Administration, enacted the Area Redevelopment Act, authorizing $394 million over the four-year period 1961-65 for federal aid to areas plagued by chronic unemployment. The emphasis in the program was on assisting depressed communities with economic projects having a long-term growth potential that would help combat unemployment on a permanent basis. The ARA program was the major antecedent of the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965.

Although the Kennedy Administration requested expansion of the ARA program, Congress failed to grant the request in 1963-64. Among the major reasons were criticism of the ARA for allegedly scattering federal money in isolated projects having little real growth impact; conservative dislike of massive federal spending; and charges that communities were using federal aid to help them "pirate" industry away from other areas.

Accelerated Public Works. In 1962, also to combat high unemployment in depressed areas, Congress authorized $900 million for federal aid to accelerate local spending on job-creating public works projects. The emphasis here was on creating immediate jobs through federal public works spending aid. Extension of this program was not requested by the Administration in 1963-64 and was not voted by Congress, despite attempts of some Democrats to force through additional authorizations. This program was criticized by many as a pump-priming measure which yielded relatively few benefits, in terms of long-term employment created, for the cost involved.

Appalachia Aid Bill. The third antecedent of the Public Works and Economic Development Act was the Appalachia-aid bill (S 3 -- Pl 89-4), signed into law March 9, 1965. It authorized $1.1 billion for aid to the depressed 12-state Appalachian region. The emphasis in the bill was heavily on a regional approach to economic development and on federal aid for construction of an economic "infrastructure" (roads, health facilities, related basic public facilities) needed as the basis of healthy economic growth. (See story p. 788)

During debate on the Appalachia bill, some Members of Congress made it clear that they wanted for their own sections the same type of program as was being approved for Appalachia. The Administration said it would submit a national development bill "before too many weeks have passed."

JOHNSON REQUEST FOR S 1648

President Johnson, at a news conference Nov. 28, 1964, had said that he regretted that the Area Redevelopment Program was not expanded during the 1964 session, and it "should be acted upon at an early date" in 1965.

Subsequently, only a few weeks after signing the Appalachia-aid bill, Mr. Johnson March 25, 1965, submitted a "Message on Area and Regional Economic Development," in which he called for a permanent new program of federal aid to depressed areas, where he said, 27 million Americans lived. Mr. Johnson's proposals called for an initial-year authorization of $460 million, which would eventually rise to a permanent level of $535 million a year. The President's proposals combined elements of all three programs described above. Like the Area Redevelopment Program, it heavily emphasized federal aid for the setting up of new businesses in depressed areas and for projects that would lead to long-term economic growth. Like the Accelerated

Public Works Act of 1962, it had the effect of creating jobs immediately through federal aid for spending on local public works. And like the Appalachia bill, it stressed regional economic planning and attempts to provide the basic economic facilities that could support long-term economic development and growth. (For text of message, see p. 1409.)

The $535 million eventual annual authorization in the Administration request was about twice the amount that had been spent in recent years on the Area Redevelopment and Accelerated Public Works Programs combined. However, the Administration did not propose to reach that level of spending immediately; in the first year, it proposed to obligate only about $400 million, raising the amount after that to higher levels.

Structure of Program. The over-all program proposed by the President was essentially the same as finally enacted in S 1648. The basic idea was that states and communities with depressed areas should form regional planning commissions or local planning groups. These, with the aid of federal officials and federal money, would help formulate and carry out economic development plans that would create new industry, new economic opportunities, new jobs -- and thereby permanently end excessive unemployment in the depressed areas.

Special federal aid would be given for construction of public facilities (roads, sewage facilities, harbor facilities and so forth) which were needed to make a depressed area attractive to private investment and capable of economic growth. Both loans and grants were to be available. (For breakdown of amounts, see box on second page of story.) Loans and loan guarantees also were to be available to private firms wishing to build plants, factories and other facilities in a depressed area.

Interest-Reduction Payments -- To further encourage private investment in depressed areas, the Administration proposed that the Federal Government make payments, starting at $5 million a year and leveling off permanently at $30 million a year, to reduce by 2 percentage points a year the interests costs of firms making commercial loans for the purpose of building new plants and other facilities in depressed areas. Payments to any one firm for a particular investment were limited to 10 years. The President said this proposal would encourage $250 million a year in investment in depressed areas. (This provision was later dropped from the final version of the bill.)

Development Centers -- One new approach proposed by the President -- without a parallel in the earlier Area Redevelopment and Accelerated Public Works Acts -- was special aid for towns and small cities which, not necessarily in a depressed condition themselves, had substantial potential for economic growth that would have a beneficial effect on nearby depressed areas. (See Title IV, final provisions.)

The Administration proposals were introduced in the Senate (S 1648) April 1 by Douglas and 38 co-sponsors, and in the House (HR 6991, others) by Public Works Committee Chairman George H. Fallon (D Md.) and six other Democrats.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

HELD HEARINGS -- April 27 - May 3 on S 1648.

TESTIMONY -- April 27 -- Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.) said the aim of S 1648, "to extend the Appalachia approach of regional programming to other problem areas," was "one of the most significant new steps in economic development legislation to come forward in many years." He said that during consideration of the Appalachia bill, many Senators had considered introducing amendments to aid "other areas of the country, also lagging in economic growth," but had "held off on this after assurances from the Administration that we would be covered in a forthcoming national development bill" -- S 1648.

April 28 -- Dr. Carl F. Kraenzel of Montana State College said the Great Plains states "need help and encouragement as individual states, but more particularly as a group of states or a region." He said he failed to see "how any significant force for growth can come from the individual states by themselves," and that "a united regional attack is necessary to have significant growth, or to avoid further deterioration at this time."

S 1648 was supported by Sen. George McGovern (D S.D.) and Arthur Jones, president of the Basin Electric Power Cooperative of North Dakota.

April 29 -- Edward W. Kiley of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn. called the bill "a vital tool to rejuvenate the lagging economy in depressed rural areas." Kiley said that funds made available by the Area Redevelopment Act of 1961 had assisted rural areas, but that much poverty was still concentrated there. He said a great need existed in rural America for direct Government loans, "which have been unavailable (under ARA) since the summer of 1964."

S 1648 was endorsed by a panel of witnesses from New Mexico, including Sen. Joseph M. Montoya (D N.M.), Rep. E.S. Johnny Walker (D N.M.) and John W. Flynn, the state planning officer. The bill was also supported by Gen. Maxwell E. Rich, representing Gov. Calvin L. Rampton (D) of Utah, and by Dr. Vernon R. Alden, President of Ohio University.

April 30 -- Sen. William Proxmire (D Wis.) said the bill would lay the groundwork for developing economically depressed areas such as the Upper Great Lakes states. He said, "About one family in four in this vast area has income of less than the $3,000 per year poverty level standard recognized by the Office of Economic Opportunity." He said the bill would "provide a vehicle for the Upper Great Lakes states and other poverty areas around the country to move ahead into the mainstream of prosperity that runs through most of this country."

Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) urged the Committee to double the Administration's $250 million request for public works and facilities grants. He said a new public works program was "essential if we are to cure the chronic obsolescence which plagues the public facilities of many distressed communities," and that "$500 million represents the absolute minimum sum that should be authorized for public works in distressed areas in this bill."

Also supporting the bill either in testimony or letters were the AFL-CIO, the National Farmers Union, the National Congress of American Indians, the National Housing Conference, numerous local and state chambers of commerce and regional groups (e. g. -- the Ozarks Regional Development Assn., Tennessee Municipal League, New England Council), the Governors of North Dakota, Georgia, Missouri, Illinois, West Virginia, Kentucky.

Spokesmen for the American Farm Bureau Federation and Investment Bankers Assn. criticized the bill, although not necessarily opposed to all parts.

BILL REPORTED

The Senate Public Works Committee May 14 reported S 1648 with amendments (S Rept 193). The Committee said that the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, to which the Public Works Committee had submitted Titles II and IV for study because they dealt with a commercial and industrial loan program, had approved those titles with some suggested amendments by a 9-5 vote, following May 4-7 hearings by its Production and Stabilization Subcommittee. In the May 13 Banking and Currency Committee vote on Titles II and IV, Sen. A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) and four Republicans voted against approval.

In submitting its comments to the Public Works Committee, the Banking and Currency Committee majority said it was "favorably impressed with the content of titles II and IV." In supplementary views, the Committee's Republicans favored the bill's emphasis on "a regional rather than strictly local concept," but said there were "imperfections in titles II and IV."

Majority Views. In unanimously reporting S 1648, the Senate Public Works Committee said that the general state of the national economy was "excellent," but that the country was "faced with unfinished tasks." It said that while a number of legislative acts had been passed "to provide the means to bring the total economy's performance up to its potential...these acts are incomplete without provision for economic assistance to those areas not sharing in the general level of prosperity."

The report said that "more than 35 million persons live in the areas and regions which initially meet the criteria for a redevelopment area or a region suffering substantial unemployment or underemployment." It said that "economically disadvantaged areas must improve the physical resources which a free enterprise society depends upon for economic growth. Without these facilities, commercial and industrial activity cannot flourish."

The Committee said that recent experience had shown "that redevelopment can be facilitated by public programs." It said experience had also indicated that "the scale of assistance must be sufficient to make a significant impact on the economic structure of an area," and that "regions to be aided...should be large enough to provide a resource base for self-sustained growth...."

It said that the money could be used for such projects related to economic development as waterworks and water lines, sanitary and storm sewers, industrial parks, police and fire stations, tourism facilities, airports and watershed protection and flood prevention projects. In addition, funds could be used for facilities indirectly related to economic development, such as residential streets and water and sewage facilities, hospitals, vocational education facilities and community centers.

Major Changes in Administration Bill. As reported by the Senate Public Works Committee, S 1648 authorized an annual appropriation for Title I public works grants of $400 million, instead of the $250 million in the Administration bill, but limited the authorization to five years, through fiscal 1970. The bill also increased from $20 million to $25 million the annual authorization for technical assistance, research, training and study programs. These changes increased the total annual authorization in the bill to $615 million in the first year (fiscal 1966), rising to $685 by fiscal 1970.

In other changes, the bill as reported:

Provided for administration of the Act by the Secretary of Commerce, with the assistance of an Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and for appointment of an Administrator for Economic Development. (The Administration bill had provided for appointment of only the Administrator to assist the Secretary in administration of the Act.)

Authorized the Secretary of Commerce, with the concurrence of the affected states, to designate "economic development regions" within the United States, and to invite the states to form regional commissions for joint planning of public works and economic development programs. (The Administration bill had authorized the Secretary only to "invite and encourage" the states themselves to establish regional planning commissions.)

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate June 1, by a 71-12 roll call, passed and sent to the House an amended version of S 1648. (For voting, see chart p. 1043.)

On final passage, S 1648 was supported by 54 Democrats and 17 Republicans. It was opposed by nine Republicans -- Allott (Colo.), Bennett (Utah), Dominick (Colo.), Hickenlooper (Iowa), Jordan (Idaho), Mundt (S.D.), Thurmond (S.C.), Tower (Texas) and Williams (Del.) -- and by three Southern Democrats -- Byrd (Va.), Holland (Fla.) and Robertson (Va.).

Before passage, the Senate by roll-call votes rejected amendments to reduce the authorization total by $75 million, and to eliminate interest-reduction payments. (See below)

In debate, which began May 27, Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) said that under S 1648, "the Department of Commerce would inherit and be directed to expand the ill-fated and much discredited area redevelopment and accelerated works programs...they simply have not worked." Dominick said that under these programs, "we have seen Government-subsidized competition drive out legitimate business, inflated claims of creating new jobs which have never materialized, political juggling with public funds, vast numbers of highly paid Government officials running about the country accomplishing little and a general waste of your tax money and mine."

DEBATE ON AMENDMENTS

The Senate by four voice votes adopted amendments to S 1648 which were termed acceptable by the bill's floor managers. One amendment, proposed by Jennings Randolph (D W. Va.) May 27, extended a prohibition against loans and guarantees being made to establishments relocating from one area to another, to include subcontractors whose purpose was to divest other contractors or subcontractors of contracts customarily performed by them. Pat McNamara (D Mich.), chairman of the Senate Public Works Committee which had reported the bill, said the amendment would "merely add further insurance that there will be no shifting of job opportunities in the operation of the program."

Two of the amendments, sponsored May 27 by Roman L. Hruska (R Neb.), limited the authorizations for public works and development loans (Title II) and technical assistance (Title III) to five years, as was already provided for public works and development facilities grants. Hruska said the five-year limitation was already contained in the Appalachia bill, "after which this bill is patterned," and that it would assure "that the program as a whole will return to the Congress for later assessment, reappraisal and reconsideration."

In addition, the Senate June 1 adopted en bloc several related amendments by Frank E. Moss (D Utah) directing the Secretary of Commerce to prescribe regulations assuring that local governmental authorities were given an opportunity to review and comment on proposed projects to be carried out with public works and development facilities grant and loan funds. Moss said that "many of the requirements of Government that surround the development of a program of this sort already lie with the local districts," and that the amendment would "bring the local governments into the program."

The Senate June 1 rejected, by a 31-53 roll-call vote, an amendment by John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.) to reduce the annual authorization limitation for public works and development facilities grants from $400 million to $325 million. Cooper said that in requesting passage of the Administration bill, President Johnson had asked for an annual authorization of only $250 million for this purpose, and that an authorization of $325 million "will be fully adequate." He said the increase over the President's request was "not included in the Budget. It would be added to the deficit, which is now expected to exceed $4 billion."

Randolph, second-ranking Democrat on the Senate Public Works Committee, responded that existing applications for grants under the accelerated public works program totaled $467,858,000, and that "the $400 million in federal grants under Title I of the pending bill is not a figure arrived at out of thin air." He said, "We believe that in the figure of $400 million we are being conservative." Randolph also said, "The White House will not veto this legislation if $400 million is included in Title I over the period of five years for such a worthy purpose."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S 1648 authorized $615 million in the first year (fiscal 1966) for programs proposed by the Administration, broken down as follows:

Title I grants, $400 million; Title II loans and loan guarantees, $170 million; Title II interest-reduction payments, $5 million; Title III technical aid, $25 million; Title V aid to regional planning commissions, $15 million. In fiscal 1967, Title IV would come into effect, providing another $50 million a year. All these authorizations would remain the same through fiscal 1970 except Title II interest-reduction payments, the authorization for which would rise by $5 million a year beginning in fiscal 1967 until it reached $30 million. Under the Senate bill, the Title I grant authorizations, Title II loan authorizations and Title III technical aid authorizations were to expire at the end of fiscal 1970. (The Administration had requested permanent authorizations.)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

May 27 -- Jennings Randolph (D W.Va.) -- Extend the prohibition on loans and guarantees to include, in addition to establishments relocating from one area to another, subcontractors whose purpose was to divest other contractors or subcontractors of contracts customarily performed by them. Voice vote.

Roman L. Hruska (R Neb.) -- Limit the annual authorization for public works and development facility loans to five years, through June 30, 1970. Voice.

Hruska -- Limit the annual authorization for technical assistance grants to five years, through June 30, 1970. Voice.

June 1 -- Frank E. Moss (D Utah) -- Direct the Secretary of Commerce to prescribe regulations assuring that local governmental authorities were given an opportunity to review and comment on proposed projects to be carried out with public works and development facilities grant and loan funds. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

May 27 -- Hruska -- Delete the provision authorizing the Secretary to pay annually for up to 10 years to private business entities amounts sufficient to reduce by 2 percentage points the interest paid by them on loans obtained from non-Government sources. Roll-call, 25-39.

June 1 -- John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.) -- Reduce from $400 million to $325 million the annual authorization for public works and development facilities grants. Roll-call, 31-53.

House

COMMITTEE -- Public Works.

HELD HEARINGS -- May 10-14, 18, 19 and 26 on the Administration bill (HR 6991). Highlights:

May 10 -- John T. Connor, Secretary of Commerce, opening the hearings, said the Administration's request of $250 million a year for Title I development facility grants "is both adequate and realistic" because it was for a continuing program "for long-term growth."

May 11 -- Andrew J. Biemiller of the AFL-CIO supported the bill but said the annual authorization for Title I grants should be "considerably greater than the $250 million the (Administration) bill proposes." Biemiller objected to the proposed federal interest-reduction payments as a "federal subsidy" to "corporations that don't need it." HR 6991 was also supported by the American Institute of Planners.

May 13 -- Representing the National Assn. of Manufacturers, William C. Heyn opposed the provision for Government interest-reduction. He said it was "unfair to existing industry to use their tax money to subsidize new industry which will compete for their markets."

BILL REPORTED

The House Public Works Committee June 22 reported S 1648 (H Rept 539) with amendments. The Committee version confirmed the Senate's action in increasing Title I development grants from the $250 million annual level requested by the Administration to $400 million. But the Committee dropped the interest-reduction payments altogether, and cut off all fund authorizations in the bill at the end of fiscal 1970.

As a result, the Committee version authorized $610 million in fiscal 1966 ($400 million for Title I grants, $170 million for Title II loans, $25 million for Title III technical assistance, and $15 million for Title V aid to regional planning commissions). The authorization was to rise to $660 million a year during fiscal 1967-70, after Title IV authorizations of $50 million a year for aid to development districts came into effect. In addition, the Committee added a provision to the bill barring any Title I development grants to projects receiving aid under the Appalachian Regional Development Act.

Majority Views. The Committee said "a bill of this type" was necessary because "in the midst of unprecedented national prosperity, there still are large numbers of people who can't find jobs because they are living in areas where jobs are too scarce." It said that communities in such areas "find themselves in a crippling cycle of economic deterioration" which would continue "until we begin to help people to help themselves to break the pattern." The Committee also said experience had shown "that economic development efforts can have only limited success when they are confined to local areas."

The report pointed out that the bill was "based to a certain extent" upon the Area Redevelopment Act (ARA), the Public Works Acceleration Act and the Appalachian Regional Development Act. The report said that $400 million a year for Title I, although $150 million more than sought by President Johnson, "will not be sufficient to enable the approval of all the worthy projects that will be submitted from all of the eligible areas."

The report said that "one of the basic purposes of this bill is to help businessmen provide jobs in the areas where jobs are most needed. One basic method to provide jobs in distressed areas is to encourage private businessmen to establish new businesses or to expand existing businesses in distressed areas. This is a sensible approach, and it is the approach taken in this legislation." The majority said that people "who object to the special aids and inducements afforded to businesses under this program should keep in mind that the nation must rely on private businesses to provide the jobs to put unemployed persons back to work. Inevitably, the only other alternative is an ever-increasing system of public welfare assistance."

Minority Views. Republican Reps. William C. Cramer (Fla.), John F. Baldwin Jr. (Calif.), James R. Grover Jr. (N.Y.), Charles A. Halleck (Ind.), Charlotte T. Reid (Ill.) and James D. Martin (Ala.) said they favored the "basic objective of S 1648," but opposed enactment of the bill "because we believe that the measures it provides have been proved to be wasteful and ineffective, that the bill as reported was hastily and poorly drafted and that the Congress would be abdicating its responsibilities if it enacted a bill of such sweeping scope with so few Congressional guidelines and controls for proper administration." They said the bill "provides for massive and indiscriminate federal spending," but "offers nothing to correct or solve" the factors underlying the lack of economic growth in a region. Instead, they said, it "seeks to artificially induce the location or reactivation of enterprises in uneconomical or disadvantageous areas, despite the existence of such unsolved problems." The minority said S 1648 would "reenact and broaden the discredited and ineffectual programs of both the Area Redevelopment Act and the Public Works Acceleration Act." The minority views included an appendix which summarized 17 reports by the Comptroller General "criticizing various aspects of the administration of the Area Redevelopment Act and the Public Works Acceleration Act."

Supplemental Views. Rep. James C. Cleveland (R N.H.) said he would vote for S 1648, "poorly drafted as it is." He said he could not "in good conscience" oppose a bill that would provide aid to his district, parts of which were "badly in need of new industry."

Robert C. McEwen (R N.Y.) submitted similar views.

FLOOR ACTION

The House Aug. 12 passed S 1648, with amendments, by a 246-138 (D 215-45; R 31-93) roll-call vote. Before passage, the House rejected, by a 163-224 (D 48-214; R 115-10) roll call, a motion to recommit the bill to the House Public Works Committee with instructions to change it in several respects. (For voting, see chart p.990)

The recommittal motion by Rep. William C. Cramer (R Fla.) would have deleted the Title II provisions for federal loans and guarantees to public and private borrowers for industrial and commercial facilities; reduced the Title II authorization to $85 million a year; provided for annual Congressional review of an economic development loan fund; and, in most cases, required that funds provided for construction or improvement projects be spent on American-made products. Cramer said the loan and guarantee portion of the bill was an extension of a program authorized by the 1961 Area Redevelopment Act which "has been poorly handled in the past (and) will be worse under this legislation, because the authority of the Secretary (of Commerce) will be broadened under it." He said annual review of the loan fund "will try to prevent backdoor spending," and that the "buy-American" provision should be included "in legislation that was supposed to have the objective of trying to employ more Americans" and do away with poverty.

Amendments Voted On

Before passage, the House accepted four amendments to S 1648. The major amendment was offered by B. F. Sisk (D Calif.), and accepted by a 196-194 roll call. It increased the annual authorization of Title I funds (for public works and development facilities grants) from $400 million to $500 million, limited the program to four rather than five years and increased the number of areas eligible for such grants. (The vote breakdown was D 187-75; R 9-119.)

Sisk said his amendment would extend Title I assistance to areas of severe unemployment which were eligible for aid under the Public Works Acceleration Act of 1962, but not under S 1648 as reported. He said this was "a matter of simple fairness and justice, since the proposed program was presented to us as an extension and continuation of both the Accelerated Public Works Act and Area Redevelopment Act programs...." John A. Blatnik (D Minn.), floor manager of S 1648, said that the amendment was "justifiable."

Before accepting the Sisk amendment, the House by a 66-117 teller vote rejected a substitute amendment by Charlotte T. Reid (R Ill.), one of 14 amendments rejected, to reduce the annual authorization under Title I to $250 million. Mrs. Reid said the amendment would reduce the authorization to the figure that had been requested by the Administration and would "cut out money...which is not needed." She said, "Surely we should not press upon the President more money than he and his advisors think is needed to carry out the objectives of the Act." She said she did not believe the existing backlog of requests for development grants under the Area Redevelopment Act justified the increase, and that many of the requests comprising this backlog would be ineligible under the Act.

Kenneth J. Gray (D Ill.) opposed the substitute amendment because it "would cut out the heart of the bill." Gray said, "If we never receive another application, there are now in the backlog more than $3 billion in applications...If the substitute amendment is not defeated, we will be unable to take care of this large list of unfunded projects."

Supporting S 1648, House Public Works Committee Chairman George H. Fallon (D Md.) said the bill "meets a great human need, perhaps the greatest human need of them all -- the need to be able to earn a living for oneself and one's family." Fallon said the program which would be established by the bill combined public works, business assistance, technical assistance and regional development "into a single, significant, coordinated and comprehensive program."

Opposing the bill, Florence P. Dwyer (R N.J.) said "if the House will learn from experience, it will vote against S 1648." Mrs. Dwyer said the House had defeated "similar legislation to expand and enlarge the Area Redevelopment Act in 1963" because the Act "was not accomplishing what Congress had intended. With two additional years of experience under ARA and its companion program, the Public Works Acceleration Act, I believe we are justified in concluding that we acted wisely in 1963 and should do so again."

Odin Langen (R Minn.) said S 1648 "is a prime example of how discredited and unworkable federal programs, once begun, manage to go on forever. We reshuffle the language a bit, gloss it all over with a grand-sounding title and attach a brand new higher price tag to the whole package." Langen said it was "inconceivable, after the conclusive evidence of waste, ineffectiveness and failure, that we should be called upon to even consider a measure that incorporates such programs as the old Area Redevelopment Act and the Accelerated Public Works Act."

PROVISIONS -- See final provisions summarized on p. 800.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Aug. 12 -- B. F. Sisk (D Calif.) -- Increase the annual authorization of Title I funds for public works and development facilities to $500 million, limit the program to four years and increase the number of areas eligible for such grants. Roll-call vote, 196-194.

John D. Dingell (D Mich.) -- Bar financial aid under the Act for sewer or waste disposal facilities unless the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare certifies that waste material to be carried by such facilities will be adequately treated, so as to meet federal, state, interstate or local water quality standards, before being discharged into any public waterway. Voice.

Patsy T. Mink (D Hawaii) -- Stipulate that in any state in which no area qualified as a redevelopment area, the Secretary of Commerce would designate as an eligible area that portion of the state which in his opinion most nearly qualified. Voice.

Richard D. McCarthy (D N.Y.) -- Amend the Cleveland amendment (below) by adding the word "competitive." Voice.

James C. Cleveland (R N.H.) (as amended above) -- Prohibit financial assistance under the Act when the result would be to increase production or the availability of services or facilities when there was not sufficient demand to employ the efficient capacity of existing competitive enterprises. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Aug. 12 -- Charlotte T. Reid (R Ill.) substitute for Sisk amendment (see above) -- Reduce the annual authorization under Title I to $250 million from $400 million. Teller vote, 66-117.

William C. Cramer (R Fla.) -- Stipulate that no funds appropriated by Title I could be used for any project which was "eligible" for assistance under the Appalachian Regional Development Act. (S 1648 prohibited the use of funds for projects "approved" for assistance under the Act.) Voice.

Cramer -- Insert new criteria for eligibility for financial assistance under the Act. Voice.

Cleveland -- Delete provisions providing Title II loans and loan guarantees to private businesses, and reduce Title II authorizations to $85 million a year. Voice.

John C. Kunkel (R Pa.) -- Require the Secretary of Commerce, in authorizing loans or loan guarantees for public works and development facilities, to give consideration to the financial ability of the applicant to make repayment. Voice.

Cramer -- Delete provisions authorizing working capital loans. Voice.

Cleveland -- Prohibit financial assistance for construction of hotels and motels in areas where it was determined they were not needed. Voice.

Kunkel -- Limit use of money in the economic development revolving fund to amounts specified in annual appropriations bills. Voice.

John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) -- Provide that areas eligible for assistance under the Area Redevelopment Act at the time of enactment of S 1648 would qualify for assistance under S 1648. (The bill included areas eligible under the ARA as of March 1, 1965.) Voice.

Leonard Farbstein (D N.Y.) -- Extend eligibility for assistance under the Act to compact, contiguous areas with populations of more than 200,000 persons in cities or counties that did not qualify. Voice.

Frank Thompson Jr. (D N.J.) -- Reduce the population floor of municipalities for eligibility from 250,000 to 100,000, provided they met other requirements. Voice.

John H. Dent (D Pa.) -- Delete the discretionary authority of the Secretary of Labor to determine the eligibility requirement of size for designation as a redevelopment area. Standing vote, 28-61.

Alec G. Olson (D Minn.) -- Designate as redevelopment areas those areas in which at least 40 percent of the families had annual incomes of $3,000 or less. Teller, 75-111.

John P. Saylor (R Pa.) -- Require that funds authorized by the Act be spent for products manufactured in the United States, unless the price of a product exceeded that of a comparable foreign-made product by 50 percent or more. Voice.

Final Action

The Senate Aug. 16 by voice vote agreed to the House amendments to S 1648. The action, which occurred without debate, cleared the bill for the President's signature.

Signing S 1648 into law (PL 89-136) "with gratitude" Aug. 26, President Johnson said, "We are embarking on a new program of grants and loans to those cities and those towns where too many men have been out of work too long." In describing the plight of rural communities, he said this bill "would save the small towns that are really the backbone of our country."

MANPOWER TRAINING ACT AMENDMENTS PASSED

S 974 -- Reported by the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 123) March 12, 1965.

HR 4257 -- Reported by the House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 170) March 15.

S 974 -- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a 76-8 roll-call vote March 16. (See p. 1032)

- Passed, amended, by a voice vote of the House April 1 after HR 4257 was passed, amended, by a 395-0 roll call. (See p. 948)
- Conference report (H Rept 231) agreed to by voice votes of the Senate April 9 and the House April 13.

PL 89-15 -- Signed into law April 26.

Congress in 1965 with little controversy enacted an Administration bill amending and extending for three years, through June 30, 1969, the Manpower Development and Training Act of 1962 (MDTA). The bill authorized $454 million for the program in fiscal 1966 and such sums as were necessary thereafter.

The original Act, one of the Kennedy Administrations several approaches to reducing the nation's high unemployment level (see box), was oriented towards retraining experienced workers with family responsibilities who had been employed but had lost their jobs because of technological change. In 1963 Congress broadened the MDTA to help the illiterate jobless and out-of-school, out-of-work youths who were not eligible for aid under the restrictions of the original Act. New programs were set up for youths 16 years old or more and for persons who lacked basic education.

The 1965 bill continued in the direction of the 1963 amendments by increasing the period during which persons could receive training, thereby benefiting the least educated, by increasing the training allowances, by relaxing eligibility requirements for training allowances, by providing additional benefits for trainees, by postponing for one more year (through fiscal 1966) requirements that states help pay the costs of training programs, and by increasing the federal share of financing in subsequent years above that provided in the existing law. The bill also expanded and authorized additional experimental and demonstration programs. Training programs conducted by the Area Redevelopment Administration were brought under provisions of the MDTA.

S 974 also contained a new emphasis outlined by President Johnson in a Feb. 1 statement on a nationwide Job Development Program. He said that while there was still widespread unemployment there also existed a large demand for labor in the service fields such as gardening, cooking, and repairing appliances. The President said the Government program could make sure that trained workers are available, assemble information about job opportunities, and "assure that managerial skills are developed to provide these services as part of our free enterprise system." S 974 directed the Secretary of Labor to stimulate and assist this type of job development.

The legislation passed both chambers with bipartisan support and little controversy. There were only two major differences between the House and Senate versions -- the expiration date of the MDTA and the amount of appropriations authorized. The final bill extended the Act through June 30, 1969. This was a compromise between the Senate date (1970) and the House date (1968); the Administration had requested that the Act be made permanent. The final bill, like the Senate version, authorized $454 million in fiscal 1966 and necessary sums thereafter. The Administration and House bills set no limit on any year. The 1963 MDTA bill had authorized $285 million for fiscal 1966.

Provisions

As signed into law, S 974 amended the Manpower Development and Training Act as follows:

Title I -- Employment Programs. Specified that professionals whose skills had become outmoded were not to be excluded from retraining opportunities under the Act.

Directed the Labor Secretary to establish a program of experimental, demonstration and pilot projects, through grants or contracts, to demonstrate specialized methods of meeting the manpower, employment and training problems of worker groups such as the long-term unemployed, disadvantaged youth, displaced older workers, the handicapped and members of minority and similar groups. Grants or contracts could be to or with public or non-profit private organizations; contracts could be made with other private organizations.

Directed the Secretary of Labor to stimulate and assist job development programs for training in service occupations and related fields.

Extended for two years, through June 30, 1967, the Labor Secretary's authority to conduct pilot labor mobility demonstration projects to assist unemployed workers to relocate to a new area in response to offers of full-time employment. Increased from $4 million to $5 million the amount that could be used annually for the projects and allowed the Secretary to pay 100 percent, rather than 50 percent, of relocation costs.

Directed the Secretary to conduct, through June 30, 1967, experimental and demonstration projects to assist

U.S. Employment, Unemployment

(in thousands)

	Civilian Employment
	Total	Agricultural	Non-Agricultural	Unemployment	Unemployment Rate
1965	72,179	4,585	67,594	3,456	4.6%
1964	70,357	4,761	65,596	3,876	5.2
1963	68,809	4,946	63,863	4,166	5.7
1962	67,846	5,190	62,657	4,007	5.6
1961	66,796	5,463	61,333	4,806	6.7
1960	66,681	5,723	60,958	3,931	5.6
1959	65,581	5,836	59,745	3,813	5.5
1958	63,966	5,844	58,122	4,681	6.8
1957	65,011	6,222	58,789	2,936	4.3
1956	64,708	6,572	58,135	2,822	4.2

SOURCE: U.S. LABOR DEPARTMENT, MANPOWER REPORT

in the placement of persons who had participated in training programs but who were unable to obtain employment for reasons other than ability to perform, such as inability -- due to a criminal record -- to obtain indemnity bonds. (One intended use of the money under the section was to provide payments to employers or institutions authorized to indemnify employers against losses due to the dishonesty of the employee seeking work.) Authorized use of funds up to $200,000 in fiscal 1966 and $300,000 in fiscal 1967, from within the over-all appropriations for the programs.

Title II -- Training Programs. Authorized payment of training allowances for up to 104 weeks (two years). Repealed a section of the existing law which allowed training allowances to be paid for an additional 20 weeks beyond the normal period to allow persons to obtain basic educational training (existing law permitted payments for up to 52 weeks during occupational training plus 20 weeks during basic education, for a maximum of 72 weeks; the 1965 amendments increased the over-all maximum payment period to 104 weeks).

Permitted increases in the basic training allowance by $5 a week for each dependent over two up to a maximum of six.

Permitted on-the-job (as well as other) trainees to engage in up to 20 hours of outside work per week without a reduction in their training allowances.

Authorized complete reimbursement to trainees of any local travel costs by the least expensive form of public transportation; permitted the Labor Secretary to increase payments to trainees for transportation and/or subsistence costs where necessary in Alaska and Hawaii and the territories where expenses were higher.

Eliminated the existing prohibitions against payment of training allowances to single persons without dependents and to more than one person in a household at one time. Continued the existing stipulation that allowances may not be paid to members of a family in which the head was employed, but added wording that allowed the Labor Secretary to waive this restriction if he decided the payments were necessary to permit a person to begin or continue training. Prohibited payment of allowances if the head of a family terminated his employment to make members of his household eligible for allowances.

Permitted the Labor Secretary to alter the existing stipulation that not more than 25 percent of persons entitled to receive training allowances could be under 22 years of age, if necessary for "effective" management of training programs. Permitted the Labor Secretary to continue payments to youths becoming 22 years old during training.

Amended provisions of the 1962 Act which stated that states should provide training through public institutions unless private institutions could provide equivalent training at a lower cost. Permitted states to use private institutions if they provided special services or facilities, or if the costs were comparable for equivalent training.

Repealed requirements in the existing law that, beginning July 1, 1965, states pay one-third of the costs of the institutional training programs (one-half beginning July 1, 1966). Instead, permitted 100 percent federal financing of the programs to continue through June 30, 1966. After that date, required the states to pay 10 percent of the institutional training costs unless the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare determined that a larger federal share was necessary. Permitted payment of the non-federal contributions in cash or kind. Repealed the existing requirement that beginning July 1, 1965, the states pay one-third of the cost of training allowances (one-half after July 1, 1966), thus allowing continued 100 percent federal financing of allowances.

Repealed training provisions of the Area Redevelopment Act and instead authorized training under MDTA of individuals in areas designated as redevelopment (depressed) areas, beginning July 1, 1965. Stipulated that no state matching would be required for these training programs, that funds appropriated would not be apportioned among the states, that training needs would be determined by the Secretaries of Labor and Commerce, and that all unemployed and underemployed persons in these areas would be eligible for training and training allowances.

Title III -- Administration and Financing. Restricted reapportionment of any funds apportioned to a state to the second half of any given fiscal year. Required 30 days prior notice to the state of any reapportionment, except during the last quarter of the fiscal year.

Authorized $454 million for all titles for fiscal 1966 and such sums as were necessary thereafter. The fiscal 1966 authorization was broken down as follows: $46 million for Title I programs; $385 million for Title II training programs (except ARA programs); $22 million for ARA programs; $1 million for Title III miscellaneous administrative expenses.

Provided that training allowances and institutional costs would be paid out of funds appropriated for that fiscal year.

Authorized the Secretaries of Labor and HEW to establish procedures for approval at the state level of training programs costing not more than $75,000.

Extended the training programs for three years, through June 30, 1969.

Background

REFERENCES -- 1962 Almanac p. 513, 1963 Almanac p. 523.

1962 Law. Congress in 1962 with little opposition passed President Kennedy's Manpower Development and Training Act (PL 87-415), providing a three-year program designed to rehabilitate a portion of the nation's unemployed and alleviate the scarcity of trained workers in certain industries. The Act authorized vocational education and on-the-job training programs, with the objective of retraining workers who had lost their jobs because of technological change. It also provided for training of persons wishing to develop new skills and for young persons 16-21 years old. The bill authorized $435 million through fiscal 1965.

The MDTA also authorized payment, for up to 52 weeks, of a training allowance to unemployed heads of families with at least three years of employment experience. Five percent of the funds for training allowances was set aside to pay smaller allowances to youths 19-21 years old. States were required to pay 50 percent of the costs of vocational training to employed persons. They were also required, after June 30, 1964, to pay 50 percent of the costs of vocational training to unemployed persons and 50 percent of the costs of training allowances.

The emphasis of the 1962 Act was on retraining experienced workers with family responsibilities. The bulk of the allowances, equal to the state unemployment compensation payments, went to unemployed heads of households; payments to youths were limited to $20 a week. The 1962 program was directed toward a specific group and specific needs.

1963 Amendments. In 1963 Congress enacted an Administration-backed bill making major changes in the scope of the MDTA. The changes were designed to help the illiterate jobless and the unemployed school dropouts who were not eligible for aid under the original Act. The 1963 bill provided new basic education courses for those who had proved too illiterate to take advantage of the job training programs, expanded youth training programs, increased funds for training allowances and relaxed eligibility requirements, enabling younger persons to receive allowances. It also authorized extension of MDTA programs for one year, through fiscal 1966, postponed the requirement that states match the federal contribution in fiscal 1965, and authorized a pilot program for relocating unemployed workers to areas where they had received job offers.

The 1963 amendments, emphasizing youths and illiterates, were designed to broaden the original Act to reach people in greater need and meet the complaints of the Labor Department that the existing program was "retraining the best and disregarding the rest." Administration studies at that time indicated that the hard core of unemployed had not been sufficiently helped by the 1962 Act.

1965 ADMINISTRATION REQUESTS

President Johnson Feb. 1 announced the launching of a "nationwide job development program in service and related fields." The President said that although nearly four million were unemployed, "it often takes weeks to have an appliance or other repair made, hospitals and many other community services are understaffed, housewives cannot get the help they seek for work in the home or in the yard...and the papers are full of Help Wanted Ads."

Mr. Johnson said the Job Development Program would "assure that trained workers are available to provide needed services at satisfactory wages and working conditions, to assure that managerial skills are developed to provide these services as part of our free enterprise system" and "to assure that consumer needs are met better and more fully." He said the Government could contribute "by assembling information about job opportunities, unmet needs and available manpower; by promoting institutional and on-the-job training and apprenticeship; by providing technical assistance to management"; and "by stimulating new enterprises through small business loans and in other ways." He said the program should reach 10,000 jobs a month by July 1, 1965, and this initial stage could be financed under existing law through funds already appropriated or requested.

The following day Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz submitted to Congress a draft bill extending indefinitely and expanding the existing MDTA. The bill, introduced Feb. 2 in the Senate (S 974) by Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) and in the House (HR 4257) by Elmer J. Holland (D Pa.), carried through the President's emphasis on job development in the service fields. It also maintained the direction of the 1963 amendments by (1) continuing to have the Federal Government pay all or most of the costs of training programs (rather than requiring larger state contributions as the existing law provided beginning in fiscal 1966); (2) liberalizing training allowance provisions with respect to amount, duration, and eligibility, and (3) increasing opportunities for youths. The bill also broadened the research and experimental authority of the Labor Secretary.

Following are the major provisions of the Administration draft bill:

Federal Contributions. The bill authorized a permanent 90 percent federal contribution to MDTA vocational training and training allowance programs beginning in fiscal 1966. Existing law authorized 100 percent federal financing in fiscal 1965, 66-2/3 percent in fiscal 1966 and 50 percent thereafter.

Training Allowances. The bill extended to two years the time during which all trainees could receive allowances (under the 1963 amendments, trainees taking the basic education courses could receive allowances for up to 72 weeks, rather than the 52-week maximum applicable to persons receiving only occupational training as provided in the 1962 legislation); permitted single persons to receive training allowances (currently limited to one member of a family in which the head of the family was unemployed); increased the amount of allowances by $5 a week for each dependent over two to a maximum of six; authorized payment of transportation allowances for daily commuting to the training location; permitted on-the-job trainees to perform outside work for up to 20 hours a week without a reduction in allowance (the 1963 Act authorized similar outside work for persons in vocational training but not for on-the-job trainees); allowed the Labor Secretary, for purposes of flexibility, to waive a restriction limiting the number of youths under 22 receiving allowances to 25 percent of the total number; and permitted more than one member of a family to receive an allowance.

Labor Mobility Projects. The bill extended for two years, to June 30, 1967, the authority of the Secretary to conduct experimental projects to assist qualified unemployed workers, living in areas where they could not expect to find employment, to relocate in response to bona-fide offers of full-time employment. The authorization was increased from $4 million to $5 million a year. The bill provided for payment of 100 percent rather than 50 percent of moving costs.

Experimental Projects. The bill authorized the Secretary to establish experimental and pilot projects through grants or contracts with public or non-profit private agencies to promote specialized training programs for groups such as the long-term unemployed, displaced older workers, the handicapped and disadvantaged youths.

Service Job Development. The bill directed the Secretary to stimulate and assist job development programs which would expand employment by filling service needs currently unmet because of lack of trained workers or for other reasons.

Trainee Bonding. The bill permitted the Secretary, for two years, through June 30, 1967, to conduct an experimental program of assistance for people who had successfully completed training but were denied employment for reasons other than ability to perform, such as inability to post bond for minor offenses.

Funding. The bill replaced existing specified authorizations with an open-end authorization, thereby extending the law indefinitely. (The 1963 amendments authorized $285 million for fiscal 1966.)

Area Redevelopment. The bill brought retraining programs currently under the Area Redevelopment Act under the manpower program.

1965 Hearings

House. The Education and Labor Select Labor Subcommittee Feb. 4 to Feb. 19 held hearings on HR 4257, the Administration bill to amend the MDTA.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 4 -- Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz said full employment could be achieved through pursuit of two policies: the economic policy of promoting "that degree of over-all economic growth which will produce the demand for enough work to occupy the full work force," and "the manpower policy of matching people and jobs, of supplying the manpower needs that develop, of getting people into the jobs that exist -- or can be developed."

He said it had been "amply demonstrated that the training and retraining of unemployed workers is a sound social and monetary investment." Wirtz testified that unemployment was "our most serious economic problem" not only because of its level, but "more importantly because of the impact on certain groups. The 5 percent (unemployment level) included rates of 15 percent unemployment for teenagers, 10 percent for nonwhites and 11 percent for the unskilled." These figures, he said, "underscore the need" for specific manpower training programs.

Wirtz said 90 percent federal financing was necessary because "the causes of unemployment are national in scope and should be borne more evenly across the nation." In addition, he said, many state and local governments were "virtually unable" to provide matching funds. A 90-10 matching requirement, he said, would permit the Federal Government to "carry a greater part of the costs...and still retain local financial involvement."

Feb. 9 -- Byrl R. Shoemaker, president of the American Vocational Assn., representing 35,000 vocational educators, supported the bill, but requested Congress to continue to provide for 100 percent federal funding of manpower training programs.

Philip W. Seagren, director of vocational and adult education of the Dade Country, Fla., public schools, also requested continuation of 100 percent federal funding.

Feb. 10 -- Area Redevelopment Administrator William L. Batt Jr. supported bringing ARA training programs under MDTA but urged that the following "essential elements...remain intact": a "separate identification of ARA training so as to ensure that these areas will get the extra assistance which they needed to achieve economic health"; retention of 100 percent federal financing; retention of existing eligibility requirements "so that all unemployed in designated areas are eligible for training and assistance"; and continuation of the existing immediate availability of funds for ARA programs. He also requested that ARA training programs be extended and funded to match the proposed MDTA training program levels and lengths.

Andrew J. Biemiller, director of the AFL-CIO department of legislation, cautioned the Subcommittee that the MDTA programs "cannot substitute for inadequate economic growth, or for the failure to pursue those economic policies which are essential to the necessary expansion in the number of job opportunities." He urged the following changes in the bill: retention of full federal financing of the program; a new requirement that "workers will not be trained for any jobs which pay less than the minimum wage stipulated in the Fair Labor Standards Act"; an assurance that "all projects are scrutinized and periodically reviewed by properly constituted labor-management-public advisory committees"; division of the proposed 104 week training program into two sections to provide 52 weeks of basic education and 52 weeks of occupational training; and further revision of training allowance eligibility requirements to assure that they are payable to mature workers as well as youths.

Feb. 17 -- Prof. William H. Miernyk of the University of Colorado Bureau of Economic Research "strongly" supported making the program permanent, permitting grants for research and development projects, removing the ceiling on funds for manpower research and experimentation and extending labor mobility demonstration projects.

Prof. Richard A. Lester, chairman of the Princeton University economics department, and Dr. Sol Chaneles, director of research and planning for the New York City Department of Correction, strongly endorsed expansion of manpower research under the Act.

Feb. 18 -- Robert W. Sneden, Clarence A. Phillips and Harrison W. Myers Jr., representing three private business schools which had administered MDTA training programs under contract with state education agencies, urged continuation of 100 percent federal support of the program. They said that if the proposed 90-10 matching requirement were adopted, most states would choose to meet the requirement by matching in kind (defined as plant, equipment and services in the proposed amendment) rather than in cash, because of lack of sufficient funds. Thus it would be impossible for these states to continue to carry on training programs through subcontracts with private institutions "when there are no items such as 'plant, equipment and services' to be fairly evaluated so that 'expenditures from non-federal sources' may be matched in kind."

Feb. 19 -- Bruce M. Cole, project director for Job Opportunities through Better Skills (JOBS), a cooperative program of the Chicago Boys' Clubs, the Chicago Youth Centers and the Young Men's Christian Assn. of Metropolitan Chicago, endorsed the Administration proposals but said 100 percent federal financing of the program should be continued.

Joseph V. Tuma, manpower training representative of the United Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers of America (AFL-CIO), said experiences under MDTA "justify the need for permanency," with 100 percent federal financing.

Senate. The Labor and Public Welfare Employment and Manpower Subcommittee Feb. 9 began hearings on S 974, the MDTA amendments. Witnesses before the Subcommittee were substantially the same as those in the House.

Senate Action

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare.

ACTION -- March 12 reported S 974 (S Rept 123) with amendments. The Committee bill was similar to the Administration draft proposal in major respects, but it authorized a four-year extension of training programs, to June 30, 1970, (the Administration had asked that the program be made permanent) and specifically authorized fiscal 1966 appropriations of $454 million and such sums as necessary thereafter (the Administration requested a general authorization without a specific dollar limit).

The bill also changed the financing formula. The Administration bill required the states, beginning in fiscal 1966, to pay 10 percent of the cost, either in cash or in kind (plant equipment and services) of institutional training programs and of training allowances. The committee bill extended 100 percent federal financing of training programs for an additional year, through fiscal 1966, and continued indefinitely the 100 percent federal financing of training allowances. Beginning in fiscal 1967, states were to pay 10 percent of the cost of institutional training programs. In addition, the Committee amendment authorized the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to pay more than the 90 percent federal share of institutional training costs if a state could not constitutionally provide the funds or if private institutions were unable to contribute. (See other changes, below.)

Funds. The committee bill authorized specific appropriations of $454 million in fiscal 1966: $46 million for Title I (demonstration, labor mobility, service job development and job placement projects), $385 million for institutional training and training allowance programs under Title II, $22 million for the area redevelopment provisions of Title II, and $1 million for administrative expenses.

Majority Views. The Committee said "the goal set by the Congress when it enacted MDTA in 1962 was to provide training for 400,000 jobless workers during the three years for which the program was originally authorized. This goal is now within reach." However, the Committee said, "four unprecedented years of economic expansion, coupled with a new and growing manpower retraining effort, have not brought full employment." The report pointed out improvements in the program during 1964 and emphasized the need for research in manpower problems in order to make further improvements.

Supplemental Views. Sens. Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) and George Murphy (R Calif.) stressed the importance of their amendments exempting private institutions from matching federal funds and enlarging the role of state governments.

Individual Views. Sen. Winston L. Prouty (R Vt.) explained his amendments increasing the participation of private institutions and providing increasing flexibility in administration of the program.

Additional Views. Murphy said extension of the MDTA should be limited to two, instead of four years.

Changes in Administration Bill. In addition to the major changes mentioned above, the Committee also: authorized payment of training allowances to members of a family even if the head was employed; authorized the Labor Secretary to contract for experimental projects with private as well as public agencies and otherwise changed the language of the Act so as to encourage the participation of private institutions in training programs; permitted a youth to finish his training even though he had reached his 22nd birthday (the existing law limited the number of persons under 22 who could receive training allowances); authorized the states to approve any training program costing less than $75,000; restricted reapportionment of funds among the states to the second half of any fiscal year and required prior notice to the states except during the last quarter; and authorized administrative increases in transportation and subsistence payments (authorized in the 1962 Act for trainees forced to live away from home) in Alaska, Hawaii and the territories where expenses were higher.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate March 16 passed S 974 by a roll-call vote of 76-8 and sent it to the House. (For voting, see chart p. 1032)

Before passage the Senate rejected by a 35-49 roll-call vote an amendment by Prouty to extend the MDTA for only one year, through June 30, 1967. Prouty said that the program was still experimental and therefore should be reviewed by Congress in two years. (The Committee bill extended the MDTA through June 30, 1970.) The Senate accepted by voice vote an amendment by Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) prohibiting a Secretary from requiring state matching funds for area redevelopment training programs. There was no controversy over the bill itself.

DEBATE -- Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.), floor manager of the bill, described the progress of the program in achieving its first goal of retraining 400,000 unemployed workers. He said training had been approved for nearly 320,000 trainees, of whom 135,000 were currently in training programs, and another 60,000 had been "made more employable through special demonstration projects tailored to the needs of the disadvantaged." He said 72 percent of those completing institutional training and 94 percent of those completing on-the-job training had been obligated for MDTA programs, all 50 states were participating in the program, and the average cost of training was $1,575 per individual.

PROVISIONS -- The provisions of the Senate-passed bill were substantially the same as those of the final bill (see p. 810) with exception of the four-year extension of training programs.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

March 16 -- Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) -- Delete wording in the bill which would have permitted either the Secretary of Labor, Health, Education and Welfare or Commerce to require state matching of funds for Area Redevelopment Administration training programs. Voice vote.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

March 16 -- Winston L. Prouty (R Vt.) -- Provide for a one-year training program extension, to June 30, 1967. Roll-call vote, 35-49.

House Action

COMMITTEE -- Education and Labor.

ACTION -- March 15 reported HR 4257 with amendments (H Rept 170).

Majority Views. The report said the "success" of the MDTA "clearly warrants its extension" and payment of the full costs by the Federal Government through June 30, 1966. It said, however, that it had extended the training program provisions only through June 30, 1968, because "the proper exercise of its legislative oversight function calls for this committee to review, from time to time, a program of such scope and importance as this." It said specific authorization figures were not set because the Committee "supports the expressed intention of the Secretary of Labor...to devote substantially more funds to research than has been possible within the Act's present annual limit...and also to increase expenditures for experimental, developmental, demonstration and pilot projects...."

Major Differences from Senate Bill. Whereas the Senate bill extended the bill for four years until June 30, 1970, HR 4257 provided only a two-year extension. Also unlike the Senate bill which authorized appropriations of $454 million for fiscal 1966, the House bill set no limits on appropriations for that year. Other differences concerned minor amendments added in the Senate Committee which were not added on the House side. (For details, see Conference section, below)

FLOOR ACTION

The House April 1 passed HR 4257 by a 395-0 roll-call vote. The House subsequently by voice vote substituted the wording of HR 4257 for that of S 974, the Senate-passed bill, passed the amended S 974 and returned it to the Senate. (For voting, see chart p. 948)

Discussing HR 4257 April 1, James G. O'Hara (D Mich.) said the "cost of the program, when set alongside the results being achieved, is a modest one...." He said the "direct cost of training one worker -- including the cost of weekly subsistence allowances to those eligible for them -- has so far averaged around $1,200 or $1,300." He added that "for every dollar we committed to support a...trainee last year, while he undertook training, at least $15 to $20 was paid out in benefits to unemployed workers who were not being trained." Members said that HR 4257 probably would improve the Act by alleviating certain hardships of the trainees, such as transportation costs.

Before passing the bill the House accepted three amendments by voice votes. All three amendments added provisions that were already included in the Senate bill. The first, offered by Patsy T. Mink (D Hawaii), was designed to assure that because of the "high cost of living and expenses generally" in Alaska and Hawaii, the Secretary of Labor could permit increased transportation and subsistence allowances in those states. The second, offered by Charles E. Goodell (R N.Y.), provided that no funds should be reapportioned among states until the second half of the fiscal year, and required 30 days prior notice except during the last quarter of the year. The third, also by Goodell, stipulated that states could be empowered to approve training programs only on those projects costing less than $75,000.

PROVISIONS -- The provisions of the House-passed bill were basically the same as those of the final bill except for the two-year extension (instead of three in the final version) and the unspecific authorization of funds for fiscal 1966 ($454 million in final bill).

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

April 1 -- Patsy T. Mink (D Hawaii) -- Permit increases in transportation and subsistence allowances for trainees in Alaska and Hawaii. Voice vote.

Charles E. Goodell (R N.Y.) -- Restrict reapportionment of funds among the states to the second half of the fiscal year and require 30 days notice to the states except during the last quarter of the year. Voice.

Goodell -- Permit states to approve training programs if they cost less than $75,000. Voice.

Conference Action

The Senate April 9 and the House April 13 by voice votes adopted the conference report (H Rept 231) on S 974 and sent the bill to the President. The final version, like the Senate bill, authorized $454 million in fiscal 1966 and such sums as were necessary thereafter. (The House bill had set no limit on funds for any year.) Conferees split the difference between the two-year extension authorized by the House and the four-year extension provided by the Senate: the final bill authorized a three-year extension of training programs through June 30, 1969.

Conferees accepted several provisions of the Senate bill which had been added by the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee and had not been included in HR 4257. The amendments: authorized allowance payments to a member of a family even if the head was employed; allowed a youth to complete his training and receive an allowance after his 22nd birthday; authorized training in a private institution even if the costs were not lower than those at a public institution; and stipulated that the Act should not exclude unemployed professionals who needed limited refresher or reorientation training to find new employment.

Bill Signed. President Johnson, in signing S 974 into law (PL 89-15) April 26, congratulated the Congress on its "prompt and prudent action on this measure." He said "we must make certain that there are jobs which graduates of this program can fill" and he described a Cabinet Committee, made up of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor and Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, which was working towards this end.

FUNDS APPROPRIATED

Congress during the year appropriated a total of $428,303,000 for manpower development and training activities during fiscal 1966. The amount was only $197,000 below Administration requests. The amount appropriated was in two bills, the regular Labor-HEW appropriation bill (HR 7765 -- $273.5 million, as requested) and Labor-HEW supplemental appropriation bill (HR 10586 -- $154,803,000, just under the $155 million requested). The cut was made in salary and expense items. (See p. 161, 166)

In addition, Congress appropriated $89 million for MDTA activities in fiscal 1965 in a supplemental appropriations bill (HR 7091) for that year which was passed early in the session. This sum, combined with MDTA appropriations enacted during calendar 1964, provided appropriations for the program in fiscal 1965 of $396.9 million. (See p. 227)

MANPOWER REPORT

President Johnson March 4 sent to Congress his annual Manpower Report, in which he called for stepped-up efforts to "upgrade the capacities of the work force" and to "improve means of bringing workers and jobs together" as a means of achieving full employment without inflation or adverse effects on the U.S. balance-of-payments position. The President's Report was accompanied by the Labor Department's annual Report on Manpower Requirements, Resources, Utilization, and Training. Both were required by the Manpower Development and Training Act of 1962.

While reporting a new record in total employment and a reduction in unemployment by 300,000 during 1964, the President pointed to unemployment and underemployment as still "intolerably high." These problems were most acute, Mr. Johnson said, among the unskilled, nonwhites, older workers, and teen-agers. He added that "an unprecedented increase in the number of new job-seekers is occurring at a time when the rate of youth unemployment is already three times greater than adult unemployment."

Noting that there was no "simple solution" to these economic ills, the President called for a structural approach embodying many of the Administration's previously proposed "Great Society" programs, including aid to education, enlargement of the anti-poverty program, strengthening manpower training, increasing job development activities, broadening of the Area Redevelopment Act, implementation of the Appalachia program, strengthening of employment services, extension of minimum wage and overtime protection to more workers and a broadening of the unemployment insurance system. No additional legislation was proposed in the Report.

Past approaches to unemployment have placed greater reliance on fiscal and monetary measures than on structural programs. Mr. Johnson said that job growth would be bolstered by proposed excise tax cuts, increased Social Security benefits and revised depreciation rules, but he added that "fiscal and monetary steps to achieve the full measure of needed growth may encounter problems of inflationary pressures before unemployment targets are reached...."

Labor Department Report

The Department's 276-page Report discussed in separate chapters current developments in employment and unemployment, manpower requirements and resources, progress in manpower development and continuing needs, and the matching of workers with jobs.

Unemployment. The Report projected that the unusually high 4.75 percent economic growth rate of 1964 must be maintained through 1970 to reduce unemployment to "a more acceptable level." A Labor Department official said the acceptable level was 3 percent, far below the 4 percent selected by the President's Council of Economic Advisers as an interim target of "full employment." The report pointed out that the necessary 4.75 percent annual growth figure "is substantially higher than the average increase for the postwar period as a whole," about 3.5 percent a year.

The Report said that despite a 1964 reduction in unemployment from 5.7 to 5.2 percent of the labor force, large employment differentials remained between white and nonwhite workers, young workers and adults, skilled and unskilled, and educated and uneducated workers.

Jobs. Under stimulus of the tax cut and other Government economic measures, the Report said, employment in the private sector of the economy accounted for 1.25 million of the 1.5 million increase in non-farm industry employment from 1963 to 1964.

The Report projected that the labor force would increase by 1.5 million a year between 1964 and 1970, rendering it necessary for the economy to generate "some 9 million jobs -- 1.5 million a year...merely to accommodate the growing labor force." That growth, the Report said, would reflect rapidly increasing numbers of young adults, and nonwhite workers.

Education. To counter the expected continuation of high levels of unemployment among young, unskilled, and disadvantaged workers, the Report called for special programs of education and job training. "...We can no longer permit one-third of all young people to quit school before completing high school," the Report said. "By 1975, more than three out of five adult workers will have a high school education or better; those without this education will be even more handicapped educationally than at present."

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS

Manpower Training Figures. Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz April 1 said that occupational training projects for nearly 200,000 unemployed workers were approved under the MDTA during 1964, a 79-percent increase over 1963. Total number of individuals approved for training or other vocation services under the MDTA was close to 400,000 at the end of 1964. About one-half of 1964 participants had been unemployed for more than 15 weeks; almost a third had been jobless for more than six months. These individuals were considered hard-core, long-term unemployed. Participants with less than a grade school education more than doubled in 1964 and the number of nonwhite workers enrolled increased to more than one-quarter of the total number of trainees, Wirtz said. About 37 percent of the 1964 participants were unemployed workers 21 years of age or younger. At the end of 1964, there were 700 occupations for which training had been approved, up 200 from 1963. The MDTA information was contained in the Labor Department's third annual report to Congress on the program.

Rep. Elmer J. Holland (D Pa.) Oct. 22 said that since the manpower training program began in August 1962, almost $612 million had been committed to MDTA activities in 50 states. He said a total of 539,252 workers had been trained or were in training as of October 1965. On the average, 72 percent of those completing institutional training, and 94 percent of those completing on-the-job training were placed in jobs, Holland said. Holland was chairman of the Select Labor Subcommittee of the House Education and Labor Committee. His Subcommittee handled the 1965 manpower amendments legislation and he was sponsor of the House bill (HR 4257).

Indian Vocational Training. President Johnson April 22 signed into law a bill (HR 4778 -- PL 89-14) amending the Indian Vocational Training Act of 1956. The bill increased the authorization for the Indian training program to $15 million annually. A 1963 amendment to the Act had raised the annual authorization from $7.5 million to $12 million. (1963 Almanac p. 210)

The President said, "The program is open to Indian men and women between the ages of 18 and 35 who live on or near reservations. They may receive up to two years of vocational training at Government expense." He said "Indian trainees come from reservation areas where unemployment is six to seven times the national average -- where industrialization is just beginning -- and where population pressures on the land base have led to prolonged and extreme poverty." He said that since the program's inception, more than 13,000 Indians had received training, "nearly 10,000 of them in the past four years."

HR 4778 was passed by voice votes of the House April 5 and the Senate April 9.

SERVICE CONTRACT ACT

HR 10238 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 948) Sept. 1, 1965.

- Passed by the House by voice vote Sept. 20.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 798) Sept. 30.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Oct. 1.
- Senate amendment accepted by the House by voice vote Oct. 6.

PL 89-286 -- Signed into law Oct. 22.

Congress in 1965 passed without controversy a bill (HR 10238) to set minimum standards of pay and fringe benefits for the employees of firms under contract to perform services for the Federal Government.

HR 10238 covered contracts of $2,500 or more to furnish laundry, drycleaning, custodial, janitorial, guardian, food and other such services to the Federal Government. Contractors and subcontractors performing such services were required by HR 10238 to pay their employees wages and fringe benefits at least equal to those prevailing in the same locality for similar work. In no case could they pay wages lower than those applicable to private employees under the federal minimum wage law (Fair Labor Standards Act).

Previous similar legislation covered the employees of firms performing contract construction work for the Federal Government (1931 Davis-Bacon Act, as amended) and of firms furnishing materials to the Government by contract (1936 Walsh-Healey Act, as amended). (For details, see 1964 Almanac p. 576; "Congress and the Nation," p. 634.)

In 1964, a bill similar to HR 10238 was reported June 18 by the House Education and Labor Committee (HR 11522 -- H Rept 1495). But it was opposed by the Budget Bureau, which said it favored "other approaches" to aiding service contract workers; by 11 of the 12 Committee Republicans, who sought further study; and by various other groups. The House Rules Committee failed to grant it a rule for debate. (1964 Almanac p. 577)

Because of procedural and other changes in the bill, the Budget Bureau withdrew its opposition in 1965 and the Administration gave the new bill, HR 10238, unified endorsement -- the major factor facilitating passage in 1965. One change in the bill, which substantially reduced opposition from various sources, was removal of 1964 language that would have required contractors on service jobs to pay their employees wages and fringe benefits based on federal rates of pay and fringe benefits for similar work. This language had met strong opposition on grounds it established an entirely new concept of requiring private employers to match federal wages. HR 10238 required service contractors merely to pay prevailing area wages and fringe benefits.

Another factor aiding in passage was the allaying of the fears of some construction unions that the legislation might foster the performance of painting and alterations under service contracts rather than construction contracts. HR 10238 specifically excluded from its coverage contracts for painting, construction and alteration work.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 10238:

Applied to contracts over $2,500 for furnishing services to the Federal Government.

Specified that wages for employees working under such contracts be no lower than the prevailing local rate, and in no case lower than the federal minimum wage.

Provided that fringe benefits for such employees be no less than the prevailing local fringe benefits, and that work be performed in safe and sanitary surroundings.

Authorized the Secretary of Labor to determine what were prevailing local wages and fringe benefits.

Provided that certain fringe benefits should be excluded in computing overtime pay.

Required that provisions specifying the minimum wages, fringe benefits and working conditions required to be provided, as determined above, be included in service contracts and bid specifications.

Permitted withholding from contractors of amounts necessary to pay workers if the act were violated, plus cancellation of the contract, exclusion of the contractor from further federal contracts for three years, and suits by the Federal Government to obtain from the contractor any back benefits owed.

Covered guards, watchmen, and any persons working at a recognized trade or craft or other skilled mechanical craft, or at unskilled labor, in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Outer Continental Shelf lands, Samoa, Guam, and Wake Island, Eniwetok, Kwajalein and Johnston Islands.

Exempted from the bill contracts for construction, alteration and/or repair, including painting and decorating of public buildings and public works; any work done under the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act; any contract subject to the Communications Act of 1934; any contract for carriage of freight or personnel where published tariff rates were in effect; direct services; any contract for public utility services; and any contract with the Post Office Department for operation of postal contract stations.

SUMMARY OF 1965 ACTION

HOUSE COMMITTEE. The House Education and Labor Committee Sept. 1, 1965, reported HR 10238 (H Rept 948) in substantially the same form as subsequently enacted into law, and without any dissenting views. The only Committee change in the original bill was deletion of a provision which had exempted contracts with the Post Office for transportation, handling or delivery of mail. In Aug. 5 hearings, Labor Department Solicitor Charles Donahue had said the new bill differed from the 1964 measure by empowering the Secretary of Labor, rather than agency heads, to make prevailing wage and fringe benefit determinations, and by requiring benefits to be based on prevailing local wages and fringe benefits rather than on wage and fringe benefits received by federal employees for similar work. The Budget Bureau told CQ that the changes described by Donahue simplified administration and eliminated the Bureau's previous opposition.

HOUSE FLOOR ACTION. The House Sept. 20 passed HR 10238 by voice vote without floor amendments. Sponsor James G. O'Hara (D Mich.) said that in the Committee, the bill "was enthusiastically supported by both sides."

SENATE COMMITTEE. The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee Sept. 30 reported (S Rept 798) HR 10238 with amendments adding Eniwetok, Kwajalein and Johnston Island to coverage.

SENATE FLOOR ACTION. The Senate passed the bill Oct. 1 by voice vote without floor amendments.

FINAL ACTION. The House Oct. 6 agreed to the Senate amendments by voice vote. The President, signing HR 10238 (PL 89-286) Oct. 22, said "many of the employees who will benefit are among the lowest paid workers in our society."

'RIGHT TO WORK' REPEAL DEFEATED BY FILIBUSTER

HR 77 --
- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 540) June 22, 1965.
- Passed by the House on a 221-203 roll-call vote July 28. (See p. 982)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 697) Sept. 9.
- Motion to impose cloture on motion to take up HR 77 defeated by the Senate on a 45-47 roll-call vote Oct. 11. (See p. 1078)

President Johnson's 1965 legislative program suffered one of its few defeats late in the session when Senators conducted a successful filibuster against a bill (HR 77) to repeal Section 14 (b) of the 1947 Taft-Hartley Act. The controversial bill, which would have had the effect of outlawing state "right to work" laws, was passed by the House, but by a much narrower margin than most major 1965 Administration bills.

Under the 1947 "right to work" provision of the Taft-Hartley Act, the union shop contract was legal and permissible throughout the United States, except in those states which passed "right to work" laws forbidding the union shop. The Federal Government granted to each state, in effect, the right to outlaw union shop contracts in that state. A union shop contract is one requiring employees to join a union within a specified time after being hired. Employees who refuse to do so must be dismissed. Fourteen states enacted "right to work" laws in 1947 and by 1965 there were 19 states with such laws in effect -- 10 of them in the South, the rest in the Midwest, Rocky Mountain area and Southwest. No industrial state had a "right to work" law.

The effect of HR 77 would have been to nullify all 19 existing state "right to work" laws, to forbid future enactment of further state "right to work" laws, and thus to make the union shop permissible throughout the country. It should be emphasized that the bill did not require all employers to conclude union shop agreements; it simply permitted union shop contracts to be concluded in cases where the union, through collective bargaining or other legal methods, was able to get the employer to agree to such a contract. (For list of 19 "right to work" states, see next page.)

Since the 1940s the issue of "right to work" laws had been an extremely emotional one. Labor unions bitterly resented the tag name of "right to work," saying it was a misnomer for antiunion laws. Supporters said workers should be free to join or not to join unions.

During the 1965 Congressional debate on the issue, supporters of repeal of Section 14 (b) argued that "right to work" laws were actually antilabor devices designed to keep unions weak and wages low; they created a favorable climate for the pirating of business from other areas, Northern Senators, in particular, charged. The leading Senate opponent of HR 77, Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.), said repeal of 14 (b) would injure small companies "which do not have a group of high-powered legal counselors sitting at their elbows" to advise them in dealing with labor. Other arguments against repeal were that it would provide additional union dues for political activities; damage federal-state relations; impinge on individual freedom of choice; and force workers to join Communist-dominated or corrupt unions.

1965 Action. The Administration did not formally propose repeal of Section 14 (b) until May 1965 because it wanted passage of certain other legislation assured before Congress became involved in the controversial labor issue. It was believed there was a majority for repeal in the Senate but a less favorable outlook in the House. The Administration therefore engineered a marriage of convenience between certain urban and rural Democratic Congressmen. Under this arrangement, some farm state Democrats voted for HR 77 in return for subsequent votes from Northeastern Democrats for the Administration's omnibus farm bill. HR 77 was unpopular with conservative farm state constituents and the farm bill was unpopular with Easterners because wheat provisions foreshadowed a rise in bread prices, but Administration forces argued that Congressmen could afford to displease their constituents on one bill if it assured passage of the other. The coalition worked, as party voting was extremely tight, and the House passed HR 77 by a narrow margin and with the help of 21 Republican votes.

In Senate Committee consideration of HR 77, one amendment was added. This permitted any person who opposed union membership on religious grounds to be exempted from it if he paid a sum equivalent to union dues into a charitable fund. The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee approved HR 77 by a 12-3 vote.

On Sept. 9, the day the Committee reported HR 77, Sen. Dirksen formally announced that he would help organize "extended debate" designed to block passage of the bill. A reported 26 additional Senators -- mostly Republicans and Southern Democrats -- agreed to undertake speaking assignments in a filibuster against 14 (b) repeal.

On Oct. 4 Senate debate began on a motion by Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) to make HR 77 the Senate's pending business. The filibusterers immediately began to talk against this motion and on Oct. 11, after seven days of debate, Mansfield sought to impose cloture -- cut off debate -- on his motion. Cloture, if adopted, would have permitted the Senate after 100 hours of debate to proceed with consideration of the bill. The cloture motion was substantially defeated Oct. 11, 45-47 (a two-thirds majority is necessary to invoke cloture). Mansfield the following day announced that the leadership was abandoning its effort to pass HR 77 in 1965, and the filibuster ended.

There was wide agreement among informed sources that at least 52 Senators, a majority, would have voted to pass the bill if a simple vote on passage could have been taken. The additional votes would have come from Senators who were absent during the cloture vote and from several who traditionally opposed cloture despite their position on the legislation in question.

The intensive lobbying which surrounded legislative action on HR 77 provided a clear-cut confrontation between labor and business interests. All of the major lobbying for repeal was carried out by labor unions and the Johnson Administration. Working against repeal of Section 14 (b) were a coalition of business organizations.

Chief among these were the National Right to Work Committee, an 18,000-man group composed largely of small businessmen, and the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S.

After the Senate defeat of HR 77, there was some controversy about whether the Administration had worked hard enough for the bill in that chamber, or had been responsible for a poor timetable for action on the measure. However, AFL-CIO President George Meany Oct. 28 said he had wanted the bill scheduled late in the session and that President Johnson had "done everything he could" to win its passage. Mr. Johnson in a Nov. 18 letter to an AFL-CIO convention pledged renewal of the fight for 14(b) repeal in 1966. "Just as we had to come back last year to finish the unfinished battle for medicare," Mr. Johnson wrote, "we will come back in the next session to remove this divisive provision."

Lobbying Efforts

A direct, clear-cut confrontation between labor and business groups was the key feature of the extensive 1965 pressure campaign on HR 77.

The campaign for repeal of the "right to work" provision was led by the AFL-CIO national headquarters and supported actively by most of the large unions in the labor federation, particularly the industrial unions. The International Brotherhood of Teamsters, an independent union, also was active. While a large number of non-labor groups gave public endorsement to repeal of Section 14(b), all of the really hard lobbying for repeal was done by the various unions and the Johnson Administration.

The campaign against repeal of the "right to work" provision was conducted by a coalition of business organizations, the most active of which were the National Right to Work Committee (actually a citizens' organization with a strong business coloration), the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the Associated General Contractors and the National Assn. of Manufacturers. The American Retail Federation, National Small Business Assn., Retail Merchants Assn., American Farm Bureau Federation and constituent units of the Council of State Chambers of Commerce also were reported to have waged active campaigns to defeat the "right to work" repeal bill. Many other groups testified against the bill, but did not actively

State 'Right to Work' Laws

The "right to work" law is a law which prohibits labor-management agreements requiring union membership as a condition of getting or keeping a job. The state "right to work" law, in effect, outlaws the closed shop and the union shop.

Ordinarily, state labor relations laws do not apply to unions and businesses which are involved in interstate commerce or activities "affecting" interstate commerce and which therefore are governed by federal labor laws. However, the 1947 Taft-Hartley Act created special rules with regard to state "right to work" laws. The Taft-Hartley Act itself forbade the closed shop. It permitted the union shop, however, with the proviso that union shop contracts would be legal only in states which did not forbid them. The effect of this proviso (Section 14(b)) was to validate state "right to work" laws, wherever they were passed, for unions covered by the Taft-Hartley Act and not normally subject to state laws.

As a result, state "right to work" laws, where they exist, are applicable to all unions and businesses (unless exempted by the state laws themselves), with one exception. The exception involves the Railway Labor Act. Railroads, airlines and other firms and their employees which are subject to the Railway Labor Act, rather than the Taft-Hartley Act, are not subject to state "right to work" laws.

The basic argument in favor of "right to work" laws is that the union shop curbs both the personal and economic freedom of the individual by compelling him to join a union as a condition of employment. The basic argument against is that the "right to work" laws are used by employers as a union-busting device.

As of Jan. 1, 1966, a total of 19 states had in effect "right to work" laws, or constitutional provisions, or both, of general application. Six other states had in the past enacted similar legislation but had subsequently repealed it. A list of these states follows.

States With "Right To Work" Legislation in Effect

State	Constitutional Amendment Adopted	Statute Enacted
Alabama	----	8/28/53
Arizona	1946	3/20/47
Arkansas	1944	2/19/47
Florida	1944	----
Georgia	----	3/27/47
Iowa	----	4/28/47
Kansas	1958	----
Mississippi	1960	2/24/54
Nebraska	1946	6/10/47
Nevada	----	3/14/51
North Carolina	----	3/18/47
North Dakota	----	3/13/47
South Carolina	----	3/19/54
South Dakota	1946	3/11/47
Tennessee	----	2/21/47
Texas	----	4/ 8/47
Utah	----	2/24/55
Virginia	----	1/21/47
Wyoming	----	2/ 8/63

States Which Repealed "Right To Work" Legislation

State	Date of Passage	Date of Repeal
Delaware	4/ 5/47	6/29/49
Hawaii	5/21/45	5/30/59
Indiana	6/26/57	1/28/65
Louisiana	7/ 2/54	6/21/56*
Maine	5/13/47	1949
New Hampshire	6/14/47	3/11/49

After repealing the general "right to work" law on June 21, 1956, Louisiana enacted a partial "right to work" law applying only to agricultural workers and processing employees. The law for agricultural and processing employees was enacted July 12, 1956.*

The law passed 5/13/47 was only a partial "right to work" law. It was rejected by a voter referendum in Sept. 1948 and then repealed by the legislature in 1949.*

work against it. (For complete list of national organizations which testified during House hearings on repeal of 14(b), see box p. 825.)

MAJOR GROUPS FOR BILL

AFL-CIO. According to nearly all sources reached by CQ, the national organization of the AFL-CIO was the major force pushing for passage of the "right to work" repeal bill. Although a pledge to repeal the "right to work" provision was included in the 1964 Democratic National Platform, repeal of Section 14 (b) became a live issue in Congress only after the AFL-CIO Executive Council in a Nov. 24, 1964, action, put "right to work" repeal at the head of its list of legislative goals for 1965 and won President Johnson's support of the repeal proposal at a Dec. 17, 1964, White House meeting. AFL-CIO leaders repeatedly stressed during 1965 that "right to work" repeal remained their top legislative objective.

Union Arguments -- The high priority given to repeal by labor leaders was based upon several different factors.

Union spokesmen believed that "right to work" laws were to a large extent responsible for the slow growth of unions in the South and many of the other states with such laws. The requirement that new employees join a union, where it was not prohibited by state "right to work" laws, union leaders said, had the effect of strengthening unions financially by adding to dues collected; of winning to unionism through daily contact workers who were indifferent when they first came to work; and of blocking attempts by employers to "break" unions through hiring of antiunion personnel and related devices. All these advantages were absent where union shop contracts were forbidden by state laws.

Union spokesmen further argued that, in many parts of the South, "right to work" laws were only one of a battery of antilabor devices designed to keep unions weak, keep wages low and keep business taxes (for such items as unemployment insurance) low -- thereby creating a "favorable business climate" in order to "pirate" industry from other areas. As an illustration of this argument, the Oct. 7 issue of the Machinist, the newspaper of the International Assn. of Machinists (AFL-CIO), published a list of 175 factories or plants which, it said, had relocated from high-wage Northern areas to low-wage North and South Carolina, both "right to work" states.

Finally, unions contended that antiunion business groups often put forward "right to work" proposals in state legislatures not only for their own sake but also in order to absorb the attentions and resources of unions in a fight against the proposals, thus diverting the unions from pushing favorable welfare and tax legislation through the state legislatures. Alluding to this allegation May 25, 1965, in House testimony on HR 77, AFL-CIO President George Meany said, "In the last eight years alone -- from the beginning of 1958 to the present time -- we in the AFL-CIO have engaged in more than 40 significant battles over so-called 'right to work' laws... It is impossible to estimate how many millions of dollars and how many thousands of man-hours were thrown into these contests by both sides...a staggering waste of money and manpower."

If the state right to pass "right to work" laws was repealed, as proposed in HR 77, then, union spokesmen argued, unions would be strengthened in many areas, particularly the South; undesirable pirating of industry into low-wage areas would be reduced; and repeated struggles over state legislation on "right to work" would be ended.

AFL-CIO Tactics -- The AFL-CIO pressure effort on HR 77 combined a number of different activities. At the grass roots level, publications of the AFL-CIO national headquarters and of the international unions and local and state bodies kept up a running stream of articles, editorials and special reports all year long designed to inform the membership and encourage their active support for the bill. The matter was talked up at local and state meetings, delegations were sometimes organized to visit Congressmen locally, and letter-writing campaigns to Congressmen were encouraged. One influential GOP Senator's aide told CQ that the Senator had received a "barrage of mail" from union members all over the country in favor of repealing Section 14(b), and "plenty of personal contact" when he visited his home state. However, a leading labor lobbyist told CQ that while the AFL-CIO had "put out a lot of material and encouraged letter-writing, there is probably no question that mail from our people was much smaller than mail opposing repeal." But he added that "this is often so -- labor people are often poor letter writers for lobbying campaigns."

At the Washington, D.C., level, direct labor lobbying on behalf of the AFL-CIO and its constituent unions (many of which maintain lobbyists in the nation's capital) was coordinated at the regular Monday meetings of labor lobbyists held by the AFL-CIO whenever Congress is in session. AFL-CIO Director of Legislation Andrew J. Biemiller (ex-Rep. D. Wis. 1945-47, 1949-51) normally presided. At the meetings, lobbying assignments were divided among the members of the AFL-CIO national lobbying staff (which consisted of Biemiller and four other persons), and the lobbying staffs of the Industrial Union Department of the AFL-CIO, the building trades unions and other AFL-CIO affiliates. Each lobbyist or lobbying department took responsibility for seeing a certain number of Congressmen or Senators.

Political Threats -- Backing up labor's lobbying campaign on repeal of Section 14(b) were indications that union political support for many Congressmen in the 1966 elections would be determined to a large measure on how the individual voted on the "right to work" issue. Putting the matter in the bluntest way possible, President Elmer Brown of the International Typographical Union (AFL-CIO) said at the union's Aug. 14-20 convention, "Those Members of the U.S. Senate who were elected on the ticket with President Johnson on a platform to repeal 14(b) will either discharge their obligation or we shall mass our forces and discharge them at the next election." His remarks aroused considerable resentment in the Senate, and were sharply criticized by Sens. Frank J. Lausche and Stephen M. Young (both D Ohio).

A number of other statements by union leaders, however, conveyed the same general message, though in somewhat softer language. The Sept. 16 edition of the Machinist, for example, said that "the irrational devotion of (the) national leaders (of the Republican party) to so-called 'right to work' laws is driving off the last of its union supporters."

On Oct. 8, just before the Senate failed to break the filibuster against 14(b), three Republican union leaders addressed a plea to all Republican Members of the Senate saying they were "deeply dismayed to see the Republican party officially leading a campaign to prevent the Senate from voting on the repeal of Section 14(b). We do not want to see the Republican party become an antilabor party." The three were Maurice A. Hutcheson, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners (AFL-CIO); Lee W. Minton, president of the Glass Bottle Blowers Assn. (AFL-CIO); and James A. Suffridge, president of the Retail Clerks International Assn. (AFL-CIO).

AFL-CIO President George Meany and other union leaders also sent frequent pleas to Congress on the issue.

Despite all the efforts of the AFL-CIO, one major union spokesman told CQ he believed that the AFL-CIO had failed to stir up union members in the localities sufficiently, and that was the real reason for the bill's failure to win passage in 1965. However, most observers and participants surveyed by CQ said the AFL-CIO had in fact turned in a major lobbying job for the bill.

Teamsters. Also extremely active in support of HR 77 was the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, an independent union and the nation's largest single labor union, with over 1.5 million members. (Total AFL-CIO membership is about 13.5 million, but no one AFL-CIO union is as large as the Teamsters.) The Teamsters campaign was conducted independently, not in coordination with the AFL-CIO's. Teamsters did not participate in the weekly AFL-CIO lobbyist meetings in Washington.

A Teamsters spokesman said that from March to July, the union had brought in 3,000 wives of members from 42 states to visit Congressmen and urge support of HR 77; and that 295 House Members and quite a few Senators had been seen. The week before the House vote on the bill, 39 Teamster business agents were brought to Washington, D.C., to see Members of Congress. The union also promoted a heavy letter-writing campaign. Teamster spokesmen regularly headquartered in the nation's capital also visited Members.

Mine Workers. Another major independent union, the United Mine Workers of America, told CQ that it had talked to some Congressmen and Senators from coal-mining areas in support of the bill to repeal the "right to work" provision.

Non-Labor Groups. Nearly all sources contacted by CQ said that, while many non-labor organizations had come out in favor of repeal of the "right to work" provision -- such as the National Catholic Welfare Conference, National Council of Churches, Central Conference of American Rabbis, National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, Congress of Racial Equality, Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Americans for Democratic Action, National Farmers Union, among others -- very few such groups had engaged in any active lobbying or letter-writing campaigns for the bill. But endorsement by these groups was described as being valuable in showing a wide public acceptance of "right to work" repeal.

Industrial Peace Council. One organization on the Washington, D.C., scene and in favor of repeal of "right to work" provisions was the National Council for Industrial Peace, a group set up in 1958 by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and former Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D N.Y. 1947-59). The group reportedly did not engage in any lobbying on federal legislation, but restricted its activities to attempts to defeat state "right to work" laws.

Johnson Administration. Most sources contacted by CQ agreed that the Johnson Administration had exerted considerable pressure in the House to pass HR 77 when it came up July 28. This pressure, according to reports, included contacts from spokesmen for various federal agencies and from the White House, and the working out of an agreement for Northern urban Democrats to support the omnibus farm bill (HR 9811) in exchange for support of HR 77 by Midwestern farm-area Democrats. (For details, see below)

There was less agreement about Administration efforts in the Senate. A large number of labor union lobbyists said they did not believe the Administration made an all-out effort to break the Senate filibuster against the bill, and they did not know of any White House "arm-twisting" for the bill in the Senate. However, one of the top labor lobbyists told CQ that, as matters worked out in the Senate, only a small number of votes in the Senate were undecided as the cloture move approached, and "the White House made four or five calls, which met with mixed response." Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey also reportedly was actively seeking votes, according to several sources.

Despite some labor dissatisfaction with the Administration's role during Senate action on HR 77, AFL-CIO President George Meany Oct. 28 said President Johnson "did everything he could" to meet his pledge to obtain repeal of 14(b). Meany said if the Senate's refusal to take up HR 77 was a result of leaving its consideration until late in the session, "I'll take responsibility for that...I felt we shouldn't move on 14(b) until the other (important) bills were out of the way."

MAJOR GROUPS AGAINST BILL

Right to Work Committee. By all accounts, the most vocal and one of the most effective opponents of the proposal to repeal the "right to work" provision of the Taft-Hartley Act was the National Right to Work Committee, an organization founded in 1955 to work for "right to work" laws. A spokesman emphatically denied that the organization was financed by any "large, right-wing contributors," saying the Committee got less than 10 percent of its funds from groups in the top 500 corporations in the United States, received no contributions over $5,000 and got its funds primarily through relatively small contributions of the 10,000 small businessmen and firms in its membership. (This statement appeared to give some substance to reports that really big businesses, accustomed to dealing with labor unions on a regular basis, were not among the major supporters of the forces opposing HR 77; and that such support came chiefly from medium and small businesses.)

The Committee's spokesman said the annual budget of the National Right to Work Committee had been running up to about $550,000 annually in recent years, but would be about $800,000 in 1965. He emphasized, however, that these funds were not for Washington, D.C., lobbying only, but for the group's activities all over the country, in working for passage of state "right to work" laws by the state legislatures and for conducting educational campaigns on the general issue locally. Expenditures for federal lobbying were about $10,000 a month, he said.

The Committee's spokesman said the group had only one office, located in the nation's capital, with 20 employees including secretaries and mailers. The paid professional employees in 1965 included Reed Larson, executive vice president; Charles Bailey, director of state activities; Hugh Newton, director of information; S.C. Cadwallader, president and director of worker programs; Edward K. Nellor, director of legislative liaison; and William P. Flythe Jr., Nellor's assistant. John L. Kilcullen was the group's legal adviser, but not on a full-time basis. Nellor, Larson, Flythe, Kilcullen and the organization itself in 1965 registered as lobbyists with the Clerk of the House.

In the dispute over repeal of the "right to work" provision of federal law, the National Right to Work Committee produced an enormous amount of literature in addition to a monthly national newsletter and reportedly was responsible for a heavy volume of mail to Congress in opposition to HR 77. It also organized delegations to visit Congressmen.

The National Right to Work Committee strongly denied that state "right to work" laws were favored by business simply as antiunion devices in order to break unions or prevent their growth (as many union spokesmen charged). The Committee advanced a number of arguments in favor of "right to work" laws: that it was repugnant to American conceptions of personal freedom to require a man to join a union as a condition of earning a living if he did not wish to join; that unions in many cases were corrupt, practiced racial discrimination or were Communist dominated, and that to force an individual to join such unions, as a result of a union shop agreement, was morally wrong; that the decision on whether to permit union shop agreements should remain with the states; that the growth of the union shop would retard economic growth because of restrictive union practices.

The Committee also hit very hard on the argument that increased union dues which would result from a rise in union shop agreements would be used as a political slush fund by "union bosses who are bent on dominating the nation's political and economic life." The group's Sept. 30 newsletter, for example, said that union membership in the 19 "right to work" states would automatically rise from about 1.7 million to about 2 million, an increase of over a quarter-million, if the federal "right to work" provision were repealed. "With compulsory dues averaging $60 a year per worker, the AFL-CIO income in the 19 'right to work' states will surpass $120 million. This money will be used primarily for political action."

Ladies' Auxiliary -- The National Right to Work Committee July 14 announced the formation of a Women's Organization for Right to Work, headed by Mrs. Kennedy Smith of Pittsburgh. The group held several press conferences and put out literature similar to that of the National Right to Work Committee. Regional chairwomen included Mrs. Jack Westland, wife of the former Washington Republican Congressman, and Vivian Kellems, famed for her disputes with federal officials in an earlier period. The group claimed 3,000 members.

Strategy Meetings -- During the course of the 1965 legislative campaign, the National Right to Work Committee leaders met about 15 or 20 times with spokesmen for other major groups with headquarters in the nation's capital who were active in opposing HR 77. Participants at these meetings included spokesmen and strategists for the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., Associated General Contractors, National Assn. of Manufacturers, American Farm Bureau Federation, Retail Merchants Assn. and one or two other active organizations. A spokesman for one of these organizations said the groups used the meetings to keep each other informed, to exchange information about which Congressmen needed to be "hit" with letter-writing campaigns or other pressure, and to plan future action.

Other Major Groups. Other organizations which, according to CQ's survey, were engaged in major pressure campaigns in the nation's capital and/or in local areas against passage of HR 77 were the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., Associated General Contractors, National Assn. of Manufacturers, American Retail Federation, National Small Business Assn., Retail Merchants Assn., American Farm Bureau Federation and units of the Council of State Chambers of Commerce. The first three groups were said to be the most active.

Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. activities were handled primarily by the Chamber's Committee for Voluntary Unionism, a unit set up in 1961 to oppose the closed shop and the union shop, both at the state and federal levels.

Reed A. Benson, Washington representative and lobbyist for the John Birch Society and son of the Eisenhower Administration Secretary of Agriculture, Ezra Taft Benson, said in September that members of the Society had been urged to write letters to Congress asking defeat of the bill.

Other Groups. During the course of 1965 a number of special groups emerged. Ex-Rep. Fred A. Hartley Jr. (R N.J. 1929-49), a co-author of the 1947 Taft-Hartley Act, in August sent around a letter soliciting funds for the Conference of American Small Business Organizations (established in 1942), and noted that one of its major objectives was to stimulate American business to oppose HR 77. Hartley April 19 also announced formation of a Citizens Committee to Preserve the Taft-Hartley Act, consisting of a long list of business leaders. The Citizens Committee placed advertisements in the May 3 Washington Evening Star, May 4 Washington Post and May 14 Time Magazine, opposing HR 77, then became quiescent.

Still another organization that appeared on the Washington, D. C., scene was a group calling itself the National Freedom to Work Committee, which was sharply criticized in some quarters for allegedly trading on the closeness of its name to that of the National Right to Work Committee for fund-raising purposes. The two were not connected.

Congressional offices and lobbyists for large organizations told CQ little had been seen of any of the above organizations in the halls of Congress, and their influence (unless in letter-writing which could not be traced to them) was probably negligible.

Religious Groups. During hearings, the Seventh Day Adventists, Mennonite Church, National Assn. of Evangelicals, Plymouth Brethren, Old German Baptists and several similar groups requested some special provision for persons who, for personal religious reasons, did not wish to join unions. These representations led to Senate insertion in HR 77 of the Wayne Morse (D Ore.) amendment, permitting such persons not to join unions, even where a union shop was in effect, if they paid the equivalent of dues to charity or made some similar arrangement.

An attempt by the Mormon Church to get Mormon Members of Congress to cast votes against HR 77 as a religious duty, made in a June 22 letter from the First Presidency of the Mormon Church to 11 Members, failed. Most of the 11 wrote back that they could not be governed in their Congressional votes on the bill as a whole by the position of the Mormon Church.

Background on Section 14(b)

The basic federal law governing labor-management relations is the National Labor Relations (Wagner) Act of 1935, as amended by the 1947 Labor-Management Relations (Taft-Hartley) Act and subsequent laws. The depression-bred Wagner Act was highly favorable to labor organizations. The Taft-Hartley Act, which was bitterly fought by labor, nullified and modified some of the Wagner Act guarantees and, in so doing, gave rise to state "right to work" laws.

Wagner Act. Three-and-a-half months after Franklin D. Roosevelt became President, Congress in 1933 passed at his request the National Industrial Recovery Act (NIRA), which provided that all codes of fair competition approved under the NIRA should guarantee the right of employees generally to bargain collectively through representatives of their choosing without interference or coercion by employers. In 1935, in the Schechter case, the Supreme Court struck down Title I of the NIRA. Five weeks later, Congress passed the National Labor Relations Act (called the Wagner Act, after Democratic Sen. Robert F. Wagner of New York, 1927-49).

The Wagner Act, which became law July 5, 1935, reenacted the previously invalidated labor sections of the NIRA and made additions which gave a powerful impetus to labor organizations, earning the law the name, "labor's bill of rights." The Wagner Act was upheld by the Supreme Court April 13, 1937, in a 5-4 decision in the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp. case.

Among other provisions, the Act forbade employers to engage in any of five types of unfair labor practices, including any acts to encourage or discourage union membership through special conditions of employment or discrimination against union members or non-members in hiring or tenure. Among forbidden practices under this prohibition were discharging or demoting an employee for union membership or activity, refusing to reinstate a laid-off employee because of union activity and refusing to hire qualified applicants because of past union membership.

The law specifically stated that it should not be construed to prohibit provisions in union contracts requiring union membership as a condition of employment in a company. This proviso, in effect, permitted the closed shop and the union shop. (A closed shop agreement is one in which the employer agrees to hire only persons who are already union members before being hired; a union shop agreement is one in which the employer agrees that anyone hired must join the union within a specified period of time -- usually 30 to 60 days.)

Taft-Hartley Act. The major amendments to the Wagner Act were contained in the Taft-Hartley Act, passed by a Republican Congress in 1947 over President Truman's veto. Passage of the bill followed the heaviest wave of major strikes in recent history, some of which had tied up entire industries like steel, coal and automobiles. The strikes reflected labor's desire to "catch up" with the rest of the economy after a long period of wartime wage controls under which unions had complied with a 1941 "no strike" pledge made by labor leaders.

Also in the background of passage of the Taft-Hartley Act was the beginning of the cold war, which helped to create fear of Communists in certain key trade unions, and the fear by many "conservatives" and businessmen of the growing political power of unions.

The Taft-Hartley Act was bitterly opposed by labor. It contained provisions reflecting all the above factors in its immediate background -- public impatience with strikes, the conviction that unions were becoming too powerful, fear of union political power and fear of Communist influence in the union movement.

In brief, the Act permitted 80-day injunctions against strikes imperiling national health or safety; barred certain labor union activities as "unfair labor practices" (jurisdictional strikes, secondary boycotts, featherbedding, certain types of recognition picketing); permitted damage suits against unions by employers and required union officials to file non-Communist affidavits.

The Act also forbade the closed shop and the closed shop hiring hall, a union-run employment service which referred only union members to employers. In addition, Section 14(b) of the Act in effect empowered the states and territories to pass "right to work" laws forbidding employers and unions to sign union shop contracts.

"Right to work" laws or state constitutional amendments forbidding the union shop had been approved in 25 states, including President Johnson's home state of Texas, since 1944. Six of the states subsequently repealed the laws, leaving a total of 19 with laws on their books. The only highly industrialized state to enact such a law, Indiana, repealed it in January 1965. (See chart, p. 819.)

Johnson Administration's Position

The 1960 Democratic party platform said: "We will repeal the authorization for 'right-to-work' laws...and other anti-labor features of the Taft-Hartley Act... This unequivocal pledge for the repeal of the anti-labor and restrictive provisions (of the Taft-Hartley and other laws) will encourage collective bargaining and strengthen and support the free and honest labor movement." However, no legislative proposal to that effect was sent to Congress by the Kennedy-Johnson Administration of 1961-64.

The 1964 Democratic platform contained this section: "The industrial democracy of free, private collective bargaining and the security of American trade unions must be strengthened by repealing Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act."

During the 1964 election campaign, the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education (COPE) endorsed 350 House candidates, of whom 234 were elected. (For list, see 1964 CQ Weekly Report p. 2681.) In the words of a COPE spokesman, "I think it is safe to say that every Congressional candidate we backed was checked out on the matter" of repeal of Section 14(b).

Following the overwhelming Democratic victory in the November 1964 national election, labor leaders made repeal of Section 14(b) their first order of business. This goal was given top priority when the AFL-CIO executive council Nov. 24 adopted its legislative program.

Following a Dec. 17 meeting between President Johnson and a delegation of labor leaders, Presidential Press Secretary George E. Reedy said Mr. Johnson had "made... clear" that he supported the Democratic platform pledge to repeal Section 14(b) and that the President's commitment to the platform had been "implicit in the discussion."

In his Jan. 4, 1965, State of the Union message to Congress, the President said; "...As pledged in our 1960 and 1964 Democratic platforms, I will propose to Congress changes in the Taft-Hartley Act, including Section 14(b). I will do so hoping to reduce conflicts that for several years have divided Americans in various states of our union." (The 1960 Republican platform said "Republican policy firmly supports the right of employers and unions freely to enter into agreements providing for the union shop and other forms of union security" authorized by the Taft-Hartley Act, but did not call for repeal of state laws forbidding the union shop. The 1964 Republican platform did not mention union security or "right to work" laws.)

1965 Background

While committed to working for repeal of Section 14(b) in 1965, President Johnson delayed sending the proposal to Congress. In a Jan. 7 "not for attribution" briefing, an Administration spokesman said the President wished to see such measures as medical insurance for the aged under Social Security, his education program and the Appalachia bill well on their way to passage before Congress tackled the controversial Section 14(b) proposal. In response to this an AFL-CIO spokesman was quoted as saying, "The measures he wants are things we want too, and we are willing to wait."

On May 18, with education and Appalachia bills signed into law and medicare passed by the House, President Johnson sent Congress a special message on labor. Mr. Johnson made several proposals affecting labor, including repeal of Section 14(b). (For text of message, see p. 1412.)

Before Mr. Johnson sent the labor message to Congress, nearly two dozen bills to repeal or amend Section 14(b) had been introduced and were pending in committee. The House bills fell into four groups:

HR 77, introduced by Special Labor Subcommittee Chairman Frank Thompson Jr. (D N.J.), and 11 identical bills would repeal Section 14(b) and a similar provision in the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 (PL 86-257). The bills would also amend the unfair labor practices section of the Taft-Hartley Act to stipulate that state constitutions or laws, as well as federal laws, did not preclude union shop agreements under certain conditions.

HR 1543, introduced by Select Labor Subcommittee Chairman Elmer J. Holland (D Pa.), and three similar bills would simply repeal Section 14(b).

HR 4350, introduced by Robert P. Griffin (Mich.), second-ranking Republican on the Education and Labor Committee, would repeal Section 14(b), but would add provisions to the Taft-Hartley Act making it an unfair labor practice for a union to discriminate on account of race, color or creed where employment was conditioned upon union membership or payment of union dues, or to use money paid by union members as a result of compulsory union membership for political purposes.

HR 967 and HR 1151, introduced respectively by Phillip Burton (D Calif.) and James Roosevelt (D Calif.), would amend Section 14(b) to provide in effect that no state or territorial law should be construed to prohibit union shops in any industry or activity in or affecting interstate commerce.

In the Senate, the only bill affecting Section 14(b) that had been introduced was S 256, sponsored by Senate Labor Subcommittee Chairman Pat McNamara (D Mich.). S 256 was identical to HR 77.

Text of Section 14(b)

Following is the text of the section of the Taft-Hartley Act which authorizes state "right-to-work" laws:

"Nothing in this Act shall be construed as authorizing the execution or application of agreements requiring membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment in any state or territory in which such execution or application is prohibited by state or territorial law."

House

COMMITTEE -- Education and Labor, Special Labor Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- May 24-June 8 on legislation (HR 77 and similar bills) to repeal Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act.

TESTIMONY -- May 24 -- Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz testified in support of repeal. Noting that public debate surrounding repeal had often been "extreme" and "even irrelevant," Wirtz said the real issue was not whether employees had the "right to work" but if a majority had the "right to decide" that all be represented by a union. Repeal of Section 14(b), Wirtz said, "is not -- as some have attempted to suggest -- a proposal to 'make the union shop mandatory'...for the point is that this is a matter which should be left to responsible private decision-making -- to be resolved one way or the other in private collective bargaining." "The central argument is that all who receive the benefits of union representation should contribute to its support, particularly its financial support," Wirtz stressed.

Other points made by Wirtz were that: Section 14(b) was the only provision of the Taft-Hartley Act not applying uniformly to all states; right-to-work laws resulted in "disruptive competition" among states by encouraging businesses to locate where there is less union activity, mainly in the South; the argument that a union shop agreement infringed on an individual's liberty was made "almost entirely -- certainly primarily -- by representatives not of employees but of some employers"; and the only requirement placed on employees who are members of a union shop is that they must pay union dues and initiation fees.

In response to a proposal by Rep. Robert P. Griffin (Mich.), ranking Subcommittee Republican, that repeal should be contingent upon enactment of greater safeguards for affected employees, Wirtz said existing law already "includes broad safeguards against an individual's being required to support a union whose practices conflict with public policy or with his political views or...interests."

May 25 -- AFL-CIO President George Meany endorsed repeal of Section 14(b), urging Congress to "put an end to...fruitless strife over an indefensible cause." Meany said, "Let the labor movement...devote the energies they now waste in sterile combat (over right-to-work laws) to advancement of the greater society we all seek." He said repeal would strengthen unions as well as reduce industry conflicts. As to charges that union shops in Southern states might lead to racial discrimination, Meany said labor opposed job discrimination and would support strengthening of the fair employment practices section of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, rather than support Griffin's proposal to make job discrimination an unfair labor practice under the purview of the National Labor Relations Board.

May 26 -- Sidney Zagri of the Teamsters Union said right-to-work laws had "emasculated" collective bargaining, denied individual rights to workers, and "promoted class warfare (and) low-wage competition for industry" among states. Zagri also warned against introducing "the smokescreen of civil rights" into the right-to-work controversy, saying the civil rights question would only serve "the purposes of confusion and delay," when the fact was that Negroes were more likely to benefit, rather than suffer, from the existence of the union shop.

A.C. Skinner, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union, said that "when not bothered, pressured or influenced, the overwhelming majority of working men and women will join a union voluntarily." He said if right-to-work was a valid concept, then Americans should also be "free to refuse payment of federal taxes and free to disregard scores of other obligations where majority rule prevails on every citizen in our society."

May 27 -- Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, urged "swift action to repeal Section 14(b)" on behalf of himself and other Negro leaders, including the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality. Mitchell said the right-to-work laws "prohibit any kind of union security" and were intended "to suppress and prevent union organization and to bring about the return of the era of the 'open shop'." He said "the forces supporting the right-to-work laws have no interest in the welfare of working men and women," but instead hoped to "systematically lower wages, lengthen hours of work and otherwise prevent decent and wholesome labor conditions for American workers, Negro and white." Mitchell said that Negro workers, like other Americans, "need a strong, vigorous and democratic labor movement."

May 28 -- Joseph Moore, president of the Associated Garment Industries of St. Louis, a group of 56 employers,

Groups that Took Positions on 'Right to Work' Repeal

Following is a list of national organizations which testified during 1965 House and Senate Committee hearings on bills to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act "right to work" provision (Section 14b). Organizations which did not send personal representatives, but merely submitted statements for the record, are indicated by an asterisk (*).

Groups Favoring Repeal of Section 14(b)

AFL-CIO; AFL-CIO Building & Construction Trades Department (); AFL-CIO Industrial Union Department (); Amalgamated Meat Cutters & Butcher Workmen of North America, AFL-CIO (); Americans for Democratic Action (); Central Conference of American Rabbis; Communications Workers of America, AFL-CIO (); Congress of Racial Equality ().

International Assn. of Bridge, Structural & Ornamental Iron Workers, AFL-CIO (); International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL-CIO (); International Brotherhood of Teamsters (Ind.); International Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers (Ind.)

National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People; National Catholic Welfare Conference, Social Action Department; National Council of Churches; National Council of Negro Women (); National Electrical Contractors Assn.; National Farmers Union (); National Federation of Independent Unions (); National Skirt & Sportswear Assn. (); Negro American Labor Council (*).

Retail Clerks International Assn., AFL-CIO (); Southern Christian Leadership Conference (); Textile Workers Union of America, AFL-CIO (); Transport Workers Union of America, AFL-CIO (); United Automobile Workers, AFL-CIO (); United Church of Christ, Council for Christian Social Action (); United Textile Workers, AFL-CIO (*).

Groups Opposing Repeal of Section 14(b)

American Apparel Manufacturers Assn.; American Farm Bureau Federation; American Home Laundry Manufacturers Assn. (); American Hotel & Motel Assn. (); American Institute of Laundering (); American Retail Federation; American Road Builders Assn.; Associated Builders & Contractors (); Associated General Contractors.

Chamber of Commerce of the U.S.; Committee for Economic Development (); Conference of American Small Business Assns. (); Council of State Chambers of Commerce; International Apple Assn. (); Liberty Lobby (); Manufacturing Chemists Assn. (*).

National Apple Institute (); National Assn. of Home Builders (); National Assn. of Manufacturers; National Assn. of Refrigeration Warehouses (); National Assn. of Wholesalers (); National Canners Assn. (); National Council of Farmer Cooperatives (); National Crushed Stone Assn. (); National Electrical Manufacturers Assn. (); National Federation of Independent Business (); National Fibre Can & Tube Assn. (); National Glass Dealers Assn. (); National Independent Meat Packers Assn. (); National Institute of Dry Cleaning (); National Milk Producers Federation (); National Oil Jobbers Council (); National Restaurant Assn. (); National Retail Merchants Assn. (*); National Right to Work Committee; National Small Business Assn.

Printing Industries of America; Produce Packaging Assn. (); Service Tools Institute, et al. (); Southern States Industrial Council (); U.S. Independent Telephone Assn. ().

Special Religious Groups

The following religious movements testified or sent word in favor of special provisions for persons who did not wish to join unions because of personal religious convictions:

Amish; Christian Missionary Alliance; Christadelphians; International Religious Liberty Assn. of Portland, Ore; Mennonite Church; National Assn. of Evangelicals; National Service Board for Religious Objectors; Old German Baptist Brethren; Plymouth Brethren IV (and certain other Plymouth Brethren); Seventh Day Adventists.

supported repeal of right-to-work laws, saying he did not want "any issue excluded by law from collective bargaining. I want every issue on the table, because it is my firm belief that free labor and free management...can resolve all contractual issues."

Rabbi Richard G. Hirsch of the Central Conference of American Rabbis said the real purpose of Section 14(b) was "not to give freedom to the individual workers, but to give license to the employer; not to grant labor rights, but to deprive labor of rights."

Testimony in Opposition to Bill

June 1 -- Repeal of Section 14(b) was opposed by representatives of the National Right to Work Committee. Reed E. Larson, executive vice president, expressed the opinion that compulsory union membership was opposed by "the great majority of the people... Less than one-fifth of the nearly 75 million employed people in this country have chosen to join unions." Larson said, "The question of compulsory unionism is not an issue between big business and the laboring man. It is an issue between the worker and union officials." He added, "Corruption, Communist-domination, and extensive political activities practiced with compulsory dues money by virtually every labor union, should underscore to this Congress the importance of extending, not destroying, protection of workers against compulsory union membership."

M. Clare Miller, representing the Associated General Contractors of America, said repeal of Section 14(b) would "sacrifice the rights of the individual and would acquiesce in the demands of powerful unions." He predicted an outbreak of "widespread strikes and picketing" if Congress repealed the provision of the Taft-Hartley Act.

June 3 -- Howard Jensen, speaking for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said repeal of Section 14(b) "would violate a basic right of every American -- free choice -- and...represent a giant backward step." He said compulsory union membership "undercuts the strength of the membership by eliminating the most effective way of controlling the organization -- the free right to withhold or withdraw support from the organization when it acts against the best interests of, or contrary to, the wishes of the membership." Jensen said it was particularly important that union leaders "truly represent the membership for whom they claim to speak" because they had been "moving farther and farther away from traditional union interests -- wages, hour and working conditions..." He also said "actual experience" had proved that "compulsory unionism is not necessary to insure strong and effective unions."

June 4 -- Kenneth C. Kellar, representing the National Assn. of Manufacturers, opposed HR 77, saying that "compelling a minority group of employees to join a union against their will is not in keeping with the democratic process." He said that when employees were forced to join a union "the entire democratic basis of majority rule evaporates and is supplanted by a doctrine of monopoly rule which has no place in a democratic society." Kellar said, "A good union, competently administered by responsible officials, need fear nothing from voluntary unionism."

Walter L. Randolph, vice president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, opposed repeal of Section 14(b). He said most of the existing state laws prohibiting compulsory unionism had been "the key issue in a state election, or the subject of a referendum," and that it was "inconceivable that the Congress would override the views of the people of the respective states in this respect...." Randolph said it was "bad enough in principle to force a person to join a 'good union'," and asked, "...what shall we say of a law which forces a worker to belong to some of the racket-ridden unions investigated by the McClellan Committee?" Randolph also said the Supreme Court ruled that "compulsory collections of money by a union for political purposes is unlawful," and said "Congress should reject legislation the effect of which would be to promote and encourage that which the Supreme Court has held to be unlawful."

June 8 -- In a statement filed with the Subcommittee, Walter P. Reuther, president of the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Department and of the United Auto Workers union, called for the "immediate and unqualified repeal of Section 14(b)," which he said "constitutes a cynical states' rights surrender of human rights and federal power over national labor relations." Reuther said that since only 19 states had enacted "right-to-work" laws, it was "clear that the firm majority will in the states and among the people of our country rejects Section 14(b)... In a nation and a political system predicated on majority rule, this alone should suffice for Congress to repeal a loophole in federal labor policy originally enacted in a wave of anti-union sentiment." Reuther also said Section 14(b) "does not serve as a protection for the 'principled objector' but only as a haven for the free rider...and is the segregationists' weapon for alienating workers by allegiance and by race."

BILL REPORTED

The Special Labor Subcommittee June 9 approved HR 77 by a 6-3 vote, with Democrats in favor, Republicans opposed. The full Education and Labor Committee June 10 ordered the bill reported on a 21-10 vote which closely followed party lines. The bill was supported by 19 of the 21 Democrats on the Committee and by Republicans William H. Ayres (Ohio) and Ogden R. Reid (N.Y.). It was opposed by the remaining eight Republicans and by two Southern Democrats -- Sam. M. Gibbons (Fla.) and Ralph J. Scott (N.C.), both of whom were from states with right-to-work laws in effect.

The report on HR 77 (H Rept 540) was filed June 22.

In addition to repealing Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act, HR 77 made two related changes in existing law to assure that states were not empowered to enact "right to work" laws. These: (1) amended Section 8(a)(3) of the Taft-Hartley Act to specify that no state law may prohibit union security agreements which are permitted under federal law, and (2) repealed Section 705(b) of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 which applied Section 14(b) guarantees specifically to state laws affecting the construction industry. (The 1959 Act, known as the Landrum-Griffin Act, was co-authored by Committee member Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.).)

Majority Views. The Committee said "Section 14(b) was an explicit departure from the principle specifically recognized in the basic provisions of the National Labor Relations Act that a uniform national labor relations policy is necessary and desirable." It said, "The isolation of union security as a separate and severable issue to be considered wholly apart from all...other matters, is no longer realistic, if indeed it ever was. The fact is that the special treatment given by the statute to this single matter has been the source of continued confusion and uncertainty with respect to a widening span of related matters..." The majority also said that Section 14(b) had been "seized upon by interests which have sought to promote so-called right-to-work laws by representing that they will attract industry to particular states. In these campaigns it is sometimes explicitly stated that right-to-work laws will provide competitive advantages in the form of weak unions with low wages and low labor costs..." The Committee said that "right-to-work contests have...set states against states in this tug and haul to attract or retain industry."

Minority Views. Republican Reps. John M. Ashbrook (Ohio), Dave Martin (Neb.), Glenn Andrews (Ala.) and Edward J. Gurney (Fla.) said they "unequivocally" opposed repeal of Section 14(b). They said, "The abuses which flow from compulsory unionism are felt principally by the individual worker at the local level, and for this reason we feel they create essentially local problems which should be dealt with by the states..." They argued that "individual freedom of choice is the heart of the matter." They also said they saw no reason "why labor unions must rely upon compulsory membership. A great many unions in a great many plants achieve 100-percent membership on a purely voluntary basis. They do this by providing effective service to their members." Finally, they said they disagreed with those members of the Committee who favored repeal of Section 14(b) "provided that certain safeguards are written into the law to protect the rights of individual employees...." (See below.) They said that "these efforts to erect safeguards around compulsory unionism follow the wrong approach. These abuses are made possible by the very existence of compulsory unionism and they cannot be dealt with by patchwork corrections."

Separate Minority Views. Republican Reps. Robert P. Griffin (Mich.), Albert H. Quie (Minn.), Charles E. Goodell (N.Y.) and Alphonzo Bell (Calif.) said they opposed HR 77 as reported "because it wholly fails to provide adequate safeguards for union members in the exercise of their basic rights." They said proponents of HR 77 had advanced "substantial considerations...in favor of a uniform national policy permitting a limited type of compulsory union membership... However, it cannot be denied that union shop agreements do impose restrictions of the freedom of choice of individual employees..." The four said they had proposed a number of amendments for "necessary additional safeguards which are presently either wholly nonexistent or entirely inadequate," but that the amendments had been rejected by the Committee majority. They said the amendments, among other things, would have prohibited discrimination by unions on account of race, color, religion or national origin; prevented unions requiring membership or the payment of dues as a condition of employment to use any dues funds "for political purposes or for any other purpose not directly related to the statutory function of the union..."; and made it unlawful for such a union to "fine, suspend, expel or otherwise penalize or threaten any member for exercising or attempting to exercise, any legal or civil right guaranteed to any person under the Constitution or any federal law."

Additional Views. Ashbrook said he subscribed "to the minority vews in general" but added, "The Meanys and Reuthers extol the virtues of trade unionism -- and we all agree that there are many -- but the thought that all workers have a moral, proper choice makes them shudder down to their bootstraps so they...must build a wall and force everyone to enjoy these benefits they bestow."

ANTI-DISCRIMINATION TIE-IN

Following approval of HR 77 by the Education and Labor Committee, Chairman Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.) June 10 announced that he would not ask the House Rules Committee to grant a rule for floor consideration of the bill until the House had passed legislation -- not introduced at the time -- strengthening federal curbs on racial discrimination by unions. Powell on several previous occasions had been critical of alleged discrimination by labor unions and had said he had "misgivings" about repealing Section 14(b) unless union apprenticeship programs were conducted "fairly."

Reps. James Roosevelt (D Calif.) and Ogden R. Reid (R N.Y.) June 14 introduced identical bills (HR 8998, HR 8999) to amend the Civil Rights Act of 1964 so as to strengthen the powers of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to deal with discrimination by labor or management. The General Labor Subcommittee, of which Roosevelt was chairman, June 15 heard testimony on the bills by Clarence Mitchell, representing the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, and Andrew Biemiller of the AFL-CIO. Both Mitchell and Biemiller opposed Powell's position. Mitchell said he believed that bills to repeal Section 14(b) and to strengthen enforcement powers against discrimination by unions or management "should be considered by Congress on (their) own merits, and the passage of one should not be contingent on the passage of the other." In tying the two together, Mitchell said, Powell was "playing right into the hands of those who would like to leave both these bills in the limbo."

Powell June 17 backed away from his position and announced that he would drop his effort to tie action on HR 77 to an anti-discrimination measure.

The Education and Labor Committee Aug. 3 reported a clean bill (HR 10065 -- H Rept 718) to strengthen the fair employment provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. Among other things, the bill would have applied to unions with as few as eight members. The House later approved a rule for debate on the bill but it was not brought up for consideration. (See story p. 572).

RULES COMMITTEE BYPASSED

One day after HR 77 was reported, Chairman Powell June 23 filed a resolution to bring the bill to the House floor for debate in the event the Rules Committee failed to grant it a rule. Under the new 21-day rule approved by the House Jan. 4, the chairman of a committee which reported a bill could bring it directly to the floor (with the Speaker's approval) if the Rules Committee had not approved a regular rule for debate within 21 days. (See story p. 585.)

The Rules Committee was divided 6-9 against HR 77, with generally pro-Administration Democrats James W. Trimble (Ark.) and John Young (Texas), from "right to work" states, opposed to the bill. (However, they voted to adopt the 21-day rule on the bill July 26.)

House Approves Repeal of 'Right to Work' Section

The House July 28 passed HR 77 by a 221-203 roll-call vote and sent it to the Senate. Prior to passage a motion by Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.) to recommit (kill) the bill was defeated by a 200-223 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 982.)

Votes for passage were supplied by 21 Republicans, largely from the industrial Northeast and Midwest, and by 18 Democrats from states with "right-to- work" laws; 15 of these 18 votes came from Members representing Midwestern and Southern states. All six Democrats from Iowa, one of the 19 "right-to-work" states, voted in favor of repeal. The breakdown on the vote for final passage was R 21-117; D 200-86 (ND 182-8; SD 18-78). (For state-by-state voting, see chart in next column; for tie-in between voting on HR 77 and the omnibus farm bill (HR 9811), see the page that follows.)

The rule for debate on HR 77 under the 21-day rule, the first use made in 1965 of the new procedure (see preceding page), provided an early test for support of repeal of Section 14(b). The test vote came on a procedural motion by Powell to move the previous question, thereby ending debate and bringing the rule to a vote. The motion was adopted by a 248-171 roll-call vote July 26. The rule then was adopted by voice vote.

The rule allowed five hours of debate, and was so worded that the only amendments that could be offered were those which the presiding officer held to be germane to the bill. As a result, all amendments except one narrow proposal on the effective date were ruled out of order. Numerous Members attempted to propose changes in the Taft-Hartley Act which were unrelated to "right to work", but all of these were ruled non-germane.

The one amendment which was considered was offered by William H. Ayres (R Ohio), and would have set the effective date of HR 77 as Dec. 31, 1965, rather than the date of enactment. It was defeated on a 74-126 standing vote.

Debate. In debate Powell, who managed the bill on the floor, said some interests "have sought to promote so-called right-to-work laws by representations that they will attract industry... In these campaigns, some literature explicitly stated that right-to-work laws will provide competitive advantages in the form of weak unions and low wages and low labor costs. These right-to-work contests...have set states against states in this struggle to attract or retain industry." He said this was "contrary to the basic principle established in 1789 that this country must constitute an economic entity."

Other supporters of repeal of Section 14(b) contended that "right to work" laws enabled non-union members to be "free riders" who received the benefits of union representation without helping to pay the cost. They also said that 14(b) made the wage scale in states with "right-to-work" laws lower than in other states.

Supporters also argued that repeal of 14(b) would not result in compulsory participation in union activities because various court rulings had held that although workers in a union shop must pay union dues, they need not participate in union activities. They also said that union shops would not automatically follow the repeal of 14(b) because management must agree to their establishment. They further argued that labor policy should be national in scope and not left up to the individual states.

Opponents of HR 77 said effective unions should not need the union shop to obtain 100-percent membership. They contended that employees compelled to join a union

State-by-State Vote on 14(b)

This table shows how each state's delegation voted on passage of HR 77.

States with "right-to-work" laws are underlined in the table; Southern states are marked with an asterisk.

	REPUBLICANS	DEMOCRATS
*Alabama	0 -5	0 -3
Alaska	---	1 -0
Arizona	0 - 1	1 - 1
*Arkansas	---	0 - 4
California	0 - 15	23 - 0
Colorado	---	2 - 1
Connecticut	---	6 - 0
Delaware	---	1 - 0
*Florida	0 - 2	1 - 9
*Georgia	0 - 1	0 - 9
Hawaii	---	2 - 0
Idaho	0 - 1	1 - 0
Illinois	0 - 11	13 - 0
Indiana	0 - 5	6 - 0
Iowa	0 - 1	6 - 0
Kansas	0 - 5	---
*Kentucky	0 - 1	4 - 2
*Louisiana	---	2 - 5
Maine	1 - 0	1 - 0
Maryland	0 - 2	6 - 0
Massachusetts	2 - 3	6 - 0
Michigan	0 - 7	12 - 0
Minnesota	0 - 4	4 - 0
*Mississippi	0 - 1	0 - 3
Missouri	0 - 2	6 - 2
Montana	0 - 1	1 - 0
Nebraska	0 - 2	0 - 1
Nevada	---	0 - 1
New Hampshire	0 - 1	1 - 0
New Jersey	1 - 1	11 - 0
New Mexico	---	2 - 0
New York	6 - 8	26 - 0
*North Carolina	0 - 2	0 - 8
North Dakota	0 - 1	1 - 0
Ohio	3 -10	10 - 0
*Oklahoma	0 - 1	4 - 1
Oregon	0 - 1	2 - 1
Pennsylvania	6 - 6	14 - 0
Rhode Island	---	2 - 0
*South Carolina	0 - 1	0 - 5
South Dakota	0 - 2	---
*Tennessee	0 - 3	3 - 3
*Texas	---	4 - 18
Utah	0 - 1	1 - 0
Vermont	0 - 1	---
*Virginia	0 - 2	0 - 8
Washington	1 - 1	5 - 0
West Virginia	0 - 1	3 - 1
Wisconsin	1 - 4	5 - 0
Wyoming	---	1 - 0

become "captive passengers" because the union can use their dues to support political and social causes the members may oppose. They said that invalidating state laws and state constitutional provisions was a bad practice for the Federal Government to follow.

The opponents also argued that if the Taft-Hartley Act was to be amended, other changes must accompany the repeal of 14(b). The other changes they said would be necessary included a provision limiting the use of a union member's dues to collective bargaining, a provision stating that a union member could not be punished by fine or otherwise by the union for "exercising his rights as a citizen"; a ban on discrimination by a union on the basis of race, religion or color; an exemption from union membership for individuals whose religious convictions prevent their joining an organization; and provisions for secret ballots during union representation elections.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 77:

Amended Section 8(a) (3) of the Taft-Hartley National Labor Relations Act of 1947 to declare that no state could prohibit union security arrangements permitted under federal law.

Repealed Section 14(b) of the Taft Hartley Act which permitted states to enact laws outlawing union shop contracts.

Repealed Section 705(b) of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 which permitted states to outlaw union shop contracts in the building and construction industry.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

July 28 -- William H. Ayres (R Ohio) -- Set Dec. 31, 1965, as the effective date of HR 77. Standing vote, 74-126.

Farm-Labor Coalition on 14(b)

From the time President Johnson publicly committed himself to repeal of Section 14(b), Administration spokesmen openly acknowledged that there was some question about whether the bill could pass the House. Not only was 14(b) repeal strongly opposed by Republicans and Southern Democrats, but many Midwestern Democrats who were carried into office with President Johnson in 1964 were concerned about voting for repeal because of deep-seated opposition in their largely conservative districts.

To ensure House passage of HR 77, members of the Johnson Administration sought to form a farm-labor coalition in which Northern Democrats from industrial areas would vote in favor of the 1965 omnibus farm bill (HR 9811) in return for support of Section 14(b) repeal from farm state Democrats. Although many farm state constituents opposed repeal of Section 14(b) and Northern Democratic constituents opposed the farm bill because wheat provisions would cause a rise in the price of bread to the consumer, Administration spokesmen argued that each group could justify taking an unpopular position on one of the measures by pointing out that this stand secured passage of the other.

Several pressure groups, including the National Farmers Union and the AFL-CIO, worked hard to cement the coalition. Reportedly, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey played a major role in promoting cooperation on the two bills. The Washington Post reported that he told House Members from city districts: "Your labor bill is in trouble unless you come through for the farm bill. If you do, I'll see that the farm boys come through for you on 14(b)."

Because the Administration was less sure of passage of HR 77 than of the farm bill, HR 77 was scheduled to come up first for floor action. This put the pressure squarely on the Midwestern Democrats: had HR 77 been defeated because they failed to support it, passage of the farm bill would have been threatened because the Northern industrial bloc would have opposed it.

An analysis of House voting on passage of the two bills shows that the coalition technique was extremely effective. In the voting on HR 77 only three Midwestern and four Western Democrats opposed the bill, whereas only four Midwestern and one Western GOP Members voted for it. The farm bill (which passed 221-145) got 51 votes from Eastern Democrats and only two votes from Republican Easterners. Following is a breakdown of the voting on the two bills:

		East	South	Midwest	West
Democrats:	14(b)	77-1	18-78	63-3	42-4
	Farm	51-23	63-28	55-9	33-8
GOP	14(b)	16-23	0-19	4-54	1-21
	Farm	2-33	4-13	12-41	1-17

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Labor and Public Welfare, Labor Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- June 22-25 on HR 77, to repeal Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act. The Subcommittee heard substantially the same major witnesses as had testified in earlier House Education and Labor Special Labor Subcommittee hearings on HR 77.

ACTION -- The Labor Subcommittee Aug. 12 approved HR 77 with one amendment. Offered by Wayne Morse (D Ore.) and adopted unanimously, the amendment permitted any person who opposed union membership on religious grounds to be exempted from it if he agreed to pay a sum equivalent to union dues into a charitable fund. The Subcommittee approved the bill on a 7-1 (D 6-0, R 1-1) vote. Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) voted with the six Subcommittee Democrats in favor of the measure, Paul J. Fannin (R Ariz.) voted against it and Winston L. Prouty (R Vt.) voted "present".

BILL REPORTED

The full Labor and Public Welfare Committee Sept. 9 reported HR 77 (S Rept 697) as approved by the Labor Subcommittee. The Committee had voted to approve the bill Sept. 1 by a 12-3 margin. The negative votes were cast by Committee Chairman Lister Hill (D Ala.), Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) and Fannin. Republican Sens. Javits and George Murphy (Calif.) joined the Committee's other 10 Democrats in supporting HR 77 and Prouty again voted "present".

Majority Views. The Committee majority said the so-called "right-to-work" laws "create no right to work, but do prohibit labor-management agreements" that require employees to become union members. The majority said, "This issue is one which the employer must agree to in the labor-management agreement just like any other lawful bargaining issue... The employer is under no compulsion to agree to...the union shop agreement."

(Continued on next page)

Individual Views. Separate views were filed by all five Republican members of the Committee.

Paul J. Fannin (Ariz.) said, "This bill should be defeated because it is wrong in principle and cannot be justified by the facts... Even the proponents of this bill concede it would give virtual monopolistic power to unions." Fannin said the bill would, among other things, "lessen the initiative of union leaders to work for the benefit of employees in the 19 states having right-to-work laws"; "provide organized labor with the additional economic and political power to secure its real objective -- abolition of the ban on the 'closed shop' "; and "adversely affect the interests of small business."

Jacob K. Javits (N.Y.) said, "I voted for this bill... because I believe that Section 14(b) is inconsistent with our national labor policy and is an unwarranted restriction on the freedom of labor and management to bargain collectively. But I view 14(b) as only part of a much larger problem -- the need for a general review and revision of the Labor-Management Relations (Taft-Hartley) Act in a number of important respects." Javits said the Committee majority had reported the bill "with blinders on, pretending that they are unaware of the many other needed revisions of the Act and focusing only on a single subsection. I would hope that, when this bill is considered by the Senate as a whole, my colleagues on both sides of the aisle will take a broader perspective."

Winston L. Prouty (Vt.) said, "I am not certain that repeal of Section 14(b)...is in the national interest, unless such repeal is accompanied by other substantial changes in our labor law designed to give maximum protection to the rights of the working men and women of this nation." Prouty said the Committee majority had used "a 'machine-gun' approach" to defeat nearly all amendments offered to the bill. He proposed a national referendum "on the 14(b) question" if Congress passed a bill repealing the section.

Peter H. Dominick (Colo.) said, "...Each state differs in its philosophy, its working conditions and its labor climate, and to repeal the right of the citizens of those states to determine this issue for themselves is a preemption of power by the Federal Government so massive in nature that I cannot support it." Dominick said the amendments proposed by Republican Committee members but rejected by the Committee were intended to deal with inadequacies of the Taft-Hartley Act of 1947 and the Landrum-Griffin Act of 1959. "They are merely intended to correct the abuses foisted on the American labor movement by the actions of a small minority of irresponsible labor leaders."

George Murphy (Calif.) said, "Many amendments were offered in committee which, in my opinion, would have helped the bill immeasurably by protecting the rights of the rank-and-file members of unions as opposed to giving complete control of the voting franchise of these same members to a few union bosses... Although I voted to report this measure to the full Senate, I did so in the sincere hope that full discussion and debate on this important subject would follow. In so doing, I reserved my right both to support further amendments and to oppose the final passage of the legislation."

FILIBUSTER THREATENED

While HR 77 was still before the Labor and Public Welfare Committee, statements by several Senators raised the possibility of a filibuster. Senate Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) Aug. 24 told reporters that when the bill reached the Senate floor there would be "uninhibited discussion" which was "likely to be extended." In response to Dirksen's statement, President Johnson Aug. 25 reiterated support for HR 77 and told reporters he "certainly" considered its passage a major goal in the 1965 Congressional session.

Filibuster Planning. According to reports from several different sources, Sen. Dirksen as of the middle of August was undecided on how best to oppose HR 77 in the Senate. But Sens. Carl T. Curtis (R Neb.) and Paul J. Fannin (R Ariz.) in the latter part of August presented Dirksen with a list of 18 Senators who reportedly were willing to participate in a filibuster "team" to block Senate action. Although Dirksen remained undecided on a course of action for a few weeks more, strong representations from Sens. Strom Thurmond (R S.C.) and John G. Tower (R Texas) reportedly helped win more Senators to the filibuster list. After meetings of both Democratic and Republican Senators early in September in Dirksen's office, Dirksen Sept. 9 formally announced that he would help organize "extended debate" to block HR 77 from coming to a vote. By then, according to CQ's sources, Dirksen had in his possession a list of 26 Senators who agreed to undertake speaking assignments in a filibuster against HR 77.

The 26 were: Dirksen (R Ill.), Bennett (R Utah), Byrd (D Va.), Curtis (R Neb.), Eastland (D Miss.), Ellender (D La.), Ervin (D N.C.), Fannin (R Ariz.), Fulbright (D Ark.), Hickenlooper (R Iowa), Hill (D Ala.), Holland (D Fla.), Hruska (R Neb.), Jordan (R Idaho), McClellan (D Ark.), Morton (R Ky.), Mundt (R S.D.), Robertson (D Va.), Russell (D S.C.), Simpson (R Wyo.), Smathers (D Fla.), Sparkman (D Ala.), Stennis (D Miss.), Talmadge (D Ga.), Thurmond (R S.C.), and Tower (R Texas). Lausche (D Ohio) joined the list later.

FILIBUSTER BEGINS

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D Mont.) Oct. 1 moved to make HR 77 the pending business of the Senate. On Oct. 4, debate began on the Mansfield motion, and a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats began a filibuster against the motion which was essentially a filibuster against the bill.

Mansfield Oct. 5 said he would not hold the Senate in around-the-clock session in order to reach a vote based on "physical endurance." He promised "there will be no pajama sessions of the Senate." (The last around-the-clock sessions were held by then Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson on the 1960 civil rights bill. (1960 Almanac p. 195)

Debate. Dirksen Oct. 4 said he had more than 3,000 newspaper editorials supporting his position and that "If the Lord is willing, if my energy remains intact...I may be compelled to read all 3,000 and more of these editorials into the Record." In defense of his filibuster against the motion to debate HR 77, Dirksen said, "If this body repeals section 14(b) we shall never retrieve it." He added, "In my book probably the most basic case that could be made is the fact that it (repeal) would be a rupturing of the federal-state fabric which accounts for the greatness of this country."

Dirksen said repeal would injure small companies "which do not have a group of high-powered legal counselors sitting at their elbows" who can advise them on dealing with labor.

Ross Bass (D Tenn.) Oct. 4 said he disagreed with Dirksen's assertion that the change would be harmful to business and beneficial to labor. "In my opinion, it is going to be harder to organize an unorganized plant, particularly a small factory, with the repeal of 14(b), than it would be with this provision on the statute books." He said employees will not be so anxious to vote in favor of establishment of a union after repeal because they "are now going to know that if they vote for it, they will have to pay the dues, and they will think a couple of times."

J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) Oct. 5 said, "I have never thought 'uniformity,' as a doctrine or principle, a desirable goal of a society striving for greatness...Uniformity is more characteristic of totalitarian societies." Fulbright added that "to make membership in a union compulsory would, it seems to me, remove one of the principal incentives to have a well-operated union." He said other federal policies such as administration of farm programs were "not uniform in their effects upon the several states." He said "to argue for repeal of Section 14(b)...on grounds of the necessity for uniformity is to argue for the obliteration of state boundary lines."

George A. Smathers (D Fla.) Oct. 5 criticized the argument that union shops should be permitted in all states because non-union members are "free-riders." He said, "Officials of these organizations have steadfastly resisted any changes in the law which would free them of the obligation to negotiate for non-unionists in open shops. Clearly if the so-called free rider is a burden on organized labor, he is one that was shouldered willingly." Smathers said he was "convinced that the existence of a few so-called free riders is a positive incentive toward better, more effective unionism."

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) Oct. 6, in arguing for repeal, said that "an agreement for the union shop is not perpetual; it can be revoked at any time if a majority of the workers become dissatisfied with it." He said 14(b) gave states "a hunting license to prohibit employers and employees from coming to a voluntary agreement to establish the union shop under free collective bargaining." He added that under 14(b) states were "given a hunting license to weaken or break the unions." He added, "The repeal of 14(b) would not require the establishment of compulsory unionism or a union shop by law." He said state right-to-work laws have been "an important factor in preventing unions from gaining a strong foothold in the textile, furniture, lumbering, and chemical industries of the South." Douglas said, "It should be noted that many of the so-called right-to-work acts... were basically passed because of malapportioned state legislatures."

Philip A. Hart (D Mich.) Oct. 6 said union members are not compelled to contribute money for political purposes. "If a union member does not want to give for such causes, all he needs to do is refrain."

Tabling Motion Rejected. To test the sentiment of the Senate, Majority Leader Mansfield Oct. 5 announced that he would make a motion Oct.8 to table (kill) his own motion to take up the bill. He said he would vote against the tabling motion but that Senators who did not want to consider HR 77 should vote for the tabling motion. He said there were "various currents" in the Senate, apart from the issue of Section 14(b), among them the question of whether there was a "more appropriate time" for considering HR 77, the question "of the relative weight to be given this issue...among many issues" of importance, and the desire of some Senators for the 1965 session to adjourn.

Mansfield's hope for a real test of Senators' positions on HR 77, however, was nullified when Dirksen told his followers to vote against the tabling motion, along with Senators supporting the bill. As a result, the motion was defeated on a 0-94 roll call Oct. 8, giving no indication of how many Senators would vote for or against repeal of 14(b).

Mansfield then filed a petition to call up for a vote a motion to invoke cloture (shut off debate) on his motion to make HR 77 the Senate's pending business. Twenty-one Senators -- five more than the required 16 -- signed the petition.

SENATE REJECTS CLOTURE

The Senate Oct. 11, by a 45-47 roll-call vote, rejected the cloture motion by Mansfield to close off debate on the seven-day filibuster against his motion to consider HR 77. A two-thirds majority is necessary to invoke cloture. (For voting, see chart p. 1078.)

The party breakdown on the cloture vote was R 5-26; D 40-21 (ND 36-5; SD 4-16). Although the motion did not receive support from a majority of the Senate, there was wide agreement that the vote did not represent the views of all Senators on the issue of repeal. Five absentees were paired in favor of cloture and representatives of both sides agreed privately that several Senators who followed their traditional practice of opposing cloture would have voted to repeal 14(b) if a simple vote on passage of the bill had been taken. The consensus was that at least 52 Senators favored repeal.

On the cloture vote, five Senators from states with right-to-work laws voted in favor. They were Democrats Ross Bass (Tenn.), Quentin M. Burdick (N.D.), Gale W. McGee (Wyo.), Frank E. Moss (Utah) and Ralph Yarborough (Texas). Thirty Senators from the 19 right-to-work states voted against cloture while the others from these states were paired or announced against cloture.

The cloture motion was the 32nd such motion to be voted upon by the Senate. Earlier in the year, cloture was invoked on the voting rights bill, 70-30. (See table of cloture votes, p. 590.)

Final Action. On Oct. 12, Mansfield announced that the leadership was abandoning its effort to pass HR 77. As a result of the cloture vote, Mansfield said, "I no longer find myself looking through a glass darkly. The image is clear, the Senate does not wish the Majority Leader to press the attempt to take up 14(b) at this time."

Dirksen asked Mansfield to assure him that no effort would be made during the remainder of the session to attach HR 77 to another bill as a rider. Mansfield replied that as far as he was concerned, "no such attempt will be made to attach the provisions of HR 77 to the sugar bill or any other bill..." There had been reports that supporters of HR 77 might retaliate against Southerners and Republicans favoring a sugar bill by blocking action on that legislation.

Mansfield later Oct. 12 moved that the Senate adjourn until Oct. 13. This move -- adjourning instead of recessing as was the usual procedure when a bill was under consideration -- had the effect of killing Mansfield's pending motion to take up HR 77. The motion was adopted by voice vote.

COMMON-SITE PICKETING

HR 10027 -- Reported (H Rept 1041) by the House Education and Labor Committee Sept. 21, 1965.

Reported late in the session, the bill (HR 10027) to permit "common-site" picketing by unions employed on construction jobs failed to reach the floor of the House. At adjournment HR 10027, which had Administration approval, was before the House Rules Committee awaiting clearance for floor consideration. A similar bill was blocked by the Rules Committee in 1960. (1960 Almanac p. 320)

As reported, HR 10027 was a revised version of a bill (HR 6411) introduced March 17 by Rep. Carlton R. Sickles (D Md.). An identical bill (S 1655) was introduced in the Senate by Pat McNamara (D Mich.), but there was no action of any type.

HR 10027 was supported by the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department, which on May 3, 1965, issued a legislative conference report calling common-site picketing legislation its top goal of the 89th Congress. The measure also received important support from the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Department as a result of an agreement between the two AFL-CIO departments clearing up long-standing conflicts over the measure.

The bill was opposed by the Associated General Contractors of America (the employer group that would be most directly affected by its passage); the National Assn. of Manufacturers (which, in the June 14 "NAM Reports" said rejection of the measure was one of the "major legislative issues of interest to industry"); the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; the United Mine Workers of America District 50, which feared it would help AFL-CIO building unions to block attempts by District 50 to represent construction workers; and several other groups. (See hearings, below)

Congress' failure to enact the common-site picketing bill in 1965 was due in part to the opposition of the groups mentioned above, in part to the fact that the AFL-CIO unions did not make an all-out drive for the measure because they had agreed that another bill -- repealing the "right to work" provision of the Taft-Hartley Act -- was to have higher legislative priority. (For action on "right to work" repeal bill, see story p. 818.)

The key issue in consideration of HR 10027 was whether construction unions should be able to shut down an entire construction job, on which a number of different firms were working together and were joined by contractual and subcontractual relationships, because of a dispute with one of the contractors on the job.

The unions argued that where a number of employers were working together on a single construction job, and were linked together by contractual or similar arrangements, the firms were actually helping one another and should be considered as a single employer for the purposes of the secondary boycott prohibitions of the Taft-Hartley Act of 1947. It should therefore not be illegal, they argued, for a union to picket one subcontractor at the job site even if the objective and the effect of the picketing were to shut down the whole job by inducing employees of other construction firms to refuse to enter the site for work. A 1951 Supreme Court ruling had held such picketing to be an illegal secondary boycott under the 1947 Taft-Hartley Act provisions. HR 10027 made such picketing legal.

Building industry spokesmen countered that the bill would permit the smallest, most irresponsible union to shut down a whole construction job. They said that despite the link of subcontractual relationships, one subcontractor on a job often had little influence over the labor policies of the others, and should not be made to suffer for the others' sins. The Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. and others also said the bill would make construction stoppages at military and missile bases easier and thus could endanger the national security.

Background

The common-site, or "situs," picketing issue arises from the unique character of the building and construction industry in the United States. Ordinarily, the owner of a single project (for example, a large office building) contracts with a general contractor to build the project. However, the general contractor does not do all of the work himself. He subcontracts various parts of it to specialty firms, such as electrical, painting and plumbing contractors. Thus, there often are as many as a dozen or more firms, each performing a different specialty, working on a jobsite under subcontract from the general contractor. Each of these separate crafts may be organized by a different one of the craft unions belonging to the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department.

In passing the Taft-Hartley Act in 1947, Congress inserted a provision outlawing secondary boycotts by unions. The provision made it an unfair labor practice for a union to get workers to strike or stop working if the object was to pressure another employer, not directly involved in the primary dispute, to stop doing business with the firm engaged in the primary dispute with the union.

Denver Ruling. In its 1951 ruling in the case of NLRB v. Denver Building and Construction Trades Council, the Supreme Court interpreted a case in which all of the unions at a construction site stayed off the job in protest against a single subcontractor as a secondary boycott under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Under the Denver ruling, a union could not throw a picket-line around a construction site in a strike against one employer working on the job if the intent and effect were to keep out workers employed at the site by other subcontractors or contractors on the job. The Denver ruling held that such a shut-down would constitute an illegal secondary boycott.

Legislative Actions. The building and construction unions made numerous efforts to overturn the Denver ruling through legislation. The Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson Administrations all endorsed reversal of the Denver ruling. In 1954, the Senate recommitted an omnibus labor bill that contained language reversing the ruling; in 1959, a provision overturning the ruling was dropped from the conference report on a labor reform bill; and in 1960, similar bills were approved by House and Senate committees but failed to reach the floor. (1960 Almanac p. 320)

In 1961, the House Committee held hearings on a measure, backed by the Kennedy Administration, which was never reported to the floor. (1961 Weekly Report p. 433)

Inter-Union Dispute. A major impediment to the efforts of the building and construction unions to legalize common-site picketing was a dispute with the industrial unions of the AFL-CIO over picketing and work jurisdiction at industrial sites where construction or building maintenance and repair work was being carried on by building contractors. The dispute involved the question of whether industrial unions or building unions should represent workers performing building maintenance, repair and construction work at these sites.

In some cases, industrial union spokesmen said, building trades unions had attempted to "take over" for their own members certain maintenance, repair and construction jobs performed by members of industrial unions at industrial plants. The industrial unions feared that common-site legislation would make it easy for the building trades unions to require the hiring of their own members for all disputed maintenance, repair and construction work at industrial plants, even work previously handled by members of industrial unions. The issue came up several times when major construction alterations were being performed at large industrial plants.

In 1961, AFL-CIO Industrial Union Department President Walter P. Reuther indicated that the IUD would not support the bill unless it received assurances that the legislation would not be used to further the position of the building unions in disputes over maintenance, repair and construction jobs at industrial sites.

Union Agreement. However, on Feb. 26, 1965, the Industrial Union Department and the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO reached an agreement under which (1) both groups agreed, in effect, to refer disputes over which unions should perform certain types of maintenance, repair and construction work at industrial plants to a committee composed of the presidents of the AFL-CIO, the Industrial Union Department and Building and Construction Trades Department; and (2) both groups agreed to observe certain rules about undercutting the other's position with regard to such work, and in particular, to refrain from offering to perform struck work previously handled by members of the other group.

The agreement stated in part:

"When any affiliate of (either department), or a local or other subordinate body thereof, is engaged in an authorized strike including picketing, it shall be the duty of all other affiliates to render such support as is legally permissible and practically feasible, and to refrain from any action which would adversely affect the position of the organization so engaged. No affiliate...will authorize its members under any circumstances to perform struck work. Each affiliate will, to the extent legally permissible, cooperate in persuading its members not to cross a picket line established in support of such a strike. However, no organization shall be required by this agreement to give support to a strike where the strike arises from a dispute over work assignments as between AFL-CIO affiliated organizations."

This agreement followed an earlier agreement, signed in the White House Feb. 2, among the building trades unions, the Associated General Contractors of America, and several specialty contractors' groups, to limit NLRB activity in jurisdictional disputes in favor of the National Joint Board for Settlement of Jurisdictional Disputes set up by the unions and builders in 1948.

With the conclusion of the Feb. 26 agreement, the Industrial Union Department gave full support to the common-site picketing bill. According to a union spokesman, additional guarantees that the bill would not be used to undermine the position of industrial unions in jurisdictional disputes were provided by the fact that the bill contained a provision limiting its application to employers working primarily in the construction industry.

House

COMMITTEE -- House Education and Labor, Special Labor Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- June 21-30 on HR 6411 and identical bills, including HR 6363, introduced by Subcommittee Chairman Frank Thompson Jr. (D N.J.).

TESTIMONY -- June 21 -- Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz said he supported "the central propositions" in the bills "to remove the present prohibition on 'common situs picketing' in connection with a lawful labor dispute." He said his testimony was a recommendation "that there be corrected now, without delay, what has long been recognized -- by a sizable majority of the representatives of diverse political and economic groups -- as an inequitable restriction on the right to strike and picket peaceably." Wirtz said that during debate over the Taft-Hartley Act in 1947, "almost every reference to boycotts involved plant and retail situations, one employer handling the products of another." He said the apparent lack of concern with "the construction industry or common situs picketing on construction jobs (reflected) the general lack of full understanding of the unique characteristics of the construction industry." Wirtz also said it was "widely accepted" that a common situs picketing bill would have been passed "much earlier if there had not been some differences as to the form" of the legislation. He said, "These differences have now been resolved."

June 22 -- C. J. Haggerty, president of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department, said the "difficulties caused by (the Denver) decision have been the subject of much public discussion in and out of Congress for a period of more than 16 years." He said he "should like to make it clear that the situs picketing issue does not involve the repeal of explicit language restricting such picketing. The restriction of so-called situs picketing in the building and construction industry arises out of an interpretation of broad statutory language by an administrative agency which became the subject of conflicting opinions by judicial authorities." Haggerty said: "We think the issues in the situs picketing bill have been debated fully and that there has been a satisfaction of the requirements for deliberate legislative action. The time has come, in our judgment, when the petition of the Building and Construction Trades workers to redress their grievances with regard to the Denver Building Trades rule should be answered by the Congress."

Thomas E. Shroyer of the American Retail Federation opposed HR 6411, saying it "would legalize secondary boycotts at construction sites." Shroyer said that most decisions by the National Labor Relations Board "on secondary boycott cases involve common situs situations," and that the bill "would legalize most of what the Board and the courts have found to be illegal in common situs cases." He said, "Instead of weakening the ban on secondary boycotts, we believe the Congress should be considering legislation which would strengthen the prohibitions of the law."

(Continued on next page)

June 23 -- W. Calvert Brand of the National Lumber and Building Materials Dealers Assn. said HR 6411 "would sacrifice neutral employers (employers not party to a labor dispute) to promote and ease the path for union organization, control and monopoly in the construction industry." He said that "product boycotts, now unlawful, could be instituted by building trades unions to block the use of non-union lumber on construction projects, or new wood products designed to reduce on-site labor costs." He also said that building materials "could be prevented from installation, or even from being delivered to the job site, unless the 'right' union approved them."

June 25 -- William E. Naumann of the Associated General Contractors said that if HR 6411 were passed, "any one of a dozen unions could shut down projects from the smallest house-building job to the entire construction complex at Cape Kennedy." He said this could be the result of a dispute "over a minor grievance such as a coffee break or it could be of a more serious nature. It could be a jurisdictional dispute over which of two unions would do a certain task." Naumann said the bill would discriminate "against the construction industry by class legislation."

June 28 -- S. James Campbell, representing the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said HR 6411 was "special interest legislation" which was "unfair to employers, employees, unions and the interests of the general public." He said the bill would permit a union to bring "secondary boycott pressure against an employer because his employees do not belong to a union, or because they do not belong to the 'right' union.... The result is that the union imposes closed-shop conditions at the project, a practice which Section 7 (of the Taft-Hartley Act) was intended to prevent."

June 29 -- James S. Long of the Associated Builders and Contractors said the bill would grant the building trades union "complete freedom to use the secondary boycott and thus control the construction industry by coercion." He said: "The building trades unions use the fallacious argument when they do common situs picketing that they are not really engaging in a secondary boycott (because) there is just one employer at a construction site -- the general contractor. This contention is completely out of line with the facts because in a business way, the general contractor and the subcontractors operate separately as entities, each with its own finances, employees and work to be done."

June 30 -- Elwood Moffett, president of the International Union of District 50, United Mine Workers of America (which organizes construction workers on an industrial basis), opposed HR 6411, saying it was "not limited in its purpose to overruling the decision in the (Denver) case." He said the bill "would allow the building trades to picket (a) project to force the general contractor to terminate his agreement with the subcontractor or it would require the employees of the subcontractor to change their union membership to stay on the job." This, he said, "would only encourage a greater number of so-called 'jurisdictional' strikes and picketing...." He said the bill should be "clarified and perfected so as to make it definite that picketing and striking with the object of reassignment of work to contractors having agreements with building trades unions, rather than to contractors having agreements with other labor organizations, is activity not within the protection of this proviso."

Bill Reported

The Education and Labor Committee Sept. 21 reported a clean bill (HR 10027 -- H Rept 1041) to reverse the 1951 Denver case ruling.

The basic provision of the bill made clear that when a number of construction firms having contractual, subcontractual or similar relationships were engaged in a joint construction job at a building site, a union having a dispute with one of the firms at the site had the right to picket it even if the intent and effect were to cause employees of the other firms to refuse to enter the site and work. The Committee added a section to the bill requiring a union to give 10-day written notice of its intention to strike at any military facility engaged in defense or space work.

In its report, the Committee made clear that the bill was subject to various narrowing conditions which limited it to construction jobs and firms as follows:

The Committee said the bill was not intended to permit secondary boycotts outside of a construction site (for example, at the office of a firm engaged in a construction job).

It said that the bill was not designed to permit boycotts of supplies or other products or materials shipped or otherwise transported to and delivered on the site (product boycotts).

In addition, it said the bill excluded from its scope labor disputes that were otherwise unlawful or were in violation of collective bargaining contracts.

Moreover, it said the bill would not be applicable to labor disputes involving a union representing an employer at the construction site who was not engaged primarily in the construction industry. Thus, it said, construction unions would not be permitted under the bill to shut down a whole job because they objected to the presence, wages or conditions of a non-construction firm at the site, whose employees were organized by a non-construction union.

Committee Views. The Committee said HR 10027 removed "present unfair restrictions, imposed by that (Supreme Court) case, on the right to strike and picket peacefully."

The Committee said the purpose of existing law was "to protect innocent neutrals from being drawn into labor disputes not of their own making and over which they have little control. The bill leaves this general purpose undisturbed. However, it prevents the literal application of this section to situations on construction sites where... neither innocence nor neutrality are (sic) to be found."

In minority views, Reps. Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.), Dave Martin (R Neb.), Glenn Andrews (R Ala.) and Edward J. Gurney (R Fla.) opposed the bill. They said it was expressly designed to permit undesirable secondary boycotts and the closing down of whole jobs at construction sites. They added that the 10-day notice provision for defense facilities would not prevent shutdowns there, and was basically meaningless.

They said that under existing law, as interpreted in the Moore Drydock case, it was already legal for a construction union to strike at a building construction site, provided the union did not attempt to block workers employed by other firms at the site from entering and working. The primary right to strike was therefore protected, they said.

CONGRESS APPROVES EXCISE TAX REDUCTIONS

HR 8371 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 433) May 28, 1965.

- Passed by the House by a 401-6 roll-call vote June 2. (See p. 964)
- Reported by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 324) June 14.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by an 84-3 roll-call vote June 15. (See p. 1049)
- Conference report (H Rept 525) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate June 17.

PL 89-44 -- Signed into law June 21.

Congress in 1965 enacted legislation, long sought by business organizations, eliminating or reducing a variety of federal excise taxes. The Excise Tax Reduction Act (PL 89-44), which was requested by President Johnson, was the third major tax reduction bill enacted by Congress since the Democrats obtained control of the White House in 1961.

As signed by Mr. Johnson, PL 89-44 provided a $4.7 billion cut in federal excise taxes between June 22, 1965, and Jan. 1, 1969. Taxes were lowered on many goods and services, including: automobiles, telephone service, air conditioners, cameras, appliances, radios and television sets, musical instruments, ink pens and mechanical pencils, sporting goods, jewelry, furs, leather goods, toilet preparations and other items. Most of the taxes cut were imposed as emergency wartime measures (World War II or the Korean War) or during the depression of the 1930s in order to raise revenues. (See box and provisions p. 836)

Numerous other federal excise taxes were not affected by PL 89-44, but they were largely specialized levies such as user taxes (primarily for highway construction), sumptuary taxes on alcoholic beverages and tobacco products, and regulatory taxes on marihuana, opium, gambling and similar items. The remaining taxes were expected to produce about $10.6 billion in annual revenues for the Government (at 1965 income levels) derived largely from levies on gasoline, tires, alcoholic products, cigarettes, and trucks, buses and trailers. In addition, some of these taxes which had been temporary under existing law -- requiring annual extension -- were made permanent by PL 89-44.

As enacted, PL 89-44 provided a series of cuts, beginning June 22, 1965 (the date of enactment), and concluding Jan. 1, 1969. The first stage (June 22 and July 1) cut taxes valued at $1.8 billion on a full-year basis. A second stage of reductions, totaling $1.6 billion, was to take effect Jan. 1, 1966. Additional cuts were to occur Jan. 1 of 1967, 1968 and 1969, totaling $1.3 billion.

(President Johnson in several messages to Congress in 1966, at the beginning of the second session, requested that some cuts provided by PL 89-44 be delayed in order to provide extra revenues to meet the rising cost of the Viet Nam war. He proposed slowing down the scheduled cuts in automobile and telephone excise taxes by restoring the Jan. 1, 1966, reductions and extending these cuts until 1971, rather than 1969. The total reduction in automobile and telephone taxes was to be the same as provided in PL 89-44.)

The Administration, in presenting its 1965 tax program, argued that excise tax reduction was the next logical step in federal tax revision following a 1962 investment tax credit -- to spur business outlays -- and a 1964 across-the-board personal and corporate income tax cut. In addition, the Administration was reacting to long-standing pressures for excise cuts from Congress (which nearly reduced many of these levies on its own as part of the 1964 tax bill) and from the business community (which claimed the levies detracted from sales and were more of a nuisance to collect than their revenue-effect justified). Excise tax reduction also coincided with the Administration's policy of providing additional economic stimulation to sustain the current economic growth and to reduce unemployment.

In his 1965 Budget Message, President Johnson asked for excise reductions totaling $1.75 billion. However, in his excise tax message to Congress May 17, the President increased the size of the proposed reduction to $3,964,000,000. Administration officials said the larger reduction was possible because the expected deficit in the federal Budget, as estimated in May, was substantially smaller than the deficit predicted when Mr. Johnson sent the Budget to Congress in January.

PL 89-44 provided essentially the tax reduction program that Mr. Johnson proposed in May. The reductions were to take place over the same period, 1965-1969, but were to total $4.7 billion. The additional $700 million in revenue loss was due largely to a reduction in the automobile excise tax from 10 to 1 percent compared to the Administration's proposed reduction from 10 to 5 percent.

The only other significant difference between PL 89-44 and the Administration's request, other than the auto tax provision, was the absence from the final bill of higher taxes on the users of highways, airways and waterways. Mr. Johnson requested a variety of increased user taxes, but Congress did not consider them (except to make permanent an existing temporary air travel tax).

Enactment of the legislation, from the time Mr. Johnson sent his requests to Congress in May, required only a few days more than one month. There was only one significant difference between House and Senate versions of the bill. The House bill eliminated the entire 10-percent automobile tax; the Senate bill retained 1 percent of the tax, earmarking it for a special fund to aid in the disposal of old and wrecked cars, and made elimination of an additional 4 percent contingent upon manufacturers installing certain safety devices in cars. PL 89-44 retained 1 percent of the tax without earmarking it and did not contain the Senate provisions on safety features.

Federal Excise Tax Collections

(in millions of dollars)

Fiscal Year	Liquor	Tobacco	Stamp	Mfrs. Excise	Retail Excise	Misc.	Total
1939	$ 588	$ 580	$ 41	$ 395	$ --	$ 165	$ 1,768
1945	2,310	932	66	783	424	1,430	5,945
1955	2,743	1,571	112	2,885	315	1,470	9,096
1960	3,194	1,932	139	4,735	379	1,387	11,779
1961	3,213	1,991	149	4,897	398	1,498	11,986
1962	3,341	2,026	159	5,120	416	1,552	12,534
1963	3,442	2,079	149	5,610	444	1,620	13,194
1964	3,577	2,053	172	6,159	475	1,388	13,730
1965	3,773	2,149	186	6,529	513	1,532	14,570
1966*	3,768	2,125	110	5,677	92	1,356	13,028
1967*	3,921	2,127	50	5,793	—	1,466	13,257

* Estimated

Note: Figures may not add to totals because of some refunds, transfers and other accounting adjustments not reflected in the table.

SOURCE: FEDERAL BUDGET DOCUMENTS

Provisions

As signed into law, PL 89-44, the Excise Tax Reduction Act of 1965, established a five-stage timetable for excise cuts totaling $4.7 billion by Jan. 1, 1969. The phases of reduction, with the taxes reduced or eliminated and the annual revenue lost, were as follows:

First Stage. The first of the five phases reduced excise levies by $1.8 billion, effective June 22, 1965, or in certain cases, July 1, 1965.

Excises repealed June 22:

All retail taxes except those on diesel fuel and special motor fuels. The items covered were handbags and luggage, toilet articles, jewelry and furs. $550 million.

Manufacturers' taxes on: business machines; sporting goods (except on fishing equipment); photographic equipment; radios; television sets; phonographs and phonograph records; musical instruments; refrigerators; freezers; air conditioners; electric, gas and oil appliances; fountain pens; ball point pens; mechanical pencils; lighters; matches and playing cards. $608 million.

The June 22 cut also:

Reduced the manufacturer's tax on passenger automobiles from 10 percent to 7 percent. $570 million.

Provided refunds of the 3-percent automobile tax and the entire air conditioners tax paid on purchases made after May 14, 1965.

Made the manufacturers' excises on trucks and truck parts and accessories inapplicable to camper coaches, the bodies of mobile homes, certain farm vehicles and school buses purchased by independent operators for their use under contract to transport school children. $10 million.

Authorized floor stock refunds to retailers and wholesale dealers for inventories of previously taxable items they had on hand on the reduction date.

Excise taxes repealed July 1 were those on safe deposit boxes, initiation fees paid by members of clubs organized after the repeal date, coin-operated amusement devices, bowling alleys, and billiard and pool tables. $20 million.

Exempted, effective July 1, U.S. servicemen from the 5-percent excise on air travel when international flights were made under certain circumstances. Negligible revenue effect.

Second Stage. On Jan. 1, 1966, PL 89-44 provided an additional $1.6 billion in excise tax reductions, as follows:

Reduced from 10 percent to 3 percent the levy on local and long-distance telephone service, including teletypeprinter service. $639 million.

Repealed the excise on admissions. This tax included the levies on general admissions (concerts, movies, theater performances, and athletic events and racing), cabarets and club dues. (Repeal of the general admissions and cabaret levies was to take effect at noon on Dec. 31, 1965, to accommodate New Year's Eve festivities.) $187 million.

Repealed the manufacturers' excises on cutting oil, lubricating oil (except that used in highway vehicles), electric light bulbs and automobile parts and accessories (except those used primarily for trucks.) $303 million.

Further reduced the automobile tax to 6 percent. $190 million.

Repealed the documentary stamp tax on issuances or transfers of stocks and bonds. $153 million.

Repealed the excise levy on manufactured tobacco (chewing, smoking and snuff). $18 million.

Federal Excise Tax Rates

	Existing Rates	New Rates
Liquor taxes:
Distilled spirits, per gallon	$10.50	(3)
Beer, per barrel	$9	(3)
Still wines, by alcoholic content, per gallon	17¢ to $10.50	(3)
Special occupational taxes, per year	$24 to $255	(4)
Tobacco taxes:
Cigarettes, small and large, per 1,000	$4 and $8.40	(3)
Cigars, by weight and retail price, per 1,000	$2.50 to $20	(4)
Snuff, smoking and chewing tobacco, per pound	10¢	0
	Per cent of manufacturers' sales price
Manufacturers' Excises:
Air conditioners, self-contained	10%	0
Automobiles	10	1
Automobile parts and accessories	8	0
Business machines	10	0
Cameras, lenses and film	10	0
Electric, gas and oil appliances	5	0
Electric light bulbs and tubes	10	0
Firearms, shells and cartridges	11	(4)
Fountain and ballpoint pens, mechanical pencils	10	0
Musical instruments	10	0
Phonographs and phonograph records	10	0
Radio and television sets	10	0
Refrigerators and quick freeze units	5	0
Sporting goods and equipment	10	(5)
	Cents
Matches, ordinary, per 1,000	2	0
Gasoline, per gallon	4	(4)
Tires, highway vehicle, per pound	10	(4)
Tires, other, per pound	5	(4)
	Per cent of retailers' sales price
Retailers' excises:
Furs and fur articles	10%	0
Jewelry	10	0
Luggage, handbags and wallets	10	0
Toilet preparations	10	0
Miscellaneous excises:	Per cent
Telegrams and telephone calls	10	0
Safe-deposit box rental	10	0
Transportation of persons by air	5	(4)
Admissions, general, in excess of $1	10	0
Wagering, per amount of wager	10	(4)
Club dues and initiation fees	20	0
	Cents
Playing cards, per pack	13	0

1 With certain omissions and abbreviations.
2 When fully effective in 1969.
3 Extended rate on permanent basis.
4 No change.
5 Repealed except for tax on fishing equipment.

Repealed the excises on telegraph and wire service. $32 million.

Repealed the telephone excise tax on private communications systems linked with general telephone networks. $130 million.

Provided floor stock refunds on goods held by wholesalers and retail dealers on the date of reduction.

Remaining Stages. PL 89-44 provided an additional $1.3 billion in excise tax reductions between 1967 and 1969, as follows:

Further reduced the manufacturers' excise tax on passenger automobiles to 4 percent on Jan. 1, 1967, to 2 percent on Jan. 1, 1968, and to a permanent level of 1 percent on Jan. 1, 1969. $950 million.

Further reduced the tax on local and long-distance telephone service and teletypeprinter service by one percentage point annually beginning Jan. 1, 1967, culminating in complete repeal on Jan. 1, 1969. $274 million.

Repealed the tax on real estate conveyances, effective Jan. 1, 1968. $42 million.

Other Provisions. Made permanent the temporary rates imposed during the Korean War on cigarettes (8 cents a pack), liquor ($10.50 a gallon), beer ($9 a barrel), and wines (varying rates). Under existing law, these levies had to be extended at the beginning of each fiscal year or the rates fell to lower levels.

Made permanent the 5-percent excise on the transportation of persons by air, which required annual extension under existing law.

Transferred $70 million in highway user taxes from general revenues to the Highway Trust Fund. These included levies on truck parts and accessories ($20 million) and on lubricating oil used by highway motor vehicles ($50 million).

Extended the excise on automobile parts from July 1, 1965, through Dec. 31, 1965. (PL 89-44 eliminated the tax the following day, Jan. 1, 1966.)

Prohibited the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) from seizing the undelivered mail of delinquent taxpayers.

Stipulated that the exemption from tax for exports of liquors would include shipments to any possession of the United States (including Wake and Midway Islands).

Amended the existing three-year statute of limitations for assessment on delinquent excise tax payments to provide a six-year limitation.

Provided income tax exemptions through Dec. 31, 1965, for certain poultry growers exchanges which met specified conditions regarding their organization and operation.

Exempted state-conducted sweepstakes, wagering pools or lotteries which are determined by a horse race from the federal wagering tax (intended to provide an exemption for the New Hampshire sweepstakes, but also of benefit to some other states).

Altered slightly the definition of wines to permit increased use in the production of domestic wines of manufacturing processes commonly used abroad.

Background

HR 8371 was the third major reduction in federal tax liabilities since 1962. Congress in 1962 enacted legislation which provided a 7-percent investment tax credit for business and which also contained a few revenue-raising reforms. In early 1964, Congress enacted an $11.5 billion reduction in personal and corporate income taxes. (1962 Almanac p. 478; 1964 Almanac p. 518)

Most of the excises in force in 1965 were imposed originally during wartime as temporary sources of revenue which would be eliminated when conditions returned to normal. A number of World War I excises were reintroduced in 1932 to compensate for plummeting income tax collections. The Revenue Act of 1941 made the 1932 excises permanent and imposed numerous other excise levies. Other wartime excises were imposed during 1942 and 1944.

The Revenue Act of 1950 was conceived as a measure to cut the annual $7.5 billion excise tax intake by about $1 billion, but the outbreak of the Korean War in June 1950 forced an extension of the old taxes and imposition of new ones. Faced by expanding defense expenditures, Congress in 1951 increased excise taxes by $1.2 billion. In 1954, a number of the World War II excises were slashed; however, all of the 1951 rate increases were extended for one year. These included cigarettes (8 cents a pack), liquor ($10.50 a gallon), beer ($9 a barrel), wines (varying rates), automobiles (10 percent of the manufacturer's price), auto parts and accessories (8 percent of the manufacturer's price). All these rates were affected by the 1965 Legislation. After 1954, the emergency rate increases of 1951 were re-extended for one-year periods in every session of Congress. Various taxes imposed in 1941 were made subject to annual extension in 1959. The major changes in the excise tax structure after 1954 were the 1956 levy on highway vehicles weighing more than 26,000 pounds and the 1962 reduction or repeal of various excises on passenger transportation. (1962 Almanac p. 510; 1956 Almanac p. 398)

Past Attempts to Repeal Excises. Extension of excise taxes met strong opposition in Congress beginning about 1960. Early in 1964, White House intervention averted excise-cutting amendments to the 1964 income tax cut in the Senate Finance Committee and on the Senate floor. Legislation to repeal numerous excises and to reduce others barely missed Congressional approval later in 1964. The Senate June 25 passed an amended version of an excise tax extension bill (HR 11376) with amendments providing for repeal of the levies on luggage and handbags; cosmetics and perfume; mechanical pencils and pens; lacrosse, table tennis, and tennis equipment; musical instruments sold to students for use in schools; and the first $100 of the cost of jewelry and fur items. The bill also provided for reduction in the admissions tax on live dramatic and musical performances from 10 percent to 5 percent and in the cabaret tax from 10 percent to 3 percent. Treasury officials estimated that the amendments would have reduced revenues by about $525 million annually.

HR 11376, as passed by the House June 17, provided only for extension of expiring taxes and rates. A motion to recommit the bill to the Ways and Means Committee with instructions to eliminate a number of retailers' taxes was rejected by a 185-207 roll-call vote. None of the Senate amendments survived the Senate-House conference. Sen. George A. Smathers (D Fla.), a Senate conferee, said the House conferees had been "adamant" in opposing the Senate amendments, arguing that the House Ways and Means Committee was studying the entire excise tax structure with a view to recommending those that should be repealed or reduced; that Congress had already cut income taxes and the economy needed no further

Excise Tax Lobbying

Numerous U.S. business and trade organizations lobbied vigorously for enactment of legislation to lower or eliminate the federal levies. The excise tax reduction bill was cited by new lobby registrants in 1965 as one of their chief (and frequently their sole) concern in lobbying. (See lobby story p. 1458)

In hearings on the federal excise tax structure, conducted by the House Ways and Means Committee during the summer of 1964, statements were made on behalf of 120 organizations representing interests as diverse as the National Assn. of Manufacturers (NAM), the Golf Ball Manufacturers' Assn. and the Fur and Leather Department of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America (AFL-CIO). Materials also were submitted to the Committee on behalf of 90 other organizations. (1964 Almanac p. 542)

Almost all groups testifying before the Committee sought reduction or repeal of those excises impinging on their particular interests.

In 1965, tax reductions eventually provided by PL 89-44 were cited by registrants for 16 different trade groups seeking a reduction or elimination of excise taxes on their products. Most of the groups listed no other legislative objective.

The automobile industry was particularly well represented. One auto industry group, the Committee for Automobile Excise Tax Repeal, registered four lobbyists, including ex-Rep. Victor A. Knox (R Mich. 1953-65) and Theodore O. Yntema of the Ford Motor Co., and said it was prepared to lay out $100,000 for expenses. (The Committee reported spending $115,210.78 through the third quarter of 1965.) Several other registrants also filed for automobile industry groups. The final version of the Administration-backed excise tax bill did sharply cut automobile excise taxes, as well as excise taxes on nearly all of the products of concern to the other 15 groups.

Following are the 16 groups:

Associated Telephone Answering Exchanges (answering service facilities); Assn. of Petroleum Re-Refiners (favored retention of excise tax on lubricating oil); Automobile Manufacturers Assn. Taxation Committee (automobiles); automotive parts and accessories manufacturers, a group of 10 firms (auto parts); Brunswick Corp. (sporting goods); Business Equipment Manufacturers Assn. (business machines); Cigar Manufacturers Assn. of America (cigars); Club Managers Assn. (country clubs, social clubs, business clubs); Committee for Automobile Excise Tax Repeal (automobiles); Institute of High Fidelity (hi-fi components); Light Bulb Manufacturers Excise Tax Committee (bulbs and tubes); Motor Equipment Manufacturers Assn. (auto parts and accessories); National Electrical Manufacturers Assn. (refrigerators, freezers, air conditioners, other appliances); Ronson Corp. (products made by company); U.S. Independent Telephone Assn. (communications); U.S. Playing Card Co. and a group of other playing card firms.

stimulation; and that it would be unwise to increase the fiscal 1965 budget deficit.

1965 Proposals Expected. Although the complete list of excise tax reductions which the Administration supported was not publicly known until 1965, it had become certain in 1964 that excise cuts would be proposed to the 1st Session of the 89th Congress.

Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon, in testimony before the Democratic Platform Committee in August 1964, said that "high priority should be given to a thorough overhaul of the hodge-podge of excise taxes remaining from World War II days." Dillon also said, "Many of these taxes no longer serve their purpose. Instead they increase business costs, weigh unevenly on consumers and are often an unnecessary nuisance to taxpayers and government alike." The Democratic Platform, in its final form, urged "careful review of all our excise taxes and (elimination of) those that are obsolete."

Dillon in November 1964 announced Administration plans to ask Congress to eliminate excises on toilet preparations, cosmetics, jewelry, furs, luggage, and ladies' handbags. In his November 1964 announcement, Dillon also said the Administration would seek cuts on some of the 75 manufacturers' excises, but refused to list which ones.

PRESIDENT'S PROPOSALS

In his May 17 Excise Tax Message President Johnson proposed graduated cuts of $3,964,000,000 in existing levies to "spur" economic growth and "move us closer to full employment." The reductions were to begin with a $3.5 million cut in fiscal 1966 ($1.75 million on July 1, 1965, and $1.75 million on Jan. 1, 1966) and were to continue with cuts on Jan. 1 of 1967, 1968 and 1969 totaling $464 million. (For text of message see p. 1404)

The proposals for cuts were accompanied, however, by a request for an increase of $300 million in "user charges," or transportation excises, levied on facilities that use the nation's airways, waterways and highways.

The sweeping excise reductions included the repeal of retailers' taxes and most manufacturers' taxes on July 1, 1965, a reduction from 10 to 5 percent of the manufacturers' tax on passenger automobiles by 1967, and the elimination of the 10-percent excise on local and long-distance telephone service by 1969.

The $3.5 billion excise reduction for fiscal 1966 was divided into two equal stages, effective July 1, 1965, and Jan. 1, 1966. Administration officials explained that the two-phase schedule was timed to avoid overheating the economy in the second half of calendar 1965 and to serve as a buffer against the approximately $4.5-billion increase in Social Security taxes that was scheduled to take effect Jan. 1, 1966, under the Administration's medical care bill. (See p. 236)

Many of the existing excises, the President noted, had been imposed during wartime to "restrain civilian demand. . .and thereby free resources for military use." Such taxes should be re-examined, he said, "to assure that they do not hold back an expanding peacetime economy."

In order to stimulate "total demand," Mr. Johnson called on American business to "translate lower excise taxes promptly into lower retail prices for consumers."

Lower consumer prices, the President asserted, would generate a larger sales volume, giving business its full share of the benefits of excise reduction.

Doubling of Request. The reductions proposed for fiscal 1966 were double the $1.75 billion excise tax cut originally proposed by the President in his Jan. 25 Budget Message. Administration officials said the broader cut was possible because the Budget deficits for fiscal 1965 and 1966, as projected at that time (including the excise tax cuts), were substantially smaller than the amounts predicted in January. The fiscal 1965 deficit, the officials said, would be only $4.4 billion, in contrast to a January prediction of $6.3 billion. They said the fiscal 1966 deficit would be $1 billion smaller than the $5.3 billion projected in January.

It also had become apparent that Congress was likely to enact cuts far broader than the $1.75 billion originally requested by the President.

Remaining Excises. After completion of the phased cuts to Jan. 1, 1969, $11.3 billion of excises were to remain in force. Under the President's proposals, present excise rates on alcohol and tobacco, subject to annual extension, were to be made permanent. The automobile tax, to be reduced to 5 percent on Jan. 1, 1967, was to become permanent after its reduction to that rate.

User Charges. The new and increased transportation levies, the President said, were necessary to ensure that the beneficiaries of federal expenditures on airways, waterways and highways paid a fairer share of the cost. Mr. Johnson's recommendations reflected the comment in his Budget Message that he would continue to press for user charges "in Government programs where benefits are provided to specific" individuals and businesses.

Highways. Highway users came "closer to reimbursing the Federal Government for its transportation investment than any other group," the President said, "but inequities remain among the various classes of highway users."

Heavy trucks, the President asserted, were not "paying fully for the additional cost of heavier pavement and other design features needed to carry them." His recommendations included increases in the following taxes: from 4 cents to 7 cents a gallon on the diesel fuel levy; from $3 to $5 per thousand pounds on the "use tax" for trucks having a taxable gross weight of more than 26,000 pounds; and from 5 cents to 10 cents per pound on the tread rubber excise, which largely affects heavy trucks. The taxes would remain in force until 1973, when the Interstate Highway System was expected to be completed.

Aviation. While airlines and their passengers made "substantial" although "insufficient" contributions to the development and operation of the federal airways, the President said that general aviation (private, business and pleasure aircraft) contributed "very little" (less than 4 percent) toward the cost. The President's proposals for increased levies on aviation included: making permanent the 5-percent excise on transportation of persons by air; enactment of a new user tax of 2 cents per gallon on jet fuels and extension of the existing tax of 2 cents per gallon on aviation gasoline; a doubling of the levy to 4 cents a gallon on aviation gasoline used by general aviation; transfer of aviation gasoline revenues from the Highway Trust Fund to the General Fund; and imposition of a new 2-percent charge on air freight waybills.

Inland Waterways. The lack of taxation of any kind on the use of inland waterways was "unfair to the taxpayers and to competing modes of transportation," the President said. Consequently, he called for a levy of 2 cents per gallon on all fuel used on the waterways.

House

COMMITTEE -- House Ways and Means.

ACTION -- May 28 reported HR 8371 (H Rept 433).

Working from the draft legislation submitted by the President, the Committee wrote its own bill which closely followed Mr. Johnson's recommendations in most respects. The only major difference was that HR 8371 eliminated the 10-percent manufacturers' tax on passenger automobiles, rather than cutting it to 5 percent as Mr. Johnson requested. The Committee provided a five-step reduction that was to eliminate the tax entirely by Jan. 1, 1969. A 3-percent reduction, from 10 to 7 percent, was to take effect upon enactment of the legislation.

By eliminating the automobile tax the Committee bill provided excise reductions totaling $4.8 billion -- $900 million more than the amount requested by the President in his May 17 tax message.

Of the reductions, $1,748,000,000 was to take effect July 1; $1,726,000,000 was to take effect Jan. 1, 1966; and the balance was to become effective during 1967-69.

President Johnson May 25, in a letter to Committee Chairman Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.), said, "My reasons for recommending retention of half of the automobile tax were that this would retain revenues of roughly $1 billion a year to the Government. While I prefer the program I recommended, I feel that if the entire tax is to be removed, the. . .Committee program represents a prudent way of doing so." The President also announced his "strong determination to hold federal expenditures to the lowest reasonable level." Reports said House Republicans had requested such a pledge as a condition for backing the excise tax cut.

Committee Views. Noting that most of the present excises had been levied in time of war to "stem inflationary pressures and divert essential resources to defense-related use," the Committee said these taxes had now become "the source of undesirable discrimination," both against the taxed products and against low-income consumers.

The Committee presented figures indicating that the full-year revenue loss of the tax cuts scheduled to take effect during fiscal 1966 would total $3.4 billion. However, it said that the actual impact on fiscal 1966 federal revenues from the cuts going into effect during the year would be a revenue loss of only $1,975,000,000. The Committee said this was because the second phase of reductions would be in effect for only half the fiscal year and also because of anticipated lags in collections from the time a tax is incurred until it is paid to the Government.

The Committee also said that consumer refunds on excises paid between May 15 and July 1 had been limited to the purchase of air conditioners and automobiles because:

(1) a large proportion of annual sales of air conditioners occur in May and June and purchases deferred past these months were likely to be deferred until the next season;

(2) in the case of automobiles, the excise was sufficiently large that a significant number of prospective buyers might delay purchases until July. Because of the effect of automobile sales on the total economy, such deferral might have a "significant effect" on economic conditions during this period.

Supplemental Views. Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) submitted a statement of supplemental views in which he contended that the paring of $4.8 billion from annual excise revenues of $15 billion obligated the Administration to hold expenditure levels "to at least the increased figure of $99.7 billion for fiscal 1966 it gave the Congress in the Budget message this January."

FLOOR ACTION

The House June 2 passed HR 8371 by a 401-6 roll-call vote. The bill was passed as reported by the House Ways and Means Committee. (For voting, see chart p. 964)

In voting on HR 8371, 129 Republicans joined 272 Democrats in favoring passage. Voting against the measure were two Republicans and four Democrats: John F. Baldwin (R Calif.), Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.), Charles S. Joelson (D N.J.), Paul C. Jones (D Mo.), John O. Marsh Jr. (D Va.) and Howard W. Smith (D Va.).

During debate on the bill, which consumed only two of the four hours allotted, Smith criticized the "headlong speed" with which the Ways and Means Committee had approved the bill. The handful of Members opposed to the measure also argued that it was a "questionable" practice to cut revenues while the Government was "embarked on a program of deficit spending." Proponents of the bill asserted that the cuts would stimulate the economy by "placing in the hands of our people more revenue for expansion and progress." Most of the time was consumed by Members warmly praising the reductions.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 8371 established a five-stage timetable for the reduction of $4.8 billion in excise taxes by Jan. 1, 1969. The major elements of the House bill were included in the bill that was enacted.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Senate Finance.

ACTION -- June 14 reported HR 8371 with amendments (S Rept 324). As reported, HR 8371 provided a $4.7 billion cut in excise taxes, including the reduction of $3.4 billion in fiscal 1966. The Committee June 10 voted 14-3 to approve the measure. The negative votes were cast by Committee Chairman Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.), John J. Williams (R Del.) and Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah).

Prior to approval of the bill, the Committee voted 7-10 to reject an amendment, backed by the Administration, to reduce the 10-percent automobile excise tax to 5 percent and to make the levy permanent at that level. Then the Committee voted 10-7 to approve an amendment by Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) making four percentage points of the reduction in the auto levy contingent on installation of specified items of safety and pollution-control equipment. The Committee also voted 9-8 to adopt a proposal by Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) to retain one percentage point of the automobile excise and earmark it to a special fund to aid in the disposal of old and wrecked cars. It was estimated that retention of the 1-percent auto levy would result in revenues of $190 million per year that otherwise would be lost.

The safety devices and standards which would be required were to be the same as the requirements specified by the Federal Government for cars purchased for Government use. Congress in 1964 passed a bill (HR 1341 -- PL 88-515) which prohibited purchase of Government cars that were not equipped with "reasonable passenger safety devices." The General Services Administration was required to prescribe by regulation what devices would be required and commercial standards for their manufacture. (1964 Almanac p. 273)

The GSA Jan. 26, 1965, published in the Federal Register a list of 17 safety features which were to be required on all models purchased by the Government beginning with the 1967 model year. These were: dual operation of the brake system; safe tires and safety rims; standard arrangement for the gear quadrant (park, reverse, neutral, drive, and low) for vehicles with automatic transmissions; glare reduction surfaces (instrument panel and windshield wipers); design of windshield wipers-washers; backup lights; outside rear view mirror; four-way flasher for use as a warning light system; seat-belt anchorage standards; padded instrument panel and visors; recessed instrument panel instruments and control devices; impact-absorbing steering wheel and column (such as a collapsible arrangement); safety door latches and hinges; anchorage of seats; safety glaring materials (safety glass); standard bumper heights; and devices to reduce automotive exhaust pollution.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate passed HR 8371 June 15 by an 84-3 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 1049)

Prior to passage, the Senate adopted all the amendments which were proposed by the Finance Committee and accepted six and rejected eight floor amendments. The major changes from the bill as passed by the House June 2 were the result of amendments by the Finance Committee which revised the five-phase elimination of the 10-percent excise tax on passenger automobiles. These amendments retained 1 percent of the tax (amounting to $190 million annually) for a special fund to aid in disposal of old and wrecked cars, and made elimination of an additional 4 percent contingent upon manufacturers' installation of specified safety devices in cars starting with 1968 models.

Under Secretary of the Treasury Joseph Barr expressed the Administration's approval of the Senate version of automobile excise reduction in letters to Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) and Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), who sponsored the amendments in committee. Ribicoff and Douglas read the letters into the record during debate.

Voting for passage of HR 8371 were 25 Republicans and 59 Democrats. The only Members opposing the measure were Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.), Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) and John J. Williams (R Del.).

In debate on the measure, proponents argued that broad excise reduction was necessary to "sustain the momentum" generated by the income tax cut of 1964. Opponents contended that the bill was a "reckless gamble with the stability of the American dollar."

During consideration of the bill, the Senate accepted an amendment by Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.) to require the President's Council of Economic Advisers to report on the effect of the tax cut, particularly on whether businessmen were passing on the reductions to consumers. It also accepted an amendment by John J. Williams (R Del.) prohibiting the Internal Revenue Service from intercepting and opening the mail of delinquent taxpayers. (See story p. 1526)

Among the amendments rejected was one by Senate Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) to allow commuters a tax deduction for the cost of traveling to and from work. It was rejected by a one-sided 27-57 roll-call vote. (For other amendments, see below)

Changes from House Bill. In addition to the revisions in the reduction of automobile excises, the Senate and House bills included the following differences:

- Stipulated that most of the tax reductions, scheduled to take effect on July 1 under the House bill, would become effective on the day after the measure was signed into law. This would affect all retail taxes including levies on handbags and luggage, jewelry and furs, certain manufacturers' excises including those on air conditioners, radios and television sets, and various miscellaneous items.
- Eliminated certain changes the House had made in the taxes on lubricating and cutting oils. The House bill, in effect, eliminated the levies on all such lubricants except lubricating oil used by highway motor vehicles, which it transferred to the Highway Trust Fund. The Senate bill retained the taxes and made no transfers to the Fund.
- Repealed the 10-cent per pound tax on manufactured tobacco, which included pipe tobacco, chewing tobacco, snuff and tobacco used by persons who roll their own cigarettes. The House measure did not affect this tax.
- Deferred repeal of the documentary stamp tax on real estate conveyances until Jan. 1, 1969, three years past the date stipulated in the House bill.
- Advanced the effective date of repeal of the stamp tax on stock and debt issuances and transfers by one day, to Dec. 31, 1965.
- Changed the effective date of repeal of the excise on initiation fees by newly organized clubs from Jan. 1, 1966, to July 1, 1965.
- Added new provisions which: (1) exempted from the manufacturers' excise camper coaches, the bodies of mobile homes and school buses purchased by independent operators for their use in transportation under a contract with a school to transport school children; (2) directed the President's Council of Economic Advisers to make annual reports to Congress as to whether tax cuts were being passed on to consumers; (3) allowed gasoline dealers a tax credit for losses by leakage and seepage; (4) prohibited the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) from intercepting and opening the mail of delinquent taxpayers; (5) and exempted state-conducted lotteries and sweepstakes from excise taxes.

PROVISIONS -- Except for the earmarking of part of the auto tax and for the other more minor changes noted above, HR 8371 as passed by the Senate was similar to the House version and followed the basic pattern of tax reductions in stages that was later enacted into law. See conference action, below, for resolution of Senate-House differences.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 15 -- Frank Carlson (R Kan.) -- Authorize refunds to gasoline dealers of taxes paid on gasoline lost by leakage or spillage (designed to permit refunding $2,100 in federal gasoline taxes paid by one individual in Kansas). Voice vote.

Gaylord Nelson (D Wis.) -- Require the President's Council of Economic Advisers to report to Congress one year from passage of the bill and each succeeding year until 1970 on the effect of excise reductions and whether or not businessmen were passing the cuts on to consumers in lower prices. Voice.

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Prohibit the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) from intercepting and opening the mail of delinquent taxpayers. Roll call, 87-1.

Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Eliminate the excise tax on initiation fees paid by members of clubs organized after July 1, 1965. (The committee bill provided for elimination of the excises on clubs organized after Jan. 1, 1966). Voice.

Thomas J. McIntyre (D N.H.) - Norris Cotton (R N.H.) -- Exempt state-conducted sweepstakes or lotteries from the federal wagering tax (intended to provide an exemption for the New Hampshire sweepstakes which was established in 1964; the amendment also would benefit some other states). Voice.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Make the excise on rubber applicable at the time manufacturers deliver tires or tubes to their own retail outlets as well as when they deliver such products to independent outlets. (Under existing law, independent dealers paid the tax when they bought the tire from the manufacturers, but dealerships owned by the manufacturers did not pay the tax until the tire was sold to a customer.) Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

June 15 -- Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Eliminate excise taxes on the chassis as well as the body of self-propelled house trailers and camper coaches. Standing vote.

Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) -- Eliminate language in the bill providing for reductions in the automobile excise below 5 percent and make the 5-percent levy permanent on that date. Voice.

Ross Bass (D Tenn.) -- Exempt from manufacturer's excise tax trucks sold to be used primarily in the operation of a farm or ranch. Roll call, 41-44.

Dirksen -- Allow commuters an income tax deduction for the costs of transportation to and from work. Roll call, 25-57.

Stephen M. Young (D Ohio) -- Repeal the 5-percent excise on air travel. Roll call, 26-58.

Alan Bible (D Nev.) and Howard W. Cannon (D Nev.) -- Provide for a rebate of 50 percent of excise receipts on gaming devices to states where operation of such devices was legal. (The amendment was designed to provide Nevada with refunds of about $3 million annually.) Voice.

Jack Miller (R Iowa) -- Add to the bill a new title increasing old age, survivors and disability insurance benefits under Social Security. Tabled, 65-21 roll call.

(Continued on next page)

Harrison A. Williams Jr. (D N.J.) -- Provide exemptions from excises on sales of buses, equipment of parts to private transit companies if a certain proportion of their revenues during the previous three months had been derived from commuter service. Voice.

Conference

The House and Senate June 17 by voice votes agreed to the conference report (H Rept 525) on HR 8371. As sent to the President, HR 8371 provided a $4.7 billion cut to be carried out in five stages through Jan. 1, 1969.

Major action by the conferees included:

A compromise on reduction of the 10-percent manufacturer's excise on automobiles to retain one percentage point of the levy without earmarking it to any particular program. (Retention of the 1-percent levy was estimated to retain in general tax revenues an annual $190 million that would have been lost under the House bill.) Rejected was a Senate provision to make four percentage points of the reduction contingent upon the installation in automobiles of specified safety and anti-pollution devices.

Acceptance of a Senate provision to make the first round of cuts effective the day after enactment of the bill. The House measure had stipulated that the first phase of cuts would take effect on July 1, 1965.

Acceptance of a House provision to repeal the tax on cutting oils and transfer the revenues from the levy on lubricating oils used by highway motor vehicles to the Highway Trust Fund.

Rejection of Senate amendments to advance by one day, to Dec. 31, 1965, the date for repeal of the documentary stamp tax on sales of stocks and bonds and to direct the President's Council of Economic Advisers to report annually to Congress on how much of the excise tax cut is passed along to consumers.

Acceptance of a Senate provision to forbid the Internal Revenue Service from intercepting and opening the mail of delinquent taxpayers with the modification that such mail could be seized once delivered.

Approval of Senate amendments to repeal the excise on manufactured tobacco and to authorize exemption from gambling taxes for New Hampshire's state-run sweepstakes.

Agreement on Jan. 1, 1968, as the date for repeal of the documentary stamp tax on real estate sales, giving states two years to enact similar taxes of their own.

Rejection of a Senate amendment allowing a tax refund to gasoline dealers for taxes paid on gasoline lost by leakage or spillage.

Acceptance of Senate amendments exempting camper coaches, mobile-home bodies and certain school buses from the manufacturers' excise tax and moving up the effective date for repeal of the excise tax on initiation fees by newly organized clubs.

Rejection of a Senate amendment dealing with the dual distribution of tires.

Auto Tax Comments

During House action on the conference report, Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.), who managed the bill on the floor and was chairman of the conference, said that deletion of the auto safety provision "did not pass judgment upon the desirability at all of the safety devices. . .but some of us questioned the use of a tax bill as the proper vehicle" to establish automobile safety regulations. In the Senate, there was sharp criticism of the conference action. Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.), sponsor of the safety amendment, said "we have missed a real opportunity to pass on to the American people not only savings in terms of dollars and cents, but in terms of life and health as well." He criticized the automobile industry for what he said were intense lobbying efforts to prevent the safety amendment from being included in the final bill. He suggested that the industry was not sufficiently interested in safety. The companies in 1963 spent $34 per car for advertising and "a few pennies" for safety research, Ribicoff said. Russell B. Long (D La.), one of the Senate conferees, said that the House conferees insisted that automobile safety legislation was not the proper responsibility of tax committees and should come from the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. He said he was "greatly disturbed" by the rejection of Ribicoff's amendment. (For hearings on safety, see p. 391.)

Bill Signed

At the signing ceremony June 21, President Johnson praised Congress for its "prompt" action in passing the bill only a month after he requested the legislation in his May 17 Excise Tax Message. Mr. Johnson said the measure would "pay dividends in lower prices, in more jobs, and more sales, and in more production" for "many years to come."

Mr. Johnson added that the tax reduction would make its "maximum" contribution to the economy only if businesses passed it along to consumers "in the full amount of the reduction."

Noting that he had recommended a 5-percent reduction in the automobile tax and that Congress had increased this to 9 percent, Mr. Johnson said that Congress' decision to postpone the additional four-point reduction would "allow time for possible modification if future developments should indicate that this should be desirable." He said that the Administration would be "carefully considering the possible constructive uses that might be made of the 1-percent automobile excise which the Congress decided to retain." He added "this revenue could help to solve such related national problems as automobile safety, air pollution, highway beauty, and the disposal of discarded and abandoned automobiles."

CEA REPORT

Sept. 22 -- The President's Council of Economic Advisers reported to Mr. Johnson that business had passed along to consumers 90 percent of the excise tax cuts during the month of August. This compared with a 75-percent figure for the month of July.

In its earlier report the Council sharply criticized manufacturers who had reserved the full benefits of the cut to themselves. The report said manufacturers of phonograph records, some sporting goods, pens and mechanical pencils, and matches had raised their wholesale prices by the full amount of the excise reductions.

In September, automobile manufacturers announced prices on their 1966 models and provoked some protests that they had not passed on to consumers the tax cut.

INTERSTATE TAXATION

A special subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee in 1965 concluded its study of state taxation of interstate commerce and made public its recommendations. The study was authorized by Congress in 1959.

The recommendations were made in a final volume, released Sept. 2, of reports by the Special Subcommittee on State Taxation of Interstate Commerce. Another 1965 volume was released by the Subcommittee on June 30.

BACKGROUND -- In 1959, in a series of cases dealing with the question of a state's right to tax a company which did business in that state but was located in another state, the Supreme Court ruled that states could tax that portion of a company's income which was earned through operations within their boundaries.

Later in 1959, Congress passed a law (PL 86-272) prohibiting a state from levying a tax on the net income of a business if its only activity within a state was (1) the solicitation of orders for tangible personal property, to be approved and filled from outside the state, or (2) the solicitation of orders for a client or customer if the orders were to be approved and filled from outside the state. PL 86-272 also called for a study of income taxes imposed on business in interstate commerce, the study to be submitted to Congress by July 1, 1962. In 1961 the scope of the study was broadened to cover "all matters pertaining to the taxation of interstate commerce by the states" and the deadline for the reports was extended. In 1964 Congress passed a law (PL 88-286) again extending the deadline, this time to June 30, 1965. (1959 Almanac p. 280, 1964 Almanac p. 544)

1965 Action

The June 30 volume (H Rept 565) of reports by the Subcommittee stressed problems created by sales taxes and suggested that a federal agency might supervise collections of sales taxes from interstate sales. Other suggestions included relieving large businesses of the burden of filing monthly sales tax returns and shifting the responsibility for remittance of sales taxes from the seller to the customer when both were businesses. H Rept 565 also criticized the practice by some states of imposing on out-of-state businesses the cost of audits to see whether they were complying with the state's laws. The Subcommittee said that 40 states and 2,300 local governments imposed sales taxes.

FINAL REPORT

COMMITTEE -- House Judiciary, Special Subcommittee on State Taxation of Interstate Commerce.

ACTION -- Sept. 2 released a report (H Rept 952) summarizing the Subcommittee's findings on state taxation of interstate commerce and making recommendations.

Subcommittee Recommendations. The Subcommittee found that the existing system of state taxation of interstate commerce was "characterized by a conflict between the diversity and multiplicity prescribed by the state laws and the limited extent to which such a system can be realistically complied with or enforced." The Subcommittee, in making its recommendations, said it aimed for the reduction of compliance burdens to foster a more cooperative attitude on the part of the taxpayer and kept in mind the effects of its proposals on state revenues so no state would gain or lose more than a small share of its tax revenues.

The Subcommittee said its proposed program was "a moderate one, avoiding on the one hand the extreme of a general program of federal administration and collection, and on the other hand the suggestion that all that need be done is to extend" existing law "to other types of taxes. Measures are recommended which are broad enough to meet the problems but which avoid unnecessary changes in present practices."

Income Taxes -- A corporation's income would be divided among the states for tax purposes according to a two-factor formula based on the locations of its property and payroll. Rules for doing this would be drafted and administered by the Internal Revenue Service. The tax would still be collected by the individual states. A state could tax a business if the business (1) owned or leased realty in the state or (2) had an employee whose services were performed entirely in the state. Consolidation of tax returns of any group of corporations affiliated through 50-percent common ownership could be required by a state and would have to be permitted if the taxpayers requested it.

Capital Stock Taxes -- The apportionment formula and IRS jurisdiction for corporate income taxes would also apply to capital stock taxes.

Sales and Use Taxes -- Sales would be taxable only by the state in which the buyer first received physical delivery of the goods. The state where goods were used (if other than the state of receipt) might also impose a tax but would have to give credit for prior taxes paid. The taxes would be collected by the seller. A state could levy a sales or use tax if the business involved (1) owned or leased realty in the state, (2) had an employee whose services were performed entirely in the state or (3) regularly used its own vehicles or a private parcel service to make deliveries to private residences in the state. States could get expanded authority by passing a prescribed model law. Prepaid mail order sales were exempted. States would be given the option of exempting food and prescription drugs. Businesses involved would utilize a federally prescribed uniform tax return form, copies of which would be sent to the IRS and the individual states. Taxes would be sent directly to the states by the sellers. IRS would be responsible for auditing the returns, with the states bearing the auditing expense. Persons who established a new residence in a state could not be taxed by that state on previously acquired personal effects, such as household goods and automobiles.

Gross Receipts Taxes -- Gross receipts from the sale of goods would be taxable only by the state from which the goods were shipped.

Miscellaneous -- States could not enforce tax laws discriminating against out-of-state sellers. The Subcommittee recommended that an Interstate Tax Conference be formed, made up of the tax administrators of all states, to assure uniformity in the operation of the rules to be enacted. The Subcommittee recommended that the IRS conduct studies on the problems of specific types of businesses and on other designated types of interstate taxation. It said IRS should make recommendations on these subjects to Congress within two years.

Bill Introduced. Subcommittee Chairman Edwin E. Willis (D La.) Oct. 22 introduced a bill (HR 11798) embodying the Subcommittee's recommendations. Hearings on the bill were expected in 1966.

UTILITY TAX AMENDMENT STALLS DISASTER TAX BILL

HR 7502 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 556) June 29, 1965.
Passed by the House by voice vote Aug. 3.

The Senate Finance Committee in 1965 postponed action until 1966 on a minor House-passed bill (HR 7502) after failing to resolve a controversy concerning an unrelated amendment proposed in Committee by Sens. Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) and Russell B. Long (D La.). The controversial Dirksen-Long amendment, which was offered as a rider to HR 7502, prevented federal regulatory agencies from requiring regulated utilities to pass on to consumers taxes saved by filing consolidated income tax returns.

The amendment was sought by the Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., one of the nation's largest pipeline companies. It was opposed by liberals on the Committee and by a majority of the Federal Power Commission (FPC), which had jurisdiction over pipelines, as well as by such other federal regulatory agencies as the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) and Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC). Also opposed to the Dirksen-Long measure were the non-profit National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn., the Cooperative League of the U.S.A., and the Electric Consumers Information Committee, which conducted a publicity campaign aginst it.

According to a report in the Washington Post Aug. 20, the Committee became embroiled in an argument over the proposed amendment following rejection, by a 5-7 vote, of an Aug. 17 request by Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) to hold public hearings on the special tax measure. Subsequently, however, Chairman Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) ordered public hearings in view of the controversy that had developed. The Committee held hearings Aug. 31 and Sept. 1, and voted on the latter day to postpone further action on HR 7502 until the 1966 session. Also postponed with the bill and the Dirksen-Long amendment were several other proposed committee amendments including one that would have enlarged the limitation on the amount of the 7-percent investment credit which could be used to reduce a company's taxes (a benefit to low-profit companies) and would have extended the period of years over which unused credit could be carried forward by regulated transportation corporations.

Disaster Tax Provision

As passed by the House, without debate, HR 7502 revised income tax treatment of property losses attributable to major disasters. The bill was designed to benefit taxpayers who incurred losses on personal property and certain types of business property as a result of destruction or damage by a storm, flood or other casualty which was designated by the President as a major disaster. The bill allowed such losses to be deducted from regular, or "ordinary," income, rather than being treated--as required by existing law--under taxation of capital gains and losses. Under the existing situation, many taxpayers could use casualty losses of the type covered by the bill only to offset long-term capital gains. It generally would be more advantageous to the taxpayer to be able to deduct from ordinary income on which tax rates are higher. In addition, a taxpayer might have few or no capital gains against which to offset the casualty losses.

The bill was an outgrowth of the numerous natural disasters in the United States during 1964 and early 1965 which produced severe casualty losses for many persons. It was introduced by Rep. Al Ullman (D Ore.). Areas of the Pacific Northwest were badly damaged by the 1964-65 disasters. (See story p. 676)

In reporting the bill, the House Ways and Means Committee said that "in the case of a major disaster.... relief is warranted from the existing treatment of casualty losses..."

DIRKSEN-LONG AMENDMENT

Regulatory agencies allowed utilities and other rate-regulated industries (gas, electric and telephone companies, pipelines, airlines, bus lines, railroads, etc.) to charge rates which compensated them for their expenses of doing business, plus taxes, plus a reasonable rate of return on their investment in their regulated operations.

Following enactment of the 7-percent and 3-percent investment tax credits in 1962, the Federal Power Commission took the lead in demanding that these credits be "passed through" to consumers, on the grounds that rates charged by utilities should cover only taxes actually paid. (The credits reduced taxes of companies which invested in new plant and equipment.) However, Congress in the 1964 Revenue Act declared that regulatory agencies could not require companies receiving these tax credits to reduce their rates accordingly. (1964 Almanac p. 534)

The Dirksen-Long amendment posed a somewhat similar issue, and arose from FPC efforts to require regulated companies which reduced their tax liabilities by filing consolidated returns (with affiliates which were entitled to tax credits) to "pass through" the savings to their consumers.

The amendment permitted a group of affiliated companies which gained a tax saving through a consolidated return to assign the saving to the companies which reduced the liability of the group. Regulatory agencies would be required in such cases to ignore the tax saving, and treat the regulated companies in the group as though each had paid its taxes separately.

In an example of how the amendment would work, used during the Finance Committee's hearings, a regulated utility, for instance a pipeline company that earns $100 million a year, forms an affiliation with a new company entitled to a sizable tax credit, for instance a company that is entitled to a $20-million tax credit because it is buying and installing a pipeline that is not yet producing revenue. The first company would ordinarily owe $50 million in taxes, but by filing a consolidated return with the second company, the total tax liability is reduced to $30 million. A regulatory agency could currently hold that the first company's tax costs had gone down by $20 million and seek to reduce its rates. The Dirksen amendment would permit the first company to transfer the $20 million dollars to the second company, and would require regulatory agencies to consider the transfer as the equivalent of tax paid. This would mean that the regulatory agencies could not require the first company to reduce its rates.

Opponents of the amendment said that it would permit a utility in one part of the country to subsidize an affiliate that was attempting to get started against competition in another part of the country, and to charge the costs of the subsidization to its own consumers while permitting the affiliate to charge lower, more competitive rates. Such was said to be true of a case currently before the FPC concerning Tennessee Gas Transmission Co. and El Paso Natural Gas Co. El Paso, which served the lucrative Southern California market, complained that Tennessee Gas wanted to use the bookkeeping device to start competing in Southern California. (An application by a Tennessee Gas affiliate to sell natural gas in Los Angeles was still pending before the FPC in March 1966.)

SENATE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

ACTION -- Sept. 1 postponed further action on HR 7502 until 1966. On Aug. 31 and Sept. 1, the Committee held hearings on the Dirksen-Long amendment.

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 31 -- Joseph C. Swidler, chairman of the FPC, said that the amendment "could vitally affect the consumers of natural gas and electric energy." It would tend "to raise utility rates and...open the door to business arrangements which unfairly transfer from the consumer to the stockholder tax savings now available to reduce rates.... For one thing it would create strong incentives for acquisition of net loss affiliates thus introducing additional elements of speculative diversification into the utility management structure."

Another possible consequence, he said, was that "if all the savings within a group of affiliates are massed by management for the benefit of one of them, the favored company can be given enormous advantages in competitive situations as compared with companies which must survive on the strength of their individual tax situation." Swidler said, "Allocation of the benefits of consolidated tax returns involves a delicate balance between consumer and investor.... It does not seem...to make sense to entrust the balance to company management when the stakes for the consumers of the nation are so high."

Rosel H. Hyde, acting chairman of the FCC, testified against the amendment and stressed along with Swidler the general disruption of the regulatory process that it would cause.

The Treasury Department proclaimed neutrality on the issue saying only that the loss of tax revenue was acceptable.

FPC Member Disagrees with Chairman

Sept. 1 -- Federal Power Commissioner Lawrence J. O'Connor Jr., supporting the amendment said, "Congress has decided to forego tax revenues for the purpose of encouraging economic expansion. Can a regulatory agency of that Congress then utilize the tax reductions achieved by filing a consolidated return for the purpose of benefitting the consumer. Or...are regulated companies to be permitted to participate in the benefits.... If the tax incentives cannot be realized, the regulated companies will cease to utilize a consolidated return." O'Connor supported the proposed amendment but suggested a proviso be added "which would permit a regulatory agency to review the propriety of allocations between affiliates."

N. Knowles Davis, vice president of Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., said that under the amendment no rate shift would be allowed from either California to New England and the Middle Atlantic states or vice-versa. The amendment, the witness said, assured that each company would receive the tax benefits only from its own operations and these benefits would not be appropriated by another company.

Depreciation Allowances

The Treasury Department Feb. 19 announced new rules liberalizing the manner in which income tax deductions for depreciation of plant and equipment could be taken, and at the same time limiting the ways in which such deductions could be calculated. The Department estimated that the regulations would increase depreciation tax benefits during 1965 by $600 million to $800 million.

The changes in depreciation standards had been announced Feb. 17 by President Johnson in a speech before a National Industrial Conference Board meeting in Washington, D.C. The President, who did not describe the details of the regulations, said they would "further encourage business to scrap old equipment and bring in new -- and they will further help business to cut costs but to raise efficiency, to hold the line on prices but to keep our expansion going."

The new measures liberalized depreciation rules that had been instituted July 12, 1962, by executive action of President Kennedy. The 1962 rules had consolidated the more than 5,000 separate items on which depreciation rates were set into about 75 general categories, and had reduced the average depreciable life allowed for manufacturing assets from 19 years to 12 years. Taxpayers were allowed to switch to the new depreciable lives and pay taxes on that basis. After three years, the Internal Revenue Service was to apply an arithmetical formula to determine whether a company's actual depreciation practices in replacing machinery were consistent with its depreciation deductions. (1962 Almanac p. 484)

To provide taxpayers with a method of demonstrating that their depreciation deductions were justified, the 1962 regulations established a "reserve ratio" test. The "reserve ratio" was the ratio of the total depreciation deductions taken on assets still in use (called the "depreciation reserve") to the original cost of the assets. Failure of the taxpayer's reserve ratio to meet the Treasury standard could indicate that the taxpayer had been recovering the cost of equipment too quickly -- that is, over a period substantially shorter than its actual useful life.

The Treasury Department said the new regulations announced Feb. 19 were intended to solve two problems that had become apparent since 1962. The first evolved from the fact that many taxpayers would not have brought their equipment replacement practices into line with their deductions by the end of the three-year transitional period, which for most taxpayers -- those on a calendar-year-basis -- meant the end of 1965. To assist such taxpayers, the Department established a new, liberalized guideline under which the equipment replacement practices of most taxpayers would be acceptable, and extended the three-year transitional period.

The second problem experienced under the 1962 regulations, according to the Treasury Department, was that some taxpayers derived unjustified tax benefits through certain methods of computing depreciation. The Treasury Department announced new limitations on these techniques of calculating depreciation.

TAX-EXEMPT FOUNDATIONS

The Treasury Department Feb. 8, 1965, in a report to the Senate Finance and House Ways and Means Comittees, recommended new restrictions on the activities of private tax-exempt charitable foundations. The proposals, aimed at preventing foundations from using their funds for private gains and reducing foundations' economic power exercised through their control of private commercial businesses, required legislation. Congress, however, failed to take any action on the recommendations in 1965 due mainly to the fact that the Committees with jurisdiction over tax matters already had higher priority legislation -- such as medical care for the aged, Social Security benefits and excise taxes -- on their calendars.

BACKGROUND -- The Treasury report, requested by the Senate and House Committees in 1963, was an outgrowth of more than a year of study by the Treasury. It was prompted in part by Rep. Wright Patman's (D Texas) findings that many "philanthropic" foundations had abused their tax-exempt privileges to gain control of industrial and commercial enterprises and had operated in competition with small businesses which did not enjoy similar tax advantages. Patman and the Select Small Business Subcommittee on Foundations: Their Impact on Small Business, which he chaired, had been conducting an investigation of private foundations since 1961. Patman issued three interim reports between 1962 and 1964 and conducted Subcommittee hearings in 1964. (1964 Almanac p. 987)

President Johnson, in his Jan. 25, 1965, Budget Message said that he would "present recommendations to correct certain abuses in the tax-exempt privileges enjoyed by private foundations." In his Jan. 27, 1966, Economic Report, the President urged Congress to act on the Treasury's 1965 recommendations.

Recommendations

Although the report said that the "preponderant" number of private foundations operated without abusing their tax privilege, it indicated that the Department's investigation had uncovered evidence of "serious" problems among a "minority" of such organizations. It located six of the major problem areas and proposed the following solutions:

Self-Dealing -- generally prohibit foundations from engaging in financial transactions with any "substantial" donor, officer, director or trustee, or any party related to them, except to pay "reasonable compensation" for services and to make purchases of supplies. This recommendation, an outgrowth of a provision passed by the House in 1950 but not agreed to by the Senate, would attempt to prevent a foundation's assets from being diverted from the foundation's charitable purpose to the private advantage of its donors. The existing law, according to the Treasury report, prohibited only donor-foundation transactions which "violate an arm's length standard," and had produced "unsatisfactory" results.

Deferred Charitable Benefits -- require "non-operating" foundations (those which make gifts rather than operate active charitable institutions themselves) to disburse all of their net income (exclusive of long-term capital gains) within a period of approximately one year to "active charitable operations." This recommendation would alleviate the time lag between the loss of tax revenue from the immediate tax deduction and the public benefit derived from devoting an equivalent amount of funds to active charitable programs. Under existing law, such vague standards as "unreasonable" and "substantial" had proved "inadequate as well as difficult and expensive to administer," the report said, in attempting to prevent undue delay in use of tax-exempt funds.

Business Involvement -- prohibit a foundation from owning, either directly or through stock holding, 20 percent or more of a business unrelated to the charitable activities of the foundation. The Treasury arrived at the 20-percent figure because it felt, according to the report, that "effective control of a corporation very frequently resides in a body of stock representing 20 percent of its voting power." The report said that "taxable businesses are often placed at a competitive disadvantage" because of tax loopholes and other advantages available to foundations. Among the examples cited of foundations involved in business was an unnamed organization which held controlling interests in 26 separate organizations, including a metropolitan newspaper worth approximately $10.5 million, the largest radio broadcasting station in the state, a life insurance business of book value exceeding $20 million, a lumber company, several banks, three large hotels, a garage and a variety of office buildings. "These properties," the report said, "constitute an economic empire of substantial power and influence." Newspaper reports identified the foundation as the Houston Endowment, Inc. of Texas.

Family Control -- defer charitable deductions for gifts of family corporation stock to a foundation until the foundation sells or contributes the stock to a public charity or until the donor's control over the corporation or assets ceases. This recommendation would prevent families from using foundations "as convenient vehicles" for maintaining control of private corporations, the report said. Donors had accomplished this, it explained, by transferring voting stock in a family-controlled corporation to a foundation which the family also controlled in order to "substantially" reduce the family's income, gift and estate taxes.

Unrelated Financial Transaction -- bar a foundation from engaging in all speculative practices and from borrowing for investment purposes; confine a foundation's loans to those which are "necessary, safe and appropriate for charitable fiduciaries." Although the report cited a 1963 Securities and Exchange Commission report which indicated that foundation speculating was not a severe problem (the average rates of turnover for foundations in 1963 were within a 1-2 percent range), the Treasury underscored the risks involved in trading and speculating with assets "which have been committed to charity." While the Treasury Department's statistics showed that borrowing accounted for less than 2.5 percent of total foundation assets in 1962, the report gave examples of the "limited" number of private foundations which had "borrowed heavily" to acquire productive assets. It also found evidence of certain foundations making loans without adequate security and with the "fundamental motivation" of creating "unwarranted" private advantage.

Broadening Management -- prohibit foundation donors and related parties from constituting more than 25 percent of the organization's governing body after 25 years of existence; allow "substantial" donors of foundations which had currently been in existence for 25 years to continue their influence for five to ten years from the present. This recommendation, coupled with the previous proposals curbing excessive and abusive donor influence over foundations, would seek to prevent foundations from existing in "perpetuity." "Broadening the base of foundation management," the report said, would bring "fresh views" to the organization, "combat parochialism" and increase the "flexibility" of the institution in "responding to social needs and changes." It would also provide a means for eliminating those foundations which have "doubtful or minimal utility."

OTHER PROPOSALS

The report also found evidence of donors contributing unproductive property and "tax-free bailouts" of corporation earnings to foundations in order to secure "substantial" tax deductions. Although the Treasury considered abuses such as these of "less general significance," it found them "sufficiently serious to warrant remedial action." It proposed the following recommendations:

- When unproductive property is transferred to a private foundation, charitable deductions to the donor should not be applicable until the foundation sells the property, makes it productive, or uses it for charitable purposes.
- When preferred corporation stock, whose common stock is owned by the donor, is contributed to a foundation, the donor's charitable deduction should be reduced by the amount of ordinary income which the donor would have obtained if he had sold the stock.
- Where a donor obtains an income tax deduction for transferring interest in a property to a foundation, but maintains sufficient involvement with the transferred property to increase his estate tax deduction, the value of the property should be excluded from the base on which his estate tax marital deduction is computed.
- The penalty for a foundation's failure to file an IRS information return should be reduced from up to one year imprisonment and a fine not exceeding $10,000 to $10 for each day of delay with a maximum limit of $5,000.

The Treasury Department said its proposals were based on the recognition that private foundations "can and do make a major contribution to our society." The recommendations, the report said, "seek not only to end diversions, distractions, and abuses, but to stimulate and foster the active pursuit of charitable ends which the tax laws seek to encourage." Any "restraints" imposed by the recommendations would be "far outweighed" by benefits resulting from "elimination of the shadow which the existence of abuse now casts upon the private foundation area."

In preparing the report, the Department had evaluated three broad criticisms which had been directed at foundations: the weaknesses inherent in the foundation-donor relationship which had often resulted in "undue delay" to society of the benefits to be derived from the charitable contribution; the "disproportionately large segment" which foundations constituted in our national economy; and the "dangerous concentrations of economic and social power" which foundations represented. Treasury's response to the first criticism was the restrictive recommendations proposed; the second criticism, the report said, "lacks factual basis"; and the third, it said, was "for the present" being adequately handled by the foundations themselves and did not necessitate establishing a separate regulatory agency to supervise foundation activities. The report concluded that "prompt and effective action" (enactment of its recommendations) was "preferable" to placing a general time limit on the life of foundations, as had been proposed by Rep. Patman and former IRS Commissioner Mortimer M. Caplin. (1964 Almanac p. 989)

The report also included a statistical survey covering about 1,300 (including all of the largest foundations) of the approximately 15,000 private foundations estimated by the Treasury to be in existence in 1962. It found that the 1962 assets of all private foundations had a total market value of $16.3 billion. About two-thirds of this foundation wealth was owned by the 175 largest foundations, whose book-value assets exceeded $10 billion.

The Department also estimated that, of the nearly 1,000 foundations with assets over $1 million in 1962, 165 had been organized before 1930. Of the nearly 9,000 foundations with assets under $100,000, which the Treasury had classified as "small," 72 percent had been established since 1950; 56 percent of those with assets of more than $100,000 had been created since 1950. The proportion of the total wealth of individuals owned by foundations, the Department said, had increased from 0.3 or 0.5 percent in 1930 to about 0.85 percent in 1962.

Reaction

The Ford Foundation Feb. 7, before the report was released, issued a statement supporting the Treasury's general conclusions. It read: "The vast majority of foundations now operate entirely in the public interest, but we would favor any steps required for further safeguards, to the end that American society can continue to benefit from these significant contributions foundations make to its well-being."

Two Democratic Members of Congress who had been instrumental in prompting the Treasury study criticized the report for not being specific enough. On Feb 8, Rep. Patman said the recommendations "do not go far enough." He specifically criticized the failure to recommend a federal agency to regulate foundations, failure to propose a limit on the life of a foundation of 25 years, and the proposed ceiling on the amount of stock a foundation could own (Patman suggested 3 percent instead of Treasury's recommendation of 19 percent).

Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.), a member of the Senate Finance Committee, said many of the recommendations amounted to mere "wrist-slapping." He said that proposals by the Department's legal experts must have been "altered and softened" by Treasury officials.

LIFE LINE EXEMPTION The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) March 29 confirmed that it had revoked the tax-exempt status of the Life Line Foundation, which was operated by ultra-conservative, multi-millionaire Texas oilman H.L. Hunt. IRS said the Foundation lost its tax-exempt status on the grounds that its activities were of a political rather than educational nature. The Foundation, which sponsored daily 15-minute programs on 384 radio stations, was first granted tax-exempt status in 1952 as an educational institution. It was then known as "Facts Forum." The IRS ruling stated that upon recent examination of Life Line's broadcasts it was found that they were "devoted to political commentary...and did not constitute 'instruction of the public' within the contemplation of the income tax regulations...."

Reportedly, Life Line was one of several right wing foundations whose tax-exempt status was investigated and revoked by IRS during 1965.

REVISION OF BANK MERGER ACT DEBATED

S 1698 -- Reported by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 299) June 8, 1965.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote June 11.
- Reported by House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 1179) Oct. 19.

Congress in 1965 was unable to resolve the question of whether the Justice Department, through antitrust action, should try to upset bank mergers approved by an appropriate federal regulatory agency. At issue was the Bank Merger Act of 1960, which was an amendment to the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

A bill (S 1698) passed by the Senate, but not by the House, was designed to clarify Congressional intent in enacting the 1960 law.

The Bank Merger Act prohibited mergers of federally insured banks without the prior approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve Board or the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC), depending on whether the newly created bank was a national bank, a state member bank of the Federal Reserve System or a non-Reserve-member bank, respectively. The Justice Department could give its advice but not veto a merger. The Act did not expressly exempt bank mergers from the antitrust laws, and its legislative history left unclear whether such exemption was intended. The federal courts in several cases between 1963 and 1965 held that certain mergers consummated pursuant to the Act were in violation of antitrust laws.

In considering the legislation before it in 1965, Congress debated two issues: whether bank mergers should remain subject to antitrust laws or only to the less stringent specifications of the Bank Merger Act; and whether bank mergers consummated before the 1963 Supreme Court ruling that brought them under the Clayton Act should be exempted from further Justice Department proceedings.

Senate and House Bills Compared

As approved by the Senate, S 1698:

Restricted the Justice Department to 30 days in which to contest a proposed merger approved by one of the federal banking agencies.

Exempted from further prosecution under antitrust laws six bank mergers under prosecution by the Justice Department.

As approved by the House Banking and Currency Committee, S 1698:

Required courts to follow guidelines of the 1960 Bank Merger Act rather than the antitrust statutes in their consideration of bank merger challenges. The guidelines were that the banking agencies must consider the financial history of the banks involved; the adequacy of the capital structure, future earnings prospects and character of management of merging banks and the institution to be formed; and the merger's effect on competition and the public interest.

Exempted from pending antitrust action three banks that had merged before the Supreme Court's ruling.

Six Bank Mergers at Issue

The Supreme Court ruled in 1963 that, despite the Bank Merger Act, bank mergers were subject to Section 7 of the Clayton Act. In 1964 the Court also brought bank mergers under Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act. The decisions, upholding the Justice Department and overruling federal bank regulatory agencies, brought consternation to many banking officials.

The decision that appeared to precipitate the 1965 legislation in Congress was a March 10, 1965, federal district court order that ruled invalid the 1961 merger of the Manufacturer's Trust Co. and Hanover Bank of New York City. The merged bank, Manufacturer's Hanover Trust Co., with assets of $7 billion, was the fourth largest bank in the country.

Manufacturer's Hanover was one of six merged banks that would have been exempted from further antitrust prosecution under the Senate version of S 1698. Under the House Committee version, only three of the banks -- those whose mergers were consummated before the 1963 Supreme Court decision -- would have been exempted. One of these was Manufacturer's Hanover. The six cases:

Mergers Consummated Before 1963 Ruling.

- First National Bank & Trust Co. and Security Trust Co. Lexington, Ky. -- The Supreme Court ruled April 6, 1964, that the merger violated Section 1 of the Sherman Act and the district court entered an order for divestiture March 18, 1965. Divestiture was delayed pending outcome of the legislation in Congress. The merger had been approved in 1961 by the Comptroller of the Currency.
- Continental-Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. and City National Bank & Trust Co., Chicago, Ill. -- Application to merge was approved by the Comptroller of the Currency Aug. 24, 1961, over objection of the Justice Department. The Department filed suit Aug. 29, 1961, alleging violations of Section 1 of the Sherman Act and Section 7 of the Clayton Act. The case had not gone to trial by January 1966.
- Manufacturer's Trust Co. and the Hanover Bank, New York City -- A New York federal district court ruled March 10, 1965, that the merger violated both Section 1 of the Sherman Act and Section 7 of the Clayton Act. The merger had been approved by the Federal Reserve Board in 1961.

Mergers Not Consummated Before 1963 Ruling.

- Crocker-Anglo National Bank of San Francisco and Citizens National Bank of Los Angeles -- Comptroller of the Currency approved the merger May 3, 1963. Merger was opposed by the Justice Department, which filed suit Oct 8, 1963, alleging violations of Section 1 of the Sherman Act and Section 7 of the Clayton Act. Trial was completed in federal district court in San Francisco June 18, 1964, but no decision was announced prior to 1966.
- Third National Bank and Nashville Bank & Trust Co., Nashville, Tenn. -- Comptroller of the Currency approved the merger Aug. 4, 1964. Justice Department filed suit Aug. 10, alleging violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act and Section 7 of the Clayton Act. The case did not go to trial prior to January 1966.

● Mercantile Trust Co. and Security Trust Co., of St. Louis, Mo. -- Comptroller of the Currency approved the merger June 28, 1965, over the objection of the Justice Department, which filed suit July 7, alleging violations of Section 1 of the Sherman Act and Section 7 of the Clayton Act. The case was pending in the federal district court in St. Louis.

CONGRESSIONAL ACTION

As originally introduced by Senate Banking and Currency Committee Chairman A. Willis Robertson (D Va.), S 1698 would have prohibited Justice Department antitrust action against any approved bank mergers. However, following objections to that bill by the Independent Bankers Assn. of America (IBAA) and indication that such legislation would meet strong opposition in the House, the Committee instead adopted a substitute, offered by William Proxmire (D Wis.), allowing the Justice Department 30 days in which to object to an approved merger on antitrust grounds.

The amended version of S 1698 was supported by the American Bankers Assn., the IBAA, most other banker groups, and the Federal Reserve Board. The Committee did not solicit views from the Comptroller of the Currency or the FDIC. The Justice Department was asked to state its position, but failed to respond.

Two months later, however, Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach told a House Subcommittee that it would be "outrageous" to exempt approved bank mergers from antitrust action. He said, "Banking cannot and should not be distinguished from other industries for which no special procedure is proposed."

S 1698 was vigorously opposed by Chairman Wright Patman (D Texas) of the House Banking and Currency Committee. At a subcommittee hearing Aug. 13, Patman charged that S 1698 was really a bill to give the six merged banks "special treatment" and had "all the earmarks of a private bill" for their relief.

After Patman appeared willing to block Committee action on S 1698, a bare majority of the Committee, in a meeting Patman claimed was illegal, reported out the bill with amendments sponsored by Reps. Thomas L. Ashley (D Ohio) and Richard L. Ottinger (D N.Y.).

Background

REFERENCES -- Antitrust Law (1956 Almanac p. 523); Bank Mergers (1959 Almanac p. 277, 1960 Almanac p. 301).

In 1950 Congress amended Section 7 of the Clayton Act to prohibit acquisition of a corporation subject to the Federal Trade Commission's jurisdiction if it would substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly. Since banks were not subject to the FTC, it was widely believed that the Act did not control most bank mergers. Its applicability was not spelled out until the Supreme Court's decision in the Philadelphia bank merger case in 1963.

The Eisenhower Administration, through the Justice Department, asked Congress in 1956 to extend Section 7 to the acquisition of assets by banks. Although the House passed the bill in 1956, the Senate took a different approach and no legislation was enacted. The same situation arose in 1959. In 1960, however, the two chambers agreed on a bill permitting bank regulatory agencies to approve bank mergers if found to be in the public interest. The House Committee, which authored the compromise Bank Merger Act, said in its report, "Some bank mergers are in the public interest even though they lessen competition to a degree." But it added that "approval of a merger should depend on a positive showing of some benefit to be derived from it."

During debate, Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D Ark.), who had been chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee until 1959, said the House and Senate agreed that control of bank mergers should be based on both banking and competitive factors and that the anti-merger provisions of the Clayton Act "should continue to be inapplicable to bank mergers."

The 1960 Act required the bank regulatory agency to obtain the views of the Attorney General and the other bank

(Continued on next page)

Lobbying by Bankers

The American Bankers Assn., representing 98.5 percent of the 14,000 main offices of U.S. banks and most of their branches, conducted a "mass" campaign for S 1698. Three of the merged banks affected by the bill also engaged lobbyists in 1965 to work for passage of the bill. One of the banks' registered lobbyists was ex-Rep. Albert Rains (D Ala. 1945-65), who had been the second-ranking Democrat on the House Banking and Currency Committee until 1965. (For details, see p. 854)

American Bankers Assn. president Reno Odlin, in answer to a query by Rep. Patman, wrote Aug. 31, 1965, that the ABA had made a "mass effort" for House passage of S 1698. Odlin said it was the first piece of legislation since the 1962 Revenue Act on which ABA used a "mass communication technique," asking all its member banks "to get in touch with their Member of the House of Representatives on S 1698. Odlin wrote, "Passage of S 1698 was deemed to be so important to the future of banking that the broadest possible indication of banking's views was sought."

ABA is not registered under the 1946 Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act but it employed in 1965 six individuals who did register with Congress.

Law firms representing two of the merged banks exempted from antitrust prosecution under S 1698 hired lobbyists to work for the bill. Manufacturer's Hanover of New York employed the New York law firm of Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett, and Continental-Illinois of Chicago employed the Chicago firm of Mayer, Friedlich, Spiess, Tierney, Brown & Platt of Chicago. The two law firms jointly hired two lobbyists to work for them on the bill -- ex-Rep. Rains and Laurance G. Henderson, a Senate committee aide in 1952-54.

The Mercantile Trust Co. of St. Louis, which the House bill would permit to be tried under the new bank merger standards set forth in the bill, hired the Washington, D.C., law firm of Miller & Chevalier to work for the legislation.

All of the law firms above, as well as Rains and Henderson, registered as lobbyists in 1965.

agencies before granting or withholding consent to a bank merger, but it did not give a veto power to the Justice Department.

The Department, however, beginning on Feb. 25, 1961, brought suit against several bank mergers, contending they violated Section 7 of the Clayton Act and/or Section 1 of the Sherman Act. (In the 1960-1965 period, almost 800 bank mergers were allowed to take effect.)

Court Decisions

In 1963 the Supreme Court ruled (United States v. Philadelphia National Bank) that a merger of the Girard Trust Corn Exchange Bank with the Philadelphia National Bank violated Section 7 of the Clayton Act. This decision extended the coverage of Section 7 to banks.

The Court held that Congress, in the 1950 amendments to the Clayton Act, intended to give Section 7 "a reach which would bring the entire range of corporate amalgamations, from pure stock acquisitions to assets acquisitions, within the scope of Section 7." The Court found that the 1960 Bank Merger Act neither expressly nor by implication made bank mergers immune from antitrust laws. The merged Philadelphia bank was dissolved.

In 1964 the Supreme Court decided a case (United States v. First National Bank & Trust Company of Lexington) that was brought under Section 1 of the Sherman Act. In disallowing the merger of the two Lexington, Ky., banks the Court said that "where merging companies are major competitive factors...the elimination of significant competition between them, by merger, itself constitutes a violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act." The decision further clarified the Government's power under antitrust law to challenge bank mergers. In dissent, Justice John M. Harlan said the decision sounded "the death knell of Congressional purpose in the Bank Merger Act of 1960."

On March 10, 1965, a New York federal district court held (U.S. v. Manufacturer's Hanover Trust Co.) that the merger of the two New York banks violated both the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

Bank Regulation Hearings

Before 1965 action began on the bank merger bill (S 1698), the House Banking and Currency, Bank Supervision and Insurance Subcommittee held hearings on federal bank regulatory agencies. Testimony was heard Feb. 12, April 14, 28-30 on two bills (HR 107, HR 6885) to reorganize and unify bank regulatory functions.

BACKGROUND -- HR 107 was introduced Jan. 4 by Subcommittee Chairman Abraham J. Multer (D N.Y.). It would center all federal bank regulatory functions in a new Federal Banking Commission. HR 6885, introduced March 29 by Committee Chairman Wright Patman (D Texas), would assign these functions to the Secretary of the Treasury. Both bills would abolish the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, but would preserve unchanged the insurance functions of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the monetary and credit policy-setting functions of the Federal Reserve Board. (See box)

The House hearings were occasioned by the recent high incidence of bank failures and evidence of dissension and lack of cooperation among the three federal bank regulatory agencies. In March hearings by the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee on the failure of the San Francisco National Bank, officials of the Federal Reserve System complained that the Comptroller's Office had withheld information which would have shown irregularities in the operations of the San Francisco bank. (See story p. 1533)

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 12 -- J. L. Robertson, a member of the Federal Reserve Board, supported Multer's bill for a Federal Banking Commission. He said federal banking problems would not be solved by "changing faces or by knocking heads together," for the "defect is in the structure."

April 14 -- F. Shelby Cullom, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Assn. of Supervisors of State Banks (NASSB), opposed both HR 107 and HR 6885. He stated that placing federal bank supervisory functions in a single administrative agency would "lead to a monolithic approach to banking" and would "mark an end to the dual banking system" -- the system of separate federally chartered and state-chartered banks. Instead, Cullom said, the NASSB supported a measure (HR 7133), introduced by Rep. William S. Moorhead (D Pa.), "which establishes the FDIC as a superstructure above both the Comptroller and the state bank supervisors exercising powers to the extent of its functions as an insuring agency." Cullom added that HR 7133 would leave certain functions to the Comptroller, such as supervision of all national banks, and to the Federal Reserve Board, such as establishing monetary and credit policies, while placing bank chartering and insurance functions under the FDIC.

Federal Bank Regulatory Agencies

There are three principal federal bank regulatory agencies:

Comptroller of the Currency -- Created by the National Bank Act of 1863, the Comptroller is vested with general supervisory powers over the 4,800 national banks. He issues charters, oversees bank organization and liquidation and conducts examinations. The Comptroller also passes on bank mergers where the resulting institution is a national bank. He is an official of the Treasury Department.

Federal Reserve Board -- Created by the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, the "Fed" is vested with examining, auditing and other supervisory authority over the 4,800 national banks and 1,500 state-chartered banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System (FRS). Its chief function is the determination of general monetary and credit policies. The Fed also passes on bank mergers where the resulting institution is a state member bank of the FRS. It is an independent federal agency.

Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation -- Created by the Federal Deposit Act of 1933, the FDIC's chief function is to insure deposits in the 4,800 national banks, the 1,500 state-chartered banks that are members of the FRS and also the 7,600 state-chartered banks that are not members of the FRS but that qualify to be insured. The FDIC also acts as receiver for all national banks and certain state banks when placed in receivership. In addition, the FDIC is required to examine all insured banks that are not members of the FRS, and has the discretionary authority to examine any insured bank. It is an independent agency.

April 28 -- Archie K. Davis, vice president of the American Bankers Assn. (ABA), said: "We fail to understand why, because of certain jurisdictional disputes, there should be this strong effort to weaken the dual banking system by drastically altering the basic regulatory structure which has worked so well for so many decades." Davis supported retention of the current regulatory structure, but with a "more formalized consultative procedure" among the three agencies and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which provides credit reserves for savings and home-financing institutions, and the Bureau of Federal Credit Unions, which is a cooperative association making credit available to federal employees.

April 29 -- K.A. Randall, newly elected chairman of FDIC, minimized the significance of "a few bizarre" bank failures in recent months and noted that differences in the views of the three banking agencies "are few, usually very technical and may be beneficial in experimentation." Randall said, "The reason that all previous efforts to combine bank supervision into a tidy, centralized organization hasn't succeeded is simply because our system of Government and our financial system aren't tidy and monolithic."

April 30 -- Comptroller of the Currency James J. Saxon told the Subcommittee, "There is widespread fear throughout the banking industry of centralization of the Federal Government's regulatory functions." He said that conflicts between the three agencies had been exaggerated, and added: "If this is chaos, it is the most profitable and useful chaos we've ever seen." Saxon said diffusion of regulatory authority "offers the best safeguard against stagnation in bank regulation and the best hope that the banking industry will be allowed the freedom to make its maximum contribution to the nation's economic growth and development."

Later Hearings

The full House Committee held hearings on HR 107 and HR 6885 June 29 and 30.

June 29 -- Saxon opposed both bills, stating that it was "wholesome" for differences of opinion to exist among the federal agencies. There had been no complaints about lack of coordination prior to his becoming Comptroller in 1961, Saxon said, because previously "nothing was done" and national banking was "stagnated" due to the absence of new ideas and aggressive leadership. Saxon "suggested," rather than "recommended," that Congress place sole authority for national bank regulation in the Comptroller's office and reduce federal regulation of state banks, leaving more authority to state regulatory agencies. The Federal Reserve Board, Saxon added, should concern itself only with monetary, and not regulatory, policies.

Committee Chairman Patman accused Saxon of 29 illegal actions during his tenure as Comptroller. The charges ranged from what Patman described as "direct violation of express provisions" of law to misinterpretations and misapplications of law. Among the charges was one that Saxon refused "for about one year (to) permit access to (his office's) examination reports to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp."

June 30 -- Saxon testified that he had "no question as to the legal and economic soundness" of the actions cited by Patman. He said the charges reflected a "fundamental misunderstanding of the Congressionally mandated function" of the Comptroller's office and assumed "that any departure from the position of any Comptroller... since 1863...is somehow improper." He explained that the National Bank Act of 1863 was "not a merchandise mail-order catalog" but, rather, like the Constitution, which changed "to respond to the needs of our growing industry and commerce...." He said his principal aim while Comptroller had been to "modernize" the regulatory structure. He added, "Clearly, a rigid, stagnant backward-looking regulatory, administrative, and procedural policy can in time only strangle the commercial banking business and with it the business community and economy of the country."

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- March 23 -- The Federal Reserve Board, in its annual report to Congress, proposed that all of the nation's commercial banks be required to join the Federal Reserve System. Under the current arrangement, the Federal Reserve's 6,300 member banks were at a competitive disadvantage because they were required to hold higher reserve funds than the 7,600 banks not members of the System, the Board said.

July 6 -- Treasury Secretary Henry H. Fowler announced the creation of a Coordinating Committee on Bank Regulation, comprised of: Saxon; William McChesney Martin Jr., chairman of the Federal Reserve Board; FDIC Chairman Randall; and John E. Horne, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Reports said appointment of the Committee indicated that the Administration, for the time being at least, had rejected any idea of restructuring federal bank regulatory functions.

July 8 -- Saxon asked to intervene as a defendant in a Justice Department antitrust suit against the proposed merger of two St. Louis banks, the Mercantile Trust Co. and Security Trust Co., which Saxon had approved. Two previous attempts by Saxon to intervene in other suits against bank mergers had been rejected by the courts.

BANK MERGER BILL

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HELD HEARINGS -- May 19-21 on S 1698, which prohibited the Justice Department from bringing antitrust suits against bank mergers approved by federal regulatory agencies.

BACKGROUND -- S 1698 was introduced April 5 by Sen. A. Willis Robertson (D Va.), chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee and its Financial Institutions Subcommittee. Robertson said the legislation was needed in order to clarify the Bank Merger Act of 1960, which he said had been "erroneously interpreted" in court decisions.

On the issue of Congressional intent, the Supreme Court held in its 1963 Philadelphia bank decision: "The legislative history of the Act seems clearly to refute any suggestion that applicability of the antitrust laws was to be affected. Both the House and Senate Committee reports stated that the Act would not affect in any way the applicability of the antitrust laws to bank acquisitions."

In a dissenting opinion to the Supreme Court's 1964 decision on the Kentucky bank merger, Justices John M. Harlan and Potter Stewart said, "In combination with the Philadelphia National Bank case, today's decision effectively precludes any possibility that the will of Congress with respect to bank mergers will be carried out. The Congress has plainly indicated that it does not intend that mergers in the banking field be measured solely by the antitrust considerations which are applied in other industries."

(Continued on next page)

HEARINGS

TESTIMONY -- May 19 -- Federal Reserve Board Chairman William McChesney Martin Jr. expressed "complete support" for S 1698. Martin said that Congress in 1960 had implied that bank mergers were exempt from the antitrust laws and quoted a statement from the House report on the legislation stating that situations might arise when " 'approval of (a) merger would be in the public interest, even though this would result in a substantial lessening of competition'." Recent court litigation, Martin said, "makes it unmistakably clear that banks and their customers now face the uncertainty that, even though merger proposals receive the advance approval of the appropriate federal banking agency, the transactions are subject to veto in the courts on the basis of competitive factors alone." He stressed, "A high degree of public confidence is peculiarly essential to a sound and vigorous banking structure."

Should Congress "be unable to agree on" S 1698 -- due to House opposition centered in House Banking and Currency Committee Chairman Wright Patman (D Texas) and House Judiciary Committee Chairman Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) -- Martin said, an alternative approach might be to amend the 1960 Act to give the Justice Department a specific time in which to challenge an approved merger and, if a challenge were not made, the merger could be consummated and thereafter exempt from antitrust action.

May 20 -- G. Russell Clark, chairman of the Bank of North America and a former New York State Superintendent of Banks who took part in approval of the 1961 merger of the Hanover Bank with the Manufacturer's Trust Co., urged speedy approval of S 1698. Clark said that "the substantial difficulties which must be overcome" in separating a large, merged financial institution "cannot be underestimated." He added, "The effect on depositors, borrowers, stockholders and the general public cannot be projected with any degree of certainty."

American Bankers Assn. President Reno Odlin, who also was chairman of the Puget Sound National Bank in Tacoma, Wash., testified in support of the bill, stating that "the ground rules governing bank mergers must be reaffirmed and the dark clouds of confusion must be removed from the numerous bank mergers that have been consummated in good faith under the law of the land."

May 21 -- Baldwin Maull, representing the Assn. of Registered Bank Holding Companies, favored the bill. Maull said that the legislation was needed by small banks even more than large ones. "Small banks just cannot afford to fight an antitrust suit and would be forced to drop their merger plans," he said.

D. Emmert Brumbaugh, Wallace Kirkpatrick and Ralph L. Zaun, all representing the Independent Bankers Assn. of America, testified in opposition to S 1698. Retention of the Justice Department "as the ultimate restraint on merging," Brumbaugh said, "will help us maintain a competitive banking system." Kirkpatrick testified that there were no "valid reasons to immunize bank mergers...from the antitrust laws." Zaun told the Committee that the Association preferred the alternative suggested by Martin (above) to place a specific time limit on the period in which an approved merger was subject to antitrust action.

BILL REPORTED

The Committee unanimously reported S 1698 (S Rept 299) June 8, after adopting a major amendment suggested in testimony by FRS Chairman Martin and offered in Committee by Sen. William Proxmire (D Wis.).

Instead of prohibiting Justice Department antitrust action against any approved bank mergers, the Proxmire version allowed the Justice Department 30 days in which to object to an approved merger on antitrust grounds. If the merger were consummated after the 30-day waiting period, it could not later be attacked. The Committee agreed to the amendment unanimously.

In its other major provision the bill exempted from antitrust action any bank merger approved by the regulatory agencies before enactment of the bill. This affected six proposed mergers under Justice Department suit. (See list p. 848)

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate June 11 passed the Committee version of S 1698 by voice vote and sent it to the House.

During floor debate, Sen. Robertson said the Proxmire amendment was agreed to "in the interest of speedy action, and in the nature of a friendly gesture...." He said the amendment answered "the only substantive objection" raised during hearings.

Before passage of S 1698, an amendment proposed by Philip A. Hart (D Mich.), chairman of the Senate Judiciary Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee, was rejected by voice vote. The amendment, which was supported by Sen. Robert F. Kennedy (D N.Y.), former Attorney General (1961-64), would have deleted the section of the bill which nullified antitrust proceedings in five bank mergers currently being contested by the Justice Department. (The sixth case, against two St. Louis banks, had not yet been filed. See p. 848.)

Hart and Kennedy both objected that the bill gave "amnesty" to antitrust violations which occurred prior to its enactment. Hart also said the bill "is inequitable and unfair because, although requiring an antitrust standard for future acquisitions, it wipes out the standard for past ones."

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S 1698:

Provided that a proposed bank merger, consolidation, acquisition of assets or assumption of liability would become effective 30 days after approval by either the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve Board or the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. unless an antitrust suit was instituted by the Justice Department within the 30-day period, in which case the merger could not be consummated until termination of the suit "and then only to the extent consistent with such antitrust suit."

Provided that a bank merger approved by the appropriate federal agency, in order to prevent "the probable failure" of one of the banks, be consummated upon approval if Justice Department reports on competitive factors could be dispensed with. If a Justice Department report was requested within 10 days to expedite action, the merger could be consummated five days after approval.

Stipulated that when a bank merger was consummated under any of the aforementioned procedures, the merger would henceforth be exempt from the antitrust laws.

Provided that a bank merger approved by the appropriate federal agency prior to enactment of the bill and not yet dissolved in accordance with the final judgment in an antitrust suit would be exempt from the antitrust laws.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

June 11 -- Philip A. Hart (D Mich.) -- Delete the section of the bill exempting from the antitrust laws bank mergers approved prior to enactment of the bill and not yet dissolved in accordance with the final judgment in an antitrust suit. Voice vote.

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency, Domestic Finance Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- Intermittently between Aug. 11 and Sept. 28 on S 1698 and related bills to amend the Bank Merger Act of 1960.

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 11 -- House Banking and Currency Chairman Wright Patman (D Texas), also chairman of the Domestic Finance Subcommittee, said he was not "prejudging" S 1698 but stressed that legislation "in any way weakening antitrust law and administration should be viewed...with the utmost scrutiny and caution." Patman warned against further concentration of the nation's banking facilities and defended the Justice Department's role in guarding against bank monopolies.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman William McChesney Martin Jr., supporting S 1698, said that a bank should have some assurance that after a merger had been approved by a federal banking agency, the Justice Department would not come along a few years later and order the merged institutions "unscrambled." While admitting that two of the seven members of the Federal Reserve Board had "reservations" about provisions in S 1698 that would nullify pending antitrust proceedings against six bank mergers, Martin argued strongly on behalf of the retroactive exemption. "No matter how one may feel about whether the merger should have taken place in the first instance, there is no turning back," he said. "To unscramble the resulting bank clearly poses serious problems" for the bank, its customers and the community, he said.

However, Rep. Paul H. Todd Jr. (D Mich.) said that the six merged banks avoided temporary court injunctions against the mergers by requesting permission to proceed with the consolidations while being "willing to assume the risk of de-merging" if an antitrust suit was later successful.

Aug. 13 -- Patman charged that S 1698 was really a bill to give the six merged banks "special treatment" and had "all the earmarks of a private bill." He said the measure would "nullify" the Supreme Court decision on the Lexington, Ky., merger and "excuse the two banks' violation of antitrust laws."

American Bankers Assn. President Reno Odlin said the ABA preferred the original version of S 1698, which would have prohibited any Justice Department antitrust action after a bank merger had been approved.

Aug. 16 -- Patman accused the ABA of being "in favor of monopoly" in favoring the original bill.

Aug. 18 -- Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, who had declined to testify at earlier Senate hearings on the bill, expressed "strong opposition" to S 1698, which he called "special legislation" to give the banking industry "preferred treatment" under antitrust laws. He said the legislation "takes a giant stride" toward exempting bank mergers from antimonopoly statutes. Katzenbach was most critical of the provision "forgiving" the six contested mergers. He said those banks were "well aware of probable antitrust prosecution."

As evidence that "there is no basis for any fears that our application of the antitrust laws to bank mergers is either disruptive or frivolous," Katzenbach pointed to the fact that during the past five years the Justice Department challenged only eight of the more than 700 merger applications approved by banking authorities.

Sept. 16 -- Patman noted Katzenbach's opposition to S 1698 and said he considered the testimony, which had been cleared by the Budget Bureau, to represent the Administration's position. Comptroller of the Currency James J. Saxon, who had testified in support of the Senate version, disputed Patman's statement; Saxon said he was "not aware that Mr. Katzenbach represents the position of the Administration on the bill, if the Administration has a position on the bill." FDIC Chairman Kenneth A. Randall said his testimony also had been cleared by the Budget Bureau but that he did not "believe there was an endorsement of my views, just clearance."

Substitute Bills Introduced

Anticipating that Patman would attempt to pigeonhole S 1698 in the Subcommittee, Committee member Thomas L. Ashley (D Ohio) Sept. 13 introduced HR 11011, to require the courts to follow guidelines of the 1960 Act rather than the antitrust statutes in their consideration of challenged bank mergers. The guidelines, which the Act prescribed to be followed by the federal bank regulatory agencies in their consideration of proposed mergers, were: financial history, adequacy of capital structure, future earnings prospects, character of management, community convenience and needs, competitive effect and public interest. In addition, Ashley's bill permitted the Justice Department to contest a proposed merger within 30 days after its approval but only on grounds that it did not meet the requirements of the 1960 Act, not on antitrust grounds alone. The bill also exempted from court challenges mergers consummated prior to June 17, 1963, against which no suit was pending.

Eighteen other members of the Committee, including all 11 Republicans, introduced bills identical to Ashley's. Observers interpreted the move as a show of strength for overriding Patman and enacting a bank merger antitrust exemption. Besides Ashley and the 11 Republicans, sponsors of the legislation were Democrats Earle Cabell (Texas), Fernand St. Germain (R.I.), Bernard F. Grabowski (Conn.), John R. Hansen (Iowa), William S. Moorhead (Pa.), Richard L. Ottinger (N.Y.) and Robert G. Stephens Jr. (Ga.). The remaining 13 Democrats apparently supported Patman's position.

To clarify the matter, Katzenbach, in a Sept. 24 letter to Patman, noted that although he had "strong objections" to forgiving past mergers invalidated by the courts, he was "not opposed to legislation which would clarify the application of antitrust laws to banks" and would make it "clear by statute that the standards applied by the court should be identical to those which the banking agencies directed to apply by the Bank Merger Act." (Katzenbach's position thus partly coincided with the objectives of the Ashley bill.) Katzenbach said the Secretary of the Treasury, Comptroller of the Treasury and the Chairman of FDIC agreed with him on all points except "forgiveness" of pending challenged mergers. Saxon specifically disagreed with that position and the other two deferred to the Justice Department, Katzenbach said.

Nineteen members of the Committee, two more than a majority, signed a petition Sept. 29 to cut off hearings and consider a number of bank merger proposals in closed session of the full Committee. This action followed reports that Patman had concealed receipt of Katzenbach's letter. Under Committee rules, the petition required Patman to call the requested meeting within 10 days.

Bill Clears Subcommittee

Patman then called a meeting of his Domestic Finance Subcommittee, which Oct. 1 approved, 7-5, a new version of S 1698. It set procedures for review of proposed bank mergers, exempted mergers from the antitrust laws if not contested within 60 days of their approval by the appropriate bank regulatory agency, and exempted mergers consummated prior to June 17, 1963, from prosecution under antitrust laws.

On Oct. 5 the full Committee voted, 19-13, to consider all bank merger bills before it, including the Subcommittee and Ashley bills. No agreement on a bill could be reached.

RUMP SESSION REPORTS S 1698

A majority of the House Banking and Currency Committee reported a new version of S 1698 (H Rept 1179) Oct. 19 following a meeting that Chairman Patman called "illegal."

Ashley's group had succeeded in forcing Patman to call a Committee meeting Oct. 18 but they failed to produce a quorum of its 33 members and Patman adjourned the meeting indefinitely after waiting seven minutes. It appeared the issue was dead for the session until Ashley's group remembered a Committee rule which required a session on the first and third Tuesdays of each month unless canceled by the chairman.

The meeting on Oct. 19, a Tuesday, was summoned by Ashley and others, who informed Committee members of the session immediately prior to convening.

Patman, who initially had not received word of the meeting, arrived just before a final vote on S 1698 was taken but reportedly did not take a position on the bill, announcing "present." Incensed by the Committee's action, Patman charged that the meeting was "totally illegal" and called it a "rump session." He said that he had officially canceled the regularly scheduled meeting by notifying the Committee office, the procedure he had used in the past. He also claimed that a quorum of the 33-member Committee was not present and that, therefore, business could not be conducted. Ashley maintained, however, that a quorum was consistently present and that 16 members plus two proxies for absent members were present when Patman arrived.

Patman inserted a report in the Congressional Record Oct. 21 which, he said "established" the facts to substantiate his charge that the Oct. 19 meeting was illegal. The report was prepared by staff members who witnessed the Oct. 19 meeting. It said the meeting had been "duly canceled" by Patman; that Rep. Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.), as senior Committee member present, had ruled the meeting was not "legally constituted"; that many members had not been informed of the session and that the use of proxies, which helped make up the quorum for the session, was prohibited by Committee rules.

In a floor speech Oct. 21, Ashley stood by his claim that the meeting was legal. Referring to Patman's previous attempts to block Committee action on bank merger bills, Ashley added, "Far more important than the legislative issue at hand is the question of whether majority rule is to be respected in the House...or, alternatively, whether a House committee is to be allowed to be treated by its chairman as his own private domain for whatever purposes he may choose."

Revised Version. The new version of S 1698 reported Oct. 19 was drawn up principally by Ashley and Rep. Richard L. Ottinger (D N.Y.). In its key section it declared that a bank merger was not to be approved unless the regulatory agency "finds that such transaction will not violate the antitrust laws." But the section also declared: "A merger transaction which tends to lessen competition may be approved" if its probable anticompetitive effect "is clearly outweighed in the public interest" by its probable effect "in meeting the convenience and needs of the community to be served."

The bill directed the agencies and the courts to apply the above provisions, as well as the Merger Act's standards of financial history, management and needs of the community, etc., in judging a proposed merger.

The bill permitted the Justice Department to contest a proposed merger within 30 days of agency approval but only on grounds it did not meet standards set by S 1698 and not on antitrust grounds; exempted from court challenges undissolved bank mergers consummated prior to June 17, 1963, and uncontested bank mergers consummated between June 17, 1963, and the date of enactment of S 1698; and required disposition of contested bank mergers consummated between June 17, 1963, and the date of enactment in accordance with provisions of S 1698.

More Compromises Anticipated

As 1965 ended, further conferences on the bill were scheduled among House Committee members and Administration officials, including Katzenbach.

The Justice Department announced that further action on the six merger cases pending in court would be postponed until Congress had a chance in 1966 to act on the legislation.

Bank Groups Active on S 1698

Following is a list of banks and related groups involved in the legislative campaign on S 1698.

● American Bankers Assn. -- The American Bankers Assn. Aug. 16, 1965, said six individuals in its Washington, D.C., office were active in lobbying on various issues in 1965. All six had registered as lobbyists for the American Bankers Assn. with the Clerk of the House under the terms of the 1946 Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act. Their names and the dates of their registrations were: Charles R. McNeill, 1957; Paul G. Collins, 1960; John W. Holton, 1963 and Aug. 12, 1965; James E. Smith, 1963 and Aug. 12, 1965; John F. Rolph III, 1963; Charles T. O'Neill Jr., July 26, 1965.

The American Bankers Assn. said it represented 98.5 percent of the 14,000 main offices of banks in the United States, plus most of their branch offices.

The ABA was not itself registered as a lobbying organization. A representative of the Association said Aug. 16, 1965, that it was "not primarily a lobbying organization" and that the 1946 Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act and the one Supreme Court decision under the Act indicate that registration is only required if a substantial part of an organization's activities are directed at lobbying, "and this means direct lobbying." According to the American Bankers Assn., its total annual budget was "about $3.5 million." Its Washington office planned to spend "approximately $400,000," of which, the organization said, it had designated "less than half for legislative matters." In response to a letter from Chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee Patman which asked, among other things, for the aggregate sum of the salaries in 1965 paid to lobbyists employed by the American Bankers Assn., ABA President Reno Odlin Aug. 31 wrote that the "aggregate amount paid through Aug. 31, 1965, was $93,250.30." But he said this included pay for time spent on non-lobbying activities as well as lobbying.

The American Bankers Assn., according to Odlin, seldom requested a "mass effort" by all member banks on a particular piece of legislation. This method of lobbying was used in regard to "the provision of the Revenue Act of 1962 dealing with taxation of mutual financial institutions" (1962 Almanac p. 478), but the Association "did not use the mass communication technique again until Aug. 20, 1965, when all American Bankers Assn. member banks were asked to get in touch with their Member of the House of Representatives on S 1698....Passage of S 1698 was deemed to be so important to the future of banking that the broadest possible indication of banking's views was sought."

The American Bankers Assn. testified before Congressional committees in support of S 1698. It favored the bill as it was originally introduced in the Senate but felt that it "could live with the Proxmire amendment."

● Manufacturer's Hanover of New York, Continental-Illinois of Chicago -- Manufacturer's Hanover Trust Co. was formed through merger of two other banks and was held in March 1965 to be in violation of antitrust laws. S 1698 would exempt it from further antitrust prosecution. Another bank merger exempted under the bill was that of the Continental-Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago with the City National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago.

The New York law firm of Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett, which represented Manufacturer's Hanover, and the Chicago law firm of Mayer, Friedlich, Spiess, Tierney, Brown & Platt, which represented Continental-Illinois, jointly hired two men to lobby for S 1698. They were the former second-ranking Democrat on the House Banking and Currency Committee, Albert Rains (D Ala. 1945-65), and the former staff director of the Senate Select Small Business Committee, Laurance G. Henderson (1952-54). Henderson, in registering as a lobbyist July 13, 1965, stated that enactment of S 1698 was his only legislative interest. Rains, who registered July 12, stated that his interest was "banking legislation in 89th Congress affecting interests of employer's clients."

Continental-Illinois, in a letter on S 1698 to Chairman Patman, Aug. 30 said it "had spent between $5,000 to $5,500 encouraging people to write letters to Members of Congress in connection with the proposed legislation." (For additional information on Manufacturer's Hanover and Continental-Illinois activities, see Support Group for Progressive Banking, below.)

● Mercantile Trust Co. National Assn. of St. Louis, Mo. -- The law firm of Miller & Chevalier Oct. 4, 1965, registered as a lobbyist for the Mercantile Trust Co. The Mercantile Trust Co. Oct. 9 registered for itself. Both stated as their legislative interests "S 1698, HR 11011, and bills of similar import -- favor enactment." Mercantile Trust Co. was involved in one of the contested merger cases which S 1698 would exempt from further prosecution.

● Support Group for Progressive Banking -- A spokesman for an organization called the Support Group for Progressive Banking, headed by former Democratic National Committee Chairman Frank E. McKinney (1951-53), denied charges by Congressional sources that the group was active in support of S 1698, or had been formed by a group of large national banks specifically to work for passage of S 1698. The Support Group spokesman, attorney Charles Emmet Lucey, was one of two persons who, CQ records showed, registered as lobbyists for the group. Lucey, who was with the Comptroller of the Currency in 1962 and 1963, registered as a lobbyist for the Support Group April 8, 1964. The second Support Group registrant was John H. Yingling, former chief clerk of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee (1956-60) and consultant to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee (1961-63). Yingling registered Jan. 16, 1964. Lucey Jan. 31, 1966, told CQ that the Support Group had indeed been headed by McKinney, but had never engaged in lobbying activities on S 1698, and, in fact, was formed "about two-and-a-half years ago" to work on an entirely different area of banking legislation -- namely, reform of banking laws along lines, not involving mergers, recommended in a report by a national advisory committee to Comptroller of the Currency James J. Saxon. Lucey said the Support Group had ceased to exist as of Dec. 31, 1965. Lucey said that he, as a private attorney, and Yingling, as a private consultant on banking matters, and not as representatives of the Support Group, had worked together to advise individual banks on S 1698 but engaged in "no lobbying as such," spoke to no Congressmen, and did not testify at hearings on S 1698. Yingling told CQ that he and Lucey had acted as advisers on S 1698 to both Manufacturer's Hanover Trust Co. and Continental-Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. He said they closely followed the hearings on the bill and made suggestions for changes in the rough drafts of testimony by representatives of the banks. (For additional information on Manufacturer's Hanover and Continental-Illinois, see above.)

● Independent Bankers Assn. of America -- The Independent Bankers Assn. testified at both the Senate and House hearings on the bank merger bill. The Association, representing more than 6,300 predominantly small "court-house or grass-roots level" banks in 40 states (nearly all of which also belong to the American Bankers Assn.), initiated and supported the successful amendment by Sen. William Proxmire (D Wis.) to retain some Justice Department antitrust authority, giving the Department 30 days to act against a proposed merger. The Association proposed "a stronger and more meaningful primary screening of bank mergers with the important backstop of antitrust action." The Independent Bankers Assn. had one lobbyist, C. Herschel Schooley, who registered April 11, 1963. Schooley told CQ that the Independent Bankers Assn. had limited its activities on the bank merger bill to Congressional testimony and articles in the IBA newsletter.

BANK HOLDING EXEMPTIONS

HR 7371 -- Reported by House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 534) June 21, 1965.

● Passed, amended, by the House by voice vote Sept. 23. (For roll-call vote on amendment, see p. 1008)

Passed by the House but not the Senate in 1965, HR 7371 tightened provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 and repealed all major exemptions from the Act. The measure, which was backed by the Federal Reserve Board, was designed to stem the possibility of conflicts of interest in lending by exempted groups that hold both banking and nonbanking businesses.

As passed by the House, HR 7371 changed the definition of a bank holding company to include any group controlling one bank, instead of two, and repealed, among others, exemptions for bank holding companies operating in non-profit religious, charitable or educational work and tax-exempt labor, agricultural or horticultural work. The measure gave groups coming under the new definition of a bank holding company, or losing their exemptions, the option of either (1) registering with the Federal Reserve Board as a bank holding company, which would mean they would have to divest themselves of all major nonbanking assets, or (2) divesting themselves of most of their banking assets.

If enacted, it was estimated that the new definition of a bank holding company would have brought under the Act's coverage more than 340 companies holding interests in 330 banks with total deposits of approximately $13.5 billion. Repeal of existing exemptions would have brought under the Act an additional but undetermined number of bank holding companies. Among the major groups that would have been affected were the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. and Macy's Department Store, which owned banks; the Trust Co. of Georgia, which controlled Coca-Cola International Co.; the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, which controlled Amalgamated Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago and Amalgamated Bank of New York; the United Mine Workers of America, which controlled the National Bank of Washington, D.C.; and Financial General Corp., a large investment company which controlled 26 banks. (See related development, p. 857)

The House-passed version of HR 7371 was a much broader bill than that originally reported by the House Banking and Currency Committee. The Committee bill was aimed principally at repealing an exemption currently enjoyed only by the Florida estate of Alfred I. duPont, controller of 31 banks with deposits of over $600 million as well as a number of nonbanking businesses, including the Florida East Coast Railway, the St. Joe Paper Mill Co. and real estate interests. The scope of the bill was expanded in a floor amendment offered by Rep. Charles E. Bennett (D Fla.) and accepted by a 199-178 roll-call vote. The amendment incorporated specific recommendations made by the Federal Reserve Board. The Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. -- the Government's other two bank regulatory agencies -- and the Treasury Department, however, did not take a position on the amendment.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House and sent to the Senate, HR 7371 amended the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 as follows:

Redefined a bank holding company as: (1) a company which directly or indirectly owned or controlled 25 percent or more of the voting shares of any bank; (2) a company which controlled the election of the majority of the directors of any bank; and (3) a company for the benefit of whose shareholders or members, 25 percent or more of the voting shares of any bank was held by trustees.

Made it unlawful, without prior approval of the Federal Reserve Board, for a bank to become a bank holding company or for any other company to become a bank holding company with respect to more than one subsidiary bank.

Repealed exemptions provided under the Act for: companies registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940; companies with at least 80 percent of their total assets in the field of agriculture; non-profit religious, charitable or educational organizations, foundations or funds; and all partnerships and trusts, except "family-type" trusts terminating within 25 years or not later than the death of the beneficiary.

Repealed exemptions from divestiture requirements of the Act for any bank holding company which was a tax-exempt labor, agricultural or horticultural organization.

Repealed provisions of the Act under which banks, acting as bank holding companies, were permitted to retain ownership of shares in nonbanking businesses acquired prior to May 9, 1956 (the date of enactment of the Act).

Required banks, acting as bank holding companies, to divest themselves of shares in businesses acquired prior to May 9, 1956, within two years after enactment of HR 7371, but permitted the Federal Reserve Board to extend the deadline for periods of not more than one year at a time, up to a maximum of five years after enactment.

Background

REFERENCES -- 1956 Almanac p. 557; 1964 Almanac p. 989.

In its major provisions, the 1956 Bank Holding Company Act (PL 84-511) required any company owning 25 percent or more of two or more banks to register with the Federal Reserve Board (the Fed); authorized the Fed to regulate the creation and expansion of bank holding companies; and prohibited such companies, with certain exceptions, from managing or controlling nonbanking assets unrelated to the banking business. Upon signing the Act into law, President Eisenhower had called it a "step forward" but said it fell short of achieving its objectives because of "various exemptions and other special provisions which will require the further attention of Congress."

In 1964, the House Banking and Currency Committee, chairmaned by Wright Patman (D Texas), moved to fulfill part of Mr. Eisenhower's recommendations, holding hearings on a bill (HR 10668) to repeal exemptions from the 1956 Act for testamentary trusts (trusts provided for in a will) with assets of more than $100 million. The only major holding company affected by the bill, however, was the Florida duPont estate testamentary trust. The legislation was opposed by the Treasury Department and Comptroller of the Currency on the grounds it was aimed at only "a single situation," but supported by the Fed, which called it a first step toward ending all major exemptions from the Act.

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

ACTION -- June 21 reported HR 7371 (H Rept 534) to repeal exemptions under the Bank Holding Company Act for non-profit religious, charitable or educational organizations and for all partnerships and trusts, except "family-type" trusts terminating within 25 years or upon the death of the beneficiary. Hearings were held May 27 and June 14 and 15, and the Committee June 16 approved the bill by a 21-4 vote.

The bill was supported by the Independent Bankers Assn. and the Fed but was again opposed by the Treasury Department and Comptroller of the Currency because of its singleness of purpose.

Committee Views. The report said that, in part due to criticism of HR 10668 as "class legislation" and in part due to Fed recommendations to review other exemptions from the Act, the Committee in HR 7371 went beyond just the testamentary trusts covered by HR 10668, agreeing to repeal exemptions for certain other trusts, partnerships and non-profit organizations as well. The report also said that, since spokesmen for the duPont estate were the only ones coming forward to oppose HR 7371, "it may be inferred that very few organizations are affected" by the measure. (The report noted that it was impossible to ascertain the number of groups affected because the Fed "has no means of requiring exempt organizations to report their holdings....")

FLOOR ACTION

The House Sept. 23 passed HR 7371 by voice vote and sent it to the Senate after adopting an amendment broadening the Committee version by redefining what constituted a bank holding company and by repealing all major exemptions from the 1956 Act.

H Res 499, an open rule providing for floor action on HR 7371, was filed by Patman and was one of four resolutions adopted by the House Sept. 13 under the 21-day rule for bypassing the Rules Committee. The roll-call vote on H Res 499 was 201-171 (R 15-107; ND 160-6; SD 26-58). (For voting, see chart p. 1002; for story on the 21-day rule, see p. 585.)

During floor action Sept. 23, Charles E. Bennett (D Fla.), W.E. Brock III (R Tenn.), Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) and others attacked the Committee bill as "class" and "punitive" legislation. They charged that there was no evidence of conflict of interest between the duPont estate's bank and nonbank holdings and said that all major exemptions from the Act should be treated equally and removed en bloc, as suggested by the Treasury Department and Comptroller of the Currency and backed by the Fed.

Another opponent of the Committee version, Robert L.F. Sikes (D Fla.), noted that railroad labor unions, which had been locked in a bitter and violent dispute with the duPont's Florida East Coast Railway, were actively interested in seeing the bill enacted. The measure had nothing to do with labor, Sikes said, but, "Now a vote against HR 7371 becomes a vote against labor." (Sikes Sept. 29 told CQ that labor unions had "barraged" Congress with telegrams urging support of the bill.)

Proponents, led by Patman and Charles L. Weltner (D Ga.), said an exemption such as the duPont estate's created a "potential for abuse" and was contrary to the objectives of the 1956 Act. They also argued that adoption of an amendment repealing all major exemptions would automatically bring many holding companies under the Act without the benefit of committee hearings. They agreed that all exemptions should be reviewed but said that each exemption should be considered individually.

Bennett, however, offered an amendment incorporating Fed recommendations to repeal all major exemptions. The amendment was accepted first by a 53-36 standing vote and then by a 199-178 roll-call vote (R 116-3; ND 30-142; SD 53-33). Bennett explained that the amendment was not designed to "kill the bill," as some had suggested, but to make it a "much better piece of legislation." (For voting, see chart p. 1008)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Sept. 23 -- Charles E. Bennett (D Fla.) -- Redefine a bank holding company to include groups holding any bank, instead of two banks, and repeal exemptions given in the Act to certain investment and agricultural companies, to banks, acting as bank holding companies, which acquired stock in companies prior to enactment of the Act, and to tax-exempt labor, agricultural and horticultural organizations. Standing vote, 53-36; roll-call vote, 199-178.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- A similar bill (HR 7372 -- H Rept 680), which would repeal the Act's exemptions for investment companies like the Financial General Corp., was reported by the House Banking and Currency Committee July 26. Though endorsed by the Fed, HR 7372 was blocked by the House Rules Committee. Plans were made to bring the bill to the House floor under the 21-day rule, but House passage of the amended version of HR 7371 Sept. 23 made further action on HR 7372 unnecessary.

(One of Financial General's bank holdings was the Alexandria (Va.) National Bank, of which Rules Committee Chairman Howard W. Smith (D Va.) was chairman of the board.)

DEBT LIMIT

HR 8464 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 438) June 1, 1965.

- Passed by the House on a 229-165 roll-call vote June 9. (See p. 968)
- Reported by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 330) June 15.
- Passed by the Senate on a 61-26 roll-call vote June 16. (See p. 1050)

PL 89-49 -- Signed into law June 24.

Congress in 1965 approved a $4 billion increase in the temporary national debt limit, to $328 billion. The increased limit was effective through fiscal 1966, ending June 30, 1966. At that time the limit would return to its permanent level of $285 billion unless increased or extended again.

If HR 8464 had not been enacted, the existing debt ceiling of $324 billion would have declined to the permanent level of $285 billion on July 1, 1965.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.), chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said the actual debt on May 30 was $317.3 billion and was expected to rise to $326 billion during fiscal 1966. At the end of fiscal 1965, June 30, the debt was $317.6 billion. Although the debt was expected to reach $325.9 billion on March 15, 1966, Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler asked the Ways and Means Committee May 25 for a $329 billion debt ceiling to maintain at least a $3 billion cushion between the highest expected level of the debt and the ceiling in order to ease debt management.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 8464 increased the statutory debt limit from $324 billion to $328 billion through fiscal 1966. (Continued on next page)

BACKGROUND -- The permanent statutory debt limit was set at $285 billion in 1959. "Temporary" increases were approved by Congress in the following years as Government borrowing pushed up the national debt. In 1962 and 1963 Congress acted no less than five times on bills to increase the temporary debt limit. Republicans and Southern Democrats used the occasions for strong criticism of Administration fiscal policy.

The most recent extension, passed in 1964, provided a temporary ceiling of $324 million for fiscal 1965. (1964 Almanac p. 582)

HOUSE. The Ways and Means Committee June 1 reported HR 8464 (H Rept 438) in the form in which it was ultimately enacted. Although Treasury Secretary Fowler had requested a $329 billion ceiling, the limit was set at $328 billion at Chairman Mills' suggestion. Mills explained May 26 that this limit reflected his "confidence" in the Administration's "ability to hold the line on spending."

The House June 9, by a 229-165 roll-call vote, passed HR 8464 and sent it to the Senate without amendment. Prior to passage, the House by voice vote rejected a motion by Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) to recommit (kill) the bill.

Voting for passage were 223 Democrats and 6 Republicans -- Broyhill (Va.), Byrnes (Wis.), Ellsworth (Kan.), Frelinghuysen (N.J.), Teague (Calif.) and Tupper (Maine). (In 1964 no House Republicans voted to increase the debt limit.) Opposing passage of HR 8464 were 122 Republicans and 43 Democrats. (For voting, see chart p. 968)

At the beginning of debate on the measure, several Members opposed adoption of a closed rule to limit debate and preclude amendments. After a brief discussion, the House adopted, by a 21-19 standing vote and a 273-109 roll-call vote, a motion by Richard Bolling (D Mo.) to move the previous question, bringing the rule to a vote. The rule was then adopted by voice vote.

During floor debate, supporters of the measure said the temporary increase in the debt limit was necessary to "allow the Treasury Department a certain flexibility for the purposes of efficient debt management." Such flexibility, proponents said, would enable the Treasury "to time its financial operations to avoid large borrowings at times when the interest costs are temporarily high" and to "promote an orderly market in Government securities." Supporters of the bill also asserted that the Government had become committed to the higher debt ceiling stipulated in the bill, because expenditure levels already were "largely set" by previous House action on appropriations and because of the virtual certainty that a broad excise tax cut would be enacted before fiscal 1966.

Opponents of the bill argued that the temporary increase was a "bold admission that the Federal Government has absolutely no intention of balancing the Budget in the foreseeable future." Some suggested that Congress should lower the limt to a "realistic" figure that would "insure" a balanced Budget, make that figure permanent and then announce "to all concerned" that it was not going any higher, even on a temporary basis.

SENATE. The Senate Finance Committee June 15 reported HR 8464 (S Rept 330) without amendment.

The Senate June 16 passed the bill by a 61-26 roll-call vote, and sent it to the President. The Senate had first passed the bill by voice vote, but then took the roll-call vote upon the request of Norris Cotton (R N.H.). The vote breakdown: R 12-16; D 49-10 (ND 38-2; SD 11-8). (For voting, see chart p. 1050)

MINIMUM WAGE, OVERTIME

HR 10518 -- Reported by the House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 871) Aug. 25, 1965.

Congress in 1965, for a second consecutive year, failed to enact Administration proposals to extend federal minimum wage and overtime protection to some workers not already covered and to increase the overtime pay rate. President Johnson's proposals, outlined in a May 18 Labor Message, called for extension of minimum wage and overtime coverage to an additional 4.6 million workers and an increase in overtime pay from the existing time-and-a-half to doubletime. A bill (HR 10518) providing even broader minimum wage provisions (but no provision for increase of the overtime rate) was reported by the House Education and Labor Committee, but floor action was deferred in the absence of the strong Administration support believed needed to ensure passage.

Background

The first successful federal attempt to regulate working hours and establish a "floor" for wages was the 1938 Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA). This law, which provided the basis for all subsequent legislation, set a minimum hourly wage for covered workers of 25 cents, to be raised to 40 cents in 1945. It also made 40 hours the normal workweek for most covered workers and required employers to pay time-and-a-half for overtime.

Congress raised the minimum to 75 cents in 1945 and to $1 in 1955. However, the majority of American workers did not receive wage and hour protection under the FLSA, and efforts to amend the Act to bring more workers under its protection failed through 1960.

In 1961, Congress concluded a bitter struggle by passing landmark legislation both raising the hourly minimum wage and, for the first time since 1938, extending the categories of coverage. The Fair Labor Standards Amendments of 1961 (PL 87-30) extended the minimum wage and (with some exceptions) the overtime provisions of the FLSA to an estimated 3.6 million additional workers. The Act also raised the minimum wage for workers already covered from $1 an hour to $1.15 an hour during the first two years after the amendments went into effect and to $1.25 thereafter. The newly covered workers were to reach the $1.25 hourly minimum and the 40-hour standard workweek in three steps stretched out over four years. (1961 Almanac p. 471)

In his Jan. 21, 1963, Economic Report, President Kennedy said he would recommend extension of minimum wage coverage to additional groups, but no special message on the subject was sent to Congress during the year.

President Johnson Jan. 30, 1964, sent Congress draft legislation to extend minimum wage and overtime pay protection to some workers not already covered and to authorize a doubletime rate for overtime in industries where it was determined that such a rate would increase employment without boosting costs excessively. Hearings were held on both bills by subcommittees of the House Education and Labor Committee, but neither measure was reported. (1964 Almanac p. 572, 574)

1965 PROPOSALS

President Johnson May 18 in a special Labor Message (and in accompanying draft legislation) proposed extension of the minimum wage and overtime provisions of the FLSA to about 4.6 million employees in construction, laundering and cleaning establishments, hotels and motels, restaurants, hospitals and nursing homes, logging operations, taxicab companies, agricultural processing and other industries. (See text p. 1412.)

Under the Administration proposals, workers in these areas were to receive the same minimum wage and overtime protection -- a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour and overtime pay after 40 hours a week -- as the 29.6 million workers already subject to the FLSA. Still excluded were about 13 million workers, mostly in such categories as administrative, clerical, domestic and farm employment, whose low salaries could bring them within the scope of the FLSA's provisions.

In addition, the President recommended payment of double wages for all hours a week worked over 48 in the first year after enactment with a reduction in the cutoff to 45 hours in three annual steps. Time-and-a-half pay would continue to apply for hours worked between 40 and the cutoff.

Mr. Johnson made no specific recommendations to increase the existing $1.25 minimum wage, stating that "Congress should consider carefully the effects of higher minimum wage rates ..." The President added, however, that "as average wages rise, the minimum wage level should be increased periodically. The question is not whether the minimum wage should be increased but when and by how much."

The bill extended the minimum wage and overtime protection in two ways: (1) by removing exemptions from the FLSA which applied to employees in certain industries and (2) by amending the definition of an "enterprise engaged in commerce or the production of goods for commerce" and subject to the FLSA to include all such enterprises which have employees engaged in these activities and which have an annual gross volume of sales of at least $250,000. The measure did not alter the existing exclusion of so-called "mom and pop" establishments which were operated by their owners or members of their immediate families.

Under existing provisions of the FLSA, no uniform sales test applied to determine whether an enterprise was covered. For example, a retail business was covered only if it had an inflow of goods moving across state lines in total annual volume of at least $250,000 and annual sales of $1 million or more. Gasoline service stations, on the other hand, qualified for coverage simply if they had annual sales of $250,000 or more.

In a "fact sheet" explaining the President's draft bill, the Department of Labor said, "At the present time, almost half of the nation's wage and salary workers are outside the Fair Labor Standards Act." The Department said that 31 percent of the 4.6 million employees who would be given minimum wage protection by the bill -- approximately 1.5 million persons -- "now receive less than $1.25 an hour." It said extension of the overtime standards "will help to discourage excessively long hours of work (and) tend to spread employment opportunities in several categories of jobs in which the relatively unskilled can qualify for employment."

The Labor Department concluded, "The proposed legislation would not eliminate all overtime work or create jobs for all the unemployed. However, its provision for an increase in the Fair Labor Standards Act's premium pay rate for overtime is certain to lead to a reduction in such overtime and the creation of additional job opportunities."

The Administration proposals were contained in bills introduced May 18 in the Senate (S 1986) by Sen. Pat McNamara (D Mich.) and in the House (HR 8259) by Rep. Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.).

House

COMMITTEE -- Education and Labor, General Labor Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- May 25 - July 21 on the Administration's bill (HR 8259) and another bill (HR 8109) to extend the existing $1.25 minimum wage to agriculture in three steps. HR 8109, which was introduced by James Roosevelt (D Calif.) on May 12, was not initially supported by the Administration but was given general support by the Secretary of Labor during hearings (below).

TESTIMONY -- May 25 -- Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz, in supporting HR 8259, said that wages of the workers who would be brought under coverage "generally do not rise with increases in the cost of living, and as a result they suffer a continuing decline in real earnings." "These workers who are denied the modest benefits of the FLSA comprise a chronically depressed class," he said. Wirtz also noted that about one-third of the additional workers to be brought under FLSA currently earn less than the $1.25 minimum wage. He added, "The ease with which the economy can adjust to a change in the minimum wage law depends on general business activity at the time of the change. There could be no better time than the present period of unprecedented business prospects to broaden the base of the FLSA."

Wirtz also indicated that the Administration would be sympathetic to extending FLSA coverage to farm laborers.

In addition, Wirtz endorsed sections of HR 8259 requiring double wages for all hours a week worked over 48 in the first year after the bill was enacted, with a reduction in the cutoff to 45 hours in three yearly steps. (Time-and-a-half pay would continue to apply for hours worked between 40 and the cutoff.) Wirtz said the purpose of this proposal was "not to increase individual earnings," but "to reduce unemployment." He explained that this was also the original intent of requiring time-and-a-half pay for overtime, but it had been found that "in many instances" payment of the overtime rate was less costly to an employer than the hiring of additional workers. Citing the fact that the 62.5 million overtime hours worked during a typical workweek in March 1964 were the "equivalent of more than 1.5 million full-time jobs," Wirtz estimated that the double time requirement would create between 200,000 and 300,000 new jobs.

Wirtz declined to take a position when asked to comment on proposals by some Congressmen to increase the $1.25-an-hour minimum wage to a higher figure. (Wirtz continued to decline comment on such proposals for the remainder of the year.)

June 15 -- George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, said the Administration's proposed program was "anti-poverty legislation" and that there were "no more important legislative proposals before this Congress." He said, "On their successful passage rests the hopes of millions of Americans and, it is no exaggeration to say the viability of our economy for a long period ahead." Meany suggested three additional "proposed amendments" to the FLSA. He said the minimum wage should be raised to $2 an hour "now," saying that while such a raise would not achieve the stated purpose of the FLSA for a "minimum standard of living necessary for health, efficiency and general well-being of workers," it would be "a realistic step forward." Meany also recommended amendment of the limitation of coverage to "establishments with receipts of $250,000 a year or more." He said this permitted multi-unit enterprises, "doing millions of dollars worth of business a year, to escape coverage on any individual units grossing less than $250,000." He said this change would give wage-hour protection to an additional 800,000 workers. Finally, he suggested adoption of a 35-hour standard work week, saying that "in a very few years, even under the most favorable circumstances, there simply won't be enough 40-hour jobs to go around."

June 16 -- Philip V. Carter, representing the Council of State Chambers of Commerce, said he did not think the proposed double wages for overtime would accomplish their stated objective of reducing unemployment.

Lawrence Leyton of the National Retail Merchants Assn. said extension of the FLSA to retail stores with annual sales volumes of $250,000 or more "would result in federal regulation of businesses which are purely local in nature...." He said that the federal minimum wage would affect "not only marginal workers earning less than the minimum, but all workers, if existing wage differentials are to be maintained," and that "the entire payroll must be adjusted upward...." He opposed the doubletime pay for overtime work proposal.

June 17 -- Dr. Richard S. Landry of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said the Chamber agreed with the Administration that there was "a continuing need for more jobs and a lower unemployment rate," but said that the proposed legislation was inconsistent with those objectives. Landry said the job-increase effect of the doubletime premium for overtime "will be slight at best. But the cost-increase and stimulus-to-automate effects could be considerable." With regard to the proposed extension of minimum wage coverage, he said, "Congress, by passing a law, can no more make a person's labor worth $1 or $1.15 or $1.25 an hour than it can make wheat worth so much per bushel." He also said: "Each time the minimum is extended to cover additional job classifications, thousands of people are denied job opportunities. This results from the fact that the minimum wage rates together with the costs of fringe benefits exceed the economic value of the workers with lowest productivity."

W.P. Gullander of the National Assn. of Manufacturers (NAM) said the Administration's proposals "would have the effect opposite to what is needed. They would place impediments in the way of further economic growth. They would make it most difficult to hold the line against price increases. They would set up higher barriers to the creation of employment opportunities for young and inexperienced workers and for the unskilled... Finally, the cost increases resulting from these proposals would create greater problems in recapturing, through exports, American dollars which have gone abroad..."

June 29 -- Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, supported the proposal to extend minimum wage protection to 4.6 million additional workers. However, Mitchell -- who also spoke in behalf of several other Negro leaders, including the Reverend Martin Luther King, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and James Farmer, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality -- said this would be "only a first step," and he urged extension of minimum wage coverage to domestic and farm workers and eventually to "every single American employed in a significant economic unit." He also called for an increase in the minimum wage to $2 an hour, saying even this would be a "modest" figure.

July 1 -- Sidney Zagri of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters supported "all of the President's proposals to extend coverage and improve the maximum hours standards of the (FLSA)." However, he urged amendment of the bill to "remove all overtime exemptions for workers engaged in agricultural processing." Zagri said, "The exemptions adversely affect the very workers who need protection the most. Workers processing agricultural commodities earn some of the lowest wages in the United States." He said removal of the exemptions would be "a mighty shot in battling poverty."

July 9 -- R. Conrad Cooper, executive vice president of United States Steel Corp., opposed HR 8259 on behalf of 49 steel companies. Cooper said operating methods in the steel industry "make a certain amount of overtime work unavoidable," even though "overtime is avoided wherever possible...." He said "it seems abundantly clear to us that increasing the penalty rate for overtime would not increase steel worker employment," and "would not have any real bearing on (employment problems), except to increase cost." Cooper said, "This legislation would increase costs and impair the ability of American industry to compete with foreign producers and provide employment opportunities."

July 14 -- Rev. Samuel A. Snyder, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., said the minimum wage should be extended to agricultural workers because "These are the workers upon whom the 'ups and downs' (instability) of employment fall with most devastating economic consequence."

July 15 -- J. Banks Young, Washington representative of the National Cotton Council, said that in one important area of the cotton belt labor costs alone of hand weeding and hand picking a bale of cotton would exceed the gross value received by the farmer for the bale if farm workers were given a $1.25 minimum wage. "Hardest hit would be the medium size cotton farmers whose production is not large enough to afford a mechanical cotton picker," he said.

Andrew Hawkins, a representative of the Mississippi Freedom Labor Party, said that Negro farm workers in Mississippi made from 30 to 60 cents an hour, lived in primitive houses and were constantly in debt to their employers. He said the working conditions on the plantation of Sen. James O. Eastland (D Miss.) were so slave-like that Negro sharecroppers had to make "moonshine" to earn enough money to live.

SUBCOMMITTEE ACTION. The Subcommittee Aug. 4 approved a clean bill (HR 10275) extending minimum wage protection to approximately 7.9 million additional employees, establishing a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour for certain agricultural workers and increasing the nonfarm minimum wage in stages to $1.75. The Subcommittee voted 8-1 to approve the measure, with Rep. Dave Martin (R Neb.) casting the lone dissenting vote.

Changes from Administration Bill. As approved by the Subcommittee, HR 10275 embodied the following major changes from the proposals submitted by the Administration:

Coverage. Extended minimum wage coverage to approximately 7.9 million additional employees, 3.3 million more than the Administration bill. Included were about 1.3 million farm workers (not covered by the Administration bill) whose wages were to be set at a minimum of $1.15 an hour on July 1, 1966, and increase to $1.25 on July 1, 1968.

Provided overtime coverage for approximately five million additional employees not currently covered, about 400,000 more than proposed by the Administration. (Agricultural workers, as under the Administration bill, were not brought under overtime protection.) Stipulated that new overtime coverage would begin on July 1, 1967, with time-and-a-half pay for all hours worked over 44 a week. Further reduced the overtime cutoff in annual steps to 40 hours beginning July 1, 1969. (See double overtime below.)

To the Administration proposal to extend coverage to retail and service industry employees in establishments with annual gross sales of $250,000 or more (instead of the current $1 million), the Subcommittee added a provision covering workers in stores with a volume exceeding $150,000 (instead of the current $250,000) if they were part of a chain whose aggregate annual sales exceeded $250,000.

Minimum Wage. Whereas the Administration bill had contained no minimum wage increase, the Subcommittee approved a rise in the existing $1.25-an-hour rate for non-farm workers in three annual steps to $1.75 on July 1, 1968. For newly covered non-farm workers, the minimum would start at $1 an hour on Jan. 1, 1966, and increase by steps to $1.75 on July 1, 1970.

Double Overtime. The Subcommittee rejected the Administration's request for doubletime, rather than time-and-a-half, pay for overtime work as an incentive to hire more workers.

COMMITTEE ACTION. The full Education and Labor Committee Aug. 25 reported a clean bill (HR 10518 -- H Rept 871) which made minor and technical changes from the Subcommittee version but did not substantially alter the number of new employees to whom minimum wage and overtime coverage was extended. (Throughout the remainder of the session, HR 10518 was termed the "Roosevelt bill" in behalf of its sponsor, Rep. James Roosevelt (D Calif.).)

Majority Views. The report said there was "a great need for extending the present coverage of the (Fair Labor Standards) Act to large groups of workers whose earnings ...are unjustifiably and disproportionately low." It said: "Among family heads employed in industries generally covered by the Act, only 5 to 10 percent had annual incomes under $3,000 in 1963. The figure is 8 to 14 percent in industries where there is partial coverage... But in industries where there is little or no coverage, the proportions jumped to 33 and 49 percent, respectively.... It is a shocking fact that demands immediate remedy that 40 percent of all children living in poverty were in families where there was a worker who had a full-time job throughout the year."

The report said the FLSA currently covered only 29.6 million of the 60 million wage and salary earners in the United States. It said an additional 17.5 million could possibly be brought within the Act's wage and hour guarantees. However, it said, many of these additional workers earned wage rates already higher than the minimum, others were in firms too small for practicable coverage, and others apparently were not engaged in interstate commerce.

The majority concluded that the "gradual increases" in the minimum wage provided by HR 10518, "approximately equal to productivity increases in recent years, can be absorbed by the national economy as easily as all previous increases..."

Minority, Other Views. Republicans William H. Ayres (Ohio), Robert P. Griffin (Mich.), John M. Ashbrook (Ohio), Dave Martin (Neb.), Glenn Andrews (Ala.) and Edward J. Gurney (Fla.) said they were "convinced that HR 10518 should not be enacted in its present form. The changes the bill makes in the existing law are so sweeping, so far-reaching and so drastic that their consequences cannot be entirely foretold and may well be disastrous to important segments of our economy." They said the bill "would...almost double the President's recommendation" for coverage of additional workers, "many of them in those areas of our economy which are least able to bear the added cost burden." The Republicans added that the proposal to bring approximately 1.3 million farm workers under coverage of the law "is likely to do the farm workers it is intended to help more harm than good. It will accelerate the trend toward mechanization of farm operations and the concentration of these operations in larger holdings."

In separate views, Albert H. Quie (R Minn.), Charles E. Goodell (R N.Y.), Alphonzo Bell (R Calif.) and Ogden R. Reid (R N.Y.) supported the "basic objectives" of HR 10518, but questioned whether the over-all increase in the minimum wage by 50 cents over four years, combined with the coverage of small businesses, could be justified "based on presently known facts."

In supplemental views, Rep. Dave Martin (R Neb.) called the proposed minimum wage increase to $1.75 an hour "excessive and dangerous," and said the increase should not go beyond $1.50. He said the provision to establish a minimum wage for agricultural workers was "a completely new concept as they are not engaged in interstate commerce." He said the provision would be difficult to enforce and would "further accelerate the movement off of the farm," and that it was "unfair and unrealistic to set one standard of coverage for those in the retail field and in service industries and a different standard for those in agriculture."

Glenn Andrews (R Ala.) opposed HR 10518 "on the basis of discrimination against low-income states." He said, "Variations in income make a uniform wage law throughout the nation unfair to low-income states.... I despair of a war on poverty which must groom the unskilled, the uneducated and unproductive to be accepted into employment in my area at $1.75 an hour."

FLOOR ACTION DEFERRED

The Democratic majority on the House Education and Labor Committee in an Oct. 7 caucus agreed to postpone until 1966 action on HR 10518 or any alternate proposals. Committee Chairman Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.) said the Democrats had decided to withhold action on the measure because chances were slim that such controversial legislation could be passed so late in the session without dismembering amendments. Powell said that the Democratic leadership had told him Oct. 6 that only about 100 of the 292 House Democrats favored 1965 action on HR 10518. A committee spokesman Oct. 13 told Congressional Quarterly that the committee bill was dead for the 89th Congress and that the Committee would be open to new proposals in 1966.

SMALL BUSINESS LOANS

Congress in 1965 authorized increases of $175 million for Small Business Administration (SBA) programs. The increases were authorized in the following four bills:

An Administration-backed bill to provide additional SBA assistance for disaster victims (S 1796 -- PL 89-59) increased the SBA's revolving fund by $50 million -- from $1,666,000,000 to $1,716,000,000.

A $5 million increase in the SBA revolving fund was authorized in July in Section 316 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965 (HR 7984 -- PL 89-117). The increase to $1,721,000,000 was to provide initial capital for the lease guarantee program authorized in the Act.

Congress in July also authorized a $120 million increase in the limitation on SBA loans to small business investment companies (SBICs) and to state and local development companies (HR 7847 -- PL 89-78). The increase was from $341 million to $461 million.

To cover the SBIC increase, Congress in October (S 2542 -- PL 89-334) authorized a $120 million increase in the SBA's revolving loan fund -- from $1,721,000,000 to $1,841,000,000.

Congress also permitted cancelation of some SBA loans in disaster areas when it enacted a relief bill (HR 11539 -- PL 89-339) for three southeastern states that were damaged by Hurricane Betsy. Separate appropriations for these activities were authorized.

Natural disasters that occurred in 1965 so depleted the SBA's funds that on Oct. 12 the agency suspended applications for direct loans to small businesses. Since 1962 funds for disaster loans had been merged with those for business loans. Fiscal 1965 set a record for the number of disaster loans (4,207) and the amount loaned ($93.5 million), and the amount was expected to more than double in fiscal 1966 (to $220.8 million), necessitating further increases in SBA's lending authority.

In 1965 Congress appropriated $310 million for SBA's revolving fund.

Background

The Small Business Act of 1953 (PL 83-163) created the SBA for a two-year trial period ending June 30, 1955. The act authorized $275 million for a revolving fund; $150 million was for loans to small businesses that could not get reasonable credit elsewhere, $100 million was to help small businesses finance the procurement of Government contracts, and $25 million was for loans to individuals or businesses of any size damaged by natural disasters. (Congress and the Nation p. 362-63; 1953 Almanac p. 428)

Congress in 1958 made the SBA a permanent federal agency (PL 85-536), with a revolving fund of $650 million. Seven further increases raised the fund to $1,666,000,000 by the end of 1962. (1962 Almanac p. 572)

Funds to help get Government contracts were reduced to $25 million in 1958 and in 1961 they were merged with business loans in one authorization. In the 1962 law, funds for disaster loans also were merged with the other two activities. The function of disaster loans was increased several times: in the 1961 Housing Act (PL 87-70), loans were authorized for firms that were forced to relocate by urban renewal or other federally aided construction programs; in 1964, after the Great Lakes fishing industry suffered from the discovery of botulism in commercially sold fish, disasters were redefined to include disease and toxicity; in the same year, in reaction to a serious earthquake in Alaska and flood damage on the West Coast, Congress made the maximum maturity on loans to victims in Alaska, California and Washington 30 years instead of 20. (1964 Almanac p. 437)

A new activity for the SBA was authorized in the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 (PL 85-699). It authorized the SBA to charter companies to provide equity capital to small businesses and to make loans to small business investment companies (SBICs). The program began with a $250 million authorization to the SBA revolving fund and was increased to $341 million in 1962. Amendments to the program were enacted in 1964. (1964 Almanac p. 593)

1965 Legislation

DISASTER LOANS. S 1796 (PL 89-59) was enacted without opposition in Congress as a stop-gap measure to meet emergency needs for disaster loans. It:

Increased the SBA revolving fund by $50 million, bringing the total SBA authorization to $1,716,000,000, of which $1,375,000,000 was reserved for business and disaster loans. SBA was expected to increase its set-aside for disaster loans to $250 million.

Increased the maximum maturity of disaster loans from 20 years to 30 years.

Gave the SBA Administrator discretion to suspend for up to five years payments on principal and interest on disaster loans to homeowners and small businessmen afflicted by natural disasters and to extend the maturity of 20-year loans for up to five years.

Required the SBA, at the request of a participating lending institution when payment of principal or interest had been suspended, to purchase, or make payments on, loans held by the institution if necessary to avoid default. The borrower was to repay the SBA eventually.

S 1796 was reported May 6 by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 177) and passed by voice vote of the Senate May 7. It was reported May 19 by the House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 354), passed by voice vote of the House June 21 and signed into law June 30.

LEASE GUARANTEES. Section 316 of the Housing and Urban Development Act (PL 89-117) added a new title to the Small Business Investment Act of 1958. It permitted the SBA to guarantee rental payments on leases of small businesses that were eligible for SBA loans because they were displaced by urban renewal or other construction or were covered by Title IV of the anti-poverty law. (1964 Almanac p. 212) A separate revolving fund for the program was established, and $5 million was transferred from the regular SBA revolving fund to the new fund as initial capital. To compensate, SBA's total authority was increased by $5 million, to $1,721,000,000. Fees from the guarantees were expected eventually to permit reimbursement of the regular SBA fund. (See story p. 358)

INVESTMENT COMPANIES. A $120-million increase in available SBA loans to small business investment companies (SBICs) and state and local development companies was signed into law July 21 (HR 7847 -- PL 89-78). The increase was requested because loans and commitments from the SBA revolving fund were estimated to exceed the current $341-million statutory limit by mid-June. By June 30, 1966, they were expected to reach the $461-million limit set by HR 7847. The bill passed the House June 10 and the Senate July 7 by voice votes, without opposition.

The increased authorization for loans to SBICs required a $120-million increase in the SBA's revolving fund. S 2542, increasing the fund from $1,721,000,000 to $1,841,000,000, was passed by the Senate Oct. 1 and the House Oct. 21 without controversy. It was signed into law (PL 89-334) Nov. 8.

SOUTHEASTERN STATES. After Hurricane Betsy inflicted heavy damage on Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi, Congress enacted HR 11539 (PL 89-339) which, among other things, provided special SBA disaster loan aid to the area until Jan. 1, 1967. The bill:

Directed SBA, at the borrower's option, on part of any disaster loan exceeding $500 to cancel up to $1,800 of the loan or waive interest for three years. The property loss must not have been covered by insurance.

Authorized disaster loans to private schools and colleges in the affected areas and the waiver of interest and deferral of principal payments for the first three years of the loan. The existing requirement that private financing be sought first was waived.

The bill authorized appropriations of $70 million to provide all aid authorized in the bill and Congress appropriated $35 million before adjourning. (See story on disaster bills, p. 676)

UNION OFFICIAL BONDING

HR 5883 -- Reported by House Education and Labor Committee (H Rept 182) March 17, 1965.
- Passed by the House by voice vote May 27.
- Reported by Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (S Rept 698) Sept. 9.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Sept. 14.

PL 89-216 -- Signed into law Sept. 29.

Congress in 1965 passed an Administration-backed bill (HR 5883) amending provisions of the 1959 Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act (Landrum-Griffin Act) which had required union officials handling union funds and property to be bonded for faithful performance of duties in the handling of the money and property.

Instead of requiring a "faithful performance" bond, HR 5883 substituted a requirement that the officials be bonded to protect the union only against loss through the fraud or dishonesty of the official. Sponsors of the bill said that because bonding for "faithful performance" was actually a new concept, and it was not absolutely clear what kind of losses the bonding companies would be liable for under that term, the companies had set their rates higher than for other types of bonding. By substituting a more familiar type of bonding covering only acts of fraud or dishonesty, they said, HR 5883 would afford union members substantially the same protection against misappropriation of funds at a cost approximately 25 percent less, thus saving unions a substantial amount of money in bonding fees.

Critics of the bill, led by Rep. Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.), who was a sponsor of the original 1959 legislation, contended that the change in bonding requirements would greatly reduce the protection afforded union members against loss of funds by union officials. They argued that, if the bonds covered only fraud and dishonesty, the union would be able to get payment from the bonding company for losses only in cases of fraud or dishonesty on the part of the bonded official. Acts of carelessness and negligence -- for example, leaving union money carelessly in a desk drawer from which it was then stolen by some intruder -- would not be covered by the bonds, and the bonding company would therefore not be liable for the loss. However, they said, "faithful performance" bonds would protect the union against such acts.

Administration officials and Congressional sponsors of HR 5883 for the most part conceded that acts of carelessness and negligence would not be covered by fraud-and-dishonesty bonds. But they said that there was considerable legal doubt as to whether such acts were actually covered by the more expensive "faithful performance" bonds. Moreover, they said, the real danger to union funds was from fraud and dishonesty, not carelessness and negligence. Therefore, they argued, allowing the use of bonds that protected only against fraud and dishonesty would safeguard union funds against the major dangers while permitting a substantial reduction in annual union costs for bonding fees.

The changes made by HR 5883 made the general bonding requirements for union officials handling union money and property the same as applied to persons handling union welfare and pension plan funds. Amendments in 1962 to the Welfare and Pension Plans Disclosure Act of 1958 required fraud-and-dishonesty bonds for persons administering union welfare and pension plans. Sponsors of HR 5883 said that if fraud-and-dishonesty bonds were considered adequate to protect the often highly affluent welfare and pension funds, there was no reason not to consider them adequate to protect other types of union funds and property.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 5883:

Required union officials handling union funds and property to obtain bonding that would protect the union against loss due to acts of fraud or dishonesty on the part of the official, directly or through connivance with others. Eliminated the requirement that the official be bonded for "faithful discharge of his duties." (The bill did not change existing provisions of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 which set the amount of the bond for each official at 10 percent of the funds handled by him in the year preceding the one for which he was being bonded, up to a maximum of $500,000 on the amount of the bond.)

Authorized the Secretary of Labor to exempt unions from the requirement that they obtain their bonding only from surety companies on a Treasury list of approved companies, if, in the Secretary's opinion, the union had made other bonding arrangements which would provide the protection sought by the bonding requirement; but made clear that this provision was not intended to sanction self-insurance on the part of unions.

Required any surety companies issuing the bonds required above, or similar bonds under the Welfare and Pension Plans Disclosure Act, to file annual reports with the Secretary of Labor describing premiums, claims paid, expenses and related information; and provided that such reports would be made available for public inspection and examination.

BACKGROUND. The 1959 Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act, an omnibus labor anti-corruption bill, contained numerous provisions to prevent misappropriation of general union funds by labor officials, including bonding requirements. (1959 Almanac p. 156) The 1958 Welfare and Pension Plans Disclosure Act, amended in 1962, was intended to ensure honest management of union welfare and pension funds. (1958 Almanac p. 200; 1962 Almanac p. 521) (Continued on next page)

HOUSE ACTION. The House Education and Labor Committee March 17, 1965, reported HR 5883 (H Rept 182). The Labor Department endorsed the measure. Reps. Griffin (R Mich.), Ashbrook (R Ohio), Martin (R Neb.), Findley (R Ill.), and Andrews (R Ala.) filed minority views opposing the bill on grounds that substituting fraud-and-dishonesty bonds for the previously required "faithful performance" bonds would remove the protection which they said was provided by "faithful performance" bonds, against losses resulting from negligence, carelessness, omission or ignorance on the part of union officials, and would provide protection only against losses resulting from fraud or dishonesty.

The House passed HR 5883 May 27 by voice vote after rejecting, also by voice vote, an amendment by Paul C. Jones (D Mo.) to require bonding that would protect union funds against loss for any reason.

In floor debate, Rep. Adam C. Powell (D N.Y.) said there was "no reason why officers and other representatives of labor organizations who handle funds other than those of welfare and pension plans should be bonded differently from those who handle such funds." He said there was "no justification for requiring an expensive 25 percent surcharge for 'faithful performance of duty' bonds" when the extra charge "fails to secure any defined increase in protection as intended under the present Act." James Roosevelt (D Calif.) added that 122 national and international unions, six affiliated departments of the AFL-CIO, and the Surety Assn. of America had reported that "not a single faithful discharge claim had been filed."

In opposition, Robert P. Griffin (R Mich.) contended that "a vote for this bill will be a vote against the rank and file union members; it will be a vote against the protection they have now under the 1959 Act." He said, "Most of the pressure for this bill has come from the Teamsters Union. There may be lip service support coming from some of the other unions, but they do not seem to be so interested in it. I have not received any particular pressures from companies."

SENATE ACTION. The Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee Sept. 9 reported HR 5883 (S Rept 698) without amendments, and the Senate by voice vote Sept. 14 passed the bill, completing Congressional action.

Communist Union Officials

In a related development, the Supreme Court June 7, 1965, struck down the section of the 1959 Landrum-Griffin Act which made it illegal for a Communist to serve as a union officer (U.S. v. Brown). The Court ruled that the provision "is void as a bill of attainder." Chief Justice Earl Warren, for the majority, said the Constitution barred bills of attainder as "trial by legislature." Bills of attainder were enacted by the British Parliament in the 16th to 18th centuries against persons threatening to overthrow the government.

In dissent, Justices Byron R. White, Tom C. Clark, John Marshall Harlan, and Potter Stewart said the law was not a bill of attainder because it involved regulation instead of punishment.

PRIVATE PENSION PLANS

The President's Committee on Corporate Pension Funds and Other Private Retirement and Welfare Programs Jan. 31 recommended tightening of the tax laws to require fuller funding of private pension plans and minimum standards giving employees pension rights even though they may leave a company (this is called "vesting"). The Committee, appointed by President Kennedy in 1962, was chaired by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz and included the Secretaries of Treasury and Health, Education and Welfare, the chairmen of the Federal Reserve Board, Council of Economic Advisers and Securities and Exchange Commission and the director of the Budget Bureau. The Committee's report was submitted to the President.

No legislation was submitted to Congress on the subject and the Ways and Means Committee, which has jurisdiction over tax matters, took no action. The report was widely criticized in the business community.

According to the report, private pension plans covered about 25 million workers, or half those employed in private nonfarm enterprises, and by 1980 were expected to cover 60 percent. The report said plans currently were paying almost $2,750,000,000 annually to some 2.5 million retired workers.

Under existing tax laws, employers could take tax deductions for payments into pension funds and the income earned through investments by the fund was not taxed until it was distributed as benefits to employees. The President's Committee recommended that the law require larger payments into the funds to meet commitments promised to workers. It also proposed that, to qualify for tax deductions, plans must provide a minimum amount of vesting for employees.

Pensions for the Self-Employed. A report issued June 3 by the Subcommittee on Employment and Retirement Incomes of the Special Senate Committee on Aging recommended amendment of the 1962 Self-Employed Individuals Tax Retirement Act (PL 87-792). The report said testimony at hearings March 4, 5 and 10, 1965, indicated that only 15,000 persons were covered by the Act, compared to 7 million self-employed who could be covered. "The least progress in providing private pension coverage," the report said, "has been made in businesses with the fewest employees, most of which are owned and managed" by self-employed persons. Included in this definition were doctors, lawyers and other professionals.

The 1962 Act gave self-employed persons a tax-deduction of 50 percent of contributions made to their own retirement plans. Contributions were limited to the lesser of 10 percent of earned income or $2,500. (1962 Almanac p. 531) The 1965 Subcommittee report recommended 100 percent tax deductions and removal of the contribution limit, so long as the employer gave comparable retirement benefits to his employees. These changes would encourage more employers to set up retirement systems, the report said. They were incorporated in a bill (HR 10) introduced by Rep. Eugene J. Keogh (D N.Y.) and endorsed by the American Bar and Medical Assns. Keogh sponsored the 1962 law.

BALANCE-OF-PAYMENTS DEFICIT REDUCED DURING 1965

The U.S. balance of payments, in deficit since 1957, showed a substantial movement toward equilibrium in 1965. On a regular transactions basis, the U.S. deficit was down to $1.3 billion -- smallest deficit since a surplus in 1957 and less than half the $2.8 billion deficit of 1964. (See box)

In considerable part, the improvement in the U.S. payments account was attributable to Administration efforts to keep dollars at home, repatriate liquid funds held abroad and attract foreign capital to the United States. The program was announced by President Johnson Feb. 10 in a special Balance-of-Payments Message to Congress. (For details, see below) The effects of the program more than offset a $1.9 billion decline in the U.S. trade surplus -- from $6.7 billion to $4.8 billion, a rise in the tourist deficit (excess of U.S. overseas tourist expenditures and costs of fares abroad over similar foreign expenditures on tourism in the United States) from $1.6 billion to $1.8 billion, an increase of approximately $1 billion in direct overseas investment, and British liquidation of some $500 million in U.S. long-term assets.

The thrust of the Administration program was aimed at capital outflows, which rose by nearly half (48 percent) in 1964 to a level of $6.4 billion (compared to $4.3 billion in 1963). To stem the flow of dollars abroad, the President called on businessmen and bankers to exercise "voluntary restraint" in overseas lending and investment operations. Widespread compliance, particularly by bankers, held 1965 outflows to a level estimated by the Commerce Department at $3.6 billion, about $2.9 billion below the actual performance of 1964.

In other key features of his program, the President proposed further reductions of U.S. Government expenditures abroad and outlined a legislative program which included proposals to extend and expand the 1964 Interest Equalization Tax, continue authority of U.S. banks to pay higher rates of interest on time deposits (short-term investments) of foreign governments than on domestic deposits, reduce the amount of duty-free purchases permitted tourists returning from abroad, and provide antitrust exemptions for bankers who cooperated to cut down on overseas dollar movements. (Each of these measures was enacted during the 1st Session of the 89th Congress, but all were implemented too late in 1965 to determine their actual balance-of-payments effects.)

Early in 1965, response to the President's program indicated that the deficit might be eliminated altogether within the year. Bank loans declined rapidly, large amounts of short-term capital were repatriated and a declining U.S. trade surplus improved with the February settlement of an Atlantic and Gulf coast dock strike. For the first quarter as a whole, the deficit fell to a seasonally adjusted $647 million, down substantially from the $1.5 billion deficit of fourth quarter 1964. These trends continued during the second quarter, bringing the U.S. account to a seasonally adjusted surplus of $267 million -- the first quarterly surplus since 1957.

During the second half of the year, however, the balance turned adverse as repatriations were completed and exports leveled off. Seasonally adjusted deficits for the third and fourth quarters were, respectively, $531 million and $388 million -- levels that would have been far higher except for a further tightening of overseas bank lending and large cuts in direct overseas investment.

Balance-of-Payments Figures

The United States had a balance-of-payments deficit in every year after 1949 except for 1957 when a small surplus was achieved.

(in millions)

Year	Balance on: Over-all Transactions Basis[1]	Official Settlements Basis[2]	Change in U.S. Gold Stock
1946	$ 1,261		$ 623
1947	4,567		2,162
1948	1,005		1,530
1949	175		164
1950	-3,580		-1,743
1951	- 305		53
1952	-1,046		379
1953	-2,152		-1,161
1954	-1,550		- 298
1955	-1,145		- 41
1956	- 935		306
1957	520		798
1958	-3,529		-2,275
1959	-3,743		-1,075
1960	-3,881	$-3,592	-1,702
1961	-2,370	-1,287	- 857
1962	-2,203	-2,241	- 890
1963	-2,670	-1,990	- 461
1964	-2,798	-1,256	- 125
1965	-1,299[3]	-1,382[3]	-1,665[3]

[1] The balance in this column, on the "over-all" or liquidity accounting basis, is measured by changes in U.S. gold and other official reserve assets and in U.S. dollars held by all foreigners.

In previous CQ Almanacs, similar figures for "regular international transactions" differ slightly from those above for the years 1959-64. This resulted from differing treatment of "special Government transactions"; beginning in 1965, this information was not provided separately in the totals prepared by the Commerce Department. (See box, 1964 Almanac p. 547)

[2] The official settlements balance, first used by the Commerce Department in presenting 1965 figures, measures the payments balance by changes in U.S. reserve assets (gold and others) and in dollars held by official foreign agencies. It differs from the "over-all" measurement primarily by excluding changes in dollar holdings by private foreign parties. The Commerce Department had not prepared figures for the official settlements basis for years before 1960.

[3] Preliminary.

Background

REFERENCES -- 1960 Almanac p. 709; 1961 Almanac p. 338; 1962 Almanac p. 511; 1963 Almanac p. 580; 1964 Almanac p. 546. See 1963 story for detailed explanation of the balance of payments.

Simply stated, the U.S. balance of payments run a deficit because, in total, the United States spends more abroad for imports, travel, investments and government outlays than the rest of the world spends here. The United States has had a deficit in every year since 1949, except for 1957 when a small surplus was achieved. The deficit means that, one way or another, the rest of the world has accumulated more claims against the United States than the U.S. has accumulated against the rest of the world. Eventually, central banks around the world (mostly in Europe) end up with the excess of dollars. The U.S. stands ready at any time to give them an ounce of gold for every $35 they have.

The balance-of-payments deficit first became a serious problem in 1958. Early in 1960 the first major attempt to deal with the deficit was outlined in a March 17 message to Congress by President Eisenhower. The message, however, was devoted largely to export expansion.

The first major balance-of-payments message was sent to Congress by President Kennedy on Feb. 6, 1961. The message proposed expanded efforts at increasing exports, improvement in Export-Import Bank facilities and a "Buy American" policy for foreign aid purchases by other nations. The message also proposed the reduction of the duty-free allowances from $500 to $100 and other measures.

In 1962, President Kennedy continued to push reductions in U.S. overseas spending, obtained enactment of the Trade Expansion Act and revised tax laws applying to American businesses and individuals overseas, and took other actions.

Mr. Kennedy July 18, 1963, sent Congress his second special payments message, in which he requested the Interest Equalization Tax. He indicated that the Administration hoped to achieve a near or complete balance in international transactions by 1965. He also outlined other efforts, including such familiar measures as export expansion and reduced Government outlays abroad.

Details, Results of 1965 Action

Buoyed by large capital outflows, the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit rose to $1.5 billion in the fourth quarter of 1964 -- the highest level since the third quarter of 1950, when the nation mobilized for the Korean War. Capital outflows continued to expand through early 1965, threatening an unprecedented run on U.S. gold reserves. These conditions formed the backdrop for the President's Feb. 10 message. (See text, p. 1390)

The President's program was a mixture of Executive Branch action, legislation and voluntary cooperation by bankers and businessmen; it constituted the strongest assault on the deficit since the U.S. payments account fell from surplus at the end of the 1940s. In major features of the message, the President urged bankers and businessmen to curtail foreign loans and direct investment, announced he would issue an Executive Order extending the 1964 Interest Equalization Tax (IET) to cover U.S. bank loans made to overseas borrowers with maturities of one to three years and proposed legislation to further extend and expand the IET, continue authority of U.S. banks to pay higher rates of interest on time deposits (short-term investments) of foreign governments than on domestic deposits, reduce the amount of duty-free purchases authorized tourists returning from abroad, and provide antitrust exemptions for bankers who cooperated to cut back dollar outflows.

Tracing improvements in the payments deficit, the President cited "solid and significant advances" since 1961. He said the four-year effort, involving both higher exports and reduced Government spending abroad, had produced gains of $3.5 billion. (The deficit was not reduced that much, however, because of a $2.5 billion increase in the level of private capital outflow since 1960.

The President added that the net result of Government balance-of-payments actions since 1960 was to reduce the over-all deficit by "only $900 million" -- from $3.9 billion in 1960 to $3 billion in 1964. (Final 1964 figures, released by the Commerce Department after the President's message, showed a somewhat lower deficit of $2.8 billion)

In an effort to achieve greater reductions in the future, the President sketched a program encompassing many activities. Government officials declined to estimate how much the over-all program might cut the deficit. Following are the major proposals:

Capital. Major focus of the President's message centered on measures to reduce the increasing overseas outflows of private U.S. capital. Mr. Johnson said he "reluctantly" proposed steps to "restrain" capital outflow, "but our balance-of-payments deficit leaves me no choice." He proposed (and announced) the following actions:

Voluntary Cooperation. In the central part of the program, the President asked that bankers and businessmen "exercise voluntary restraint" in lending money or making investments in developed nations. He said the restraint should particularly apply to short-term loans and direct investment.

In his message, President Johnson said he was directing Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon and federal banking agencies and officials to work with the nation's banks to develop a program "that will sharply limit the flow of bank loans abroad." He said he would invite a number of "leading bankers" to meet with him, Dillon and William McChesney Martin Jr., the chairman of the Federal Reserve, to discuss the problem.

To make wide-scale bank cooperation possible, the President requested Congress to exempt from the antitrust laws the voluntary actions and agreements among bankers. The President said the exemption would be for bank actions "in support of our balance-of-payments objectives." (See p. 875)

In addition, the President said he would ask a group of "leading businessmen" to meet with him and Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor to discuss voluntary methods of controlling short-term corporate lending and direct investment abroad. He said the Secretary would continue in close contact with the businessmen and request periodic reports "as the basis for appraising their contribution to our balance-of-payments targets." Mr. Johnson said businessmen would be urged to limit direct foreign investments, deposits in foreign banks and holding of foreign financial assets.

A specific program was announced Feb. 19 when the President and other Administration officials met at the White House with some 370 executives representing business and banking interests. Major features of the program included:

● A request that bankers reduce new overseas loans from the 1964 total of $2 billion to a total of $500 million in 1965. Federal Reserve Governor J.L. Robertson, who explained the program to the executives, said the Federal Reserve had set a target for outstanding credits to foreigners in 1965 of not more than 5 percent over the level of credits at the end of 1964. Robertson said that non-bank lenders, such as pension funds and insurance companies, should be subject to the same 5-percent limit.

● A request that businessmen place greater reliance on European capital markets for financing foreign subsidiaries. Commerce Secretary Connor told the executives that each of 400 to 500 businesses with overseas investments of $10 million or more would be asked to seek over-all improvements of 15 to 20 percent in enlarging its balance-of-payments surplus or reducing its deficit. Connor said such companies would be asked to submit quarterly reports describing steps taken to "achieve the improvement indicated and the reasons for shortfalls, if any."

While cutbacks in direct investment lagged because of previous commitments, the plan was immediately successful in reducing overseas loans and repatriating short-term funds held abroad.

Treasury Secretary Henry H. Fowler early in 1966 announced that overseas lending in 1965 amounted to $155 million, down from $2.4 billion in 1964 and about $350 million lower than the target set by the Administration's guidelines. In addition, Fowler said, some $300 million in funds held abroad by non-bank corporations were repatriated during 1965. This contrasted with an outflow of more than $900 million in 1964 and represented a $1.2 billion improvement.

Although direct investment declined sharply in the third quarter of 1965, the Commerce Department early in 1966 estimated 1965 investment outflows at $3.4 billion.

Interest Equalization Tax (IET). The President proposed and initiated broad new actions under a 1964 law, the Interest Equalization Tax (PL 88-563). In actions regarding the tax the President:

● Proposed legislation to extend the tax for a two-year period, from Dec. 31, 1965, to Dec. 31, 1967.

● Issued an Executive Order broadening the IET to cover U.S. bank loans made abroad with maturities of one to three years. (Exemptions would be made available for borrowers in underdeveloped nations.) The President's action was taken under standby authority provided by an amendment to the 1964 law sponsored by Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.) and welcomed by the Administration. Bank lending of one to three years was not covered under existing law.

● Proposed an amendment to the IET to broaden its scope to cover the purchase by Americans of foreign securities with a maturity period of one to three years. As in the case of the original IET, the levy was to be retroactive and apply to purchase agreements beginning Feb. 11, the date of the message. As passed in 1964, the IET did not impose a tax for securities maturing in less than three years. This amendment was necessary to make the act consistent following the extension of its provisions to one to three year bank loans (above).

Congress approved the Administration's IET proposals Sept. 20 (HR 4750 -- PL 89-243) with an amendment limiting extension of the levy for 19 months rather than the 24 months requested by the Administration. (For separate story see p. 870)

Government Expenditures. Mr. Johnson said the Government would intensify efforts to reduce U.S. dollar outlays abroad. He said that foreign aid and defense officials had been directed to send dollar assistance abroad only if the aid could not be sent in the form of U.S. goods and services. All officials were instructed to cut overseas dollars expenses "to the bone." The Defense Department also was instructed to step up its efforts to reduce many types of overseas spending by cutting staffs, streamlining support of operations and encouraging other nations to buy more equipment in the United States.

Foreign Travel. President Johnson requested that legislation be enacted to reduce from $100 to $50 the amount of purchases made abroad that returning U.S. residents could bring into the country duty-free. The $100 duty-free exemption, which was provided by a 1961 law and extended in 1963 to help cut the payments deficit, was scheduled to expire June 30. The 1961 law had reduced the exemption from $500. (1963 Almanac, p. 519)

The President also requested that the $50 exemption be based on retail rather than wholesale prices (as provided in existing law) and asked that Congress limit the exemption to goods which returning travelers brought with them rather than shipped or mailed.

The President also called on the U.S. tourist industry to launch a "See the U.S.A." program designed to bring foreign tourists to the United States and encourage greater domestic travel by U.S. citizens. The President's message did not contain a controversial proposal, that was under Administration consideration, to impose a tax of about $100 on each American tourist going abroad.

Congress approved most of the legislative requests in this category in HR 8147 (PL 89-62), a bill enacted June 30 only hours before the temporary allowances expired. In its final version, however, HR 8147 provided for a permanent allowance of $100 retail, significantly above the $50 retail level sought by the Administration. (For story, see p. 872)

Commerce Department officials early in 1966 announced that the tourist deficit had increased by $200 million during 1965 to a level of $1.8 billion. (The deficit was defined as the excess of U.S. tourist expenditures and costs of fares abroad over similar foreign expenditures on tourism in the United States.) Officials attributed the larger deficit to an increase in the number of Americans going abroad and noted that the deficit would have been greater without the tighter allowances provided by HR 8147.

Foreign Investment. Mr. Johnson said he would propose tax legislation to encourage foreign investment in U.S. corporate securities. A bill (HR 5916) providing for tax reduction on foreign business income accumulated in the United States (including dividends, interest and capital gains) was submitted by the Treasury March 8, but the measure did not receive action during 1965.

The President also called for extension of authority for domestic banks to pay higher interest rates on time deposits (short-term investments) of foreign governments than on domestic deposits. This request was granted in HR 5306 (PL 89-79), approved by Congress July 7. (See p. 876)

Exports and Competition. Mr. Johnson urged business and labor to avoid "unwarranted price and wage increases" that would make U.S. goods uncompetitive in world trade and thereby reduce the nation's current surplus of exports over imports. "Unless American business and labor hew to the Government's price-wage guideposts, we will run grave risks of losing our competitive advantage," he said. The guideposts, devised by the President's Council of Economic Advisers in 1962, provided that wage increases should not exceed the national trend in productivity and prices should increase or decrease depending on whether a particular industry's productivity was growing less or more rapidly than the national trend. Mr. Johnson said there were "recent instances" of both wage increases and the absence of price cuts in violation of the guidelines. Both business and industry had criticized the guidelines, and spokesmen for many unions and companies had said they would be ignored.

The President also urged Congress to approve a $13 million Budget request for the nation's export expansion program in fiscal 1966. A total of $10.8 million was provided for that purpose in the State-Justice-Commerce Departments' fiscal 1966 appropriations bill (HR 8639) approved Aug. 24. (See p. 217)

GOLD TRANSACTIONS. During the 1950-64 period, considerably less than half the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit resulted in gold loss; however, it appeared in early 1965 that this trend might change when in the month of January alone the U.S. gold stock declined by $300 million -- more than twice the net decline of $125 million in all of 1964. Net gold sales by the end of 1965 totaled almost $1.7 billion, of which $259 million represented a gold payment to the International Monetary Fund in connection with an increase in U.S. drawing rights on the Fund, and $118 million represented sales to domestic industrial users. Of the remaining $1.3 billion in gold sales, $1.1 billion occurred during the first half of the year and the remainder during the second half. The $1.7 billion sale of gold was the largest since 1960. (See box p. 865)

In reviewing these developments early in 1966, Treasury Secretary Fowler said the decline in gold sales throughout 1965, along with "some strengthening" of the dollar in foreign exchange markets, "suggests a healthy state of foreign confidence in the dollar." (Congress Feb. 18 approved a bill (HR 3918) making available more of the U.S. gold stock to meet foreign demands. See p. 879)

BALANCE-OF-PAYMENTS HEARINGS

COMMITTEE -- Senate Banking and Currency, International Finance Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- March 9-25, May 17, Aug. 3-18 on the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit and the President's program for combatting it.

TESTIMONY -- March 9 -- Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon said that "a swelling tide of private capital outflows joined with other, more special factors in carrying our deficit on regular transactions to a fourth quarter annual rate of $5.8 billion."

Dillon called for full implementation of the President's balance-of-payments program to "assure the rapid and substantial improvement that is required." He said that the deficit could be cut in half during 1965 and eliminated in 1966 under full implementation of the President's program.

Dillon outlined special deficit-reducing programs the Kennedy-Johnson Administrations had undertaken since 1960, including reduction in Government outlays overseas, elimination of the attraction of "foreign tax havens" for private U.S. capital and establishment of the interest equalization tax. In conjunction with the reduction of overseas outlays, the Treasury Secretary pointed out that a program of making offsetting sales of U.S. military equipment to nations where large contingents of U.S. forces were deployed, had met with "striking" success. He said cash receipts from sales of military equipment had risen from $300 million in 1960 to over $1 billion in each of the years 1962-64. "The net effect of these various programs," Dillon said, "has been to reduce our actual self-defense dollar outlays abroad from over $2.7 billion in 1960 to a little over $1.6 billion in 1964."

Dillon cautioned that a further outflow of dollars into foreign hands would probably mean their prompt conversion into gold.

David E. Bell, administrator of the Agency for International Development (AID), said that "80 percent of the AID's expenditures last year represented not dollars going abroad, but steel, machinery, fertilizer and other goods and services purchased in the United States." Bell said that a cut in AID appropriations under these circumstances "would primarily reduce U.S. exports, and would have only a very small effect on the balance-of-payments."

March 10 -- William McChesney Martin Jr., chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, praised the President's plan to ease the payments deficit, but expressed doubt that voluntary restraint alone on the part of the banking community could erase the entire deficit. "...Even if the program of voluntary cooperation achieves the greatest possible degree of success," Martin said, "we cannot think of it as a permanent institution. This program can serve as a dyke for a period of time, but still farther ahead we have to look for a more basic adjustment of our international payments balance." The chairman said it might become necessary to use some form of monetary controls, and to apply "further restraint" in military spending, economic aid, and tourism.

March 11 -- Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor disputed the interpretation of some businessmen that the Administration's balance-of-payments program was focused primarily on the direct overseas investments of U.S. corporations. While the Administration hoped to see a "slowing down" of direct investment, particularly in the "marginal" category, the Secretary said, such paring should come only when "it makes business sense."

Direct overseas investment, Connor said, accounted for only about one-third of total U.S. capital outflow in 1964. He said the return flow of income exceeded that investment by some $1.3 billion -- "...the equivalent of about 14 percent of the value of all our exports."

March 18 -- Economist Walter S. Salant of the Brookings Institution contended that the broad forces of the world market had all but solved the U.S. balance-of-payments problem. Salant said the payments position of Western European nations had been weakened by a price and wage structure which had risen faster than that in the United States, giving U.S. exports a price advantage in world competition. Salant added that the higher rate of economic growth in Western European countries had further weakened their payments position by increasing the demand for exports. A failure to recognize these factors, Salant said, had "resulted in uncalled for alarm in the last few months, a United States posture absurdly lacking confidence, and a weakening of confidence in the whole international monetary system."

The present method of accounting for the balance-of-payments, Salant argued, had exaggerated the U.S. deficit because it did not count non-governmental foreign funds transferred to U.S. banks as receipts although it listed them as payments when withdrawn from the United States. He said a more accurate system of determining the U.S. balance would have revealed a payments deficit of only $1 billion to $1.3 billion in fiscal 1964 rather than the $3 billion calculated under the existing formula.

March 25 -- Charls E. Walker, executive vice president of the American Bankers Association (ABA), said that while the President's balance-of-payments program would not "provide a long-run answer" to the payments deficit, it did promise "quick and dramatic results, some of which are already evident." The ABA, Walker said, had determined "three indispensable ingredients" as essential to a permanent solution of the deficit problem. These, he said, were wage-price stability, "a further reduction in the degree of ease in domestic credit markets," and additional cuts in overseas spending on foreign aid and defense. Walker said only slight increases in long-term interest rates would be necessary to tighten domestic credit sufficiently.

Aug. 5 -- Federal Reserve Governor J.L. Robertson said the voluntary restraint program has been "outstandingly successful" and that the reduction of foreign credit alone had equaled the entire second-quarter improvement in the U.S. payments position. Robertson said the only "disquieting" aspect of the voluntary restraint program was that it could "not be expected to work smoothly except on a temporary basis."

Richard C. Fenton, president of Pfizer International, said the purpose of the voluntary restraint program was to curb the outflow of dollars and not to limit direct foreign investment.

O. R. Strackbein, chairman of the Committee on Import-Export Policy, said the basic threat to the U.S. balance-of-payments stemmed from the fact that the United States had become "noncompetitive" in its trade with other countries. Strackbein urged that the United States maintain some of its tariffs to lessen the growing influx of free world imports.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

Alternate Accounting System. Administration officials in 1965 expressed interest in a second accounting system for balance-of-payments statistics which treated private dollars held in the United States by foreigners as a capital inflow. (The existing "over-all" or "liquidity" formula -- the official Government method of measuring the nation's balance-of-payments performance - listed dollar investment abroad as payments but did not list as receipts reinvestment of these funds in short-term U.S. securities or their deposit in U.S. banks.) Officials said the proposed new accounting system would give a more realistic indication of the U.S. payments position (above).

Termed the "official settlements" balance, the new formula was recommended in an April 30 report issued by the Review Committee for Balance-of-Payments Statistics, a Government-sponsored panel headed by private economist Edward Bernstein. Under the Committee's recommendations the liquidity formula would be retained and the official settlements system adopted as an alternate accounting measure. (The Bernstein report indicated that the 1964 deficit on an official settlements basis would have been $1.5 billion, well below the $2.8 billion deficit recorded under the existing formula.)

Sen. William Proxmire (D Wis.), chairman of the Subcommittee on Economic Statistics of the Joint Economic Committee, Aug. 2 called for adoption of Bernstein's recommendations. The Budget Bureau Aug. 27 announced that the Government would begin publishing U.S. balance-of-payments statistics under both formulas; however, the liquidity formula was to remain the only official measure pending further study of the new system. (Funds to begin the study in 1965 were subsequently denied during consideration of the general supplemental appropriations bill for fiscal 1966 (HR 11588). (See story p. 182).

Voluntary Restraints Broadened. President Johnson's Cabinet Committee on Balance-of-Payments, a group made up of the Secretaries of the Treasury, Defense, Commerce, Agriculture, and other high Administration officials, Dec. 6 announced an extension and tightening of the Administration's program for voluntary restraints on private capital outflows. The Committee said the objective of the program was to bring the U.S. balance-of-payments into equilibrium (a surplus or deficit no greater than $250 million) during 1966. (Treasury Secretary Fowler Feb. 14, 1966, expressed doubt that the goal could be reached, however, if foreign exchange costs of U.S. involvement in Viet Nam increased over levels projected in Budget estimates for fiscal 1966 and fiscal 1967.)

In its major features, the new program:

- Requested bankers to limit new overseas lending to a level only slightly above the 1965 ceiling (5 percent over the amount of such loans outstanding at the end of 1964). The program was to permit a 1-percent increase for each quarter of the year, culminating in a fourth quarter ceiling of 9 percent.
- Urged an additional 400 corporations to join the 500 corporate participants in the voluntary program, in an effort to increase net business contributions to balance-of-payments solvency by a total of $3.4 billion over 1965. The bulk of the total, some $2.4 billion, was to come from expanded exports, greater repatriations of foreign earnings, financing of foreign investment through borrowing abroad and the return of cash balances held overseas. The remaining $1 billion would come from cutbacks in direct investment outflows. To achieve these reductions, Commerce Secretary John T. Connor asked each of the corporations to limit its direct investment for the 1965-66 period to 90 percent of amounts invested during the period 1962-64. (This permitted over-all investment for 1965 and 1966 at an annual average rate about 35 percent greater than the annual average rate in the 1962-64 base period.)

Discount Rate Increase. The Federal Reserve Board Dec. 5 announced a one-half percent increase -- to 4.5 percent from 4 percent -- in its discount rate, the interest rate it charges for loans to commercial banks in the Reserve System. In a collateral move, the Board raised from 4.5 percent to 5.5 percent the ceiling on interest rates that member banks were permitted to pay on time deposits and deposit certificates. Although such adjustment of interest rates normally influence a nation's balance-of-payments performance, the Commerce Department early in 1966 forecast "comparatively minor" movements of capital in response to the higher U.S. rate structure. Officials said the higher U.S. rates were still considerably lower than comparable rates in other developed countries and that the probable effect of the rate increase would be a "slight encouragement" to U.S. lenders to keep short-term funds at home and to foreign investors to diversify their portfolios by holding U.S. assets. (For story on rate increase, see p. 877)

INTEREST EQUALIZATION TAX EXTENDED FOR 19 MONTHS

HR 4750 -- Reported, amended, by the House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 602) July7, 1965.

- Passed by the House by a 274-97 roll-call vote Aug. 5. (See p. 988)
- Reported, amended, by the Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 621) Aug. 17.
- Passed amended, by voice vote of the Senate Aug. 24.
- Conference report (H Rept 988) agreed to by voice votes of the House Sept. 16 and the Senate Sept. 20.

PL 89-243 -- Signed into law Oct. 9.

Congress in 1965 passed an amended Administration bill (HR 4750) extending for 19 months, through July 31, 1967, the tax on the purchase by Americans of certain foreign securities.

The Interest Equalization Tax (IET), as the levy was known, was scheduled to expire Dec. 31, 1965. Its purpose was to stem the outflow of investment funds from the United States by making it equally as expensive for foreign borrowers to obtain capital in U.S. financial markets as it was to obtain capital from other industrial nations. President Johnson in his Feb. 10 Balance-of-Payments Message called for extension of the tax as an important part of the Administration's program to reduce the persistent U.S. balance-of-payments deficit. (For story on the President's over-all program, see p. 865)

In a related action, the President Feb. 10 issued an Executive Order extending the IET to cover U.S. bank loans made abroad with maturities of 1 to 3 years. (Standby authority to apply the levy to such loans had been added to the 1964 Act in an amendment sponsored by Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.) and welcomed by the Administration.) The President said this action was necessary because overseas bank loans of more than one year's maturity had increased by nearly $1 billion in 1964 and threatened "materially to impair the effectiveness" of the IET. Treasury officials Feb. 10 said that a "sizable portion" of the loans "appears to have substituted, directly or indirectly, for other forms of borrowing subject to the Interest Equalization Tax."

The only major amendment to the 1964 Act provided by HR 4750 made the tax applicable to bonds with a maturity period of 1 to 3 years. The original Act taxed only purchases of bonds of more than three years maturity. This extension of the levy was believed necessary to conform to the bank loan coverage invoked by the President under his Executive Order. Government officials said the proposal would prevent certain types of lenders from moving into the 1 to 3-year maturity field.

In its other provisions, HR 4750 authorized minor exemptions from the tax designed to meet problems that had arisen since it was instituted. No change was made in the existing tax rates -- 15 percent of the purchase price on new and existing stock issued and 1.05 to 15 percent on bonds and notes, depending upon maturity period. In a second Executive action regarding the tax, President Johnson in his Feb. 10 Balance-of-Payments Message announced that all new securities issued or guaranteed by the Japanese Government would be exempted up to a total of $100 million annually.

Provisions

As signed into law, HR 4750, The Interest Equalization Tax Extension Act of 1965, contained the following major provisions:

Extended the Interest Equalization Tax for 19 months from Dec. 31, 1965, through July 31, 1967.

Broadened the scope of the tax to cover the purchase of foreign bonds with a maturity period of 1 to 3 years. Provided, with minor exceptions, that the tax on bonds in this category would apply retroactively to issues purchased after Feb. 10, 1965 (the date President Johnson requested the legislation).

Provided numerous new exemptions from the tax for various types of transactions.

Required that all international agreements under which foreign currencies are generated for the use of the United States must in the future contain provisions ensuring that such currencies may be used to pay U.S. debts in that country, or, if not needed to discharge debt obligations, may be converted into dollars or other foreign currencies in amounts determined by the Secretary of the Treasury to be necessary for U.S. requirements. Exempted from this provision agreements negotiated under Title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (PL 480). Stipulated that the provision would terminate upon expiration of the Interest Equalization Tax.

Background

REFERENCE -- 1964 Almanac p. 545.

The Interest Equalization Tax was enacted by Congress in 1964 (PL 88-563) as a temporary measure to reduce a heavy and continued outflow of dollars resulting from borrowing and stock issues of foreign governments and businesses in U.S. money markets.

Basically, the tax was designed to increase the cost of foreign borrowing in this manner: Americans would pay a tax (at rates provided in the bill) when they acquired a foreign security (primarily stocks or bonds). It was expected that the American purchasers would pass on the extra cost of the tax to the foreigner either through charging a higher interest rate on a loan or by demanding a discount on the purchase of the stock.

The tax rates provided by the 1964 Act were designed to increase the cost of borrowing in the U.S. by about 1 percent. With that increase, the cost of obtaining capital in the U.S. was expected to be at a level comparable with European markets. In order to prevent a large outflow of dollars before the measure became law, it was made retroactive to the July 1963 date on which it was proposed by President Kennedy.

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

ACTION -- July 7 reported an amended version of HR 4750 (H Rept 602). The committee changes extended the tax to July 31, 1967 (19 months), rather than the Administration-proposed date of Dec. 31, 1967 (two years), and provided numerous new exemptions from the tax for various types of transactions.

Majority Views. The report said that the Interest Equalization Tax had "substantially reduced the payments deficit" in the short time that it had been in force. After announcement of the tax in mid-year 1963, the report said, the annual rate of the payments deficit declined from $4.9 billion to $1.7 billion. In the three quarters following July 1963, it said sales of new foreign issues fell to "half the volume of sales made during the three quarters preceding announcement of the tax. Although the 1964 payments deficit was one of the lower deficits since 1957, the report said, the figure would have been "substantially less...were it not for a large outflow of bank loans in the last quarter of the year."

Continuation of the tax, the report asserted, provided a balance-of-payments solution that was "within the framework of a domestic economy operating at or near (its) full potential with price stability." Alternative solutions, such as the deflation of the domestic economy through higher interest rates "at a time when the objective is to achieve further reductions in unemployment," would be undesirable, it said.

A 19-month rather than 24-month extension had been selected, the report indicated, to allow the tax "to lapse relatively soon if conditions permit." The report emphasized that the tax was directed only at the "immediate problem of a balance-of-payments deficit...."

The report said the broadening of the tax to include foreign bonds with a maturity of 1 to 3 years was necessary because of a substantial 1964 increase in types of capital outflows not covered by the tax...." If bonds were not added to the tax's coverage, the report indicated, "widespread avoidance" would result through the issuance of bonds as a substitute for bank loans, which would continue to be covered under the President's standby authority.

Separate Views. A statement of separate views was filed by four of the eight Republicans on the Committee -- Thomas B. Curtis (Mo.), James B. Utt (Calif.), Jackson E. Betts (Ohio) and Joel T. Broyhill (Va.). The statement charged that the Administration had ignored long-run "damaging effects" which its capital restraints program would have on the U.S. and world economies.

"Continued reliance on palliatives and measures which would buy time," the statement said, permitted the Administration to "avoid making the hard choices that are needed to restore fundamental equilibrium to the U.S. balance-of-payments." The basic efforts needed to eliminate the deficit, the statement said, included a reassessment of U.S. military expenditures abroad, avoidance of domestic inflation, development of "a more realistic" domestic structure of interest rates and moderation of the rate of increase in money and credit at home.

FLOOR ACTION

The House Aug. 5 passed HR 4750 by a 274-97 roll-call vote and sent the measure to the Senate. (For voting, see chart p. 988) Prior to passage, the House by voice votes adopted the committee amendments and rejected a motion by Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) to recommit (kill) the bill.

During floor debate, supporters of the measure noted that the outflow of U.S. private capital on the purchase of foreign securities had "dwindled to a trickle" on issues where the tax had been imposed. Continuation of the levy, proponents asserted, was "crucial" to the success of the rest of the President's balance-of-payments program. The bill's sponsor, Ways and Means Committee Chairman Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.), said that "unless capital outflows are restricted, efforts to limit the foreign exchange costs of U.S. foreign overseas operations, increase our trade surplus, and reduce the net drain of tourist expenditures will be futile." Mills added that the tax was "clearly preferable" to the alternative solution of increasing long-term domestic interest rates, which he said raised possibilities of a cutback in domestic investment with collateral effects on economic progress and unemployment.

Opponents of HR 4750 argued that the tax was the wrong method of attacking the payments deficit. Joel T. Broyhill (R Va.) said the deficit was created by "huge Government expenditures all over the world," rather than by private capital outflow. He said the tax was a deterrent to private investment abroad which generated U.S. exports and eased the payments problem.

Senate

The Senate Finance Committee Aug. 17 reported HR 4750 (S Rept 621) after making a series of amendments. The major change adopted by the Committee restored the Dec. 31, 1967, expiration date requested by the Administration. Other committee amendments were largely of a technical and clarifying nature.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Aug. 24 passed an amended version of HR 4750 by voice vote and sent it to conference with the House. Prior to passage, the Senate by voice vote accepted five floor amendments to HR 4750, including one by Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) to delete the Dec. 31, 1967, expiration date provided by the Senate committee bill and restore the July 31, 1967, expiration date provided in the version of the measure passed by the House. Approval of the Javits amendment removed the only major variation between the House and Senate bills.

In a brief Senate debate on the measure, Russell B. Long (D La.), floor manager of HR 4750, asserted that the tax had "contributed greatly" to recent reductions in the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit by sharply curtailing U.S. capital outflows. Continued success in U.S. efforts to "hold the ground we have gained," Long added, "depends on the extension of the tax" until administrative measures launched in February 1965 had a chance to work. Hiram L. Fong (R Hawaii), one of the few opponents of the bill, argued that the tax was an "ill-conceived" and "impractical" measure which "impeded our traditionally free capital market and damaged America's position as financial center of the world." Fong also contended that the tax had not improved the U.S. payments position measurably "because it has not been addressed to the chief causes of the...deficit -- exempting the major areas of capital outflow, and taxing only a relatively insignificant total of transactions."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Aug. 24 -- Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) (on behalf of George Murphy (R Calif.) -- Make certain exclusions from the tax for debt obligations acquired from export sales applicable to obligations acquired through export lease transactions. Voice vote.

Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) -- Allow subsidiaries of commercial banks the same exemptions as provided the banks themselves on foreign debt obligations acquired through lease transactions. (The purpose of the amendment was to broaden the range of financial institutions which could support operations to lease U.S.-made aircraft to foreign airlines.) Voice.

Javits -- As modified by John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Provide for expiration of the tax on July 31, 1967, rather than on Dec. 31, 1967. (Javits' amendment authorized the President at his discretion to suspend and, if necessary, reinstate the tax before the Dec. 31, 1967, expiration date.) Voice.

Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.) -- Add language to make clear that foreign insurance operations by small mutual casualty insurance companies were exempted from the tax. Voice.

Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) -- Provide exemptions for newspaper publishers who acquired foreign stocks or debt obligations with funds derived from newspaper advertisements contracted by firms incorporated under laws of the same nation in which the stock or debt obligation was issued. (The amendment was designed to aid U.S. publishers who contracted with Canadian advertisers.) Voice.

Conference

The conference report on HR 4750 (H Rept 988) was filed Sept. 14. Of 32 Senate amendments to the House bill -- all of them minor and technical -- conferees accepted all but one. The exception was a provision which granted exemptions for newspaper publishers who acquired foreign stocks or debt obligations with funds derived from newspaper advertising contracted by firms incorporated under laws of the same nation in which the stock or debt obligation was issued.

Report Adopted

The House Sept. 16 and the Senate Sept. 20 adopted the conference report on HR 4750 by voice votes and with little debate. President Johnson signed the bill into law Oct. 9 (PL 89-243).

COUNTRY EXEMPTIONS REVOKED

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- May 14 -- President Johnson issued an Executive Order terminating the designation of the Bahamas, Bermuda, Ireland, Kuwait and Portugal as "less developed countries" for purposes of the Interest Equalization Tax. The President's action had the effect of applying the tax to purchases by U.S. citizens of all previously exempted issues originating from those areas. The issues had been exempted by Executive action authorized under the 1964 Interest Equalization Tax Act.

Dec. 6 -- The Cabinet Committee on Balance-of-Payments recommended that the Interest Equalization Tax be extended to previously exempted securities issued by nine other countries: Abu Dhabi, Bahrain, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait-Saudi Arabia Neutral Zone, Libya, Qatar and Saudi Arabia. By year's end the President had not yet implemented the recommendations.

DUTY-FREE ALLOWANCE

HR 8147 -
- Reported by the House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 366) May 24, 1965.
- Passed by the House by voice vote June 7.
- Reported, amended, by the Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 376) June 28.
- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the Senate June 29. (For roll-call votes on amendments, see p. 1054)
- Conference report (H Rept 570) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate June 30.

PL 89-62 -- Signed into law June 30.

Congress in 1965 passed legislation (HR 8147) making permanent the existing temporary $100 ceiling on the value of foreign goods which could be brought home duty-free by U.S. residents returning from abroad. The measure provided, however, that in the future, the exemption would be computed on the higher retail value of the goods instead of the wholesale value. It also required the traveler to bring the goods back with him, rather than ship or mail them, to obtain the duty-free privileges.

It was estimated that this and other provisions of HR 8147 would lead to a $60 million annual improvement in the U.S. balance-of-payments position. (For 1965 tourist deficit, see below)

If HR 8147 had not been enacted, the temporary ceiling of $100 wholesale value would have risen on July 1 to the permanent level of $200 for a minimum 48-hour stay abroad and an additional $300 for a 12-day or longer stay, for a total of $500.

Acceptance of the $100 ceiling was a rare defeat for President Johnson's legislative program in the 89th Congress, first session. The $100 figure was $50 above that requested by the President in his Feb. 10 Balance-of-Payments Message. The Treasury Department reportedly lobbied intensively for the $50 retail-value ceiling.

In addition to the tighter allowance on goods, HR 8147 reduced the amount of duty-free alcoholic beverages which could be brought into the United States from one gallon to one quart (except from certain U.S. possessions) and changed the valuation under the existing $10 exemption on mailed gift packages from wholesale to retail.

Aimed only at reducing tourist spending, HR 8147 contained no provisions to discourage foreign travel. The Administration had reportedly considered a controversial proposal to impose a tax of about $100 on each American tourist going abroad, but the President rejected the levy in favor of the tighter allowances. In addition, the President in his Feb. 10 message asked the U.S. tourist industry to launch a massive "See the U.S.A." campaign to promote increased travel in the United States "....both by our own citizens and by our friends from abroad."

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 8147:

Made permanent the existing temporary law that goods with a value of up to $100 could be brought into the United States duty-free by U.S. residents returning from abroad after an absence of not less than 48 hours once every 30 days, but stipulated that the $100 valuation would apply to the retail value of the goods, rather than wholesale value as under existing law.

Stipulated that foreign articles must accompany a returning U.S. tourist if they were to be brought into the country duty-free.

Established a $200 exemption for persons arriving from American Samoa, Guam or the Virgin Islands, provided that not more than $100 worth of the goods had been acquired elsewhere.

Stipulated that the existing $10 exemption for gifts mailed to the United States from abroad by U.S. residents would apply to the retail, rather than wholesale, value of the goods.

Reduced from one gallon to one quart the quantity of alcoholic beverages that could be brought into the country duty-free, but stipulated that U.S. residents returning from American Samoa, Guam or the Virgin Islands could include in their exemption one gallon of such beverages of which not more than one quart may have been acquired elsewhere. Limited the allowance for alcoholic beverages to persons 21 years of age or older and required that such beverages accompany the returning U.S. resident.

Extended the existing temporary law for three months, until Oct. 1, 1965, and stipulated that the new permanent provisions would go into effect on that day.

Background

Historically, U.S. residents traveling abroad were allowed to bring back to the U.S. duty-free articles of $100 wholesale value. After World War II the amount was raised to $500 wholesale value to aid foreign countries with dollar shortages, but in 1961 the amount was reduced temporarily to $100 because of the balance-of-payments deficit. The 1961 reduction, extended in 1963 because of the continuing balance-of-payments problem, was to expire July 1, 1965. (1961 Almanac p. 339; 1963 Almanac p. 519)

In his Feb. 10 Balance-of-Payments Message to Congress, President Johnson requested enactment of legislation to reduce the duty-free allowance to $50 of purchases made abroad, based on retail, rather than wholesale value and applicable only to goods accompanying the returning traveler. (See text p. 1390.) Government officials said the wholesale value of foreign goods was about 60 percent of their retail value, permitting a returning U.S. tourist to bring about $167 worth of retail merchandise into the United States under the $100 exemption. Officials said the cut would reduce the balance-of-payments deficit by $100 million.

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HELD HEARINGS -- May 3 and 4 on an Administration bill (HR 7368) to limit the duty-free allowance for U.S. residents returning from abroad from the existing $100 wholesale value to $50 retail from July 1, 1965, to Jan. 1, 1968.

TESTIMONY -- May 3 -- Henry H. Fowler, Secretary of the Treasury, said the 1964 balance-of-payments deficit was $3.1 billion. U.S. tourists spent $2.8 billion abroad, while foreign travelers in the U.S. spent only $1.2 billion, resulting in a tourist deficit of $1.6 billion. Fowler also said that despite "substantial deficits in January and February, our over-all balance of payments was in surplus in March and apparently also in April...." Fowler endorsed the provisions of HR 7368, particularly elimination of the provision which permitted tourists to apply their exemptions against goods they had shipped separately as well as those accompanying them.

John T. Connor, Secretary of Commerce, said that the Administration's "See the U.S.A." program would promote tourism in the United States, both by U.S. residents and people from other countries. Connor said that despite the program there was expected to be a "substantial rise" in the total expenditures of U.S. tourists overseas, indicated by the 17-percent increase in passport applications during the early months of 1965 over the same period in 1964.

May 4 -- Paul A. Porter, representing the American Tourist & Trade Assn., a group of companies selling and shipping duty-free liquor and perfume for tourists, opposed elimination of the unaccompanied baggage exemption. Porter said "elimination of the unaccompanied baggage provision will drive right out of business the fifteen or so companies which at present relieve the returning tourist of the necessity of carrying back all his baggage with him." He predicted an increase in the number of items sent from abroad worth less than $10 and thus permitted duty-free entry.

ACTION -- The Committee May 11 approved an amended version of HR 7368 by a party-line vote of 17-8. The measure was introduced May 13 as a clean bill (HR 8147) by Committee Chairman Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.) and was formally reported (H Rept 366) May 24.

The major committee amendments set the expiration date for the new temporary allowance at June 30, 1967, instead of Jan. 1, 1968; eliminated a provision which would have limited the exemption to items accompanied by the tourist; and added a new provision limiting the amount of alcoholic beverage that a person could bring in under the duty-free allowance to one quart for each person 21 or older (one gallon from the Virgin Islands and other possessions). This last provision eliminated an allowance of one gallon for each returning resident, regardless of age.

Majority Views. The report said that in 1960, when the $500 exemption was in effect, the average foreign acquisition for each returning resident was $84 and that since 1962, with the $100 maximum in effect, the average acquisition had ranged from $50 to $55, with the result that foreign purchases had been "discouraged" by more than $600 million since 1961. It said the change from wholesale value to "fair retail value" had been recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury as "a more realistic measure for goods brought in by tourists" and as a means of facilitating customs clearance of passengers "since such values, normally, can be readily ascertained...." The report supported a continued preferential treatment for tourists returning from American Samoa, Guam and the Virgin Islands because the three areas "are under the American flag, and...are dollar areas, so that the balance-of-payments incidence involved is small." It said that the Treasury Department had estimated that the balance-of-payments saving from the reduction on exemptions and the change in valuation would be approximately $70 million plus perhaps $10 million savings on the reduction in the amount of liquor limitation.

Minority Views. Seven of the Committee's eight Republicans opposed the reduction in the tourist duty-free allowance from $100 to $50 as "window dressing" and a "futile gesture." They said, "Nothing is accomplished by the legislation, except to inconvenience the average American tourist who has been looking forward to that 'once in a lifetime' trip abroad." The seven Republicans, however, supported the change from wholesale value to fair retail value as a "more realistic application of the exemption" and backed the reduction in the liquor allowance.

Separate Views. Rep. Joel T. Broyhill (R Va.) favored reducing or repealing the exemption, regardless of its effect on the balance-of-payments problem, because he saw "no reason for giving the returning tourist a tax advantage over other American citizens who do not have the opportunity to travel abroad."

Additional Committee Changes. The Ways and Means Committee June 7 reconvened on the proposed legislation and changed the temporary $50 duty-free ceiling to a permanent $100, effective July 1, 1965. (Language to base the ceiling on retail rather than wholesale value was retained.) The change in the ceiling was reportedly influenced by the prospect of a sharp floor fight.

FLOOR ACTION. The House June 7 by voice vote passed HR 8147 as amended by the Ways and Means Committee June 7. The only opposition to the measure was raised by Paul G. Rogers (D Fla.) who argued that the bill was misdirected because overseas travel was only "a small portion" of the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

ACTION -- June 28 reported an amended version of HR 8147 (S Rept 376). Major committee amendments: established a duty-free allowance of $50 retail value on a permanent basis; required that foreign purchases must accompany the returning tourist to be eligible for the duty-free exemption; allowed persons returning from American Samoa, Guam or the U.S. Virgin Islands a credit of $50 (rather than $100 as in the House bill) for goods that were purchased outside those possessions; and made the rates provided in the bill effective the day after enactment.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate June 29 passed HR 8147 by voice vote. Prior to passage, the Senate rejected en bloc, by a 31-61 roll-call vote, the committee amendments reducing the duty-free allowance from $100 to $50 and reducing from $100 to $50 the portion of foreign goods that could be included in the $200 exemption for persons arriving from U.S. overseas possessions. (See committee action, above) The Senate by voice vote adopted the other committee amendments, including a major change which required that foreign purchases must accompany the tourist if they were to be entered duty-free.

The Senate also by voice vote adopted a floor amendment which had the effect of continuing the existing duty-free and liquor allowances until Oct. 1, 1965, instead of July 1, 1965. It rejected four other amendments by roll-call votes. (For details, see below; for voting, see p. 1054)

Supporting the committee amendment to reduce the duty-free allowance from $100 to $50, bill manager Russell B. Long (D La.) said the reduction was estimated to help the balance of payments by $60 million. He said that since the existing $100 limit was based on the wholesale price of merchandise, "it actually is equivalent to $167 of retail purchases," so that the committee amendment "represents, in fact, a lowering of the exemption from $167 to $50."

Other Senators who supported the Administration's position argued that it was simply a matter of asking U.S. travelers "to do your Christmas shopping at home." They pointed out that European countries protected their ballance-of-payments position with very small duty-free allowances for their nationals.

Opposing the reduction to $50, Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) said it would penalize "low-income tourists, like schoolteachers and others, who for years have been saving their money for a vacation abroad." Clark said that people whose work enabled them to travel abroad frequently "under the bill...would be able to bring back $600 in purchases every year," since they could invoke the exemption every 30 days. He said, "The people in whom I am interested do not go abroad 12 times a year... I am interested in the little people, who go once, and never again, and who like to bring back some gifts for their families, some souvenirs...."

Other Senators argued for retention of the $100 figure because: funds not spent for merchandise would only be diverted to other spending overseas; expensive additional clerical help would be needed and would eat up the savings; the move would hurt countries, particularly Canada and Mexico, with which the U.S. had a favorable balance of trade. Several Senators said they considered the change picayune and an undue penalization which would not have commensurate benefits to the balance of payments.

The amendment to continue the existing duty-free and liquor allowances for three months, until Oct. 1, 1965, which was introduced by Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.), was approved by Long before being accepted by voice vote. Dirksen explained that the amendment was intended "to take care of the hiatus during which Americans now abroad will be coming back after the law becomes effective."

SUBSTITUTE PROPOSAL REJECTED

The Senate rejected, by a 39-51 roll call, an amendment in the form of a substitute by George A. Smathers (D Fla.) which would have extended for one year, to July 1, 1966, the existing $100 wholesale exemption and the exemption of one gallon of alcohol (in lieu of the one quart provided by the bill). Smathers argued that the fact that Long had accepted Dirksen's amendment "shows the need to postpone the effective date of this committee action for three months. It demonstrates the need to postpone it for one year." Smathers said Congress should "take more time...an entire year, and look into the problem early next year, and find out where we are headed."

A second Smathers amendment, establishing special exemptions for persons arriving from American Samoa, Guam, the Virgin Islands, Canada, Mexico, the Bahama Islands and Bermuda Islands, was rejected on a 41-45 roll call. Smathers said that an area such as the Bahamas received a large part of its gross national product from the sale of whiskey and that HR 8147 would be unduly damaging to those countries.

An amendment by Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.), to delete the Finance Committee amendment requiring that duty-free goods accompany a returning traveler, was rejected on an 18-70 roll-call vote. Javits said the provision would cause pointless vexation. Long countered that it was designed to stop the existing practice under which visitors to Canada could have goods from European and other countries sent to them duty-free by mail order houses. The American Tourist and Trade Assn., composed of such mail-order houses, had lobbied against the proposed change.

The Senate also rejected, by a 33-53 roll call, an amendment by John G. Tower (R Texas) to retain the existing law allowing the $100 exemption to be figured at wholesale, rather than retail, value.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 29 -- Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Continue the existing duty-free and liquor allowances for three months, until Oct. 1, 1965. Voice vote.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

June 29 -- George A. Smathers (D Fla.) -- Substitute amendment to extend for one year, until July 1, 1966, the existing law allowing a $100 duty-free exemption at wholesale rather than retail prices, and exemption of one gallon (rather than one quart) of alcoholic beverages. Roll-call vote, 39-51.

Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) -- Delete the requirement that goods exempted from duty must accompany the person claiming the exemption. Roll call, 18-70.

John G. Tower (R Texas) -- Allow the $100 exemption at wholesale rather than at retail prices. Roll call, 33-53.

Smathers -- Establish special exemptions for persons arriving from American Samoa, Guam, the Virgin Islands, Canada, Mexico, the Bahama Islands and Bermuda. Roll call, 41-45.

Conference

Report. The conference report (H Rept 570) on HR 8147 was filed June 30. In resolving the two major House-Senate differences, conferees accepted Senate provisions. These (1) added to existing law a requirement that duty-free goods must accompany the returning traveler, and (2) extended the existing temporary law until Oct. 1, 1965, instead of putting the new permanent provisions into effect immediately.

Action. The House and Senate June 30 by voice votes adopted the conference report on HR 8147 and cleared the measure for the President's signature.

BILL SIGNED. On signing HR 8147 into law (PL 89-62), President Johnson June 30 commented that the measure was a "significant" step forward "...because it reflects a strong determination by our Government and this nation to eliminate our balance-of-payments deficit." The President added that the amendment to fix the duty-free ceiling at $100 rather than the recommended $50 was a "fair and reasonable adjustment on a relatively small part of the over-all (balance-of-payments) program..."

1965 TOURIST DEFICIT

The Commerce Department early in 1966 announced that the tourist deficit had increased by $200 million in 1965 to a level of $1.8 billion. (The deficit was defined as the excess of U.S. tourist spending and cost of fares abroad over similar foreign expenditures on tourism in the United States.) Officials attributed the larger deficit to indications of increased American travel abroad (increased passport applications and increased overseas bookings on international transportation media). Officials said that while the actual effect of HR 8147 could not yet be determined, individual tourist spending would have been greater without the tighter duty-free allowances provided by the bill.

ANTITRUST EXEMPTIONS

HR 5280 -- Reported, amended, by House Judiciary Committee (H Rept 385) May 27, 1965.
- Passed by the House by voice vote June 7.
- Reported, amended, by the Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 549) Aug. 10.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate by voice vote Aug. 12.
- Senate amendments accepted by the House by voice vote Aug. 25, with further amendments.
- House amendment accepted by the Senate by voice vote Aug. 26.

PL 89-175 -- Signed into law Sept. 9.

Congress in 1965 enacted a bill (HR 5280) providing certain exemptions from the antitrust laws to strengthen the U.S. balance-of-payments position.

The Administration-backed legislation established procedures for voluntary agreements among banks, investment bankers and companies, pension funds, charitable trusts and foundations, and educational institutions. The agreements were to curtail the flow of private dollars and credit from the United States to foreign countries.

HR 5280 also authorized the President to require reports from institutions participating in the agreements. It directed the Attorney General to conduct a continuous review of the operation of any agreement or program approved under the Act, and to recommend its suspension if he decided that the detriment to competition overshadowed the benefit to the U.S. balance-of-payments position. The Attorney General was directed to submit to the President and Congress semi-annual reports on his actions under the bill, and was authorized to require the production of such books, records or other information from any participant in a voluntary agreement or program that he deemed necessary in fulfilling his responsibilities under the bill. The Act was to expire 20 months after it became law or upon certification of the President that its provisions were no longer necessary to safeguard the U.S. balance-of-payments position.

BACKGROUND

President Johnson Feb. 10 requested the antitrust exemptions as an important part of his program to reduce the persistent U.S. balance-of-payments deficit. The President stressed that the exemptions would be limited to bank actions "in support of our balance-of-payments objectives." (See p. 1390)

HOUSE ACTION

The House Judiciary Committee May 27 reported HR 5280 (H Rept 385) with amendments tightening language and stipulating that any financial entity, including charitable trusts or foundations and college endowment funds, was eligible to participate in the voluntary agreements authorized by the bill.

The House June 7 passed HR 5280 by voice vote and without amendments other than the committee changes. In debate on the measure, Judiciary Committee Chairman Emanuel Celler (DN,Y.) noted that a major aspect of President Johnson's balance-of-payments program involved voluntary agreements by the business community. He said restrictions "with reference to individual industrial expansion programs, under the supervision of the Department of Commerce, were working very well" and that HR 5280 was another step in that effort. He said if such voluntary measures failed, mandatory controls would be necessary. The only opposition came from H.R. Gross (R Iowa) who objected that the bill authorized the President to "pry into the records of any individual, firm or corporation."

SENATE ACTION

The Senate Judiciary Committee Aug. 10 reported HR 5280 (S Rept 549) after making a series of amendments. The major Committee changes did the following:

- Specifically included securities brokers and dealers, charitable trusts and foundations and educational institutions under coverage of the bill.
- Limited the President's authority to grant antitrust exemptions under the bill to agreements or programs which had first been submitted to the Attorney General and had been found more beneficial to the U.S. balance-of-payments position than detrimental to competition. Stipulated, however, that this requirement could be waived by the President in an emergency.
- Provided exemptions for participants even when they had not been involved in the actual formulation of an agreement or program under the bill.
- Required the publication of a notice in the Federal Register whenever a request for discussion envisioning an agreement was made.

The Senate Aug. 12 passed the bill by voice vote and sent it back to the House. Prior to passage, the Senate by voice vote adopted the committee substitute for the version of the bill passed by the House and accepted a floor amendment to limit the President's authority to require reports on overseas loan operations to institutions participating in agreements or programs authorized by the bill. The amendment, sponsored by Sam J. Ervin (D N.C.), modified language in the committee bill which authorized the President to require such reports on any operations "affecting the U.S. balance-of-payments position."

In debate on HR 5280, Vance Hartke (D Ind.) opposed the measure as a dangerous precedent which would "freeze attitudes and fix policies at precisely the time when flexibility should be our watchword in the entire international financial and monetary area." Ervin retorted that the bill would be allowed to lapse when no longer needed to combat the payments deficit. While in effect, he added, "great safeguards" embodied in the measure would ensure that agreements would be permitted only when their benefit to the U.S. balance-of-payments position overshadowed their detriment to competition.

FINAL ACTION

The House Aug. 25 concurred in the Senate changes, but added further technical amendments reinserting language inadvertently omitted when the bill was rewritten in the Senate Judiciary subcommittee. The Senate Aug. 26 concurred in the House's technical amendments and sent the bill to the President, who signed it into law Sept. 9 (PL 89-175).

FOREIGN BANK DEPOSITS

HR 5306 -- Reported, amended, by the House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 336) May 11, 1965.
- Passed by the House by voice vote June 10.
- Reported by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 385) June 30.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote July 7.

PL 89-79 -- Signed into law July 21.

With little debate, Congress in 1965 passed an Administration bill (HR 5306) to continue the authority of domestic banks to pay higher interest rates on time deposits (short-term investments) of foreign governments than on domestic deposits. The measure was designed to reduce the dollar drain by making U.S. capital markets more attractive to foreign investors.

As signed into law, HR 5306 extended the exemption of foreign deposits from the existing 4-1/2 percent federal interest rate ceiling for a three-year period, from Oct. 15, 1965, to Oct. 15, 1968. The Administration had sought an indefinite extension of the rates.

BACKGROUND. The original law (PL 87-827) permitting a higher rate on foreign time deposits was enacted as part of President Kennedy's balance-of-payments program in 1962. (1962 Almanac p. 592)

President Johnson in his 1965 Balance-of-Payments Message called for continuation of the higher rates as an important part of his program to combat the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit. (See p. 867)

House Action. The House Banking and Currency Committee May 11 reported HR 5306 (H Rept 336) with an amendment to limit the authority for higher rates to a three-year period.

The Committee said the bill was intended to "encourage foreign governments and monetary authorities to maintain dollar accounts in this country rather than convert these dollars directly into gold or to transfer the funds to other financial centers" where they would eventually be converted into gold.

In the first two years following enactment of the exemptions in 1962, the Committee noted, time deposits of foreign official institutions had risen approximately 86 percent, from about $2 billion to $3.8 billion. The Committee said this was "approximately equal to the entire rise in foreign official holdings of short-term dollar assets of all types in the same period." Failure to extend authority for these exemptions, the Committee contended, could result in the loss of some of these deposits and "could make the management of our balance-of-payments deficit more difficult."

The House June 10 passed the committee version of HR 5306 by voice vote and sent the measure to the Senate.

Senate Action. The Senate Banking and Currency Committee June 30 reported HR 5306 (S Rept 385) without amendments. The Senate July 7 passed the measure by voice vote and without debate. Senate action cleared the measure for the President, who signed it into law July 21 (PL 89-79).

DISCOUNT RATE INCREASE

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System in 1965 voted a one-half percent increase -- from 4 percent to 4.5 percent -- in the Federal Reserve's discount rate, the interest rate it charges for loans to commercial banks in the system. The Board's move, announced Dec. 5, brought the rate to its highest level since March 1930.

Purpose of the increase, the Board said, was to dampen "inflationary pressures" by making it more difficult to obtain funds for investment. The Board added that its action would "foster balance in the economy's continued growth and strength in the dollar's international standing."

President Johnson, who was formulating his fiscal 1967 Budget at the time of the increase, immediately voiced "regret" over the timing of the move. The President said that he, Treasury Secretary Henry H. Fowler, and the Council of Economic Advisers had agreed that "the decision on interest rates should be a coordinated policy decision in January, when the nature and impact of the Administration's budgetary and Viet Nam decisions are known." Mr. Johnson had no legal means of reversing the decision. Fed officials early in 1966 said he had made no effort to pressure the Board into rescinding its action.

Business reaction to the rate increase was generally favorable. Although the higher rates would increase their investment costs, numerous executives said the overriding consideration was the threat of inflation.

The Board's action, taken Dec. 3 by a 4-3 vote, did not technically authorize an increase throughout the entire Reserve System. The vote was on requests by the New York and Chicago regional banks to increase their own rates. Traditionally, however, when one or more banks have changed their rates, the others have been free to follow. All the others did the same by Dec. 11.

The increase in loan charges by the regional banks was immediately reflected in higher borrowing costs. By Dec. 8, large commercial banks in New York, Chicago and other cities had boosted their "prime rates" from 4.5 percent to 5 percent. (These are the banks' minimum lending charges to their most credit-worthy corporate borrowers.) Rates on private loans increased gradually, and on Feb. 7, 1966, the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) announced it was increasing from 5.25 percent to 5.5 percent the maximum amount of interest which banks and other lending institutions were permitted to charge on FHA-insured home mortgages. The FHA April 11, 1966, again raised the rate, this time to 5.75 percent. The same increases were approved by the Veterans' Administration on mortgages it insured.

In a related move, the Board Dec. 3 voted 6-1 to raise from 4.5 percent to 5.5 percent the ceiling on interest rates that member banks may pay on time deposits and deposit certificates. The move was designed to enable banks to attract money from other areas such as the stock market and savings and loan associations. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Dec. 7 authorized banks that it supervises to raise their interest rates on time deposits and certificates to the 5.5 percent ceiling established by the Federal Reserve. The FDIC action affected some 7,700 state banks not in the Federal Reserve System.

Effect on Wall Street. Stocks took a severe battering early Dec. 6 on news of the discount rate increase but recouped all but 6.57 points by the close of the session and gained another 12.86 points in a strong comeback over the next two days. Bond prices declined as yields rose in line with the higher discount rates. (These market conditions were sustained for the remainder of 1965.)

On the New York Stock Exchange, 3.9 million shares changed hands during the first hour's trading Dec. 6 -- a record since the practice of keeping hourly records was initiated in 1933. Volume for the entire day was 11.4 million shares -- the fourth heaviest for any session in history.

Balance-of-Payments Implications. Although adjustments in interest rates normally influence a nation's balance-of-payments performance, the Commerce Department early in 1966 forecast "comparatively minor" movements of capital in response to the higher U.S. rate structure. Officials said that the higher U.S. rates still were considerably lower than comparable rates in other developed countries and that the probable effect of the rate increase would be a "slight encouragement" to U.S. lenders to keep short-term funds at home and to foreign investors to diversify their portfolios by holding U.S. assets.

Timing of Rate Increase. Although the Administration had been informed of the two regional banks' requests for higher discount rates, officials characterized the Board's actions as a surprise. Treasury Secretary Fowler in a Nov. 28 speech before the New Orleans Press Club had warned against an increase in interest rates "...until the 1967 fiscal year outlook is clarified in mid-January with the presentation of the President's new Budget." President Johnson Dec. 2 had told the influential Business Council that recent stabilization of wholesale and consumer prices and other favorable developments signaled "another record year" in 1966 -- an intended rebuttal to business and banking leaders who argued that interest rates should be increased to head off inflation.

It was widely believed that the Reserve Board's decision for prompt action and the Administration's call for

How the Board Voted

The Federal Reserve Board's decision to increase the discount rate came on a 4-3 vote, with Chairman William McChesney Martin Jr., J. Dewey Daane, C. Canby Balderston and Charles N. Shepardson voting in favor. Opposed were James L. Robertson, George W. Mitchell, and Sherman J. Maisel.

The decision to increase the interest rate on time deposits and deposit certificates came on a 6-1 vote, with Robertson the lone dissenter.

Martin, Balderston and Shepardson often favored deflationary policies -- high interest rates and a tightening of credit -- whenever any threat of inflation appeared. Robertson, Mitchell and Maisel generally favored less restrictive policies. Daane's voting record followed a less consistent pattern than those of his colleagues.

Although Daane had been regarded as a "swing man" on key decisions, a Federal Reserve official told CQ Dec. 8 that Daane had decided weeks before that economic conditions required an increase in the discount rate. The last of the four-man majority to make up his mind, the official said, was Chairman Martin.

delay were largely based on the pending departure of Board member C. Canby Balderston, who had often opposed the President's expansionary money policies. After Balderston's term expired Jan. 31, 1966, the President would have been able to change the balance of power by appointing a member more in line with his own views. If the Board had waited for the President's Budget proposals, it might have been confronted by a 3-3 tie until the new member had been selected and confirmed by the Senate. Federal Reserve officials said, however, that the Board's timing was necessary because a January or February rate increase would confuse the lending market at a time when the Treasury would be conducting borrowing operations to finance large numbers of Treasury bills becoming due.

Johnson-Martin Summit. Federal Reserve Board Chairman William McChesney Martin Jr. Dec. 6 met with President Johnson at his Texas ranch to discuss differences over the Board's action. Following a two-hour discussion with Martin, Mr. Johnson told newsmen that "he didn't address himself to changing my mind and I didn't address myself to changing his." Martin said that he and the President had "exactly the same objectives" and that the Federal Reserve was "doing everything in our power to promote the President's program."

DISCOUNT RATE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE -- Joint Economic.

HELD HEARINGS -- Dec. 13-16 on the Federal Reserve Board's decision to increase the discount rate and the ceiling on interest rates that banks were permitted to charge on time deposits and deposit certificates. The hearings were called Dec. 6 by Committee Chairman Wright Patman (D Texas), a strong critic of the Federal Reserve's policies and its independence. In announcing the hearings, Patman said the rate increases could "only be characterized as arrogant" and as a "complete betrayal of the will of the people who so overwhelmingly elected the President and the Democratic Congress." (For previous hearings on legislation to restrict the independence of the Reserve System, see 1964 Alamanc p. 578.)

TESTIMONY -- Dec. 13 -- Federal Reserve Board Chairman Martin said a decision to put off the rate increase until January would have been too late to forestall inflation. In addition, Martin said, a rate increase at that time would have interfered with annual Treasury borrowing operations.

On the question of coordination, Martin said the Administration had been kept "continuously informed" of the Federal Reserve's position, and that, since October, he had sought but failed to obtain the Administration's agreement on the rate increase. He said that after Nov. 23 Open Market meetings -- attended by the seven Board members and five presidents of district reserve banks -- he had informed Treasury Secretary Henry H. Fowler that a rate increase was in the offing. Martin also said that, on the morning of Dec. 3, the day the Board acted, he had told Fowler he intended to act later that day if the Board would support him.

Patman said the Board's decision showed "a most serious lack of coordination" with the Administration. A traditional exponent of "easy" money, Patman accused Martin of having consistently favored higher interest rates, which Martin denied. Martin countered that Patman had always favored lower rates, having objected to every single rate increase the Board had approved. Under prodding by Patman, Martin denied he had been under pressure from the New York or Chicago Federal Reserve Banks, who triggered the rate increase by their Dec. 2 request to raise their own rates.

Sherman J. Maisel, one of the three Board members who voted against the discount rate increase, said the decision was taken at the "wrong time," in the "wrong way," and for the "wrong reasons." Maisel said the Board should have waited until the Budget had been submitted in January, when the Board would then have an accurate knowledge of Governmental outlays for fiscal 1967. He also said that, instead of announcing the rate increase unilaterally, the Board should have made a joint announcement with the Administration. Failure to coordinate with the Administration, he asserted, was an "irresponsible use" of the Board's independence, since it reduced the choices of national policy available to the President. Finally, Maisel questioned the purported beneficial effects of the rate increase on the balance of payments. He said higher financing costs would make U.S. exports less competitive and slower economic growth would encourage U.S. companies to make more direct investments abroad.

James L. Robertson, another Board member who voted against the increase, and who was not present at the hearings, said in a separate statement that the higher rates could lead to larger banks' attracting funds from smaller ones, since the smaller banks did not actively seek time deposits.

Dec. 14 -- Sen. John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) expressed concern that the large banks might take advantage of the higher ceilings on certificates of deposit by issuing them in smaller denominations to lure funds away from smaller banks and from savings and loan associations. He said that one or two banks were advertising CDs at $25 or less. (CDs normally were issued in denominations of $1 million or more and were acquired by large corporations.)

Dec. 15 -- Sen. William Proxmire (D Wis.), a member of the Committee, asked two economists, John K. Galbraith of Harvard University and Henry C. Wallich of Yale University, whether a tax increase might not have been a more effective measure to combat inflation instead of the interest rate increase. Both witnesses agreed that a tax increase was more effective and would be in order if the war in Viet Nam required large increases in Government spending. Wallich added, however, that since the Administration had not asked for a tax increase, it has been "better to take monetary action." Wallich defended the Federal Reserve's autonomy, stating that, "In our own system of checks and balances, there seems to be no anomaly in the kind of independence that the Federal Reserve enjoys." Galbraith, on the other hand, said the President should be given authority over the Federal Reserve, which he asserted could be accomplished "not by a massive reconstruction of the banking laws," but by a Congressional resolution.

By a 6-7 vote the Committee Dec. 15 defeated a move by its Republican members to summon Administration witnesses to testify on the Federal Reserve's action. The voting broke down along party lines, with Democrats opposed to the motion.

GOLD COVER

HR 3818 -- Reported by the House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 14) Feb. 3, 1965.
- Passed by a 300-82 roll-call vote of the House Feb. 9. (See p. 936)
- Reported by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 65) Feb. 10.
- Passed by a 74-7 vote of the Senate Feb. 18. (See p. 1028)

PL 89-3 -- Signed into law March 3.

Congress early in 1965 passed an Administration bill (HR 3818) eliminating the requirement that each Federal Reserve Bank maintain a reserve of gold certificates valued at not less than 25 percent of the amount of commercial bank deposits it holds.

By eliminating the "gold cover" on bank deposits, the bill made available, to meet international claims on the dollar and allow the nation's money supply to expand, about $4.9 billion in Treasury-held gold which the certificates represented. The legislation was requested by President Johnson Jan. 28 after the Treasury's operating margin in excess of statutory requirements had diminished to $1.4 billion.

Although the bill removed the reserve requirement for deposits, it did not affect the existing 25 percent reserve requirement on federal reserve notes (currency), which remained in effect.

In debate on the measure, bipartisan supporters said its primary purpose was to gain time for the Administration to take steps to reduce the continuing U.S. balance-of-payments deficit. Opponents, most of them Republicans, contended that the bill would only prolong stern measures which they said must be taken to eliminate the deficit. After brief, though heated debates in both House and Senate, the Administration bill was cleared without amendment.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 3818 deleted from Section 16 of the Federal Reserve Act the requirement that each Federal Reserve Bank maintain gold certificate reserves valued at not less than 25 percent of the amount of commercial bank deposits it holds.

BACKGROUND -- In the U.S. monetary system, the Treasury Department is custodian of all monetary reserves held in the form of gold. Reserves of the Federal Reserve Banks take the form of certificates representing the gold. Under the Federal Reserve Act as amended in 1945, Reserve Banks (located in 12 cities throughout the nation) were required to maintain a specified proportion of gold certificates as reserve against their liabilities for notes (currency) and deposits by commercial banks. The required minimum reserve was 25 percent of the amount of notes and deposits.

Because of the persistent U.S. balance-of-payments deficit, the nation's gold supply dwindled from a high of $23.4 billion in 1949 to $15.1 billion at the end of 1964. With a required gold reserve of $13.7 billion at year's end, only $1.4 billion was free to meet potential international claims of $28.9 billion (the amount of dollars held by persons and institutions outside the U.S.); and to supply reserve backing (as required by law) for an expanding money supply.

Treasury officials had ruled it unlikely that large amounts of foreign dollar holdings would be converted during any brief period because of the dollar's role as an instrument of international trade. In the month of January alone, however, the U.S. gold stock declined by $300 million. This compared to a total net decline of $125 million in all of 1964.

In the event of an emergency, existing law permitted suspension of the domestic gold cover to make the nation's entire gold stock available to meet foreign claims. It was thought, however, that this fact was dimly understood in European capitals. At the request of the Treasury Department, President Johnson in his Jan. 28 Economic Message called for elimination of the gold backing requirement on deposits. Removal of that portion of the gold cover, the President said, would "place beyond any doubt our ability to use our gold to make good our pledge to maintain the gold value of the dollar at $35 an ounce with every resource at our command." (For text of the President's Message, see p. 1359)

The Administration bill (HR 3818 -- S 797) was introduced Jan. 28 by the chairmen of the House and Senate Banking and Currency Committees, Rep. Wright Patman (D Texas) and Sen. A. Willis Robertson (D Va.).

Repeal of the backing on Federal Reserve notes (as well as deposits) had been proposed in the past, but did not receive serious Congressional consideration. The Kennedy Administration in 1961 showed interest in repeal of both requirements, but public opposition appeared to be so strong that Congress never held public hearings.

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HELD HEARINGS -- Feb. 1 on HR 3818.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 1 -- Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon called HR 3818 "an essentially modest step to bring our gold reserve requirement into line with present needs." Dillon said prompt passage of the measure would release some $5 billion in gold from the present requirement, reinforcing "confidence in the stability and strength of the dollar by placing beyond any doubt the willingness of both the Executive and Legislative Branches to make our gold fully available in its defense." Asked whether the increased amount of free gold would not "tempt foreigners to accelerate their demands on gold," Dillon said, "on the contrary, it will reassure them."

Federal Reserve Board Chairman William McC. Martin said the legislation was necessary at this time to "assure the world that U.S. monetary gold is always available to maintain the convertibility of the dollar and that the United States will honor its debts and liabilities in the form of dollar holdings...down through the last bar of gold, if that be necessary."

Both Dillon and Martin told the Committee that the requirement that Federal Reserve banks maintain a gold reserve to cover 25 percent of their notes in circulation should be retained, for "psychological" reasons.

ACTION -- The Committee Feb. 3 reported HR 3818 (H Rept 14) without amendments. The measure had been approved Feb. 1 by a 25-3 vote, with Reps. Del Clawson (R Calif.), Burt L. Talcott (R Calif.) and Albert W. Johnson (R Pa.) voting against it.

Majority Views. The report said HR 3818 would effect "a revision in existing requirements that would better align our gold reserves with present needs," while giving "no cause for concern to many who feel that there should be some metal backing behind our paper currency."

(Continued on next page)

The report added, however, that "action going beyond this bill may be necessary to correct our continuing balance of payments deficits." It noted that the Administration had indicated it was studying the problem at the moment and would soon submit recommendations.

FLOOR ACTION

The House Feb. 9 passed HR 3818 by a 300-82 (D 255-11; R 45-71) roll-call vote without amendment and sent it to the Senate. Prior to passage, the House rejected by a 93-289 roll-call vote a motion by Del Clawson (R Calif.) to recommit (kill) the bill. (For voting, see chart p. 936)

House Democrats voted for HR 3818 by a 255-11 margin. Four Northern Democrats -- Harold T. Johnson (Calif.), Torbert H. Macdonald (Mass.), Arnold Olsen (Mont.), and Compton I. White Jr. (Idaho) -- voted against the measure. Two Democrats, Macdonald and James A. Haley (Fla.), voted against the motion to recommit and also against the bill. House Republicans voted 45-71 against HR 3818.

DEBATE -- Clarence J. Brown (R Ohio) argued that the measure could not have received thorough treatment by the Banking and Currency Committee because "only two witnesses were called or heard -- the Secretary of the Treasury and the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board" and "the bill was reported after less than four hours of consideration." Instead of eliminating the gold cover, Brown called for strong action against the chronic U.S. balance-of-payments deficit. He said the deficit problem had been created "because we have foolishly... followed this idea that we can feed, finance, and police the world...."

Patman said that no opposition witnesses had asked to be heard. He also argued that the proposal had been under discussion "for more than four years in the banking fraternity, in the business community and in the Congress...." Patman said "every member of our Committee who desired to do so asked any question he desired to ask" and was given the opportunity "to submit the names of witnesses to appear in opposition," but "...not one name was presented."

Patman said HR 3818 would remove a reserve requirement "no longer pertinent" since the United States went off the gold standard for domestic purposes in 1934. He said the required gold reserve on deposits "may handicap this nation in its domestic policies as well as in its international dealings."

William B. Widnall (R N.J.), ranking Republican on the Banking and Currency Committee, said he supported the bill "somewhat reluctantly" as a measure that would "buy time for us to get at the real cause of the problem, namely our continuing balance-of-payments deficits." He said the United States "simply cannot go on spending, lending, investing, and giving away to the rest of the world, year after year, more than our receipts from the rest of the world."

Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.) said HR 3818 would "give us the needed elbowroom to keep our economy prosperous and strong at home," while abroad "it will at least in part enable the giant power of the United States to be unfettered." He said his only reservation about the bill was that it did not eliminate the entire gold cover. To combat the balance-of-payments deficit, Reuss proposed that the United States insist that its "principal free world partners" cooperate in reducing the deficit. He said an international conference should be called at which the United States and other free world nations would seek remedies to the U.S. deficit problem.

W.E. Brock III (R Tenn.) said he supported HR 3818 "simply because I think it is an obvious necessity in order that we meet our international obligations and avoid a panic and a run on gold." He said it was of more importance that the House "recognize we are not...treating a disease -- we are treating the symptom of a disease." Brock joined Reuss in proposing that the United States insist that the other nations of the free world cooperate in reducing the U.S. payments deficit.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HELD HEARINGS -- Feb. 2, 3, 4, 9 and 10 on the Administration bill (S 797) and similar bills: S 743, sponsored by Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), providing for elimination of all statutory gold backing requirements; and S 814, sponsored by Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.), requiring Federal Reserve Banks to maintain gold reserves of not less than 10 percent against their deposits and not less than 15 percent against their notes in circulation.

TESTIMONY -- Feb. 2 -- Senate Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) endorsed the Administration proposal but said Republicans would expect an accounting of Administration efforts to attack the "real problem which confronts us," the balance-of-payments deficit.

Feb. 3 -- Charls E. Walker, executive vice president of the American Bankers Assn., said the ABA supported S 797, the Administration bill, because the shrinking gold cover "threatened" economic advances in the domestic economy and "may undermine confidence in the dollar abroad." Walker opposed elimination of the gold backing from Federal Reserve notes. He said the ABA "strongly" urged the Administration and Congress to "reaffirm their support of a Federal Reserve System operating independently within Government, unhampered by political considerations."

ACTION -- The Committee Feb. 10 reported HR 3818 (S Rept 65) without amendment. HR 3818 was identical to S 797. In supplemental views, Douglas, William Proxmire (D Wis.) and Walter F. Mondale (D Minn.) urged elimination of the gold-backing requirement for Federal Reserve notes as well as commercial bank deposits. In other supplemental views, Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah), John G. Tower (R Texas) and Strom Thurmond (R S.C.) said the bill was necessary but criticized "the monetary and fiscal policies that have made this action necessary."

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Feb. 18, by a 74-7 roll-call vote, passed HR 3818 and sent the measure to the President in the same form in which it had been submitted 21 days before. (For voting, see chart p. 1028)

Prior to passage, the Senate rejected several amendments. The most important was proposed by Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) Feb. 17. It would have reduced the minimum gold reserve requirements on both Federal Reserve deposits and Federal Reserve notes (currency) in circulation to 20 percent for a two-year period and would have established a joint Congressional committee to study the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit. It was rejected by a 16-48 roll-call vote. A. Willis Robertson (D Va.), the bill's floor manager, said the amendment was "strongly" opposed by Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon and Federal Reserve Board Chairman William McChesney Martin Jr.

Voting against HR 3818 were both Democratic Senators from Alaska -- E.L. Bartlett and Ernest Gruening -- and both Republican Senators from Colorado -- Gordon Allott and Dominick. Also voting against HR 3818 were Frank Church (D Idaho), Norris Cotton (R N.H.), and James O. Eastland (D Miss.).

As in House debate on HR 3818, most supporters of the measure said its primary purpose was to gain time for the Administration to take steps to reduce the continuing U.S. balance-of-payments deficit. Republicans directed sharp criticism at the Administration for its inability to eliminate the deficit.

Robertson, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, said: "Conditions are favorable for ending our balance-of-payments deficits.... In the meantime the Federal Reserve and the Treasury must have a supply of gold free from fixed requirements adequate to meet prospective normal needs and emergency demands."

Dominick said that HR 3818, in contrast with his substitute measure, gave no specifics as to "how the (balance-of-payments) problem should be cured, or any steps that should be taken to get at the root of the problem."

Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) said confidence in U.S. currency was not based on the gold reserve requirement but on the nation's production of goods and services and restrictions which "prevent us from printing currency."

Allott argued that enactment of a bill "with the far-reaching consequences of HR 3818...could be considered by Europeans as a 'desperation' or 'panic' move (and) shake the very foundation of the American dollar."

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Feb. 17 -- Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) -- Substitute for the provisions of HR 3818 new wording to reduce the minimum gold reserve requirement on both Federal Reserve deposits and Federal Reserve notes in circulation from the present 25 percent to 20 percent for a two-year period and establish a Joint Congressional Committee to study the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit. Roll-call vote, 16-48.

Feb. 18 -- Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) -- Stipulate that it is the policy of Congress that the present gold reserve requirement of 25 percent against Federal Reserve notes in circulation "should be" maintained except in "exceptional circumstances or a national emergency." Roll call, 22-58.

Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) -- Provide subsidy payments to domestic gold producers. Voice vote.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- Jan. 24 -- The Committee on Economic Development, a non-profit economic research organization that has normally reflected views of the liberal wing of U.S. business, recommended that the gold backing be removed from both Federal Reserve notes and deposits. The CED said the entire cover had been an anachronism since the rights of Americans to convert currency into gold were eliminated in 1935.

Feb. 2 -- The 11 Republican members of the House Banking and Currency Committee issued a formal statement of opposition to removal of the "entire gold cover."

SUPERSONIC TRANSPORT

President Johnson July 1, 1965, called for 18 more months of research on a U.S. supersonic transport (SST) before beginning construction of a prototype plane. Congress Oct. 21, in HR 11588 -- PL 89-309, appropriated $140 million to finance the work in fiscal 1966. An additional $80 million was requested in the President's fiscal 1967 budget, to provide $220 million for the 18-month program.

BACKGROUND -- The Federal Aviation Agency in 1961 decided to undertake detailed studies of an SST, for which $31 million was appropriated in fiscal years 1962-63. In November 1962 the British and French Governments announced a joint effort to build by 1970 an SST called the Concorde, capable of speeds of Mach 2.2. President Kennedy on June 5, 1963, announced that the U.S. Government, through contracts with private industry, would seek to develop an American SST capable of Mach 3 (2,000 miles an hour). He subsequently requested $60 million to get development work underway, and it was granted by Congress. The estimated total cost of the project was $1 billion, of which 75 percent was to be paid by the Federal Government and the rest by private industry. Work on plans for the SST continued in 1964. (1964 Almanac p. 596)

Developments in 1965

President Johnson's decision for additional research on the SST in effect postponed selection of a final contractor. The four competing aircraft manufacturers -- Lockheed Aircraft Corp. and Boeing Co. for the airframe, and General Electric Co. and Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Division of United Aircraft Corp. for the engine -- were given FAA contracts for additional development and test work, with the Government paying 75 percent and the contractor 25 percent of costs.

Mr. Johnson's announcement came at the swearing-in ceremony of Gen. William F. McKee (ret.) as Administrator of the Federal Aviation Agency. The President said, "Much work must be done before construction of a prototype aircraft is initiated if the large financial and development risks underlying the program are to be minimized." He said the SST must be "safe for the passenger, superior to any commercial aircraft, and economically profitable to build and to operate."

The President said one of the advantages gained from further study would come from military agencies' flight experience with the SR-71, the XB-70 and the variable swept-wing F-111, "all of which will be extensively flown at supersonic speeds during the next 18 months."

Further research and testing would provide a sounder foundation for realistic estimates of operating performance and production costs and better designs, the House Committee on Appropriations said in approving the $140 million appropriation (H Rept 1162) Oct. 13. The Committee urged careful monitoring of the contractors by the FAA. Congress approved the $140 million without objection. (See story p. 182)

Sonic Boom Tests. McKee's predecessor as FAA Administrator, Najeeb Halaby, April 24 announced that the FAA's controversial sonic boom tests over Oklahoma City in 1964 showed that construction of an SST was "clearly warranted" because the test showed that people on the ground "could learn to live with" sonic booms.

FIRST MAJOR CHANGE MADE IN COIN SYSTEM

S 2080 -- Reported by Senate Banking and Currency Committee (S Rept 317) June 11, 1965.

HR 8926 -- Reported by House Banking and Currency Committee (H Rept 509) June 11.

S 2080 -- Passed by the Senate on a 74-9 roll-call vote June 24. (See p. 1052)

- Passed, amended, by the House by voice vote July 14 after HR 8926 was passed on a 255-151 roll-call vote. (See p. 978)
- Senate agreed by voice vote to House amendments July 15.

PL 89-81 -- Signed into law July 23.

The Silver Coinage Act of 1965 (S 2080 -- PL 89-81) revised the nation's coinage system by eliminating all silver from dimes and quarters and reducing the silver content in half dollars from 90 to 40 percent. The legislation was requested by the President.

The Act authorized the Treasury Department to mint new dimes and quarters faced with a copper-nickel alloy (75 percent copper, 25 percent nickel), used in the existing 5-cent piece, and bonded to a core of pure copper. The new half dollars would have surfaces composed of 80 percent silver and 20 percent copper and cores composed of 21 percent silver and 79 percent copper. The new coins would have the same electrical properties as the existing coins to make them suitable for use in vending machines.

The Administration had sought the legislation to stem the growing shortage of silver and to make additional amounts of the metal available for industrial and other uses. In submitting the Administration's draft bill June 3, President Johnson said in an accompanying message, "Silver is becoming too scarce for continued large scale use in coins. To maintain unchanged our high silver coinage in the face of stark reality would only invite chronic and growing scarcity of coins."

During House and Senate debate, a controversy arose over how much silver should be retained in the coinage. Senators from Western, silver-producing states fought to retain some silver in dimes and quarters. However, an amendment by Frank E. Moss (D Utah) to retain 40 percent silver in dimes and quarters was rejected. Eastern Senators sought the elimination of silver in half dollars, arguing that the additional silver should be made available for industrial use. An amendment by John O. Pastore (D R.I.) to eliminate silver from the half dollar was rejected.

As finally enacted, S 2080 conformed closely in all major respects to the Administration's original requests.

The new quarters began circulating with the old coins Nov. 1. To discourage the hoarding of silver coins, the Treasury announced that it owned "nearly 900 million ounces" of silver which it could use to keep the price of silver low enough so it would not be profitable to melt silver coinage for its silver content. The Department earlier had announced that the new dimes would begin appearing before "mid-1966" and that the new half dollars would go into production at a later date.

PROVISIONS

As signed into law, S 2080:

Authorized the minting of new dimes, quarters, and half dollars. Specified that the dimes and quarters would be faced with a copper-nickel alloy (75 percent copper and 25 percent nickel) bonded to a core of pure copper. Specified that the half dollar would have a silver content of 40 percent and would be faced with an alloy of 80 percent silver and 20 percent copper, bonded to a core of 21 percent silver and 79 percent copper.

Authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to enter into contracts to acquire materials, equipment, patents, patent rights, production facilities and technical knowledge necessary to produce the new coins; authorized such contracts for a five-year period without regard to the laws governing federal procurement and public contracts.

Authorized the Government for a period of five years to purchase domestically mined silver at $1.25 per fine ounce.

Authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to sell excess silver from Treasury stocks at a price not less than $1.29 per fine ounce.

Authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to institute controls over the melting, treating or exportation of coins, and provided that violators would be subject to a fine of up to $10,000 and/or imprisonment for up to five years.

Provided that coins could be inscribed with the year in which they were minted or issued, or -- in order to prevent hoarding -- with the last preceding year inscribed on coins of the same denomination. Repealed PL 88-580, which provided for the retention of the date "1964" on all coins until an adequate supply was available. Prohibited putting mint marks on the new coins for five years.

Provided that persons convicted of counterfeiting the new coins would be subject to a fine of $5,000 and/or imprisonment of 15 years.

Authorized the President to establish a Joint Commission on the Coinage, composed of the Secretaries of the Treasury and Commerce, the director of the Budget Bureau, the director of the Mint, the chairmen and ranking minority members of the Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees, four additional Members of both the House and Senate and eight other persons appointed by the President, none of whom could have any association with or interest in the "composition, characteristics, or production" of U.S. coinage. The Commission was to study the implementation of the new coinage program and other coinage and silver matters and to make any necessary recommendations.

Increased the existing appropriations authorization for the construction of mint facilities from $30 million to $45 million for the purchase of new presses and other facilities necessary for minting new coins.

Prohibited the minting of silver dollars for a five-year period beginning with the date of enactment.

Provided standby authority for the Government to prohibit use of coins as credit or loan collateral.

Background

The Coinage Act of 1965 constituted the first fundamental change in the United States' 73-year-old system of silver coinage. S 2080 was enacted in the face of a worldwide silver shortage, the pressure of rising silver prices and an insatiable demand for coins.

An acute coin shortage had sparked a stopgap Treasury program to double the production of coins, but the consequent depletion of silver stocks threatened to inflate further the price of silver.

Many monetary experts said there were only two practical remedies to the problem: a reduction in or the elimination of the silver content of U.S. coins and the substitution of a cheaper metal alloy, such as nickel or copper. However, the experts said that even partial Treasury withdrawal of the use of silver in coinage would present delicate political and psychological problems. The silver content of the dime, quarter, half dollar and silver dollar not only gave the coins high intrinsic value but also helped support public confidence in paper money.

Silver Supply and Prices. Over the past 15 years, the demand for silver, both for coins and industrial use, increased faster than did the supply. Until 1961, sales from the large Government stockpile of silver, however, had forced the open market price to remain around 91 cents an ounce. With the Treasury silver supply almost exhausted in 1961, President John F. Kennedy directed that Government sales of "free silver" (that portion of the Treasury's holdings not required to back silver certificates) be terminated and that the silver backing of $5 and $10 silver certificates be dropped. On one hand, the action released silver from a monetary reserve fund backing the $5 and $10 denominations and rechanneled it into the production of additional coins. On the other hand, however, the action withdrew the Treasury from the supply side of the silver market. Thus, with Government sales of free silver no longer keeping a ceiling on the market price, silver prices surged upward to $1 or more an ounce.

In a second measure to release silver for coinage production, President Kennedy in 1963 requested and received legislation (PL 88-36) designed to replace the silver backing of $1 and $2 bills with the gold backing of Federal Reserve notes. At the time, it was estimated that Government redemption of the silver certificates would be carried out over a 15-year period. (1963 Almanac p. 548)

As a result of the increased demand for silver and the absence of Government sales, the market price of silver rose sharply in mid-1963. The market price as of Sept. 11, 1963, had risen to a level equal to the monetary value of silver, which is "pegged" by the Government at $1.29 an ounce. (The silver content in a silver dollar amounts to .77 ounce, or the equivalent of slightly more than $1, whereas the silver content in subsidiary coins (dimes, quarters, and half dollars) amounted to .72 ounce, or in two half dollars the equivalent of 92 cents.) Thus, the Treasury faced the prospect that it might become profitable for the public to melt down coins for the silver in them. However, holders of silver certificates began increasingly to exchange them at the Treasury for silver bullion, in anticipation of further price increases. This influx of bullion served to hold the price of silver at the monetary value.

So long as bullion was available from the Treasury at $1.29 an ounce, the U.S. coinage system would have required no change. But once the Treasury stock had been depleted and it became necessary to buy in the world market to meet coinage needs, the price ceiling could not have been maintained.

Coin Shortage. The Treasury early in 1965 said that the 48 billion coins estimated to be in circulation should be enough for all purposes. But commercial banks, which receive coins from the public and give them back out, were having increasing difficulty in replenishing their coin supplies. Some of the reasons:

- The rising number of sales taxes and toll highways and the increased use of parking meters and vending and coin-changing machines delayed frequency of circulation. Vending machine sales tripled in the 1954-64 decade. At the close of that decade, there were 4.5 million such machines with annual collections estimated at more than $3.5 billion.
- Speculators hoarded coins in anticipation of higher silver prices on the open market. During 1963 and 1964, speculation centered largely in silver dollars, but experts believed it might extend ultimately to smaller coins as well. This "run" on the Treasury's silver dollar supply reduced stocks, which had totaled 94 million at the beginning of 1963 and 28.5 million at the beginning of 1964, to a mere 3 million as of March 25, 1964. (As a consequence, the Treasury was forced to announce that it would redeem $1 silver certificates in silver bullion (alone) rather than in silver dollars, thereby adding to the drain on the Treasury's free silver reserves.)
- Coin collectors, whose ranks increased from 2 million a decade ago to some 8 million in 1965, took billions of coins out of circulation. It became a popular practice to collect coins by the roll or bagful rather than the piece. This practice apparently was influenced by assumptions that in time the older coins would grow scarcer and could then be sold to other collectors at large profits. Even a number of banks and insurance companies were reportedly investing in both old and new coins in expectation that the collections would appreciate in value at a projected rate of 10 percent a year.

Remedial Action in 1964. The Bureau of the Mint in June 1964 initiated a program to double the rate of coin production within a year. The mints began operating 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Congress, in the fiscal 1965 Supplemental Appropriations bill (HR 12633 -- PL 88-635), appropriated $4.5 million to mint 3 billion additional coins. To further increase the productive capacity of the mints, preliminary processing work was delegated to other facilities, additional coin presses and stamping machines were installed and the "proof coin" operation -- production of special sets of highly polished coins for collectors -- was suspended and the presses converted for production of coins for general circulation. The increase in production was reflected by the fact that the mints in 1964 used 195 million ounces of silver for production of coins in comparison to 111 million ounces in 1963. The Treasury estimated that about 234 million ounces would go into new coins in 1965.

As a long-range measure, Congress in 1964 appropriated funds for a new mint at Philadelphia with greatly increased capacity. The Treasury projected that the new mint, scheduled to go into operation in 1967, would produce as many coins as the two present mints combined.

To discourage hoarding by coin collectors, Congress enacted an Administration bill (S 2950 -- PL 88-580) authorizing the mints to inscribe the figure "1964" on all coins minted until adequate supplies were available. Signed by the President Sept. 3, 1964, the measure was designed to "flood the market" with 1964 coins, rendering it pointless to save them. (1964 Almanac p. 167)

House Hearings. The House Government Operations' Legal and Monetary Affairs Subcommittee held hearings Feb. 16-17 on the U.S. coin shortage. Testimony:

Feb. 16 -- Robert A. Wallace, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, said that the Treasury crash program to double production of coins in fiscal 1965 was "on schedule." Wallace said coin production in the first six months of fiscal 1965 "jumped nearly 60 percent over the same period a year earlier." During that period, he said, the two mints at Philadelphia and Denver had produced more coins (about 3.5 billion) than "are normally produced in a whole year." Wallace also said recent coin flow-back figures from the Federal Reserve System had been "encouraging." He said the figures indicated that the Federal Reserve's inventory of pennies had tripled over the past year.

Testifying on behalf of the American Bankers Association (ABA), G. Edward Cooper, vice president of the Philadelphia National Bank, cautioned that the Treasury's coin production program should not be relaxed.

Feb. 17 -- Miss Eva Adams, director of the Mint, said the Treasury crash program to double coin production had "at least made a dent in the coin shortage," and put the Government "on the road to solving this vexing problem." Miss Adams added that the Bureau of the Mint had "explored every potential avenue to assure that (new) coin...goes for the purpose for which it was intended, namely for the commerce of this country." She said, however, that the Bureau had "not been entirely successful in prohibiting the activities of the speculators who hoard coin and offer it for sale at a premium, as we do not have police powers nor authority to declare such activities illegal."

Charles J. Scanlon, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, said the coin shortage had generated speculation which could cause a "black market" coin operation in the United States. Scanlon said that some businesses have been so desperate for coin that they have purchased it from suppliers, some of whom may have been hoarding the coin to make a profit.

Rear Adm. Donald J. Ramsey (Ret.), legislative counsel and treasurer of the Silver Users Assn., attributed the coin shortage to the "failure of coins to circulate."

Rep. Silvio O. Conte (R Mass.) said it had become "very obvious that we cannot possibly continue the use of any silver in our subsidiary coins."

Administration Request. President Johnson June 3 sent Congress a draft bill and a message asking that silver be eliminated from dimes and quarters and that the silver content of half dollars be reduced from 90 to 40 percent. (For text, see p. 1421)

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HELD HEARINGS -- June 9 on the Administration's bill (S 2080) to change the silver content used in dimes, quarters and half dollars.

TESTIMONY -- June 9 -- Henry H. Fowler, Secretary of the Treasury, stressed the growing gap between annual silver production and annual consumption. He noted that the Treasury had been able to alleviate the supply shortage by selling silver to industrial enterprises from its own stocks (amounting to about 1 billion fine ounces), but warned that depletion of Treasury stocks could not continue indefinitely. Fowler said that retention of silver in the half dollar signified "a valued tie with the past by extending a 173-year-old tradition of silver in our coinage."

Joseph T. Morris, managing director of the National Assn. of Photographic Manufacturers, Inc., testified that the "continued use of silver in half dollars" would "impose an unnecessary and unwarranted burden upon Treasury stocks, detracting from their availability to aid in filling the industrial deficit and assisting in the orderly transition to non-silver subsidiary coinage."

John B. Stennis, executive vice president, International Silver Company, questioned the "prestige" value of a silver clad half dollar and said that minting of the coin would create a "collector's paradise and, hence, a downright waste of 15 million ounces of silver or close to 80 percent of one year's requirement for silverware."

Sen. Milward L. Simpson (R Wyo.) criticized the Administration for proposing that the price of silver be kept at the monetary level of $1.29 per ounce. He stated that this "stifles industrial incentive to develop new sources of silver and thus perpetuates the shortage." He approved of the new coins but added that talk of circulating the coins side by side with silver coins had already encouraged hoarding.

Sen. Howard W. Cannon (D Nev.) recommended a "compromise" solution to the silver and coinage shortage which would reduce, but not eliminate, the silver content in all coins. "I am firmly convinced," he stated, "that a worthless, non-silver coin will surely drive the present dimes, quarters and half dollars from circulation by the hundreds of millions of pieces."

Robert M. Hardy Jr., on behalf of the American Mining Congress, said that reopening of old mines and the discovery of new ones would lead to much greater production of silver in the near future. He felt that a "coinage of intrinsic value is the coinage that will demand the respect not only of all the people, but of all nations and will best serve as a circulating medium."

Bill Reported

The Committee June 11 reported S 2080 (S Rept 317) with only minor amendments.

Majority Views. In its report the Committee recommended that the minting and circulation of additional silver dollars cease until recommendations had been received from the Joint Commission on the Coinage. The Committee said the Secretary of the Treasury would continue to have authority to mint coins in the existing composition until the transition to the new coinage had been completed, at which time the authority to mint existing coins would expire. It left the choice of an exact date for this expiration to the Joint Commission on the Coinage. The Committee also placed a five-year limitation on the Treasury's right to purchase domestically mined silver at $1.25 per ounce.

On the silver shortage, the report said, "Since World War II, and particularly since 1958, there has been a widening gap between free world silver consumption and production. After 1958, the world market price of silver rose above the U.S. Government's purchase price for domestic silver, and the country's stock began to decline. At the same time, there has been a substantial increase in the amount of silver coin in circulation. The Treasury's stock available to secure silver certificates has been reduced to about 1 billion ounces -- less than half the amount held a few years earlier."

The report went on to state that the principal reasons for the decline in silver stocks stemmed from the great increase in the use of silver for coinage and industrial purposes and from an increase in exports over imports.

The Committee approved the Treasury's ceiling price of $1.29 per fine ounce, saying, "Any appreciable increase...would pose the threat that our subsidiary silver coins would be melted down, with disastrous results to commerce and trade and to the public.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate June 24 passed S 2080 by a 74-9 roll-call vote. The bill conformed closely to Administration proposals. (For voting, see chart p. 1052)

As passed by the Senate, S 2080 replaced existing dimes and quarters with new coins made from an alloy of nickel and copper. It also provided that new half dollars would be minted with their silver content reduced from 90 to 40 percent. The silver content of the dollar was not affected by the bill.

Voting against passage were Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.), Len B. Jordan (R Idaho), E.L. Bartlett (D Alaska), Alan Bible (D Nev.), Frank Church (D Idaho), Ernest Gruening (D Alaska), Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.), Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) and Frank E. Moss (D Utah).

S 2080 was passed without change except for the adoption, by voice vote, of a group of committee amendments, none of which altered the major substance of the bill. Seven floor amendments were rejected.

The major floor amendments were two proposals by Western Senators to retain some silver in dimes and quarters and a proposal supported by Eastern Senators to completely eliminate silver from the half dollar. Debate also divided largely along Eastern (consumer)-Western (producer) lines, with the notable exception of Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah), who was one of the main supporters of the Administration's bill; Bennett was ranking Republican on the Banking and Currency Committee which reported S 2080. He argued that there was no practical way to meet increasing demands for silver other than reducing the content of the metal in coins.

In an effort to retain some silver in coins, Frank E. Moss (D Utah) proposed an amendment to retain 40 percent silver in dimes and quarters, as well as the half dollar. It was rejected by a 34-57 roll call. A similar amendment by Howard W. Cannon (D Nev.), to retain 30 percent silver in those coins and the half dollar, was rejected 27-52. Moss said that the nation "cannot afford to sacrifice the prestige and dignity intrinsic in a silver coin." He argued that silver held by the Treasury plus silver recovered from existing coins would be sufficient to produce coins with a 40 percent silver content.

Bennett replied that Moss' amendment would use an unacceptably large amount of silver. He said that the existing Treasury stock of silver totaled about 983 million ounces. The Treasury planned to produce 565 million of the new coins in 1965 and 8.5 billion in 1966, he said. If Moss' amendment were adopted, Bennett argued, it would require the use of 44.1 million ounces of Treasury silver in 1965 and 424.9 million ounces in 1966. Added to other demands on Treasury silver, including a 165 million ounces set aside for emergency and defense purposes and 250 million ounces for continued temporary production of the existing coins during a transition period to the new coinage, the Treasury at the end of 1965 would have its stock reduced to less than 150 million ounces.

The other major amendment rejected by the Senate was proposed by John O. Pastore (D R.I.). It would have completely eliminated silver from the half dollar rather than retaining 40 percent silver as provided in S 2080. It was rejected by a 32-60 roll-call vote. He said the silver was urgently needed by New England's electronics, jewelry, silverware and photographic industries. "We want silver so bad we can taste it," he said. Retention of silver in the half dollars would only "aggravate the silver shortage," Pastore argued.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

June 24 -- John O. Pastore (D R.I.) -- Eliminate silver from the half dollar. Roll-call vote, 32-60.

Frank E. Moss (D Utah) -- Retain 40 percent silver in dimes and quarters. Roll-call 34-57.

Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) -- Require the Government to maintain a stockpile of 165 million ounces of silver for national defense purposes. Roll-call, 36-54.

Alan Bible (D Nev.) -- Provide mandatory penalties for the melting of coins. Roll-call, 34-52.

Bible -- Prohibit the export of U.S. coins. Voice.

Bible -- Prohibit use of U.S. coins as collateral for a loan. Voice.

Howard W. Cannon (D Nev.) -- Retain 30 percent silver in dimes, quarters, and half dollars. Roll-call vote, 27-52.

House

COMMITTEE -- Banking and Currency.

HELD HEARINGS -- June 4, 7 and 8 on the Administration's bill (HR 8746) to change the silver content of dimes, quarters and half dollars. The testimony was similar to that given before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. (See above)

ACTION -- June 11 reported a clean bill (HR 8926 -- H Rept 509) with amendments. The original version of HR 8926 was similar to the Senate version of S 2080. However, the Committee amended HR 8926 to eliminate silver from half dollars.

Majority Views. The Committee report recommended that half dollars as well as dimes and quarters be made of the same cupro-nickel alloy, thus saving fifteen million ounces of silver annually. The Committee also banned the production of silver dollars for five years and provided that there be no distinctive mint marks on the new coins for five years, thus eliminating an incentive for coin collectors to accumulate sets from various mints.

The report stated that there was a consensus on the need for a change in the coinage laws and that "the major controversy" in the Committee's hearings on the Administration's proposals revolved around the issue of the degree of silver to be used in the new coins -- "whether there should be none, as urged by the representatives of consuming industries; whether the only silver used in the coinage should be for a silver-clad half dollar containing 40 percent silver, as proposed by the Treasury and the President; or whether the dime, quarter, and half dollar should all contain a silver cladding, as urged by the representatives of the silver mining industry."

Additional Views. In additional views Compton I. White Jr. (D Idaho) stated that "ample silver exists for its retention in our subsidiary coins." He criticized the Committee's extension of the ban on silver to half dollars and criticized the Administration's proposals for cupro-nickel dimes and quarters which he referred to as "red-edged hamburger sandwiches."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- June 7-9 -- The Subcommittee on Mining of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee held hearings on the silver shortage.

(Continued on next page)

Chairman Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) criticized President Johnson for presenting his coinage legislation to Congress before his Committee had had a chance to examine the shortage.

FLOOR ACTION

The House July 14 passed HR 8926 by a 255-151 roll-call vote. (For voting see chart p. 978)

Following passage it substituted the language of HR 8926 for that of S 2080, passed the latter by voice vote and returned it to the Senate.

Before passing HR 8926, the House rejected by a 48-94 standing vote a House Banking and Currency Committee amendment to HR 8926 to eliminate all silver from half dollars. This amendment would have replaced a provision in HR 8926 which provided that half dollars be minted with 40 percent silver, as requested by the Administration; defeat of the committee amendment kept this provision in the bill.

Minor committee amendments were adopted by voice vote.

Also rejected, by a 187-218 roll call, was an amendment by James F. Battin (R Mont.) requiring that dimes and quarters have a 40 percent silver content. The amendment was first rejected by a 92-106 standing vote, then accepted by a 122-112 teller vote and finally rejected by a 187-218 roll-call vote.

The House also rejected by voice vote a motion by Del Clawson (R Calif.) to recommit the bill to the Banking and Currency Committee with instruction to amend it to give the Secretary of the Treasury discretionary authority to mint dimes and quarters with a 40 percent silver content. The motion also instructed the Committee to include the wording of an amendment sponsored by W.E. Brock III (R Tenn.) which the House had rejected earlier. (See below)

House debate resembled that which occurred earlier in the Senate. Opinion divided more on geographical than party lines, with Western Congressmen demanding partial retention of silver in the coinage and Eastern Members advocating its complete elimination.

In debate July 13 Wayne N. Aspinall (D Colo.) said that a change in the coinage was necessary, but accused the Treasury of having ignored previous proposals to reduce the silver content of coins. For the Treasury to suddenly request its complete elimination was "too drastic" an action, he said. B.F. Sisk (D Calif.) also accused the Treasury of having been "dilatory" in not presenting its proposals earlier.

House Banking and Currency Committee Chairman Wright Patman (D Texas) said the new silverless coins would be backed by the "full faith and credit" of the United States and would not be hoarded. Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.) also dismissed Western claims that money of little or no intrinsic value would "drive out" money with intrinsic value, asserting that intrinsic value in no way affected the purchasing power of the coins. He said the new silverless coinage would be "perfectly good subsidiary coinage."

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

July 14 -- James Harvey (R Mich.) -- Increase the membership of the Joint Commission on Coinage as follows: four from Members of both the Senate and the House (rather than one from each chamber, as in the Administration bill) and eight from the public (rather than four, as in the Administration bill). Voice vote.

Arnold Olsen (D Mont.) -- Provide standby authority for the Secretary of the Treasury to prohibit use of coins as collateral for credit or loans. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

July 14 -- John E. Fogarty (D R.I.) -- Prohibit minting of half dollars after enactment of the bill. Voice vote.

Craig Hosmer (R Calif.) -- Permit the Secretary of the Treasury to mint paper fractional currencies if he deems the supply of coins inadequate. Voice.

James F. Battin (R Mont.) -- Retain 40 percent silver in dimes and quarters. Rejected by a 92-106 standing vote; accepted by a 122-112 teller vote; rejected by a 187-218 roll-call vote.

Hosmer -- Authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to substitute another metal in the production of the new coins in the event a shortage should arise in the metal(s) proposed in HR 8926. Voice.

W.E. Brock III (R Tenn.) -- Provide that the net seignorage on all coins (profit resulting from the difference between the cost of producing the new coins and their actual face value) be placed in a seignorage trust fund in the Treasury and that it be invested in U.S. marketable obligations as a means to reduce the public debt. Standing, 74-129.

Robert McClory (R Ill.) -- Impose fines on persons melting coins or using other extraction methods to obtain silver. Standing, 60-123.

FINAL ACTION

The Senate July 15 concurred by voice vote in the House amendments to S 2080. The President signed the bill into law July 23.

APPROPRIATIONS

The general supplemental appropriations bill for fiscal 1966 (HR 11588), cleared Oct. 21, appropriated a total of $34.3 million to continue the Bureau of Mint's crash program for the production of coins, to initiate production of the new coins and to provide equipment needed for producing the new coins. (For story see p. 182) Earlier, the fiscal 1966 appropriations bill for the Treasury and Post Office Departments (HR 7060), cleared June 28, appropriated $14,350,000 to the Mint to continue the crash program of coin production and to prepare for production of the new coins. (For story, see p. 213)

PRODUCTION OF NEW COINS

The first group of the new coins, 178 million quarters, was sent by the U.S. Mint to the banks Nov. 1 -- the start of the annual peak demand period. Treasury and Mint officials said if the Coinage Act had been delayed for only a few days, there would have been a shortage of quarters during the Christmas season. Federal Reserve banks had only 15,771,000 quarters on hand Nov. 1. The Mint had worked around the clock and had put into service old cartridge presses to produce additional coins, including the new silverless quarters, for the peak season.

The Mint produced 450,026,000 copper-clad quarters during the last two months of 1965 and began production of the new dimes in December and the new half dollars in January 1966.

PATENT POLICY

HR 4185 -- Reported by House Judiciary Committee (H Rept 113) March 1, 1965.
- Passed by the House by voice vote March 17.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Judiciary Committee (S Rept 301) June 8.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote June 15.
- House concurred by voice vote in Senate amendments July 12.

PL 89-83 -- Signed into law July 24.

Congress in 1965 passed a bill increasing patent fees for the first time since 1932. However, action on proposals to establish a uniform Government patent policy on property rights to inventions and discoveries obtained through the expenditure of federal funds failed to progress beyond Senate hearings.

Patent Office Fees

Congress passed an Administration-backed bill (HR 4185) increasing patent fees in order to enable the Patent Office to recover a larger share of its costs and to expedite the patent process. It was estimated that the new schedule of fees would increase from 30 percent to 75 percent the amount of Patent Office costs recouped through patent fees. The new fees were expected to increase the Patent Office's annual income from $8.9 million to $23.4 million.

However, Congress rejected an Administration proposal that part of the income be collected through "maintenance fees," which would be charged at the end of the fifth, ninth and thirteenth year after a patent was issued as a prerequisite for keeping the patent in force for the full 17-year term. Instead, HR 4185 provided for a higher schedule of other fees than recommended by the Administration.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 4185:

Increased the fees for filing for each original patent or reissue from $30 to $65 and for issuing each original patent from $30 to $100.

Established a new $100 fee for issuing a reissue patent (i.e., republishing a patent to correct technical errors).

Increased the first appeal fee on notice of appeal from $25 to $50.

Required federal departments, agencies and officers to pay the established fees.

Increased the fee for filing an original application to register a trademark from $25 to $35, and increased other trademark fees.

BACKGROUND -- Current patent fees were set in 1932. Legislation to increase the fees was next introduced in 1946 and re-introduced in every subsequent Congress. Both President Kennedy and President Johnson requested increases in the fees. The House, but not the Senate, passed by voice vote in 1964 an Administration-backed bill to revise the fee schedule. The bill also required payment of a series of three maintenance fees, totaling $300, at the end of the fifth, ninth and thirteenth year after a patent was issued, as a prerequisite for keeping the patent in force. (1964 Almanac p. 594)

President Johnson in 1965 again requested the fee increase in his Jan. 25 Budget Message. Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges, in a Jan. 11, 1965, letter to Congress transmitting a draft bill to increase patent fees, said the increase was in line with the Administration's policy "of charging appropriate fees for special benefits or privileges provided to users and beneficiaries of federal programs."

HOUSE. The House Judiciary Committee March 1 reported the Administration bill with no changes (HR 4185 -- H Rept 113). The bill differed from the one passed by the House in 1964 in one major respect: it provided for an optional flat fee of $75 in lieu of the maintenance fees. The Committee's report said the bill would "restore a rational relationship between Patent Office fees and the cost of administering the American Patent Office."

The House March 17 passed HR 4185 by voice vote. Before passing the bill, it rejected by voice vote a motion by John B. Anderson (R Ill.) to recommit (kill) the bill. It also rejected, on a 22-36 standing vote, an amendment by Anderson to eliminate the maintenance fees and increase the initial filing fee by $45 and the issue fee by $70.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 4185:

Increased the fees for filing each original or reissue patent from $30 to $50 and for issuing each original patent from $30 to $75; provided, for the first time, a $75 fee for issuing a reissue patent.

Required federal departments, agencies and officers to pay the established fees.

Increased the fee for filing an original application to register a trademark from $25 to $35 and increased other trademark fees.

Required payment of a maintenance fee of $50 by the fifth anniversary of each patent's issuance, $100 by the ninth anniversary, and $150 by the thirteenth anniversary; permitted payment, in lieu of the maintenance fees, of a $75 fee within three months of acceptance of a patent.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

March 17 -- John B. Anderson (R Ill.) -- Provide an initial filing fee of $75 and an issuing fee of $100 and eliminate the maintenance fee provisions. Standing vote, 22-36.

SENATE. The Senate Judiciary Committee Subcommittee on Patents, Trademarks and Copyrights March 3 held hearings on HR 4185 and on two bills (S 1228, S 729) increasing patent fees but omitting a maintenance fee system. The American Bar Assn. and the American Patent Law Assn. endorsed the latter two bills, opposing a maintenance fee.

The Senate Judiciary Committee June 8 reported HR 4185 (S Rept 301), amended to eliminate the maintenance fees. Instead, the Committee provided a higher schedule of other fees than voted by the House. (See final provisions.)

The Committee report said that the purpose of the bill was twofold: "to increase the fees payable to the Patent Office, so that a reasonable part of Patent Office costs may be recovered," and "to expedite the prosecution of patent applications and thus make new technology available to the public at an earlier date."

The Committee said the fee schedule in the amended bill "provided for a reasonable percentage of Patent Office costs to be borne by those directly benefitting from Patent Office services" and "will not deter the inventive genuis of the American people or reduce the filing of patent applications."

The Committee concluded that maintenance fees "would prove cumbersome and would create uncertainty as to the current status of a patent."

(Continued on next page)

The Senate June 15 passed HR 4185 by voice vote, making no changes in the Committee version of the bill.

FINAL ACTION. The House July 12 by voice vote concurred in Senate amendments to HR 4185.

Urging acceptance of the Senate amendments July 12, Edwin E. Willis (D La.), chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee that reported HR 4185, said that the subcommittee had felt "that the Administration proposal for maintenance fees were meritorious because it afforded an opportunity for the individual inventor to defer payment of part of the fees until a time when he would be better able to estimate the commercial value of his patent." However, he said, because "the Senate has indicated its unwillingness to accept the innovation...it now seems... desirable to pass the bill as amended by the Senate and to bring into effect increased revenues, deferring for some future time the ultimate solution of the question of maintenance fees."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- June 16 -- Rep. Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.) introduced a bill (HR 9146), requested by the Patent Office, to permit the publication of patent applications. HR 9146 permitted the Patent Commissioner, at the request of a patent applicant or owner, to publish a patent application. Upon publication, the application would be considered approved by the Patent Office. The bill authorized the Commissioner to charge $75 for the publication of an application plus $10 for each page of specifications and $2 for each sheet of drawing. Currently a patent application remains secret until approved, at which time the Patent Office publishes a capsule description. The bill was designed to provide greater public knowledge of approved applications. No action was taken on it.

Patent Policy Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Senate Judiciary, Subcommittee on Patents, Trademarks and Copyrights.

HELD HEARINGS -- June 1 - Aug. 19 on three bills (S 789, S 1809, S 1899) to establish a uniform Government policy on property rights to inventions conceived or developed with the aid of federal funds.

The bills all concerned the problem of who should have the ownership and rights to use of inventions and discoveries made through the expenditure of public funds: those who invented or developed an invention or discovery under a federal contract, or the public in general which, through taxes, had financed the research and experimentation.

Those arguing that the contractor should have the principal rights suggested that the added incentive of holding an exclusive license or the patent and the profits derived therefrom would encourage development and rapid marketing of new discoveries.

Those supporting public ownership, however, claimed that such a procedure could result in monopoly, unfair advantage for a particular company and unjustified costs to the public for use of the finished product or service resulting from the discovery or invention.

Prior to World War II most research was financed by private funds. The Federal Government generally retained property rights on inventions arising from research and development which it sponsored and paid for. During the war, however, the Government began granting patent rights to various private industries which were engaged in Government research, while retaining a royalty-free license for Government use of the inventions. Federal expenditures for research in fiscal 1966 totaled about $15.5 billion of which $12 billion was granted through contracts.

Until 1963, there was no Government-wide patent policy. Agency patent policies generally were determined by specific laws and departmental regulations or interpretations of the laws. The Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), for example, were required to follow patent policies outlined in the legislation which created the respective agencies, while the laws setting up the National Science Foundation and the Housing and Home Finance Agency simply required that all contracts entered into by those two agencies have provisions governing the disposition of inventions and discoveries made under agency contracts.

Patent policy provisions were also written into laws establishing certain federal programs. These included, for example, the Research and Marketing Act of 1946 and the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 under the Department of Agriculture and the Coal Research Act of 1960 and the Saline Water Conversion Act of 1961 under the Department of Interior. Other departments and agencies followed their own departmental regulations without much reference to practices elsewhere in the Government. At least one agency, the Department of Commerce, failed to develop even Department-wide regulations; while another, the Federal Aviation Agency, developed a policy of retaining patent rights and charging a royalty until the cost of the agency's contribution to the research was recouped. In one two-year period before issuance of the Kennedy memorandum in 1963, the Defense Department reportedly retained patent rights in only 46 out of 40,000 contracts.

Kennedy Memorandum. In 1963, in an attempt to develop a single, uniform, but flexible patent policy for all Government agencies, President Kennedy issued a memorandum on federal patent policy. Following are the principal provisions of the Kennedy memorandum:

The U.S. Government would "acquire (upon contracting) or reserve the right to acquire the principal or exclusive rights throughout the world" for inventions made through public expenditures if: (1) the main purpose of the contract had been to develop, create or improve products and processes intended for commercial use by the general public or required for such use by Government regulations, (2) the fields of research directly concerned public health or welfare, (3) there had been little work in the field outside that supported by Government funds, or (4) the services of the contractor were for operation of a Government-owned research or production facility or for supervising and organizing the work of others.

Principal or exclusive patent rights, subject to Government retention of the right to a royalty-free license for Government use, could be granted a contractor upon contracting if the contractor's "technical competence" as developed in a nongovernmental, commercial position had been necessary for the development of the invention. If, however, it had been impossible for the agency head to determine, at the time of contracting, the effect of the contractor's commercial position, he could wait until the invention had been identified to decide what rights to take for the Government.

Contractors could also receive more than a nonexclusive license when (1) upon contracting, the agency head determined that granting such rights would be in the public interest or (2) upon identifying the invention, it was found not to be a primary object of the contract.

If a contractor who had exclusive or principal rights over an invention failed to bring the invention to practical application or license the patent on a reasonable or royalty-free basis within three years, he had to prove that he should be allowed to retain the exclusive rights or possibly be required by the Government to grant the license to others on a nonexclusive, royalty-free basis. The Government would also have the authority to require any contractor holding exclusive rights to grant a reasonable or royalty-free license if the invention were required for use by government regulation.

The Federal Council for Science and Technology, after conferring with the Justice Department, was required to report annually on the "effectiveness" of the policy. A patent advisory panel was established under the Council to coordinate the policies of the agencies and make recommendations concerning patent policy.

Interpretation of the Memorandum. The effort to achieve a uniform interpretation of the Kennedy memorandum was beset with controversy, some agencies wanting a freer hand to waive title than others.

In a May 1965 Senate speech, Sen. Lee Metcalf (D Mont.) said that the 1963 Kennedy memorandum was so ambiguous that the patent advisory panel tried eight times to draft an interpretation that would be acceptable to all Government agencies. He said seven drafts were rejected and "the eighth one met such vociferous opposition from the Department of Justice, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the Federal Aviation Agency that the Federal Council for Science and Technology turned this one down too." In spite of this, he said, "the patent advisory panel issued it, anyhow."

The interpretation settled on by the panel leaned too far in the direction of permitting agencies to release title to inventions in advance of the actual discovery, in the opinion of critics such as Metcalf. He said it was "prepared by the representatives of special interests" in the Commerce Department and the Office of Science and Technology. He said, "It seems pretty clear...that there is a group in the Government, unknown to the public, unknown even to Congress, that is working day and night, trying to conjure up all kinds of reasons for giving away the public's property to special interest groups."

There was also controversy over the decision of NASA to follow the Kennedy memorandum rather than the 1958 National Aeronautics and Space Act (PL 85-568) and grant title at time of contracting, before the inventions were identified. Some critics charged that the agency's decision to follow the Kennedy memorandum was illegal.

In an unsuccessful attempt June 2 to amend the fiscal 1966 NASA authorization bill in order to limit the authority of NASA to waive patent rights, Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.) said the trouble with the current Government patent policy as set by the Kennedy memorandum was that "anybody could read it and do anything he wanted under it." Thus, he said, it did not stop officials who "wanted to give away some patent rights." In this respect, he said, it was no improvement over the situation that prevailed before the President ordered a uniform policy for all agencies.

Long was particularly critical of the NASA practice of waiving patent rights at the time of contracting. Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) replied that out of 4,480 NASA contracts since Oct. 1, 1964, there had been only 7 waivers at the time of contracting. Long said that none should have been permitted. (See p. 712)

Long had been for several years the major Congressional critic of federal patent policy, including the 1963 Kennedy memorandum. In 1960 Long began offering an amendment to legislation dealing with federal programs under which patentable inventions might be discovered. The amendment stipulated that all "information, uses, processes, patents and developments (obtained through public expenditures)...be freely available to the general public." The amendment was added to such legislation as the Coal Research and Development Act of 1960, the Helium Act Amendments of 1960, the Saline Water Conversion Act of 1961, the Water Resources Act of 1964 and the Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965. (1960 Almanac p. 254, 332; 1961 Almanac p. 448; 1964 Almanac p. 508; 1965 Almanac p. 788)

Patent Policy Bills. The principal bills considered by the Senate Subcommittee were:

- S 1809 introduced by Sen. John L. McClellan (D Ark.), chairman of the Subcommittee, which generally followed the guidelines of the Kennedy memorandum. Both the contractor and the Government would retain "irrevocable, nonexclusive, nontransferable, royalty-free license." The Government would take title at the time of contracting when the contract (1) was to "create, develop or improve products, processes or methods" intended for commercial use by the general public or required by the Government for such use (such as improved fertilizers, material handling equipment for certain agricultural industries and civil defense equipment); (2) concerned the "public health, welfare or safety" (drugs, medical instruments, prosthetic devices, water desalination, air safety, weather modification and control); (3) was in a scientific or technological field in which there had been little work outside that supported by Government funds; (4) concerned services for operation of a federally owned research or production facility or for coordinating and directing the research of others. The contractor could take title or get an exclusive license, upon contracting, if (1) the agency head felt the public interest would be served or (2) the contract required the use of knowledge and skills in an area in which the contractor had acquired technical competence in a non-governmental position. But the agency head could recapture Government rights, if, upon seeing the invention, he felt it would be in the public interest to do so. The agency head could also require a contractor who had title to an invention or discovery to license others after showing that (1) the contractor had not brought the invention to practical application or (2) that such licensing would benefit the public.
- S 1899, sponsored by Long, which would give the United States "exclusive right and title" to inventions discovered in research conducted under Government contract or lease and also to inventions made by Government employees while doing official work or using Government facilities. The bill would permit these rights to be waived only when (1) non-federal investment in the research exceeded that furnished by the Government, the interests of the United States were advanced by waiver of federal rights, and the Attorney General had determined that the waiver would not encourage monopolistic control of the invention or economic concentration of trade or commerce; (2) the recipient of the rights agreed to patent the invention and protect his patents; and (3) a license was reserved for Government use. The Long bill would also establish a Federal Inventions Administration to administer patent policy and handle Government patent applications.

● S 789, by Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), which would require that the Government secure only the use of inventions developed with Government aid, except in the case of inventions: (1) in a field in which the Government was the sole or prime developer and in which the public safety or health or national security required close control of the invention; (2) in a field in which the Government was the dominant developer and had provided substantially all of the funds; (3) in a field which would not likely be developed without substantial Government financing; (4) which were developed on the basis of prior Government efforts; or (5) which were likely to be required by law for national security or the public health or safety. In these cases the Government would secure the patent as well as the use, leaving a royalty-free license to the inventor. Even in these cases, however, the Government could waive its rights under certain conditions, primarily to encourage exploitation of the invention.

The federal departments and agencies, in general, supported S 1809, as did the Chamber of Commerce and the National Assn. of Manufacturers. The American Bar Assn. opposed all three bills and later endorsed a measure (S 2326) introduced by Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) (See related developments, below)

TESTIMONY

TESTIMONY -- June 1 -- Dr. Donald F. Hornig, director, Office of Science and Technology, said that of the three bills, he favored the McClellan measure because he thought it provided "a proper balance between the title and license policies, and...at the same time provides sufficient flexibility to the contracting agencies and a proper degree of recognition of the need to provide incentives for the further development and use of federally-financed inventions." He criticized S 1899, the Long bill, for failing to "accommodate special situations" in which an agency may become involved and for being so restrictive that contractors would be discouraged from identifying or developing inventions resulting from a contract. He said that S 789, the Saltonstall bill, failed to grant an agency head "sufficient discretion...to retain exclusive rights when it is in the public interest to do so."

However, Hornig suggested that three changes be made in McClellan's bill. He proposed that it be amended "to clearly specify that the criteria for permitting the contractor to retain title to inventions at the time of contracting be applied only in situations which do not fall" under the classes where the Government, upon contracting, is authorized to take principal and exclusive rights. He recommended that the section providing that Government rights not be taken until after the invention has been identified be modified to favor the Government more than the contractor. Finally, Hornig suggested that reviewing procedures be limited to cases where the Government recaptured rights from the contractor.

James E. Webb, Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said that "the issue posed here is not simply one of assuring that the Government secure all property rights to inventions coming out of federally financed research. The issue is more complex and fundamental. It involves how to get the most out of such research and development by stimulating inventive activity, by assuring prompt and effective reporting of technology, and then by developing effective techniques for the dissemination of this technology and for stimulating its use in the economy in a competitive environment." He maintained that "a single presumption of ownership does not provide a satisfactory basis for Government-wide policy on the allocation of rights to inventions" because "Government has a responsibility to foster the fullest exploitation of the inventions for the public benefit."

Webb said that "the most controversial portion" of Government patent policy provided in the 1963 statement was the issue of "advance waiver, or the granting at the time of contracting of commercial rights to the contractor." He defended the use of the advance waiver on the grounds that it encouraged contractors to report discoveries and inventions.

Hornig reported that since NASA had had the authority to use the advance waiver, it had used the authority in "only 7 contracts out of approximately 4400 prime, first, and second tier subcontracts awarded." He also reported that as of March 31, 1965, rights had been waived after an invention had been identified in about 4 percent of the cases.

Walter D. Sohier, general counsel of NASA, said that NASA regarded the McClellan bill as a "sound and enlightened approach to federal patent policy" and that it preferred the McClellan bill to the Saltonstall bill "as being easier to apply and interpret" because it was based on the President's 1963 memorandum which had already received "widespread industry support." However, he criticized the McClellan bill for not leaving title to an invention to the contractor when the invention was not a primary object of the contract.

Helge Holst of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce supported S 1809 as "the best opportunity for the development of an effective and equitable Government patent policy." He said that a uniform policy was needed because the 1963 policy statement "is subject to varying interpretations, depending to a large extent on the current policies of the individual agencies." He favored granting the contractor more than a license for "non-primary objective inventions."

Dr. Austin Smith, president of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Assn., asked that the section of the McClellan bill granting the Government exclusive or principal rights when the purpose of the contract was for work in fields directly concerning the public health, welfare, or safety be changed, since it was important to "encourage the perfection and marketing" of these inventions.

June 2 -- Sen. Harrison A. Williams (D N.J.) testified in support of his bill (S 1047) to prevent Government agencies from purchasing drugs in foreign countries when those drugs were patented in the United States, but not patented in the foreign country. He said that the federal money saved through such purchases was offset by the fact that the purchases adversely affected the U.S. balance-of-payments problem.

Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) called for a "flexible" patent policy which would "serve to increase incentive to participate in Government research and development contracts." He defended the inclusion of criteria for disposition of rights to inventions, as provided in his bill, on the grounds that such inclusion would "avoid vagueness which can easily result in confusion." He also said that he did not believe agency heads should be given blanket authority to confer licenses on Government patents.

Tom Arnold of the American Bar Assn. pointed out that constitutionally "the primary function of the patent is to provide incentive for capital to be invested in research and development" and asked, "By what proper constitutional purpose is the Government justified in taking taxpayers' money, and with that money granting to itself the patent right to preclude taxpayers from using that which taxpayers paid for?" He said that "in no instance is a Government take-title to proprietary information a sound public policy...save a war-time emergency or the like wherein the Government takes over a business which as a going business concern should retain its title." For these reasons, he opposed all three bills.

June 3 -- Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.) stated that the basic premise of his bill was "that inventions should belong to 'those who pay to have them created' " and that, for this reason, he resented "the fact that the people of the United States, paying the men to do the development work -- and very frequently paying for their education also -- have to pay monopoly prices when they wish to use the results of research they paid for in the first place." He disagreed with the argument that contractors deserve more than a license because of the risks they take, pointing out that the Government pays for the work and the Government agency is a ready market for the invention.

Harry C. Page, member of the Patents Committee of the National Assn. of Manufacturers, opposed the Long bill, but expressed general support of "most of the principles" of the McClellan and Saltonstall bills. He said the NAM believed that "the accumulation of patents by the United States Government should be avoided." Page said that a patent was the "right to exclude others," that "this right...is the reward that induces inventions and induces the risk of funds for developing and promoting the invention in the market," and that "the Government does not, and should not, have this right of exclusion."

J.P. Perry, chairman of the Small Business Patent Policy Committee of the National Small Business Assn., told the subcommittee that some aspects of the proposed legislation "would be most beneficial to the individual inventor and small creative business." He said that "individual and small business inventors would favor the title and license provisions of S 789 and S 1809 over those of S 1899."

July 6 -- James M. Quigley, Assistant Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, reported that the major portion of HEW research was carried out through grants rather than through contracts. He said that HEW felt the taxpayer was "entitled to the fruits of research financed by tax funds," but that it believed "further experience under the existing policies laid down in the President's statement" was necessary before legislation was passed. If the additional time was not to be given, he said that HEW preferred the McClellan bill, S 1809.

J.M. Malloy, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense, said that for 47 years the Government had authority, in some respects like the power of eminent domain, to use patented inventions without a license so long as fair compensation was paid to the patent owner. He said, "Such a right is essential if Government procurement is not to be held up by unsubstantial but time-consuming allegations or by exorbitant royalty demands and refusals to license second sources..." Malloy termed President Kennedy's 1963 policy statement "a proper balance between complete public ownership or complete private ownership of inventions and applicable patent rights..."

Aug. 17 -- Dr. James A. Shannon, director of the National Institutes of Health, said that there is "a very substantial risk" in financing the development of a drug from the point of its discovery and patenting to acceptability for the public market. He listed the average cost of final development of a drug as somewhere between $200,000 and $400,000 and noted that "substantially less than one out of ten become useful drugs." For this reason, Shannon testified, drug firms which develop Government-financed medical discoveries should receive some special patent rights.

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS -- April 9 -- President Johnson announced establishment of the President's Commission on the Patent System, a group "charged with determining how well the patent system currently serves our national needs and international goals, with devising possible improvements, and with recommending any legislation required to strengthen the system." The President July 23 named Dr. Harry Huntt Ransom, chancellor of the University of Texas, chairman of the Commission. Others selected for membership were: John Bardeen, inventor and scientist, University of Illinois; James Birkenstock, vice president, Commercial Development, IBM Corp.; Howard W. Clement, patent attorney and chairman of the board of trustees, University of Illinois; Howard Nelson, president, Monsanto Research Corp.; Sidney Neuman, patent attorney; Bernard Oliver, vice president of research and development, Hewlett-Packard Corp.; Simon H. Rifkind, attorney; Horton Guyford Stever, president, Carnegie Institute of Technology; and Charles Thornton, president, Litton Industries. The Secretary of Commerce, Secretary of Defense, Administrator of the Small Business Administration and Director of the National Science Foundation were given membership on the Commission and the Secretary of State and Director of the Office of Science and Technology were given the right to sit on the Commission as observers.

June 17 -- Sen. Wayne Morse (D Ore.) introduced a bill (S 2160) "to reestablish Congressional control" over the disposition of patent rights by NASA and "to provide that private companies desiring to acquire interests in such patents and processes repay the taxpayers of this country fair market value pursuant to the so-called Morse formula." This provided that "transfer of federal property for private or non-public use must be based upon payment of 100 percent of appraised fair market value."

Specifically, the Morse measure amended the 1958 Space Act to provide that all inventions and discoveries made "as a result" of contracts or grants under the Act would become the "exclusive property" of the Government. Inventions would have to be reported to the Government within 30 days.

July 23 -- Sen. Dirksen introduced a bill (S 2326) backed by the American Bar Assn. and the American Patent Law Assn. Dirksen said the bill was similar to S 1809. However, where S 1809 provided for Government ownership of all inventions made in Government-approved contracts "for exploration into fields which directly concern the public health, welfare or safety," Dirksen said, S 2326 "avoids such language because almost all inventions made under Government-sponsored research contracts could be considered to fall into one or another of these categories." S 2326 required compulsory licensing of an invention or discovery if "the developer does not satisfy the public demand..."

BILLS TO CHANGE FPC JURISDICTION FAIL TO PASS

S 1459 -- Reported, amended, by the Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 420) July 1, 1965.
● Passed by an 86-5 roll call of the Senate Aug. 26. (See p. 1069)

Congress in 1965 gave major attention to two bills (S 1459, S 218) to clarify or change the jurisdiction of the Federal Power Commission over electric power sales, but neither bill was ultimately enacted.

S 1459, which exempted all nonprofit rural electric cooperatives from FPC jurisdiction, was passed by the Senate Aug. 26. S 218, which substantially reduced FPC jurisdiction over interstate sales of electricity by private power companies, was neither passed nor reported in either chamber; however, the provisions of S 218 were tacked on to S 1459 by a House subcommittee when S 1459 reached the House after Senate passage. There was no further 1965 House action on either bill following the subcommittee action.

Disputes on Bills. Both bills produced substantial controversy. The disputes are described below.

● S 1459, which was passed by the Senate, exempted from FPC regulatory jurisdiction all nonprofit rural electric cooperatives financed by loans from the Agriculture Department's Rural Electrification Administration. The bill was strongly pushed by the politically powerful National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn. as a corrective to a 1963 FPC attempt to assert jurisdiction for the first time over interstate wholesale sales of electricity by cooperatives which generated and transmitted power. (Retail sales of electricity were not involved, since the FPC has no jurisdiction over retail power sales, even by private power companies -- only over interstate wholesale sales and transmission of electricity.)

S 1459 was backed not only by the NRECA but by the Agriculture and Interior Departments, the American Public Power Assn. and most other public power advocates. They argued that the legislative histories of the Federal Power Act and the Rural Electrification Act made clear that the FPC was not intended to have jurisdiction over the power rates and the transmission facilities of nonprofit electric cooperatives; and, further, that rate regulation of cooperatives was unnecessary because the cooperatives operated on a nonprofit basis. The FPC responded that in order to carry out its responsibility to give general direction and leadership to the development of electric power services in the country, the FPC should have regulatory powers not only over private companies transmitting power or selling power at wholesale in interstate commerce, but also over any cooperatives which performed these functions.

Despite its widespread backing, S 1459 failed to be reported in the House, following Senate passage of the bill. It became embroiled in the controversy over S 218.

● S 218, sponsored by Sens. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) and George A. Smathers (D Fla.), was in the long run of far greater significance than S 1459; it was opposed by many of the groups which favored S 1459. S 218 would have removed from the FPC its power to regulate most interstate wholesale sales of electricity by private power companies: it would have exempted from FPC rate and other regulation all power companies operating primarily within a single state, even if part of their electricity was obtained from or sold outside the state. (In actual practice, most power companies do operate primarily within a single state although obtaining or selling substantial portions of power at wholesale outside the state; consequently, the bill would have exempted from FPC regulation most interstate sales of power at wholesale.)

S 218 was backed by the Edison Electric Institute and other spokesmen for private power companies, and by representatives of state utility regulatory commissions. They argued that federal regulation was desirable only for power companies that were primarily interstate in character (such as those with substantial generating and transmission facilities in several states); and that local power rates were adequately regulated by the state utility commissions at the retail level and did not require further regulation through FPC control over interstate wholesale power prices. However, the FPC, the Johnson Administration, the NRECA, the AFL-CIO and the APPA strongly opposed S 218, arguing that state regulation of retail electricity prices was in many cases weak and inadequate, and that FPC regulation of all interstate wholesale sales by private power companies was vitally necessary to prevent unjustifiable rate increases.

S 218 was not passed or reported in either chamber of Congress in 1965. Attempts in the Senate to attach it to S 1459 when the latter was reported were unsuccessful. When S 1459 reached the House following Senate passage, the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Communications and Power Subcommittee amended S 1459 to include the provisions of S 218. Following this action, the full House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee let the matter rest for the remainder of 1965; it did not take up or report S 1459.

Test Case Delayed. In the meanwhile, the FPC continued to hold in abeyance its test case, initiated in 1963, on FPC jurisdiction over interstate wholesale sales of power by rural electric cooperatives. The FPC on Aug. 6, 1964, had announced that in view of Congressional protests, it would postpone further action on the test case until Jan. 1, 1966, to give Congress time to act, if it wished, on legislation like S 1459. Even though Congressional action on S 1459 had not been completed by Jan. 1, 1966, the Commission did not reactivate the test case during the first three months of 1966.

Background

REFERENCES -- 1964 Almanac p. 493, 494.

S 1459 Background. The FPC July 22, 1963, began a test proceeding to determine whether rural electric cooperatives should be subject to FPC jurisdiction. The FPC had not regulated cooperatives up to that time. However, various Congressional protests, including partial action in 1964 on a bill (S 2028) to deny the FPC such jurisdiction until the matter could be studied further, led the FPC Aug. 6, 1964, to announce that it would delay the test case until at least Jan. 1, 1966.

S 218 Background. The 1935 Federal Power Act authorized the FPC to regulate interstate transmission and sales at wholesale of electric power. In a decision which gave a very broad application of the 1935 Act, the Supreme Court Feb. 24, 1964, in the Colton case, held that where a power company produced and sold power in its home state at wholesale, the sale was subject to FPC regulation if even small portions of additional power were obtained from out of state and comingled with the locally produced power prior to sale.

On July 28, 1964, Sens. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) and George A. Smathers (D Fla.) introduced a bill (S 3038) to overturn the Colton decision and end FPC authority over wholesale rates charged by private electric companies operating primarily in a single state, even though part of their electricity was generated or transmitted outside that state. Hearings on S 3038 were held July 29, but the bill was not reported.

Holland and Smathers introduced S 218 on Jan. 6, 1965. The bill, like S 3038, was intended to nullify the Colton decision. S 218 exempted from FPC regulation (1) utilities having all of their generating and transmission facilities within a single state, and not directly connected with the facilities of any utility deriving the major portion of its electric revenues from sales at retail outside the state; and (2) sales or delivery of power within a single state to any local utility when the seller, during the preceding 12 months, had derived a "substantial portion" of its electric revenues from sales at retail within the same state. The FPC would retain jurisdiction over electric utilities (1) owning or operating facilities in two or more states or (2) permanently interconnected with other utilities at state borders. The FPC also would retain jurisdiction over utilities with all of their facilities located within one state which were permanently interconnected within that state with a utility in group (1) or (2) which derived the major portion of its revenues from sales outside that state.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Commerce.

HELD HEARINGS -- May 12-14 on S 218.

TESTIMONY -- May 12 -- Chairman Joseph C. Swidler of the Federal Power Commission said S 218 would "substantially repeal the Commission's regulatory authority over interstate power companies, and bring to an end the system of responsible regulation of electric utility systems which Congress initiated" in 1935. He said passage of the bill "would represent a judgment by the Congress that effective federal regulation is not important or necessary." He said the Federal Power Act had assigned the FPC "the authority in the areas which were interstate in nature and which the states could not discharge effectively," yet had "carefully preserved for the states their essential regulatory role over matters of local import."

Swidler told the Committee S 218 "would withdraw federal protection in the very situations where it is most needed, and over matters which have been recognized from the outset as federal responsibilities under the Act." He said the first exemption in the bill would apply to "many electric companies engaged in interstate commerce...if they own facilities in only one state and sell or buy power in interstate commerce through an intermediary company." This exemption, he said, "would withdraw (FPC) jurisdiction altogether from over 50 of the 186 Class A private utilities as they are now organized, and could open the door to reorganizations solely for the purpose of achieving additional jurisdictional exemptions." The second exemption, he said, would apply to "almost all of the approximately 1,500 municipal, cooperative and investor-owned systems which purchase all or part of their electric power requirements at wholesale," and this, he said, covered "almost every utility company which is not totally exempted under the first sentence."

Sen. Lee Metcalf (D Mont.) said it was "no time to virtually repeal the Federal Power Act of 1935, which S 218 would do."

Sen. Ernest Gruening (D Alaska) called S 218 a "wicked proposal (which) would effectively eradicate hard-won regulatory reforms" and would "sow for cultivation a treacherous briar patch of pseudo-regulation in which most utilities not automatically exempted would have little difficulty in escaping control." Gruening said the bill "would cause American consumers of electric power to pay higher rates for a necessary service than is justifiable and would leave them without protective regulation now available."

Robert T. Person of the Edison Electric Institute supported the bill. He said that in passing the Federal Power Act of 1935, Congress had "stated that federal regulation should 'extend only to those matters which are not subject to regulation by the states.' " Despite this "expression of Congressional policy," he said, the FPC "has asserted jurisdiction over the operations and activities of purely intrastate companies (and)...expanded its jurisdiction over contracts for the sale of electric energy at wholesale for resale." Person said S 218 would "establish, once and for all, clear boundaries of federal and state jurisdiction."

Merton Stanley, chairman of the Public Service Commission of Indiana, said the bill was not "an attempt to withdraw from the FPC any authority which it should properly have; instead, the effect of the bill would be to prevent FPC from taking over and ousting state commission regulation of essentially local transactions which have been effectively regulated by the state commissions for more than 50 years."

May 13 -- Andrew J. Biemiller of the AFL-CIO testified that S 218 "is not...an attempt to resolve respective federal and state jurisdiction in this field. It is an effort to diminish effective regulation."

Charles O. Stout of the Ohio Municipal Electric Assn. opposed S 218, saying that "continued regulatory authority provided by the Federal Power Commission is not just desirable, but of utmost necessity" to protect municipally owned systems which purchased power from investor-owned utilities. He said the necessity for FPC regulation was "ever increasing as the investor-owned electric companies participate in constantly expanding and complex grid systems that transfer large blocks of power across not one but several state lines."

Representatives of the Florida Power & Light Company, Home Light and Power Company (Colorado), Consumers Power Company (Michigan), Rochester (N.Y.) Gas and Electric Corporation and Public Service Company of Indiana supported S 218.

May 14 -- S 218 was opposed by representatives of municipal power systems and electric consumer associations. James G. Richardson, city commissioner of Gainesville, Fla., said the bill would "pose grave problems for small municipal systems, such as ours, which are now or anticipate the exchange or purchase of wholesale power from privately owned utilities." He said there was "an abundance of evidence...that the Florida Public Utilities Commission and its personnel are not adequately staffed at present to do the (regulatory) job, nor do we have a sufficient body of law to do it."

(Continued on next page)

Edwin L. Mason, chairman of the Florida Public Service Commission, supported the bill, saying "there is no basis for the Federal Power Commission to regulate or attempt to regulate the wholesale rates of electric energy of power companies...whose operations are wholly within a single state and which can be completely, adequately and, we feel, effectively regulated by the respective states."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- May 10 -- A letter from Esther Peterson, Special Assistant to the President for Consumer Affairs, "strongly" opposed S 218. She said, "effective regulation must begin with an active FPC regulating the nation's largest utility, as a necessary foundation on which states can then build local, retail regulation." She said the Committee was "not dealing with an issue of infringement on states' rights. What you are dealing with as you consider S 218 is the question of effective regulation versus no regulation."

Committee Reports S 1459

The Senate Commerce Committee July 1 reported S 1459 (S Rept 420) following a 10-3 vote June 29 to approve the bill. Sens. Lausche (D Ohio), Morton (R Ky.) and Brewster (D Md.) voted against the bill. The bill was supported by the Agriculture and Interior Departments and opposed by the FPC.

Before approving S 1459, the Committee rejected, 6-9, an amendment that would have added the language of S 218 to S 1459.

The Committee also rejected, 8-9, a motion to report S 218 separately. Senators supporting S 218 on this vote were Lausche, Cotton (R N.H.), Morton, Scott (R Pa.), Pearson (R Kan.), Dominick (R Colo.) -- all of whom also voted to amend S 1459 -- Cannon (D Nev.) and Prouty (R Vt.).

Senators opposing both S 218 and the amendment to S 1459 were Magnuson (D Wash.), Monroney (D Okla.), Bartlett (D Alaska), Hartke (D Ind.), McGee (D Wyo.), Hart (D Mich.), Brewster (D Md.), Neuberger (D Ore.), and Bass (D Tenn.).

Majority Views. In reporting S 1459, the Committee stated that "Congress never intended to subject cooperatives to FPC jurisdiction." It said it "sought, but heard no evidence of, any abuse committed by cooperatives which might justify the imposition of regulatory sanctions." The report concluded that co-ops were "subject to a high degree of self-regulation" from members and the REA. In a letter endorsing S 1459, Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman said, "There is no evidence that Congress intended to divide responsibility between REA and the Commission in making of loans under the Rural Electrification Act." He said there was no need for FPC regulation "when the users of the service own and control the supply facilities" and the financing came from public funds.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate Aug. 26 passed S 1459 by an 86-5 roll-call vote, without floor amendments. (For voting, see chart p. 1069)

Voting against the bill were Sens. Clifford P. Case (R N.J.), Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.), John O. Pastore (D R.I.), Claiborne Pell (D R.I.) and Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.).

During Senate debate Aug. 26, A. S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) said that "history demonstrates conclusively that Congress never intended to give the Federal Power Commission jurisdiction" over REA-financed co-ops. He said there was no need for such regulation because "co-operatives are owned and controlled by the consumers... There can be no conflict between consumer and investor interest, which is the very reason for having regulation."

Pastore said he opposed the bill as part of an effort to "whittle away...inch by inch" the power of the FPC.

Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), supporting S 1459, warned that the FPC was considering "within its own sanctum" plans to extend its jurisdiction to retail power sales as well as wholesale power sales.

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Communications and Power Subcommittee.

HELD HEARINGS -- July 14-16 on bills to reduce FPC jurisdiction over interstate wholesale power transactions: HR 5955 (identical to S 218), sponsored by Paul G. Rogers (D Fla.); HR 3608 (similar but not identical), sponsored by J.J. Pickle (D Texas); and HR 7430 (similar), sponsored by Oren Harris (D Ark.).

FPC Chairman Joseph C. Swidler said HR 3608 and HR 5955 would prevent effective regulation of the electric power industry. In response to an observation that since 1961 the FPC had lagged behind state commissions in rate reductions, Swidler said, "It will take a few years to work out but I think you will then see some very large savings."

Edward D. Storm, representing the National Assn. of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners, supported HR 3608, HR 5955 and HR 7430. He said that without the legislation the state commissions would have to terminate their rate reduction programs and perhaps raise retail rates.

ACTION -- The Subcommittee Sept. 21 approved S 1459 after first amending it to include provisions similar to those in S 218 and HR 5955.

Other FPC Matters

EHV Lines. Long-standing proposals to give the Federal Power Commission jurisdiction over construction of extra-high-voltage transmission lines were again suggested in 1965, but the Senate Commerce Committee and the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee took no action. Among the bills introduced were S 1472 and HR 2072, companion measures sponsored by Sen. Lee Metcalf (D Mont.) and Rep. John E. Moss (D Calif.); S 2139 and HR 7788, companion bills backed by FPC Commissioners Joseph C. Swidler, Lawrence J. O'Connor Jr. and concurred in by Carl E. Bagge; and S 2140 and HR 7791, companion bills backed by FPC Commissioners David S. Black and Charles R. Ross. (For background, see "Congress and the Nation," p. 881.)

Permian Basin Gas Ruling. See next page.

Pipeline Rate Cases. The FPC early in 1965 cleared up the last of several dozen pipeline rate cases going back to 1961. In these cases, the FPC disallowed rate increases put into effect by pipeline companies selling natural gas to local utilities, and ordered rebates on past overcharges. President Johnson, in an Oct. 15 reference to the cases, said over $650 million in refunds already had been made, and the cost of natural gas to the consumer had been reduced by $130 million a year by the FPC's actions in these cases.

Hydroelectric Power Licenses. The FPC in April 1965 ruled that, henceforth, every license for a hydroelectric power project issued by the FPC (without whose permission no non-federal entity may build a hydroelectric power project on waters under federal jurisdiction) would include a proviso reserving to the FPC, in effect, the right to order the licensee, at some time in the future, to permit the use of its reservoir for comprehensive development purposes if needed. The licensee would retain the use of the reservoir for power production, but the FPC could order the licensee to permit boating, fishing, etc.

Bonneville Power Rates. An average rate increase of 3 percent in the rates charged for electric power by the Bonneville Power Administration went into effect Dec. 20, after approval by the FPC. The increases applied to power marketed by the BPA (an Interior Department agency) from federal hydroelectric dams in the Northwest. The increases were the first in the BPA's 28-year history.

FPC ISSUES PERMIAN BASIN NATURAL GAS RULING

The Federal Power Commission, in a landmark decision on natural gas rate regulation, Aug. 5 set 16.5 cents per thousand cubic feet as the maximum price which producers in the Texas-New Mexico Permian Basin natural gas area could charge interstate pipelines for natural gas produced from new natural gas wells. A new natural gas well, according to the terms of the FPC ruling, was one which produced natural gas only, not oil and gas together, and whose production was contracted for interstate sale on or after Jan. 1, 1961.

At the same time, the FPC fixed 14.5 cents per thousand cubic feet as the maximum rate producers could charge interstate pipelines for all other types of natural gas, such as gas from old natural gas wells (wells whose production was contracted for interstate sale before Jan. 1, 1961) or gas produced from oil wells, whether old or new.

The 2 cent higher price for gas from new natural gas wells was granted, the FPC said, in order to provide incentive for exploration and development of new reserves of natural gas. "New discoveries are the lifeblood of the industry and are also essential to consumers who are tied to natural gas," the FPC said. It said the future needs of the natural gas market could no longer be satisfied by the incidental discovery of gas in the search for oil; it was necessary to encourage a search for gas specifically.

The Permian Basin ruling, which was the FPC's first rate decision attempting to fix maximum producer rates on an area-wide basis instead of using a utility-type rate calculation for each producer, was sharply criticized by natural gas producers in the Permian Basin area. The producers had sought a uniform maximum rate of 20 cents, regardless of the source of the gas.

One of the first responses to the ruling came from Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr. The state had formally backed the 20-cent level sought by producers. Carr Aug. 5 called the FPC ruling a "bitter disappointment to Texas" which "dramatically illustrates the damage to Texas that can be expected from a consumer-oriented" FPC. He said the state would appeal.

Former U.S. Rep. Frank Ikard (D Texas 1951-61), president of the American Petroleum Institute, said the decision would discourage exploration and discovery of new natural gas reserves by not providing a sufficiently high price to give incentives for new development and by using a two-price mechanism.

The Permian Basin is a reserve of natural gas underlying two sections of Texas and three southeastern New Mexico counties. The 16.5-cent maximum for a gas from new natural gas wells and the 14.5-cent maximum for all other gas produced in the area were rates applicable to Texas and included state production taxes. Because of a lower state production tax in New Mexico, the gas rate maximums applicable to gas from New Mexico portions of the Basin would be slightly lower than 16.5 and 14.5 cents.

The Aug. 5 ruling was signed by FPC Chairman Joseph C. Swidler, and members Charles R. Ross, Lawrence J. O'Connor Jr. and David S. Black. The fifth FPC Commissioner, Carl E. Bagge, did not participate.

Additional major aspects of the ruling:

- Applications for increases in rates, above the area rates just set, would not be entertained by the FPC until Jan. 1, 1968. This meant that the 16.5-cent and 14.5-cent maximums would remain in effect until then.
- Small producers -- those producing less than 10 billion cubic feet of gas annually -- who at present were charging prices lower than the 16.5-cent and 14.5-cent maximums were free to increase their rates up to the maximums without seeking FPC permission.
- The FPC based the final maximum rates chiefly on studies of the average costs of exploration, depletion, depreciation and other costs and allowed a 12-percent return on investment for both new gas and flowing gas. The high percentage of return, compared with the 6 percent or thereabouts usually allowed to pipeline companies, was granted on the basis of the greater degree of risk in the producing end of the business. The FPC rejected the argument that it should use producers' contract prices or the ratio of production to reserves as the basis of regulation.
- The new ceilings applied only to interstate sales of natural gas and were effective as of late 1960 or early 1961 for most producers. Producers were required to put the new prices into effect, where their existing prices exceeded the ceilings, as of Sept. 1, 1965. Producers who, since the late 1960 period, had been charging higher than the maximums fixed Aug. 5, would be required to make refunds estimated at $33 million to the interstate pipeline companies which bought the gas. The latter, in turn, would be required to pass along the reduction to local utilities which had purchased the gas from the pipelines. State utility commissions would determine whether the local utilities should pass the saving along to the consumer.

Background. The Permian Basin rate decision -- the FPC's first ruling in an "area rate proceeding" -- was one of the most important FPC natural gas rulings of recent years.

Until 1954, the FPC did not regulate interstate sales of natural gas made by independent natural gas producers. In that year, however, the Supreme Court, in the Phillips Petroleum case, ruled that the FPC could regulate the rates charged by independent producers to interstate pipelines. The decision produced a storm of protest from producers, who contended that because of the character of the natural gas industry, utility-type regulation was entirely inappropriate. Under utility-type regulation, which is used to regulate prices charged by interstate gas pipelines, the FPC determines each company's costs and capital, allows a certain amount for return on capital (usually around 6 percent) and fixes rates on that basis. The natural gas producers argued that because of the costs of exploration and because of the fact that wells costly to find might produce very little while wells which cost little to find might yield large amounts of gas, fair utility-type regulation was not possible. Repeated attempts to pass legislation reversing the Phillips decision and thus freeing independent natural gas producers from FPC regulation failed. (See Congress & Nation, p. 980) The FPC, meanwhile, had not developed a system of rate regulation for independent gas producers.

On Sept. 28, 1960, the FPC ruled that individual rate calculations for each natural gas producing company would be unworkable. Subsequently, it decided to fix prices on the basis of area rate proceedings -- that is, setting some uniform price for an entire natural gas producing area based on various factors such as average costs, depreciation, depletion and so forth. The Permian Basin case was the first such proceeding to be decided. The Permian Basin was chosen as the initial proceeding because of the great importance of the Permian Basin deposit, which accounts for about 11 percent of all gas moving into interstate markets. Revenues of producers from sales of Permian Basin gas to pipelines amounted to about $126 million in 1960, or about 10 percent of the total $1,265,-381,342 in interstate natural gas sales to pipelines.

Nearly all interstate sales of Permian Basin gas are made to three pipeline companies -- El Paso Natural Gas Co. of Texas, 73 percent (most of which is sold in California); Northern Natural Gas Co. of Omaha, Neb., 18 percent; and Transwestern Pipeline Co. of Houston, Texas, 9 percent.

The Permian Basin proceeding involved 336 producers, and, technically, the new maximum rates applied only to them. However, the FPC in a separate action indicated it would also apply the same price limits to other producers in the Permian Basin.

The Permian Basin ruling was considered particularly significant in indicating the FPC's approach to natural gas producer price regulation -- an approach that might eventually be applied to areas other than the Permian Basin. From this point of view, the key elements in the decision were the fixing of a higher maximum price for gas from new gas wells than from other sources, designed to encourage a search for new gas reserves; the use of costs as the primary factor in establishing the price; and the fixing of the price at a level substantially below that sought by producers.

ELECTRIC CO-OP FUNDS

The National Rural Electric Cooperative Assn. Aug. 5 unveiled a three-part plan to provide new, supplementary funding for the nation's rural electric cooperatives. The plan, based on a study by the NRECA and the investment consulting firm of Kuhn, Loeb and Co., was intended to help the co-ops expand their facilities to serve future markets.

The NRECA said existing financing for co-ops -- 2-percent, 35-year loans from the federal Rural Electrification Administration to help cooperatives provide service in areas not receiving central station service -- was inadequate for two reasons; (1) Congress probably would not provide as much money ($8.1 billion from 1965-80) as the co-ops believed they needed for expansion (in recent years, Congressional appropriations for the loans had run only $300 million to $400 million a year); and (2) existing REA-imposed or Congressionally imposed limitations on the use of REA loans would prevent the co-ops from building large-size generating and transmission systems with the REA funds.

There was no Congressional action in 1965 on the NRECA financing proposals, but Reps. W. R. Poage (D Texas) and Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.) March 24 and 29, 1966, introduced bills (HR 14000, HR 14048) to carry out the basic NRECA objectives. The NRECA annual meeting at Las Vegas, N.M., Feb. 13-16, 1966, had endorsed the proposals.

Details of Proposals. Following were the details of the Aug. 5, 1965, NRECA proposals:

(1) The existing federal 2-percent, 35-year loans should be continued, chiefly for the benefit of the weakest rural electric cooperatives -- those serving very sparsely settled areas having little financial resources and unable to remain in existence without receiving very low cost Government loans.

(2) A new federal revolving loan fund should be created. It would make 50-year loans to cooperatives at an interest rate equal to the average cost to the Government on its total borrowings over the past 20 years (the rate would be between 3-4 percent at present). Loans from this fund would be chiefly for cooperatives having substantial resources of their own and a strong financial position, would not be subject to the existing restrictions on the size of generating facilities that could be built with Government-loaned money and would be used primarily to permit "generating and transmission" cooperatives to build their own, large-scale generating facilities. The NRECA said this loan fund should be financed by channeling into it repayments by cooperatives on loans made under the existing 2-percent program. (Note: Repayments in recent years of previously made REA loans have averaged about $250 million a year plus interest. A total of $3.2 billion in REA loans was outstanding on June 30, 1965, and all of this presumably could eventually become available for the new loan fund. At present, REA loan repayments simply go into the Treasury.)

(3) Some method of channeling private investment funds into loans to cooperatives should be found. One way would be to set up an REA-administered Federal Bank for Rural Electric Systems patterned on the Farm Credit Administration banking system. The Bank, to be funded by the sale of stock to the Government ($500 million perhaps) and to borrowers, and by borrowings in the commercial money market, would make loans to cooperatives. A federal loan-insurance system whereby the Federal Government would insure commercial lenders against loss or default on loans made to cooperatives was also suggested. The rate would be similar to the commercial cost of money.

Private Power Comment. President Robert T. Person of the Edison Electric Institute, principal private power spokesman, said, "One of the NRECA proposals involves the use of Government borrowings at the cost of money to Government... While this is better than the 2-percent rate, it is still less than what people want for the use of their money when it is invested through the free market in the electric power business." He said nearly all needs for rural power had been met, and "providing below-cost money and freedom from taxes to Co-ops to build generating plants and transmission facilities is wasteful and unnecessary."

NORTHEAST BLACKOUT

A massive Northeastern electric power failure Nov. 9-10 led President Johnson Nov. 9 to request an emergency investigation by the Federal Power Commission. Congressional committees also began inquiries.

The blackout, the worst in the nation's history, began at 5:16 p.m. Nov. 9 and lasted from a few minutes in some areas to more than half a day in others. New York City, the worst-hit area, was totally without electric power in nearly all areas for periods ranging from 8½ to 13½ hours. In all, the blackout covered 80,000 square miles and 30 million people, encompassing all of New York State, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, parts of Vermont and New Hampshire, a substantial portion of the province of Ontario and fringe areas of New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Among the major questions in the FPC and Committee inquiries were: What threat did the power failure pose to services essential to national health, safety and defense? What had caused the Nov. 9 blackout? Did the rapid spread of the power failure throughout the affected states demonstrate that large-scale power grids, such as the one existing for the blacked-out states, were not desirable? (A large-scale power grid is a system of electric power transmission lines tieing large areas into a single interconnected power system, so that, for example, it is possible to transmit power generated at Niagara Falls to New York City, New England and points along the way, and vice versa.)

FPC REPORT

Although some of these questions had not been answered definitively by the end of 1965, the FPC, in a Dec. 6 report to President Johnson following its emergency investigation, was able to provide at least tentative answers to most of them. The Dec. 6 report did not include any recommendations for legislation (although it did include recommendations for actions by power companies themselves), but FPC Chairman Joseph C. Swidler said at a press conference that the FPC was continuing a broader-scale, in-depth investigation and might make legislative proposals later.

Conclusions of the Dec. 6 report:

The blackout had seriously affected essential public services. Transportation in many areas had been stopped through lack of street lighting at night, or because the transportation itself depended on electricity. New York City's subways had stopped altogether, stranding 600,000 persons underground and at stations. Lights went out and machines stopped working in homes, offices and factories. Most hospitals had been able to get along adequately with their own standby power (e.g. -- emergency generators in the hospital basement), but in New York City, less than half the 150 hospitals had adequate standby power. Some water and sewage systems depending on electricity for pumping had been impaired. All television stations had ceased operating.

However, most radio stations, the FPC said, had continued to broadcast using some form of standby power. Moreover, defense installations had hardly been impaired at all, since most had their own power and communications systems, or standby power available. The Strategic Air Command, National Warning System and North American Air Defense had maintained their communications and were not impaired.

There was no evidence that sabotage had caused the blackout, as some had feared. The power failure had been caused by a faulty electric switch at the Ontario Hydro-electric Power Commission's Sir Adam Beck hydro-electric generating plant on the Niagara River. The initial failure of the switch had caused a series of failures and overloads which had eventually knocked out all the other power systems in the affected states, which were tied together in a partially integrated grid called "CANUSE" (Canada-U.S. East).

The FPC traced the widening course of blackout as follows: the faulty switch at the Beck plant at Niagara Falls caused the shutdown of a transmission line which was carrying power from the plant to Toronto. The power from that shut-down line then automatically shifted to four other lines carrying power from the Beck plant to Toronto. This additional load proved too much for the four lines, and they were cut off by automatic shut-off devices set to prevent overloads which might cause damage or hazards.

When this occurred, the power being generated at the Beck plant automatically shifted direction, and, together with power being generated at the Niagara Falls plant of the New York State Power Authority which had also been flowing to the Toronto area, began moving southward and eastward over transmission lines to central New York and points south and east. The Beck plant and the New York State Power Authority plant together "constitute the largest concentration of generating capacity in North America." When the entire supply of power from this area began flowing into the central New York area (instead of part of it going to Toronto), the load proved too much for transmission lines in central New York, and many of these lines automatically were shut down by switches designed to prevent damage from overloads. For the same reasons, similar shutdowns occurred in the lines leading further east (to New England) and south (to New York City).

The result of these shutdowns was that many of the local power systems in New England and New York City -- which normally depended on receiving some power from the Niagara area (though not all the available Niagara power) to supplement their own locally generated supplies -- now found themselves receiving no power from the Niagara area, leaving them badly undersupplied. In such a situation, the local generating plants will normally step up their own production automatically to make up for the loss; and reserve generating capacity will be put into use. However, if the under supply is too great, the turbines at the plants will begin spinning faster and faster in order to try to make up for the undersupply; and at a certain point, they will be shut down by automatic cut-off devices in order to prevent permanent damage which can be caused by excessive turbine spinning. That occurred in New York City. Similar cutoffs occurred elsewhere. The over-all result was the massive blackout.

The FPC said the initial difficulties had been compounded by the fact that in a grid system, whenever one area is short of power, it automatically begins to pick up power from other areas. In this particular case, at the very time when New York City could no longer obtain power from the Niagara Falls area to supplement its own local generation, several other areas which had also lost their supply of Niagara power began to automatically call for power from New York City, thus substantially increasing the strain on the turbines in New York and hastening the moment when they were cut off to prevent damage. Had the New York City power system been able to cut itself off in time from these out-of-area drains, it possibly would have been able to continue in operation and supply only itself; but it was unable to do so, the FPC said.

The FPC said it had taken a long time to restart service in many areas because it was necessary, in restarting, first to cut off a local area from the rest of the grid system to make sure that when it resumed generation, it would not be subject to the kind of massive drains described directly above. It was also necessary to check all switches, circuit breakers and relays to make sure they were working properly; to allow steam-electric generating plants time enough to warm up; and, in some cases, to find extra, standby sources of power (batteries, small generators) to get the major generating plants started.

The FPC said the initial failure at the Adam Beck plant was able to spread so quickly and so far because the CANUSE grid system was not really a fully integrated, fully coordinated grid system. It did not have heavy enough transmission capacity at all necessary points to handle extra-heavy power loads that might result from a relay failure such as occurred at Adam Beck; it did not have enough adequate reserve generating units, so that, when an extra strain was placed on generators in one area to make up for losses of power caused by a plant shutdown elsewhere, the turbines would not become overloaded and automatically shut off; it did not have adequate equipment and communications to cut off an entire area like New York City in order to prevent it from suffering massive drains on its capacity from outside the area which might cause its turbines to cut off automatically. The Commission said the chances of future blackouts could be greatly reduced by improving grid integration and, particularly, by adding some of the features mentioned above as lacking.

The FPC stated very strongly that it did not believe the blackout had demonstrated that large-scale and regional power grids were undesirable. Concededly, the initial relay switch failure at the Sir Adam Beck plant at Niagara Falls would not have affected the power systems in New England, New York City and other New York State communities had not all these systems been linked together in a regional grid. But the Commission said it was not necessary to give up the efficiencies of service and the lower electricity costs made possible by large-scale grids in order to forestall future regional blackouts; the real problem was, as indicated above, that the CANUSE grid system was not really a fully integrated grid, but only partially integrated, lacking some of the equipment and coordinating devices which any fully integrated grid system should possess and which substantially reduced the likelihood of any massive power failures like that of Nov. 9.

The Commission pointed out that in January 1964 the Tennessee Valley Authority had suffered a technical problem which could have caused a large-scale blackout, but because the TVA was a fully integrated system, no blackout had occurred.

The Commission said that fully integrated power grids would not only provide generally better electric service at lower costs, but would have adequate transmission capacity for emergencies, good reserve generating capacity, enough supplementary power to get major generating plants started rapidly when a shutdown occurred, the proper types of coordinating mechanisms for emergencies, and would be quite safe against large-scale blackouts. (Note: The FPC in recent years had been a strong advocate of grids; see 1964 Almanac p. 495.)

Specific Recommendations. The FPC report made the following specific recommendations for actions by power companies to help prevent power failures: (1) reexamination by all utilities, "individually and collectively," of the "over-all design and operation of their power systems"; (2) closer working relationships between Canadian and U.S. power operators and between governmental organizations of the two countries; (3) an "acceleration of the present trend toward stronger transmission networks within each (power) system and stronger interconnections between systems"; (4) closer coordination of the planning and operation of the systems, through establishment of unified planning and operating groups with adequate responsibility "to assure the performance of those functions which require close intersystem coordination"; (5) additional studies of the stability of the systems under emergency conditions; (6) establishment of procedures for frequent checks of relay settings controlling major facilities; (7) a review of the reserve margins in transmission and generating capacity; (8) heavy weighting to service reliability factors, as opposed to economic factors, in designing power systems; (9) due consideration for "the factor of quick responsiveness in the event of emergency" in the evaluation of alternative generating projects; (10) studies on an industry-wide and utility-by-utility basis of "the adequacy of automatic equipment, communication facilities, recording facilities and operating procedures in the dispatching and control centers and in power plants during emergency conditions"; (11) consideration by utilities of load shedding -- cutting off power -- as well as other measures, as part of their emergency procedures; (12) a "thorough review of training procedures for emergencies."

Additional recommendations dealt with the need for auxiliary power systems and other precautions in case of emergency. These included (1) additional auxiliary power supplies necessary to "limit the scope of a failure"; (2) arrangements for auxiliary supplies provided by civilian services unable to "tolerate any interruption"; (3) where installation of a full auxiliary power supply was not feasible, provision for "a degree of protection to the public while the power supply is cut off" (e.g. lighting facilities for subways, if it was impossible to provide an alternative power supply for train operations); (4) provision of mechanical cranks for elevators; (5) auxiliary power sources for communication facilities.

CONGRESSIONAL ACTIONS

House. The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee set up a Special Subcommittee to Investigate Electric Power Failures. Named as members were Rep. Walter Rogers (D Texas), chairman; Fred B. Rooney (D Pa.); John M. Murphy (D N.Y.); James T. Broyhill (R N.C.); and James Harvey (R Mich.). The subcommittee held hearings Dec. 15, 1965, and Feb. 24-25, 1966.

Senate. The Senate Commerce Committee March 15, 1966, issued an interim report, subsequently printed March 22 as S Rept 1079, entitled "Responses to Inquiries About the Northeast Power Failure." It contained letters and statements from public agencies and power companies which, in general, confirmed the position of the FPC in its Dec. 6, 1965, report, that while the Northeast blackout had not impaired defense agencies and installations, it had caused serious shutdowns of transportation, factories, offices and other facilities.

AEC POWERLINES

HR 8856 -- Reported by the Joint Atomic Energy Committee (H Rept 567, S Rept 390) June 30, 1965.

- Rejected by a 216-139 roll call of the House July 12 when considered under suspension of the rules procedure, requiring a two-thirds vote for passage. (See p. 978)
- Passed by a 275-125 roll call of the House July 29. (See p. 984)
- Passed by voice vote of the Senate Aug. 10.

PL 89-135 -- Signed into law Aug. 24.

Congress in 1965 passed a bill (HR 8856) to make clear that the Atomic Energy Commission was not subject to local and state government laws, regulations or authority when carrying out the functions assigned to it by federal law, such as constructing, contracting for and operating nuclear facilities for defense, research and related federal purposes.

The immediate effect of the bill was to block attempts by two local government units in California to prevent construction of an extra-high-voltage overhead electric power transmission line to supply electricity to the AEC's Stanford linear accelerator. The two local agencies had objected to the overhead line as unsightly, preferring that the AEC arrange for construction of a more costly underground transmission line. They had refused to grant zoning for the overhead line. When the Federal Government brought suit to compel the granting of an easement for construction of the overhead line, the refusal of the California communities had been upheld by a federal appeals court on grounds that a provision of the Atomic Energy Amendments of 1954 made the AEC subject to state and local laws and regulations in matters of this type, despite the doctrine of federal supremacy which ordinarily would have applied.

HR 8856 revised the 1954 provision to make it clear that the AEC was not subject to the laws and regulations of state and local government units; it could, for example, obtain federal court condemnation orders, regardless of local government opposition, in order to provide itself with land needed for the construction of AEC installations. The bill thus had the simultaneous effect of overturning the appeals court's general interpretation of the disputed provision and of destroying the legal basis for the efforts of the two California local government units to prevent construction of the overhead powerline for the Stanford accelerator. Proponents of the bill said that, had the appeals court's ruling been allowed to stand, any county or city government would have been able to delay or prevent AEC activities of all types and thereby make it impossible for the AEC to carry out its responsibilities.

Natural Beauty Issue. Much of the opposition to the AEC-supported bill centered on the effect of overhead powerlines on environmental beauty. Critics of the bill said that despite a growing recognition that natural beauty could be enhanced by building underground lines (see the President's Natural Beauty Message, p. 1383), the bill allowed a federal agency simply to step in and force ugly overhead lines on a protesting community.

Johnson Remarks. Signing HR 8856 Aug. 24, President Johnson said it was "essential" that the AEC be able to work free from state and local jurisdiction, but natural beauty also had high priority and federal agencies, whenever possible, should adapt to local needs. Mr. Johnson endorsed the recommendations of a study on the Stanford matter made at his request by Laurance S. Rockefeller, as follows:

(1) The AEC would build the overhead line to meet the initial power needs of the Stanford accelerator; (2) the town of Woodside (one of those involved in the dispute) should be requested to use any funds earmarked for undergrounding of the accelerator transmission line to bury existing community distribution lines; (3) an accelerated federal research program on underground transmission should be started (the President said he had ordered this done); (4) in five to seven years, when more power was needed for Stanford, the AEC should replace the current overhead line with an underground line, provided the local area had made efforts to bury its own distribution lines.

PROVISIONS -- See Background, below.

Congressional Action

BACKGROUND. Congress in 1961 authorized construction of the AEC's 10,000-foot, $114-million linear accelerator on the campus of Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif. (1961 Almanac p. 426) To obtain the large amounts of electric power needed for the accelerator, the AEC contracted with the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. for the latter to build a $1-million, 5.3-mile, 220,000-volt overhead transmission line to bring power to the Stanford site. However, the town of Woodside and the county of San Mateo, Calif., refused to grant land-use permits for the transmission line, which was to run through the two areas. They preferred that an underground line be built to avoid unsightliness. PG&E and the AEC said an underground line would cost $5.4 million and take 12-18 months longer to build. Consequently, the Justice Department, acting under powers granted by Congress to condemn land for AEC purposes, brought a condemnation suit in federal court to obtain easements permitting construction of the overhead line despite the opposition of the town and county governments.

The easements were granted by a federal district court. But on May 20, 1965, the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals overturned the lower court and denied the easements. The circuit court conceded that the AEC (like other federal agencies) would normally have the power to condemn land despite local government opposition and to otherwise supersede local and state laws -- as a result of the constitutional provision making federal law the supreme law of the land -- when carrying out specific responsibilities like building nuclear plants, establishing research facilities, etc.

But the court agreed with the arguments of the Woodside and San Mateo County lawyers that Congress in 1954, in enacting Section 271 of the Atomic Energy Act, had, in effect, voluntarily placed the AEC under the jurisdiction of local and state governments for various purposes connected with electric power, including zoning, easements and so forth. Section 271 read: "Nothing in this act shall be construed to affect the authority or regulations of any federal, state or local agency with respect to the generation, sale or transmission of electric power."

The AEC and other Administration spokesmen said that the appeals court's interpretation was mistaken. Section 271, they said, was intended to apply primarily to powers exercised by other federal, state and local agencies over private firms and non-federal entities operating nuclear-electric power plants for their own purposes (e.g. -- commercial sale of power) under AEC licenses. The section was not intended, they said, to subject the AEC to the jurisdiction of such agencies -- even when the AEC was arranging to obtain electricity for an installation -- when the AEC was carrying out functions assigned to it by law -- particularly not when the AEC was constructing, contracting for or operating nuclear installations for its own use for defense, research and related purposes.

HR 8856 established the AEC's interpretation as the law, overturning the appeals court's interpretation. As enacted, HR 8856 added to Section 271 the language underlined below:

"Nothing in this act shall be construed to affect the authority or regulations of any federal, state or local agency with respect to the generation, sale or transmission of electric power produced through the use of nuclear facilities licensed by the Commission: Provided, That this section shall not be deemed to confer upon any federal, state or local agency any authority to regulate, control, or restrict any activities of the Commission."

COMMITTEE ACTION. The Joint Atomic Energy Committee June 30 reported identical bills (HR 8856 -- H Rept 567; S 2103 -- S Rept 390).

HOUSE REJECTS BILL. The House July 12 rejected HR 8856 by a 216-139 roll call; the bill was considered under suspension of the rules procedure, requiring a two-thirds majority for passage, and it fell 21 votes short. (For voting, see chart p. 978)

Rep. Chet Holifield (D Calif.), chairman of the Joint Committee, argued that if the court interpretation of Section 271 were applied generally to AEC powers, "major adverse consequences throughout the entire range and scope of all of the AEC's programs could result." He said the proposed line crossed the city of Woodside, Calif., a major opponent of the project, for a distance of three-tenths of a mile, that three-pole structures would be placed in that city, that the poles were designed to be ornamental and that Woodside already had 2,488 wooden poles within its limits.

Opposition on the floor came from Reps. J. Arthur Younger (R Calif.), who represented San Mateo County, Charles S. Gubser (R Calif.), Phillip Burton (D Calif.) and Richard L. Ottinger (D N.Y.). They said that the suit had not been settled by the Supreme Court, that the power line would be unsightly, that the AEC was in conflict with the President's program to beautify the nation and that defeat of the bill would demonstrate the importance Congress attached to building future power lines underground.

HOUSE PASSES BILL. The House July 29 considered HR 8856 again, under regular procedures not requiring a two-thirds vote. This time it passed the bill by a 275-125 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 984)

Rep. Thomas L. Ashley (D Ohio) said HR 8856 would discourage community natural beauty programs because the bill insisted "that they retreat before a federal agency which seeks unashamedly to despoil the landscape by answering the functional requirements of power transmission in the ugliest way possible."

SENATE PASSES BILL. The Senate passed HR 8856 by voice vote Aug. 10, without amendments. Before passage, the Senate rejected by voice vote an amendment by Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) to provide that nothing in Section 271 should affect local prohibitions of overhead powerlines, unless the AEC held such prohibitions not in the public interest.

NUCLEAR INDEMNITIES

The House Sept. 16 passed by a 338-30 roll-call vote and cleared for the President a bill (S 2042) providing for gradual lowering of federal indemnification guarantees of private nuclear reactors and extending the Price-Anderson Act for 10 years. The Senate Aug. 31 had passed the bill by voice vote. (For voting see chart p. 1004)

The President signed S 2042 Sept. 29 (PL 89-210).

S 2042 amended the Price-Anderson Act to cover the lifetimes of nuclear reactors licensed before Aug. 1, 1977, instead of before the current date of Aug. 1, 1967. It also altered the formula on which federal liability was based.

That liability was accepted by the Government in 1957 when the Price-Anderson Act added Section 170 to the Atomic Energy Act of 1954. Section 170 provided that the Federal Government would pay up to $500 million in indemnities for damage claims arising from a nuclear accident at private atomic energy facilities licensed by the Atomic Energy Commission. The federal indemnity was over and above commercial insurance required of the licensees which was available from insurance pools to an amount of $60 million.

The purpose of the legislation, named for its sponsors, Rep. Melvin Price (D Ill.) and Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D N.M.), was to promote the growth of the private atomic energy industry, especially in the production of electricity, by shifting to the Government much of the risk of liability for catastrophic nuclear accidents. It was assumed that the risk of major incidents was small, if not minute, but even the theoretical possibility of catastrophe combined with the unavailability of heavy insurance was said to be a deterrent to expansion of the industry. (1957 Almanac p. 587)

S 2042 maintained the theory of federal indemnification and required AEC licensees to continue to carry as much commercial insurance as was available, an amount still about $60 million per facility. But S 2042 discarded the strict federal liability of $500 million and substituted a sliding scale of limited liability. Under the S 2042 formula, the Government liability was limited to the difference between the amount of commercial insurance available and $560 million. Currently that difference was $500 million, but as the amount of available commercial insurance rose, the federal liability was to gradually diminish. S 2042 also limited all liability for such nuclear incidents to $560 million.

BACKGROUND -- The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy Aug. 26 unanimously reported identical bills (S 2042, S Rept 650; HR 8496, H Rept 883) which were introduced May 26 by Anderson and Price.

At hearings June 22 through 24, the Committee heard representatives of the private atomic energy industry and of the insurance pools support the bills. Insurance spokesmen predicted that the amount of available commercial insurance would rise to $74 million about Jan. 1, 1966, and by 1975 might reach $100 million per nuclear reactor.

Bitter opposition to the legislation came from representatives of the National Coal Association, the National Coal Policy Conference, Inc. and the United Mine Workers. They condemned continuation of the Price-Anderson Act principle as giving unfair advantage to the atomic energy industry as it neared competition with fossil fuels in the cost of producing electricity.

HIGH-SPEED GROUND TRANSPORTATION RESEARCH

S 1588 -- Reported by Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 497) July 21, 1965.

● Passed by the Senate by voice vote July 23.

HR 5863 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 845) Aug. 23.

S 1588 -- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote Sept. 2 after HR 5863 was passed by a 317-24 roll-call vote. (See p. 996)

● Conference report (H Rept 1017) agreed to by voice votes of the House Sept. 17 and the Senate Sept. 20.

PL 89-220 -- Signed into law Sept. 30.

Congress in 1965 passed an Administration bill (S 1588) authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to conduct a three-year $90 million research, development, and demonstration program in high-speed ground transportation. There was substantial support for the bill and virtually no opposition to it.

The purpose of the legislation, which was requested by President Johnson, was to authorize a federal program to determine whether high-speed ground transportation could be made convenient, economical and attractive and meet the increasing transportation requirements of the rapidly expanding urban areas of the United States.

The legislation authorized three basic activities:

- Research into and development of different forms of high-speed ground transportation;
- Demonstration projects to test new developments and to learn public response to improved ground transportation;
- A program to improve the collection and availability of transportation statistics.

The final bill, embodying basically all that the President had proposed, was intended to spur research and development that not only would improve the existing forms of rapid ground transportation for large numbers of people, but also possibly lead to entirely new forms. The legislation was an attempt to determine if improved intercity noncommuter passenger service was economically viable and could help handle existing and future transportation needs.

Supporters of the legislation emphasized that it was intended primarily to determine how public transportation funds could be most effectively spent in the future. It did not authorize new federally financed transportation between cities.

The legislation did not specify where the demonstration projects would be conducted. The Commerce Department planned to carry out the first of these projects in the Northeast Corridor of the United States, the 225-mile stretch running from Maine to Virginia. These demonstrations were to be high-speed trains between New York and Washington and Boston and Providence, running over existing but improved track at speeds of between 125 to 150 miles per hour. The first trains were expected to be in operation by late 1966. (See next page)

Government officials said that for a relatively small investment of funds by the Government and the railroads, rail service in the Corridor could be greatly improved in comfort and convenience, and in travel time between areas on the route. The Pennsylvania Railroad had agreed to spend about $10 million to improve its track and roadbed in the Corridor. In the legislative history of the bill, the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee said the demonstrations were intended only as tests of the market for transportation "and will not involve the Federal Government in any commitment to furnish or subsidize intercity rail or other passenger service, or the plants and equipment of common carriers."

The final bill authorized appropriations of $20 million in fiscal 1966 and $35 million in each of fiscal 1967 and 1968. The Administration requested a supplemental appropriation of the full $20 million authorized for fiscal 1966 and Congress, in a general supplemental appropriations bill (HR 11588 -- PL 89-309) enacted at the end of the session, granted $18,250,000. (See p. 182)

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, S 1588:

Authorized the Secretary of Commerce to undertake research and development in high-speed ground transportation, including -- but not limited to -- components such as materials, aerodynamics, vehicle propulsion, vehicle control, communications and guideways.

Authorized demonstration projects to aid in development of "more efficient and economical" intercity transportation; required that projects be designed to measure such factors as "public response to new equipment, higher speeds, variations in fares, improved comfort and convenience and more frequent service." Required private industry to help pay for the projects to the "maximum extent practicable" as determined by the Secretary.

Specified that the legislation would not limit research and development or demonstrations to "any particular mode" of high-speed ground transportation. (In the legislative history of the legislation, but not in the provisions of the bill, the term "high-speed ground transportation" was defined to mean the movement of people and goods, by land, on special purpose rights-of-way, along which vehicles would be guided. It covered existing types of transportation, such as rail and motor, as well as types under development or developed later.)

Authorized the Secretary to undertake an improved program for the collection of transportation statistics, data, and related information.

Established in the Department of Commerce an Advisory Committee to consist of seven members appointed by the Secretary to advise the Secretary in matters relating to research and development or demonstrations and other policy matters under the Act.

Provided for the protection of the interests of employees of any common carriers affected by demonstration projects. Stipulated that such protective arrangements ensure: "(1) the preservation of rights, privileges, and benefits (including continuation of pension rights and benefits) to such employees under existing collective bargaining agreements, or otherwise; (2) the continuation of collective-bargaining rights; (3) the protection of those employees against a worsening of their employment positions as a result of such demonstration; (4) assurances of priority of reemployment of employees terminated or laid off as a result of such demonstration; and (5) paid training or retraining programs." (Continued on next page)

Higher Transportation R&D Outlays To Begin in Northeast

Industry and Government transportation experts generally agreed that rapid ground travel was the most poorly developed part of the national transportation system. Mr. Johnson, on signing the research and development legislation (PL 89-220), said that the nation had achieved flight faster than sound and had sent television cameras into space to orbit Mars, but still had "the same tired and inadequate mass transportation between our towns and cities that we had 30 years ago."

Lagging Development. Government-compiled figures indicated that both industry and federal agencies were giving relatively little attention to existing and future intercity ground transportation problems. Although suppliers of transportation equipment of all types spent over $1 billion on research and development annually from 1960 to 1962, railroad equipment suppliers accounted for less than 2 percent of this amount. During the same period, railroads accounted for about 44 percent of all ton-miles but spent only about $6 million annually on research and development -- about 10 percent of the total spent by all common carriers.

Moreover, aircraft and aircraft parts manufacturers devoted 24 percent of sales to R&D in 1961, according to the Commerce Department, but railroads put out less than 2 percent of sales for the same purpose.

Federal R&D spending for civilian needs also was unbalanced. In fiscal 1963, $275 million was spent for aviation, $24 million for highways, $15 million for water and $7 million for rail with much of the expenditures for the last item going for local mass transportation demonstration purposes.

Nature of Intercity Transportation. Government officials said that Mr. Johnson's 1965 proposals would not duplicate activities authorized by Congress in 1964 to assist cities in development of mass transportation facilities. They said that urban mass transportation was primarily a service to large numbers of regular riders whose trips averaged 30 minutes or less and rarely exceeded an hour. The main purpose was usually to get to work, school, stores or a similar destination with stops conveniently located at short distances. Speeds on the mass transit lines were estimated at a maximum of 80 miles per hour.

Intercity transportation, Government officials said, involved longer distances in which the bulk of the passenger travel was not home to work and return. Alan S. Boyd, Under Secretary of Commerce for Transportation, July 13 said intercity travel, such as between Boston and Providence, "constitutes movement between two discrete metropolitan areas having important economic, commercial and cultural relationships. In that respect, it differs from commuter service, which is generally between a satellite area and a central metropolitan area." In addition, speeds would be in excess of 125 mph.

But officials noted that the two types of transportation systems had to intermix if the over-all transportation complex was to function efficiently. Basic technical developments for one type of system could benefit the other type.

Intercity Transportation Proposals. Future intercity transportation might be improved by better use of airspace as well as ground systems. Officials noted that vertical takeoff and landing aircraft, with their flexibility, were believed to have considerable potential for this type of service. Robert A. Nelson, director of the Commerce Department's transportation research staff, Oct. 27 noted that helicopter technology had advanced markedly in recent years. He said that if "very high" maintenance costs can be reduced, "helicopters will become extremely competitive for intercity movements." Other types of vertical takeoff and landing aircraft were being developed but were not as far along as helicopters.

Activities under PL 89-220, however, were to be directed at ground transportation. Various proposals had been made. One suggestion, with numerous variations, was to replace the conventional wheel suspension with a type of air suspension. Another proposal was for a system that had cars operating on a guideway for part of a run and under their own power on pavements for another part. There also were suggestions for systems using the automobile. An automated highway might take passenger cars at assembly points in metropolitan areas and move them at high speeds to other points without the driver retaining control. Another proposal suggested having cars driven aboard a wide-gauge railroad car (operating on almost an 18-foot gauge) and transported at speeds of 175 mph or more to the destination point where the owner then would have the vehicle available for his use. The owner would travel on the train in comfortable lounge cars. There also were proposals for cars which traveled in tubes underground.

Northeast Corridor Demonstration. The first projects under PL 89-220 were planned for the Northeast Corridor of the United States, the congested area stretching between Maine and Virginia. Projects in this area, which were to be operated over the existing rail lines of the New Haven and Pennsylvania Railroads, were intended to test high-speed ground transportation and the public's response to improved service.

Near the end of 1966, the two railroads were expected to put new passenger equipment into service. The equipment was expected to operate at speeds up to 125 mph and reduce travel time between New York and Washington (about 225 miles) to under 3 hours compared to the 3½ to 4 hours or longer currently required. The Pennsylvania Railroad was expected to acquire some 50 new individually motored, electrically powered cars. Similar demonstrations were expected to be conducted between Providence, R.I., and Boston, Mass. The New Haven line between these cities also was expected to experiment with the use of gas turbine engines.

Authorized the Secretary to "lease, purchase, develop, test, and evaluate new facilities, equipment, techniques, and methods" necessary to carry out the purposes of the legislation. Prohibited the Secretary from acquiring any interest in a railroad.

Authorized the Secretary to enter into agreements or contracts with "public or private agencies, institutions, corporations, and individuals." Required that contracts be geographically distributed throughout the United States "to the maximum extent practicable."

Directed the Secretary to consult and cooperate with federal, state, and local agencies, and private industry in carrying out the legislation.

Required the Secretary to report at least once a year to the President and Congress on the results of the research and development program and the demonstration projects and to make recommendations for improved transportation systems.

Authorized appropriations to implement the legislation as follows: $20 million in fiscal year 1966 and $35 million in each of the fiscal years 1967 and 1968.

Set an expiration date of June 30, 1969, for the bill's provisions except for the information-collection service which would continue in effect.

Background

REFERENCES -- 1964 Almanac p. 556; 1963 Almanac p. 556; 1962 Almanac p. 561; 1961 Almanac p. 200.

Postwar population shifts, bringing large numbers of people to metropolitan areas, created major problems of movement within the urban centers. The population shifts accelerated during the two decades following World War II, but the trend had been evident for many years. Commerce Department figures showed that during the 50 years between the 1910 and 1960 censuses, the U.S. population increased by 95 percent, from 92 million to 179 million people, while the urban population increased by 198 percent, from 42 million to 125 million, and the rural population increased by only 8 percent, from 50 million to 54 million. In 1910, 46 percent of the population lived in urban areas; in 1960, the figure had risen to 70 percent; and by 1980, it was estimated, the figure would rise to 75 percent of the population.

The increasing populations in certain areas of the nation led also to high population densities. In the Northeast Corridor the population density was 854 persons per square mile in 1965 and density was expected to increase to 1,100 by 1980, according to the Commerce Department. In some areas of the Corridor, 1965 population density exceeded 4,200 per square mile.

Increased use of the automobile as a means of travel in urban and suburban areas, particularly to and from work, accompanied the rise in metropolitan populations. This trend was encouraged by federally supported road building programs and also by a decline in the use of existing railroad passenger facilities. Air travel also increased substantially, providing a major mode of travel within the expanding urban areas. But existing methods of automobile and air travel faced serious practical limitations by the 1960s. In the case of the automobile, the problem resulted from urban traffic congestion and the high cost of road construction in many areas (as well as the considerable time required for travel at normal auto speeds between widely separated points within metropolitan areas). In the case of airplanes, the problem arose because of space limitations at existing airports as flights increased in number and because of the difficulty of obtaining land for new or expanded terminals.

Two major related transportation problems developed in the expanding urban areas of the nation. One was commuter traffic consisting primarily of persons going to and from work on a regular basis and located mostly in particular cities and their immediate metropolitan surroundings. The other type consisted of persons traveling between more distant points within a region, such as between two cities on the East Coast, but usually not on a regular basis. (See preceding page)

Major federal action to reduce commuter problems was authorized in the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964. That legislation authorized a three-year program of federal matching grants to assist states and localities in providing adequate mass transportation in the nation's cities. States and localities could use the funds to assist public or private transit companies in long-range planning and establishment of area-wide urban transit systems. The 1964 legislation, however, was not directed at the intercity travel problems. (1964 Almanac p. 556)

Regional transportation problems existed or were expected to develop in several major regional urban complexes which were coming into existence in different parts of the nation. The best known and the one with the most serious transportation problem by 1965 was the Northeast Corridor between Maine and Virginia. But other areas faced the prospect of similar problems. These areas included Seattle-Tacoma-Portland on the West Coast, the East Coast of Florida, Milwaukee-Chicago-South Bend-Cleveland, San Francisco-Los Angeles and probably a strip on the Gulf Coast. The potential problems of transportation in these areas were believed basically no different from those in the Northeast; the Administration, as a result, viewed the difficulties already being encountered in the Maine to Virginia region as a national problem.

The Northeast's problems had prompted numerous proposals, including legislation, to help make ground travel in that area swifter and easier. Sen. Claiborne Pell (D R.I.) in 1962 and following years proposed legislation permitting the creation of an eight-state public authority to provide high-speed intercity rail service in the Northeast Corridor. President Kennedy in 1962 assigned an interagency task force to study the Northeast's transportation problem. The group concluded that a systematic evaluation of the transportation needs of the area should be made before any sizeable capital investment in solutions. Preliminary work in this area by the Department of Commerce revealed major gaps in information about how people and goods move and about the demand for high-quality intercity rail service.

PRESIDENT'S PROPOSALS

President Johnson March 4 sent Congress draft legislation to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to conduct research and development in high-speed ground transportation. In a letter accompanying the legislation, Mr. Johnson said his proposals "will help us to bring scientific and technical talent to bear on an increasingly important area of transportation not previously subject to intensive, continuing inquiry." He noted that travel along the East Coast between Washington and Boston was expected to increase by 150 to 200 percent between 1960 and 1980. (See text of letter p. 1369)

Mr. Johnson's draft legislation was a short and generally worded bill with few particulars. It authorized the Commerce Secretary to undertake research and development in high-speed ground transportation and in doing so to purchase, lease, develop, test and demonstrate new facilities, equipment, techniques and methods "and conduct such other activities as may be necessary...." It also authorized collection of data and statistics on the subject. The bill contained no expiration date and authorized appropriations of whatever sums were necessary for the projects undertaken under the legislation.

The draft legislation was introduced as HR 5863 and S 1588.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Commerce, Surface Transportation Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 14-16 on S 1588.

TESTIMONY -- June 14 -- Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor stated that current deficiencies in intercity transportation would grow worse with increases in urban population. The important characteristic of high-speed transportation, he said, was "its capability for moving large volumes of passenger and freight traffic, while imposing relatively low requirements for space. Another advantage was its "high reliability under adverse weather conditions." Connor added that demonstration projects to test the market for improved intercity transportation would not "involve the Federal Government in any commitment to furnish or subsidize intercity rail passenger service, or the plants and equipment of the railroads." (See box p. 905 for additional testimony.)

Charles A. Webb, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, suggested that "consideration also should be given to the part that can or should be played by other major modes of surface transportation in a high-speed ground transportation system." He added that the rail demonstration program to be conducted in the Northeast would "use existing facilities and a modern fleet of cars especially designed for high-speed service."

June 15 -- Amory H. Bradford, vice chairman, Regional Plan Association, said research into radically new transportation systems "should receive a lower priority" than experiments with existing facilities "because such systems have not yet been tried and there is little prospect of their becoming operational in less than fifteen to twenty years."

Robert E. Kirby, representing the Westinghouse Electric Corp., also stressed the need to improve existing systems before developing entirely new concepts.

Richard L. Lich, chairman of the Railway Progress Institute, said, "Great care should be taken that undue emphasis of the Department of Commerce program is not placed on the development of some as yet unknown and unproven system concept at the expense of developing the full capability of existing railroad systems."

H. Guyford Stever, president of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, urged that the government assume a "leadership and coordinating role" in the high-speed ground transportation program, stating that if the program were left to the private sector alone, "the attack would take place by one small step at a time and would result in the final solution being postponed for such a long time that society would have had to adjust to the problem in a manner which would minimize free choice rather than maximize it."

Robert M. Jenney, representing the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce, said, "The need for a third transportation dimension is becoming increasingly apparent if we are to achieve mobility. Millions of hours of delay on the highways and both in and over our air terminals is wasting the most priceless resource of our people -- their time."

June 16 -- Stuart T. Saunders, chairman of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said that the Pennsylvania Railroad was prepared to invest as much as the Federal Government in the New York-Washington demonstration project. He estimated the Railroad would spend between $9.5 million and $10 million for improvement of roadbeds.

H. Vance Greenslit, president of Greyhound Lines, Inc., urged that research and development be directed at all aspects of transportation. He said that "demonstration projects aiding rail transportation have already had serious results for bus operations...."

Donald S. Beattle, representing the Railway Labor Executive Association, proposed an amendment to S 1588 to "ameliorate" the adverse effects employees might suffer as a result of improved rail travel.

Bill Reported

ACTION -- The Surface Transportation Subcommittee reported S 1588 to the full Committee July 12 with amendments. The full Committee reported the measure, with the amendments, July 21 (S Rept 497).

The committee amendments added numerous limitations and specific directions which federal officials had to follow in undertaking the transportation research and development. The amendments generally tightened the bill which as submitted by the Administration contained few guidelines or financial limitations; the amendments did not change the basic substance of the legislation. The Committee authorized appropriations of $90 million over fiscal 1966-68 (no amount specified in Administration bill) and set a June 30, 1969, expiration date for the legislation (no date in Administration bill). The Committee also added language to protect the interests of railroad workers.

Committee Views. In its report, the Committee said the proposed legislation was not designed to "benefit or to concentrate solely on one particular kind of transportation. Wholly new kinds of vehicles, guideways, and operational and control systems may evolve from concentrated technological research in high-speed ground transportation. Such results can be foreseen within the scope of present and foreseeable technology. A new high-speed ground transportation system could differ radically from passenger trains and railways as we know them today."

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate July 23 passed S 1588 by voice vote. Prior to passage the Senate accepted by voice vote the committee amendments (see above).

During limited Senate debate Norris Cotton (R N.H.) said that the Administration's draft legislation was a "blank-check bill" with "no guidelines, no dollar limits, no time limits." Norris also said that the studies of the Northeast Corridor, which would be "furthered" by the legislation, would not be limited to transportation between Boston and Washington, but would "encompass the transportation needs of much of Maine and New Hampshire."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Transportation and Aeronautics Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- May 19, 25, June 29-30 on HR 5863. On May 19 various Members of Congress testified and on May 25 Secretary of Commerce Connor delivered essentially the same testimony he later gave before the Senate Commerce Committee (see above and box on this page).

TESTIMONY -- June 29 -- Rep. Henry S. Reuss (D Wis.) proposed an amendment to ensure that equal research and development efforts be applied to intracity transportation systems. He asserted that better urban transportation would bring many advantages. Among them he listed reduced air pollution as people shifted from cars to non-gasoline-burning modes of transport, fewer accidents, and lower travel expenses.

William W. Seifert, assistant dean of engineering, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said that a new high-speed ground transport system "would differ radically from passenger trains and railways as we know them today." He went on to say that "speeds in excess of 200 mph or even 300 mph" would be necessary to meet future transportation needs. Endorsing Reuss' amendment, he argued that before the full benefit of such "mainline speeds" could be "realized," better intracity transportation systems would have to be developed "to minimize the transit time of passengers having a wide range of destinations."

Richard L. Lich, chairman of the Committee on Passenger Traffic, Railway Progress Institute, strongly backed the Administration's proposal for a demonstration high-speed train between Washington and New York or Boston, but warned that "undue emphasis" should not be placed on the development of futuristic designs at the expense of developing the full capability of existing railroad systems.

Charles A. Webb, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, said that in addition to rail transportation, "consideration also should be given to the part that can or should be played by other major modes of surface transportation in a high-speed ground transportation system." He specifically mentioned bus and truck transportation.

June 30 -- Marvin E. Walsh, representing the National Assn. of Motor Bus Owners, stated that research and development in rail transportation alone could have a serious impact on bus transportation. He said that Interstate Commerce Commission figures for 1963 showed 21.9 billion intercity passenger miles traveled by bus as compared with 18.6 billion by rail, and that "preliminary figures for 1964 showed an even greater proportion of surface travel by bus." These figures, Walsh asserted, "indicated the enormous achievements and still greater potential of a mode of passenger transportation which often appears largely overlooked or ignored in our national transportation planning."

ACTION -- The full Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee reported HR 5863 Aug. 23 (H Rept 845) after rewriting the Administration's draft bill. The committee amendments made the bill essentially the same as S 1588 as it passed the Senate. There were a few differences. HR 5863, as reported, contained wording not included in S 1588 to make clear that research and development efforts were not to be limited to "any particular mode" of transportation. HR 5863 also established a seven-member advisory committee to assist the Secretary of Commerce in matters relating to research and development or demonstration; no similar provision was in S 1588. In other differences, HR 5863 specifically prohibited the Government from acquiring any interest in a railroad (this prohibition was intended although not specifically stated under the Senate bill), required federal research and development funds under the law to be geographically distributed throughout the United States as much as possible, and required that new information or techniques resulting from activities under the bill would be readily available to all parts of the transportation and related industries. In the labor-protection section, the House bill specified that employees of any common carrier would be covered if they were affected by any demonstrations carried out by the carrier under the bill. The similar labor-protection section of the Senate bill covered only railroad employees.

Committee Views. The Committee in its report said, "The time has come to see whether passenger traffic on the ground can be made attractive to people; to see whether it is possible to provide facilities that are con-

Research Possibilities Described

During his testimony before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee's Subcommittee on Transportation and Aeronautics on May 25, Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor described how research under the proposed legislation might lead to new transportation methods:

"Our preliminary studies show that new concepts of guided ground transportation may be feasible. As you know, historically, important advancements in applied technology have often resulted from such departures from earlier concepts. For example, powered aircraft did not evolve from improvements in land vehicles, and plastics were not developed by the wood industry, but by chemists looking for answers to quite unrelated problems. Similarly, the atomic bomb was not a development of the explosives industry, but was created by basic research scientists seeking a new source of energy.

* * * *

"The new forms and concepts of high-speed ground transportation which appear to merit investigation in some detail include mass transport of automobiles on rail "ferries," vehicles which are supported in their route-path by a layer of air, and rail-guided and supported systems which differ from the conventional two-rail track structure. Private manufacturing interests here and abroad have done some preliminary development work on these concepts, but a Government contribution to this effort is needed. Private capital is inhibited by the large risks involved in the development of systems which must by and large depend upon public decisions for their adoption. In addition, we need to study basic alternatives applicable to a number of modes of transportation -- such as power source and location of guideways. Thus, the accelerating costs of acquisition and use of surface land, with the parallel decreases in the cost of tunneling, suggest that study of the feasibility of constructing guideways underground is worthwhile. Such guideway locations could solve the problem of access of an intercity system to the core of congested urban areas."

venient and economical and which people will use; to see whether this kind of transportation might relieve air congestion and save on the cost of additional air facilities."

FLOOR ACTION

The House Sept. 2, by a 317-24 roll-call vote, passed HR 5863 as amended by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. The committee amendments had been accepted by voice vote prior to the passage vote. The House subsequently substituted the provisions of HR 5863 as passed for those of S 1588 as passed by the Senate, passed the amended S 1588 by voice vote and sent the bill to conference. (For voting, see chart p. 996)

There was no opposition to HR 5863 during debate. The bill's sponsor and floor manager, Oren Harris (D Ark.), warned that air and highway facilities were becoming inadequate to accommodate growing passenger and traffic needs.

A side issue arose over a provision requiring that "all information, uses, processes, patents, and other developments resulting from any activity" undertaken pursuant to such contracts be made available on "equitable terms" to the transportation industry and its suppliers. Emilio Q. Daddario (D Conn.) said the provision "complicated" the Government's policy regarding patents. He said the Senate Government Operations Committee was investigating this particular subject and cited a Presidential memorandum which he said set forth the Government's patent policy. Harris said the intent of the provision was limited to research and development in the transportation industry.

Conference

The conference report on S 1588 (H Rept 1017) was filed Sept. 16. The conferees accepted most of the House changes in the Senate bill, but dropped the House provision making information, techniques and related data readily available to the transportation and related industries. The conference report said that Senate conferees insisted on deletion of the section because of pending studies of patent policies and because of assurances from the Secretary of Commerce that existing federal patent policy guidelines, established by President Kennedy in 1963, would be followed for activities and developments under the legislation. This meant that contracts entered into under the bill either would permit the Government to take title to resulting patents or would require contractors to license others to use their processes, according to the conference report. The report was adopted by voice votes of the House Sept. 17 and the Senate Sept. 20.

Bill Signed. President Johnson Sept. 30 signed S 1588 into law (PL 89-220). In signing the measure, the President confirmed that Northeast Corridor projects would be underway in 1966. In research and development, he said, "we will be investigating all the new and promising concepts of high-speed ground travel." He said future needs may require "some radical new techniques as yet unknown."

RELATED DEVELOPMENTS

Northeast Passenger Train Hearings. The Senate Commerce Committee held hearings March 2-4 and 10 on four bills to aid passenger train service in the Northeast, particularly on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. The hearings resulted from a Feb. 18 action of the railroad's trustees in petitioning the Interstate Commerce Commission to abandon certain commuter service in the New York area.

The New Haven, which served New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts and carried commuters into both New York and Boston, had operated at a deficit since 1958. It was declared bankrupt and went into receivership in 1961. Reorganization and financial aid from states, counties, villages and the Federal Government failed to solve its financial problems, which arose principally from its commuter and other passenger services. Other railroads in the Northeast faced similar, if less drastic, problems.

Two of the bills, S 348 by Sen. Claiborne Pell (D R.I.) and S 1234 by Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.), created a public interstate authority to operate a rail passenger service. Operating deficits of the service were to be shared among participating states on the basis of commuter mileage in each state. The Federal Government was to guarantee bonds issued by the authority. Javits' bill also authorized the Federal Government to pay up to one-third of the authority's operating losses for two years.

Of the other two bills, S 325 by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff (D Conn.) established a permanent formula for federal assistance to any hard-pressed railroad passenger service, with an authorization of $100 million. S 1289, by Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.), authorized $75 million for a five-year federal grant program to assist the operating and capital costs of any rail passenger service. The federal share was to decline from 100 percent in the first year to 30 percent in the fifth year. No railroad could receive more than $20 million in the first year.

Most persons who testified, including ICC Chairman Charles A. Webb, representatives from the New Haven Railroad Board of Trustees, Connecticut Gov. John N. Dempsey (D), Rhode Island Gov. John H. Chaffee (R) and Massachusetts Gov. John A. Volpe (R) favored some form of federal aid to the New Haven Railroad.

The bills were opposed by Under Secretary of Commerce for Transportation Clarence D. Martin Jr. and New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller (R). Martin told the Committee that there was "unanimous opposition" to the bills by six Government agencies. "The legislation... relies too much on federal activity...without the assurance of state and local or industry participation," he said. The Administration was opposed to the bills, he said, because they provided for "unilateral federal solutions."

Rockefeller opposed creation of multistate compacts or authorities to help the New Haven because they "run counter to the basic constitutional assignment of federal responsibility for interstate commerce." He said he could agree to a plan for federal aid such as that proposed by S 325, the Ribicoff bill.

New Haven Aid. The Housing and Home Finance Agency June 23 approved a $3 million grant to help keep the commuter services of the New Haven Railroad serving New York City. The grant was to help finance a demonstration project, under the terms of the Mass Transportation Act of 1964, to study the basic problems of the New Haven's West End Service.

CONGRESS TERMINATES HELICOPTER SUBSIDY PROGRAM

Congress in 1965 terminated the helicopter subsidy program. The Administration had recommended the termination but opposed efforts made in Congress to cut off the subsidies before the end of the calendar year. The program, which actually provided subsidies to only three helicopter lines, was discontinued Dec. 31, 1965.

The Administration made two separate requests for funds for helicopter subsidies--$942,000 in supplemental appropriations to keep the program going through fiscal 1965 (June 30) and $2.1 million to continue the program through calendar 1965. Congress denied the additional funds for fiscal 1965 and granted only $1.2 million of the other request.

The program had helped to support helicopter commuter, mail and airport transport service between the center sections of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles and local airports and outlying suburbs.

Certain factions in Congress in recent years had sought to eliminate the helicopter subsidy program, arguing that the three subsidized companies would continually require federal financial support and never become self-sufficient and that it was unfair to subsidize only these three lines when 39 other cities also needed the service. In 1965 strong opposition to the program came from Rep. George H. Mahon (D Texas), chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, Rep. Albert Thomas (D Texas) and Sen. William Proxmire (D Wis.).

Supporters of the program, generally those representing areas which benefited from the service and Sen. A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.), chairman of the Aviation Subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee, contended that a system of helicopter transportation would be needed in the future and that the three subsidized lines should be maintained as experiments to prove the value of such transportation.

Background

The Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938 authorized payments by the Post Office to air carriers for transporting mail. These payments amounted to the basic cost of carrying the mail plus a subsidy designed to provide the airline companies with a fair return after they had paid their operating costs. When helicopters began to be used in 1947 to carry mail, they became eligible for the program without the need for additional legislation.

Airmail and subsidy payments were separated in 1953 under President Eisenhower's Reorganization Plan 10. The plan transferred from the Post Office to the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) the responsibility of paying all subsidies to airlines that did not involve expenses for carrying mail. The plan also authorized the CAB to set the rates the Post Office was to pay for airmail transportation. The policy took the form of law in 1958 when Congress included it in the Federal Aviation Act. From fiscal 1954 until the program ended in 1965, the CAB paid $51.1 million in subsidies to the three helicopter firms. (See table)

In recent years, the House Appropriations Committee had sought to cut back the helicopter subsidy program while the Senate Appropriations Committee tried to increase subsidy funds. Conferees, after reaching a compromise figure, in 1964 warned that "this is the last money to be recommended" and asked "the CAB not to include one penny for these three lines in its budget next year."

Helicopter Operators

Estimated Subsidy Accruing - By Carrier
Fiscal Years 1954 - 1966*

(In Thousands)

Fiscal Year	Helicopter Operators
	Chicago	Los Angeles	New York
1954	$ 432	$ 684	$ 1,458
1955	423	816	1,417
1956	444	848	1,443
1957	909	941	1,921
1958	1,425	942	2,052
1959	1,644	935	2,281
1960	1,662	1,041	2,227
1961	1,887	1,074	2,577
1962	1,784	1,468	2,529
1963	1,178	1,803	2,019
1964	800	1,600	1,900
1965	625	1,249	1,484
1966*	385	785	--
Total	$13,598	$14,186	$23,308

* Through Dec. 31, 1965, when the subsidy program was discontinued.

SOURCE: CIVIL AERONAUTICS BOARD, SUBSIDY DIVISION

1965 Action

Fiscal 1965 Second Supplemental. The Johnson Administration and the CAB requested $942,000 in additional funds to carry the subsidy program through June 30, 1965. (A CAB official told Congressional Quarterly that fiscal 1965 subsidy funds had been exhausted by April 12.) The House denied the entire request, which was part of the fiscal 1965 second supplemental appropriations bill (HR 7091), but the Senate restored the funds. During House consideration of the conference report (H Rept 270), House Appropriations Committee Chairman Mahon offered a motion that the House insist on its deletion of the funds. Eugene J. Keogh (D N.Y.) immediately offered a preferential motion that the House concur in the Senate's provision of the funds. The Keogh motion was rejected, first on a 62-77 standing vote and then on a 144-228 roll call. The Mahon motion was then adopted by voice vote, and the funds were not included in the final bill. (For roll call on Keogh motion, see chart p. 956; for story on the second supplemental bill for fiscal 1965, see p. 227.)

Independent Offices Appropriations. In considering the fiscal 1966 independent offices appropriations bill (HR 7997), the House Appropriations Committee refused to approve the $2.1 million requested by the Administration to carry the program through Dec. 31, 1965, and the House rejected, by a 32-50 standing vote, a Keogh amendment to restore the funds. The Senate, however, included $785,000 for the Los Angeles firm and $385,000 for the Chicago line. The Senate provisions were retained in the conference report (H Rept 727) and included in the final bill, which also provided a Dec. 31, 1965, cutoff date for all helicopter subsidies. (For story on independent office funds, see p. 154.)

ILLEGAL TRANSPORTATION

HR 5401 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 253) April 22, 1965.

- Passed, amended, by the House by voice vote May 6.

S 1727 -- Reported by Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 387) June 30.

HR 5401 -- Passed, amended, by the Senate by voice vote July 9.

- Conference report (H Rept 810) agreed to by voice votes of the Senate Aug. 18 and the House Aug. 19.

PL 89-170 -- Signed into law Sept. 6.

Congress in 1965 enacted a non-controversial Administration-backed bill (HR 5401) to, among other things, strengthen the Interstate Commerce Act to combat unlawful operations by motor carriers (trucks and buses). Final action on the measure concluded several years of Congressional consideration of the legislation, which initially included more controversial provisions.

HR 5401 was primarily designed to give the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC), states and shippers more effective tools for coping with illegal for-hire trucking -- that is, the transportation of certain commodities in interstate commerce by motor carriers without proper ICC authority. Transportation experts estimated that illegal for-hire business amounted to between $500 million and $5 billion a year, and that it had been a principal factor in what was described in debate as the "erosion" of the ICC-regulated carriers' share of total transport volume.

In its major provisions, the bill permitted the ICC to enter into cooperative agreements with states to enforce transportation laws; authorized the ICC, in cooperation with the National Assn. of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners, within five years to establish uniform state registration standards for motor carriers; extended and increased civil forfeiture penalties for unlawful motor carrier operations; provided that persons injured by an illegal carrier operation could seek a court injunction to prevent further violations; permitted shippers to recover reparations from motor carriers and freight forwarders charging unlawfully high rates; and permitted the ICC or carriers to take action against water carriers who failed to provide transportation.

BACKGROUND -- Legislative proposals similar to those embodied in HR 5401 were endorsed by President Kennedy in 1962 and 1963 and by President Johnson in 1964, and were given extensive hearings in both the House and Senate in 1962 and 1963. A bill (S 2560) covering several of the same provisions was passed by the Senate in 1962, but received no House action. In 1964, several of the provisions were included with highly controversial rate de-regulation provisions in a bill (HR 9903) which was reported by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. Heavy lobbying for and against the bill prevented enactment. (1962 Almanac p. 587; 1963 Almanac p. 573; 1964 Almanac p. 551)

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 5401 amended the Interstate Commerce Act as follows:

Authorized the ICC to enter into cooperative agreements with the states to enforce state and federal economic and safety laws and regulations concerning highway transportation. (Under existing law, the ICC was authorized to avail itself of the services, records and facilities of state authorities to enforce federal laws, but was not permitted to reciprocate with ICC services, records and facilities to enforce state laws.)

Provided that state requirements that motor carriers register their ICC-approved certificates of public convenience and necessity or permits (operating certificates) "shall not constitute an undue burden on interstate commerce" if the registrations conformed to standards which were set by the National Assn. of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners (NARUC), the national organization of state commissions, and were promulgated by the ICC. (Currently, standards of states requiring certificate registrations differed widely; and, in some instances, the multiplicity of standards were considered to impose undue burdens on carriers.)

Directed that standards adopted by NARUC within 18 months after enactment of the bill and then promulgated by the ICC would become effective five years after the date of promulgation. If NARUC did not adopt the standards within the 18 months, the ICC could promulgate its own standards within one year thereafter.

Extended civil forfeiture provisions of the Act to unlawful motor carrier operations (not involving safety), and increased civil forfeiture penalties for each offense from $100 to up to $500 and for continuing violations from not to exceed $50 a day to not to exceed $250 a day.

Broadened ICC authority to seek injunctive relief in federal district courts against unlawful motor carrier or broker operations by allowing the ICC to bring suit against violators and to include in the same suit other necessary parties without regard to where the carrier or other parties may be located.

Allowed any person (rather than just the ICC) injured by motor carrier or freight forwarder operations in "clear and patent violation" of ICC rules, regulations or requirements, to seek injunctive relief from a federal district court.

Provided that the ICC could take under consideration a district court case involving a person injured by a "clear and patent" motor carrier or freight forwarder violation of ICC rules, thereby automatically staying court proceedings until the matter was disposed of by the ICC.

Allowed shippers up to two years in which to recover reparations from motor carriers and freight forwarders for charges subsequently found by the ICC to be unjust and unreasonable, or unjustly discriminatory, unduly preferential or unduly prejudicial. (The effect of this was to restore to all sections of the Act a provision which the Supreme Court in 1959 said applied to shippers by rail and water, but not to shippers by motor carriers and presumably freight forwarders.)

Allowed the ICC, upon application of a water carrier holding a certificate of public convenience and necessity, to amend or revoke the certificate.

Allowed the ICC, upon complaint or upon its own initiative, to suspend, change or revoke certificates of public convenience and necessity where water carriers failed to provide service within a period to be fixed by the ICC (but not less than 30 days) after the ICC ordered performance of the service.

House

The House May 6 passed HR 5401 by voice vote and sent it to the Senate with floor amendments. The bill had been reported by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 253) April 22.

During brief floor debate May 6, Committee Chairman Oren Harris (D Ark.) said HR 5401 was the "culmination" of many years consideration by Congress, the ICC and other parties. Harris said that with the exception of the Private Carrier Organization and the Traffic League, which represented segments of the generally manufacturer-owned private carrier industry, "everybody else supports" the bill, including the Transportation Assn. of America, the American Trucking Assns., the Private Carrier Conference, and the railroad and freight forwarder industries.

William L. Springer (R Ill.), ranking Republican member of the Committee, endorsed HR 5401. Springer noted that despite carrier differences on such past controversial issues as rate de-regulation, "there has persisted a series of proposals referred to as the 'gray area' provisions. In all the smoke of battle which surrounded the many complex issues before us it was always understood that there was general approval of the gray area legislation." He noted that in the past the acceptable 'gray area' proposals, such as those embodied in HR 5401, had been combined in the same legislative package with the more controversial proposals. "We have seen... the results of trying to bite off too much. It seems clear that transportation problems must be broken down, considered, and solved separately," he said.

Prior to passage, Harris offered two amendments which were accepted by voice votes. The amendments, Harris said, would allow the ICC to take under consideration a case involving a person seeking injunctive relief for an injury by a motor carrier in violation of ICC rules, and thereby stay court proceedings until the ICC rendered a decision. Harris said the amendments were designed to allay "fears" from within the private carrier industry that the ICC, under HR 5401, would lose to the courts its primary jurisdiction over the legality of certain private carrier operations. He added that the amendments were actually surplusage, since the bill, in the words of the ICC, "'cannot by indirection take away from us one of our most basic duties.'"

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

May 6 -- Oren Harris (D Ark.) -- Provide that the ICC could take under consideration a district court case involving a person seeking injunctive relief from a "clear and patent" motor carrier violation of ICC rules, regulations or requirements, thereby automatically staying court proceedings until the matter was disposed of by the ICC. Voice vote.

Harris -- Extend the same procedure (above) to cases involving injuries by a "clear and patent" freight forwarder violation. Voice.

Senate

The Senate July 9 passed an amended version of HR 5401 by voice vote and sent it to conference with the House. Before passage, the Senate substituted the text of a similar Senate bill (S 1727) for the provisions of HR 5401 as passed by the House.

S 1727 had been reported by the Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 387) June 30. It differed from the House version of HR 5401 as follows:

- Omitted freight forwarder operations from provisions which, in the House version, (1) allowed any person injured by motor carrier or freight forwarder operations in "clear and patent violation" of ICC rules, regulations or requirements to seek injunctive relief in a federal district court and (2) provided that the ICC could take under consideration a district court case involving a motor carrier or freight forwarder violation, thereby automatically staying court proceedings until the matter was disposed of by the ICC.
- Omitted two House provisions affecting water carriers. One allowed the ICC to suspend, change or revoke certificates of public convenience and necessity where water carriers "willfully failed" to provide service and required revocation if the failure persisted for three years. The second permitted water carriers free entry -- that is, to operate without a certificate -- over routes or between ports for which no certificate was in effect, and prohibited the granting of certificates for such routes upon enactment of HR 5401.

During brief floor debate July 9, Sen. Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio), the bill's floor manager, noted that illegal carriage, "like a strain of virus adapting to antibiotics, is employing new disguises and devices for the evasion of regulation, with resulting serious impairment to the health of our regulated carriers."

Conference

The Senate Aug. 18 and the House Aug. 19 by voice votes adopted the conference report on HR 5401, clearing the bill for the President's signature. There was no debate.

House-Senate conferees had reported HR 5401 (H Rept 810) Aug. 18. In addition to several technical changes, the conferees:

- Agreed to House language including freight forwarders under provisions (1) allowing persons injured by operations in "clear and patent violation" of ICC rules to seek injunctive relief in a federal court and (2) providing that the ICC could take under consideration a court case involving a violation.
- Revised the House provision allowing the ICC to suspend, change or revoke certificates of public convenience and necessity where water carriers "willfully failed" to provide service. Under the conference agreement, certificates in such cases could only be suspended, changed or revoked if the carrier failed to carry out an ICC order to provide service.
- Deleted House provisions requiring revocation of water carrier certificates where no service had been provided for three or more years and granting water carriers free entry -- that is, authority to operate without a certificate -- over routes or between ports for which no certificate was in effect.

Related Developments. Aug. 21 -- According to the "Weekly Letter" of the American Waterways Operators, Inc., the water carrier association originally opposed the House provisions granting the ICC authority to revoke carrier certificates, but changed its position following revision in language by the conferees.

Sept. 30 -- Arkansas Commerce Commission Chairman J. Orville Cheney, in a speech to the National Assn. of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners in New York, said HR 5401, "if properly implemented..., will prove to be the most important piece of transportation legislation" since 1935. He added that it also "could very well be the last opportunity we (the states) shall have to demonstrate ability and willingness to accept responsibility" in the area of transportation.

FREIGHT CAR SHORTAGE

S 1098 -- Reported by Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 386) June 30, 1965.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote June 30.
- Reported, amended, by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 1183) Oct. 20.

The Senate in 1965 passed a bill (S 1098) which was intended to reduce the national shortage of freight cars. An amended version of the bill was reported in the House, but it was not brought to the floor for a vote.

S 1098 authorized the Interstate Commerce Commission to establish daily freight car rental charges (per diem rates), to be paid by railroads using cars owned by other railroads, at a level that would prompt the borrowing line to purchase its own carriers.

The legislation resulted from a continuing and worsening shortage of freight cars in the United States. Existing rental rates were so low that railroads generally found it cheaper to borrow the cars of other lines than to purchase new cars of their own. Relief of some type had long been sought by certain railroads, primarily those in the West, and by a variety of farm organizations and businesses. Legislation was opposed and Congressional action blocked by railroads in the East.

An amended version of S 1098 was reported in the House late in the year (Oct. 20), three days before the 1st session ended. No effort was made to bring the bill to the floor. House backers of the measure later said action was delayed in order to give the railroads further opportunity to resolve the shortage problem themselves.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, S 1098:

Authorized the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix rental charges for the use of freight cars at a level sufficient: to "encourage" railroads to buy and maintain an "adequate" supply of cars to meet national commercial and defense needs; to encourage railroads to return borrowed cars to the owner company promptly; and to provide fair and reasonable compensation to freight car owners for use of their cars by other lines.

Specified that the ICC, in establishing rental rates, consider existing freight car ownership and supply, and decide whether to compute the rental charges on the basis of a railroad's expenses simply in owning and maintaining cars or on the basis of "value of use" (in effect, what the owner company might have received in revenue had the car been on its line rather than on another company's line), or on some other basis.

Authorized the ICC, in applying higher charges as an incentive to the purchase of new cars, to make exemptions under certain conditions: (1) for carriers owning enough cars to meet their "responsibilities"; (2) for carriers which terminate a "substantially" higher percentage of interline traffic than they originate; (3) for types of freight cars which are in adequate supply; and (4) in other situations "in the public interest."

BACKGROUND -- Shortages of freight cars became increasingly serious in the years after World War II. Between Jan. 1, 1945, and mid-1965, railroads retired almost 300,000 more cars than were built. Traditionally, the shortages occurred during harvest seasons, but in the postwar period they became chronic. Various conflicting reasons were cited for the shortages, including ownership patterns, improper distribution of existing cars, overdetention by some railroads of borrowed cars, increased emphasis on acquisition of new, special-purpose cars and the problem of origin of shipments versus termination.

Immediately after the war, the ICC attempted to deal with the problem by setting high penalty rates for the use of borrowed freight cars, but federal courts in 1947 ruled that the agency did not possess authority for its action. The ICC then asked Congress to provide the authority. In more recent years prior to 1965, the ICC urged the use of "incentive" charges to induce railroads to purchase their own cars. S 1098 was intended to allow for such "incentive" rates and thereby, in effect, to overturn the 1947 court ruling.

There was no general agreement that the "incentive" approach would alleviate the freight car shortage, but some railroads thought it would be helpful and neither the lines nor their associations presented alternatives.

Under existing procedures, it was estimated that more than 90 percent of all cars carried rental charges of under $3 a day. Actual rates ranged from $2.16 per day to $12.18 for certain special-purpose cars.

SENATE ACTION. S 1098 was reported (S Rept 386) by the Senate Commerce Committee June 30. The Committee amended the bill to provide exemptions from increased rental charges under certain conditions. (See Provisions, above.) The bill was supported by various federal agencies including the Agriculture, Defense and Commerce Departments, the ICC and the General Services Administration. It also was supported by farm groups, business associations, portions of the railroad industry and shipping organizations.

Floor Action. The Senate passed S 1098 June 30 by voice vote, with little debate. Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.), sponsor of the bill, said that in the past on similar bills, "we used to count noses and found that everyone east of the Mississippi would vote against it and everyone west of the Mississippi would vote for it." The Westerners were outnumbered, he said, but with the shortage increasing, most lines, including the southern railroads, "are feeling the pinch."

HOUSE ACTION. The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee reported S 1098 Oct. 20 (H Rept 1183) after making a number of changes. The House bill specifically stated that the ICC could establish increased rental charges as an "incentive" to railroads to purchase new cars. The House version did not include the Senate provision which allowed charges to reflect "value of use," which one House Member called "so conjectural and questionable as to be impracticable and essentially is an approach to the problem through penalties rather than through incentive." The House bill also required that the ICC set rental charges by types of cars. The bill did not include all of the exemptions listed in the Senate bill, but it did allow the ICC to exempt from the higher charges any group of carriers where such exemption would be "in the national interest." This allowed the ICC to make exemptions for certain eastern railroads using many borrowed cars and, in general, allowed the agency to consider all of the specific exemptions carried in the Senate bill. In addition, the House bill required any higher rates to go into effect Sept. 1, 1966.

The Committee report included a letter from the Budget Bureau which said there was "no objection" to passage of the bill "from the standpoint of the Administration's objectives."

SHIP SUBSIDY CONTINUED; POLICY REVISION STALLED

HR 4346 -- Reported by House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee (H Rept 214) March 31, 1965.

- Passed by the House by voice vote April 26.
- Reported by Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 428) July 9.
- Passed by the Senate by voice vote Aug. 5.

PL 89-127 -- Signed into law Aug. 14.

Congress in 1965 passed a bill (HR 4346) extending for one year, through June 30, 1966, the cost-differential subsidy ceiling of 55 percent for new ship construction and 60 percent for reconstruction and reconditioning of passenger vessels. The differential subsidies represented reimbursement of U.S. shipbuilders for the difference between construction costs in U.S. shipyards and the cheaper costs in foreign yards. Without enactment of the bill, the subsidy differentials would have dropped to the permanent figure of 50 percent.

There was little opposition in either chamber to HR 4346, since it was generally recognized that continued subsidy payments were essential to the well-being of the U.S. merchant marine. However, some Senators questioned the feasibility of maintaining the high 55-percent construction ceiling, asking whether it might not lead to even higher subsidies.

Extension of the subsidies was a stopgap measure, pending Administration proposals to revise the subsidy program. President Johnson, in his 1965 State of the Union Message, had promised to recommend a "new policy for our merchant marine." However, the President made no recommendations, apparently because the Administration could not reach agreement on a new program. (For text of the State of the Union Message, see p. 1347.)

Although Mr. Johnson made no specific recommendations on ship subsidies, numerous proposals were made by various officials, organizations and study groups. The two major sets of proposals -- and the most controversial -- were by the Maritime Advisory Committee, established by President Johnson in 1964, and the Interagency Maritime Task Force, set up by Commerce Secretary John T. Connor in 1965. The Advisory Committee favored a continuation and extension of the existing subsidy program, while the Task Force called for an entirely new policy, including the elimination of cargo preferences and passenger ship subsidies. (For details, see below.)

Background

REFERENCE -- "Merchant Marine," Congress and the Nation, p. 545; "National Maritime Policy," Editorial Research Reports, Sept. 29, 1965.

The U.S. shipping industry has long been at a disadvantage in competing against low-cost foreign built and operated fleets. To compete in international trade, the U.S. fleet's prices had to meet prices charged by foreign vessels. The nation's high construction costs and wage scales made competition virtually impossible without Government assistance.

Subsidies and other forms of aid to private shipping have been granted by the Federal Government since the founding of the Republic. The basic law for the existing federal program of support is the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, sometimes described as the "Magna Carta" of the maritime industry.

The Act declared that a Government-developed and promoted merchant fleet should be: (1) sufficient to carry the domestic waterborne commerce and a substantial portion of the foreign commerce of the nation; (2) capable of serving as a naval auxiliary in time of war; (3) operated under the U.S. flag and owned by U.S. citizens; and (4) composed of the most suitable, the best equipped and the safest vessels. A Maritime Commission was created to carry out the policy declarations. (The Commission's functions were placed under a Maritime Administration in the Commerce Department in 1950. In 1961 the Administration's functions were split, its promotional functions remaining under the Commerce Department and its regulatory functions placed in a new, independent Maritime Commission.)

The Act provided operating and construction differential subsidies to offset lower foreign costs, full Government payment for defense features on vessels and trade-in allowances on old ships to stimulate their replacement. In subsequent amendments and acts, Congress provided certain tax benefits for the shipping industry, Government insurance of construction loans and mortgages and the requirement that at least half of Government-financed, ocean-going cargo be carried in U.S. ships.

Operating Subsidy. Under the operating subsidy program, the Government paid the difference between the cost of operating a U.S. flag ship on certain prescribed routes and the estimated cost of operating a foreign flag vessel of the same type along the same routes. U.S. ship operators thus were able to charge rates and maintain services competitive with those of foreign ship lines.

Subsidy payments were limited to ships built in U.S. shipyards and to vessels no more than 20 years old. The subsidy was designed to make up the difference in costs of wages, subsistence of officers and crew, insurance and maintenance and repairs. To qualify for the subsidy, an operator had to meet certain conditions, such as providing regular service over prescribed trade routes, manning his ships with U.S. citizens and replacing his vessels as they became obsolete with U.S.-built ships. A subsidized operator could not operate in domestic service nor operate unsubsidized vessels in competition with other subsidized lines. Tramp freighters, dry bulk carriers and tankers were not eligible for the subsidies.

Construction Subsidy. The Merchant Marine Act of 1936 authorized subsidy payments to U.S. shipyards of up to 50 percent of the cost of building a ship. The subsidized shipyards in turn were to charge the buyer (ship operator) a price competitive with the cost of a similar ship built in a foreign shipyard. The Government contracted for the ship in behalf of the operator, who, in order to buy the vessel built with a Government subsidy, had to agree to operate the ship in foreign commerce under the U.S. flag and to make the ship available for defense purposes if needed.

Congress in 1960 raised the ceiling on construction subsidies to 55 percent, effective until July 7, 1962.

(Continued on next page)

The subsidy program was extended in 1961 to cover the cost of reconstruction and reconditioning of U.S. passenger vessels in U.S. shipyards. Congress in 1962 extended the 55-percent construction subsidy ceiling through June 30, 1964, and increased the reconstruction and reconditioning subsidy to 60 percent through June 30, 1964. Congress in 1964 extended both ceilings for one year, through June 30, 1965.

Cargo Preference. The Cargo Preference Act of 1954 provided that 50 percent of Government-sponsored cargoes -- military supplies, foreign aid shipments, surplus agricultural commodities -- would be carried in U.S. ships. The Act also provided that the cargo shipping be equitably distributed to shippers from various geographic areas of the country and permitted the President, the Secretary of Defense or Congress to waive the 50-50 provision in time of emergency.

Congressional Action

House. The House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee held hearings March 3, 1965, on HR 4346 extending for one year, through June 30, 1966, the subsidy ceilings of 55 percent and 60 percent respectively for new ship construction and for reconditioning of U.S. passenger ships. The Committee reported the bill (H Rept 214) March 31. The report said the legislation was "essential to the continuation of the current long-range" program of replacing old U.S. vessels. "Without adequate Government contribution to the shipbuilding program to keep the American operator on a parity with his foreign competitor, he will be unable to proceed expeditiously with his replacement requirements," the report said.

The House passed HR 4346 April 26 by voice vote. During a brief debate, Committee Chairman Herbert C. Bonner (D N.C.) said extension of the subsidies was needed "or we are just not going to construct any more vessels."

Senate. The Senate Commerce Committee May 27 held hearings on HR 4346 and July 9 reported it (S Rept 428) without amendment. The report noted testimony by Maritime Administrator Nicholas Johnson that the differential between domestic and foreign shipbuilding costs remained above 50 percent. The Committee said it was concerned with the differential but was "also mindful of the over-all price of vessel construction and over-all cost of the (subsidy) program to the Government." In additional views, Peter H. Dominick (R Colo.) and Winston L. Prouty (R Vt.) supported the extension but said it was only postponing "hard, critical decisions" about an industry afflicted with "serious, chronic, and difficult" problems. Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) said he opposed further extension of the high ceilings because they were an "extra incentive" to seek higher subsidies.

The Senate passed HR 4346 Aug. 5 by voice vote. During a brief debate, John J. Williams (R Del.) opposed the extension, questioning whether the higher rates lowered the "incentive for efficiency" in the shipping industry and whether they might not lead to even higher rates. He said the Maritime Administration and the Commerce Department should cease studying ship subsidies and make recommendations for a long-run solution.

Related Legislation

War Risk Insurance. President Johnson July 27 signed a bill (HR 4526 -- PL 89-89) to extend for five years, through Sept. 7, 1970, provisions of existing law authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to provide war risk insurance for merchant vessels, cargo and crew. The provisions were added to the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 by amendment in 1950. The initial 10-year authority was extended in 1960 for an additional five years, through Sept. 7, 1965.

HR 4526 was passed by voice votes of the House May 17 and the Senate July 14. The Senate Commerce Committee's report on HR 4526 (S Rept 422) said that "conventional commercial insurance on merchant vessels, cargoes and crews is subject to automatic termination clauses effective upon the outbreak of war.... The need for the legislation arises out of a recognition that only the Government is in a position to initiate such insurance coverage and has an interest in assuring that the United States possesses a strong and active merchant marine during any time of emergency."

Vessel Exchange Program. President Johnson Oct. 10 signed into law a bill (HR 728 -- PL 89-254) to broaden and extend, through July 5, 1970, the vessel exchange program under the Merchant Marine Act of 1936. Initiated in 1960, the program permits operators of nonsubsidized merchant ships to exchange obsolete vessels for more efficient ships in the Government reserve fleet. HR 728 was passed by the House July 12 and by the Senate, amended, Aug. 26. The House Sept. 24 and the Senate Sept. 28 adopted by voice votes the conference report (H Rept 1085) on HR 728.

Maritime Policy Developments

Concern over the U.S. merchant marine continued to grow in 1965 as subsidies increased while the maritime industry declined in size and business. Foreign fleets, especially that of the Soviet Union, continued to expand and to handle more and more of America's foreign commerce.

The Maritime Administration reported that construction subsidies totaled $87,686,365 in fiscal 1965, compared with $73,985,021 in fiscal 1960 and $5,659,000 in fiscal 1955. Gross operating subsidies were $208,588,732 in calendar 1964, compared with $162,966,239 in calendar 1960 and $103,190,611 in calendar 1955. The Maritime Administration said figures on the total cost of the cargo preference program were not available. The President's Maritime Advisory Committee estimated that the cost of the program ran $80 million a year.

The total number of ships in the U.S. merchant marine as of Dec. 31, 1964, was 912, compared with 957 at the end of 1960 and 1,072 at the end of 1955. U.S. ships carried 8.3 percent of America's foreign trade cargo in calendar 1964, compared with 10.5 percent in calendar 1960 and 23.5 percent in calendar 1955.

Defense Requirements. In light of the United States' expanding involvement in the Viet Nam war, questions were raised as to whether the merchant marine was adequate to meet existing and future military needs. To help transport supplies to Southeast Asia, chiefly to South Viet Nam, the Defense Department in 1965 took seven ships out of the U.S. Navy's reserve fleet and requested the Maritime Administration to reactivate 76 ships from the National Defense Reserve Fleet by the end of fiscal 1966.

Strike. A 75-day strike in 1965 involving eight subsidized shipping lines and three unions added to the confusion in the maritime industry and apparently hardened the position of some Government officials against the subsidy program. (It was about the 25th major strike in the industry since 1934.) The strike, lasting from June 16 to Aug. 29, was ended by an agreement that provided a no-strike guarantee for four years and a 3.2-percent increase in wages and other benefits. The main issue in the strike, the manning of automated vessels, was left to mediation procedures under the direction of AFL-CIO President George Meany and Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz.

In assigning Wirtz and Meany the task of settling the strike, President Johnson Aug. 16 said he wanted a solution that provided the "fullest practicable assurance" that controversial issues be settled without renewal of shipping strikes. The President July 20 said that to accomplish maritime goals "will require much more than money alone" and would depend "upon the willingness of many different groups to cooperate in a manner to which they are not always accustomed." Commerce Secretary Connor in May cautioned that the Administration was not likely to consider greatly increased subsidy expenditures so long as "the structure of our maritime programs, shipping capability, productivity and labor-management relations remain as they are today."

ADMINISTRATION ACTION

President Johnson in his State of the Union Message Jan. 4 said he would recommend "a new policy for our merchant marine." But the President made no such recommendation or any other public statements on revising the maritime policy, apparently because of disagreement among Administration officials over what should be done with the subsidy program.

However, reform proposals were advanced by Maritime Administrator Nicholas Johnson, the President's Maritime Advisory Committee and the Interagency Maritime Task Force. Administrator Johnson and the Task Force, composed of representatives of nine federal offices and bodies, called for cutting back the subsidy program. The Advisory Committee, composed of shipping management and labor officials and public representatives, favored an expansion of the program.

Administrator's Recommendations. The first major criticism of the year against the subsidy program came from Maritime Administrator Johnson. In a Feb. 9 speech in New Orleans, Johnson described the program as one of "drift and decay." He outlined several recommendations for dealing with the problems of the merchant marine.

His first series of recommendations concerned the shipbuilding subsidies. He said the requirement that U.S.-subsidized ship operators buy U.S.-built vessels was "doing little for the plight of the American shipyards" and was having "a devastating impact on the growth of our merchant marine." He said U.S. shipyards were "relatively among the least competitive, by European standards, of all U.S. industry" and made low profits, although prices received for their ships were 220 percent of costs of foreign ships.

He listed the following alternatives: (1) maintain the status quo by requiring all subsidized merchant ships to be built in U.S. yards, and appropriating sufficient funds to provide 16 to 18 replacement ships a year; (2) continue the construction subsidy program but increase the annual appropriations; (3) spend sufficient money to ensure that a shipbuilding capacity essential to the national interest is maintained but permit U.S. shipowners to purchase ships "wherever they wish."

Johnson said that the third alternative, if adopted, would have "far from inconsequential" effects on U.S. shipyards workers, since there are about 100,000 shipyards workers and "all of the subsidized merchant shipbuilding put together creates no more than 7,600 jobs."

Johnson said the cargo preference subsidy program was a "miserable failure" since "not a single new tramp ship has been built since 1956, and the cost of keeping the old ones in existence climbs higher and higher." He listed four possible alternatives: (1) continue the current preference program "at least so long as there is an agricultural surplus disposal program"; (2) eliminate the tramp fleet by terminating the cargo preference program; (3) continue the program but supplement it with a construction subsidy to supply replacement ships; (4) gradually eliminate the preference program and substitute for it a form of direct operation subsidy, "making it possible for these ships to compete for commercial cargoes at world rates."

Johnson said that modern 300,000-ton dry bulk carriers, costing $9 million each to build, could operate at $300,000 to $400,000 a year with only a small crew. With the existing $80 million annual cargo preference subsidy, he said, the United States could maintain 200 such carriers.

Johnson also suggested that the United States eliminate subsidies to U.S. passenger liners because they were too costly to operate and gave little return. He called for a relaxation of trade-route requirements that shippers operate on 30 trade routes and three service routes designated by the Maritime Administration as "essential to the foreign trade of the United States." To change routes, a shipper must go through a long and involved hearing and examination procedure. Johnson said, "The present rigid system prevents companies from taking advantage of fluctuations in world trade.... (It) puts into the hands of the Government too much of the question whether a shipowner will change trade routes." He also argued that the present system gave ship operators "little incentive to reduce subsidizable costs...for the Government will simply pay them less in subsidy." He called for some Government action to encourage cost-cutting.

Administration Studies. President Johnson established the Maritime Advisory Committee by Executive Order June 17, 1964, to make a study of "such matters of policy and administration of government programs affecting the maritime industry as it deems to be in the public interest." The President appointed Commerce Secretary Connor, Labor Secretary Wirtz, five representatives of labor, five shipping officials and five representatives of the public at large to the Committee. Connor was designated to be chairman.

The Committee's report and recommendations calling for expanding the subsidy program were prepared by a subcommittee consisting of three public members and headed by Theodore W. Kheel, New York lawyer and labor arbitrator. The subcommittee's report was made public June 7 and was adopted Nov. 30 with minor changes by the full Committee by a 10-2 vote.

Commerce Secretary Connor June 10 set up the Interagency Maritime Task Force headed by Under Secretary of Commerce Alan S. Boyd. In a news release announcing the Task Force, Connor said the study group "was a reflection of the Government's concern that a new maritime policy be developed with dispatch." A Commerce Department spokesman told Congressional Quarterly that the Task Force was created to give the Government agencies a voice in the maritime study since the Advisory Committee was made up mainly of persons from outside the Government. The Task Force consisted of representatives of the Budget Bureau, the Council of Economic Advisers, the Federal Maritime Commission, the Maritime Administration and the Departments of State, Defense, Agriculture, Labor and Commerce.

A preliminary report of the Task Force calling for a cutback in the maritime subsidy program was published in the press Sept. 26. The report, described by the Commerce Department as a "staff paper," raised a furor among labor and management factions in the maritime industry. The Task Force's official report was issued Oct. 4. The Advisory Committee Oct. 7 announced it had rejected the Task Force's report. The Labor Department, which was represented on the Task Force, reportedly also rejected much of the Task Force's report.

A Commerce Department spokesman told Congressional Quarterly that Connor turned the reports of the Committee and of the Task Force over to the President in late 1965 or early 1966.

Task Force Report. The Task Force said the need for a subsidized merchant fleet should be predicated on the requirements of the military and "of the civilian economy under conditions of emergency." This was a departure from the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 which predicated the need for a merchant marine directly upon the commercial needs of the country as well as upon the national defense requirements. In line with its own objectives, the Task Force recommended the elimination of subsidies for U.S. flag passenger vessels and a gradual phasing out of cargo preference laws. The savings resulting from these cutbacks, the Task Force said, would permit the extension of subsidy payments to approximately 40 cargo liners not currently receiving them. The Task Force also would have allowed U.S. shipowners and operators of U.S. vessels to build or repair ships in foreign yards. The Task Force recommended greater automation of all U.S. vessels in both domestic and foreign trade.

A Commerce Department press release said the changes contained in the report "would substitute direct, visible aids for most of the present indirect subsidies and would streamline the aid systems to allow greater freedom of operation, more encouragement toward productive, profitable operations and less detailed government interference."

The report said that under the new proposals, the cost of maritime subsidies in 1966 would amount to $402 million instead of $416 million as under the present system. It also predicted that at the end of the 20-year period -- the proposed life of the program -- subsidy payments would amount to $377 million annually, instead of the projected $594 million under the current system.

The major share of these savings, the report indicated, would come from the phase-out of passenger ship subsidies and the gradual elimination of cargo preferences. The 13 passenger liners currently receiving subsidy payments represented an annual outlay of $47 million.

Under the program, the Secretaries of Defense and Commerce would determine the level of private shipbuilding capacity to meet national security considerations. Beyond this level, American shipping companies would be free to build or repair ships abroad without subsidy support and without limitation as to the number of ships. The proposed program would also permit domestic shippers to buy ships or equipment in foreign yards. The report noted that domestic shipping is the only mode of domestic transportation required to purchase its equipment solely in the United States.

In the field of maritime labor, the program called for "application of maximum automation at as fast a rate as technology will permit" and "establishment of manning scales at minimum levels consistent with safety and the advance of technology."

Despite the emphasis on automation, the report indicated that the new program would provide more future jobs than the present policies. This would come about, it said, by encouraging increased productivity through the application of new technology and manning standards. The report indicated also that new job opportunities would require an inflow of new workers to compensate for the attrition through retirement of other workers with the possible exception of "service" groups (waiters, room stewards, bartenders, etc.) displaced from passenger ships.

The report said that these service personnel would be easily transferable to shore-based service industries. It said that on the 13 subsidized passenger liners, scheduled for phasing out, there were 5,455 seafaring workers, 3,996 of whom were in the category of waiters, room stewards, bartenders and others for which it said there were job opportunities in the nation's economy.

The report predicted that with the disappearance of the tramp fleet, due to age and deterioration, a modern bulk carrier fleet should emerge which would eliminate the need for cargo preferences, and would have a bearing on the future job market in the maritime industry as world trade continued to grow and expand.

In a reference to the 75-day maritime strike in 1965, the report warned that "if labor and management can't reach agreements which will provide industry stability and continuity of service at a reasonable cost, all Government support for an active U.S.-flag merchant marine should be withdrawn." The Task Force recommended that operators and unions make manning (number of employees) agreements for new ships before the vessels are built to help head off labor disputes.

Advisory Committee Report. The President's Maritime Advisory Committee recommended that the present system of operating subsidies be continued and that the subsidies be extended to all common carriers and tankers and to any new vessels in these categories built under the new construction subsidy programs. (See below.)

The Committee recommended that construction subsidies be continued and extended to the entire common-carrier fleet so as to permit construction of new ships, which would enable the United States to attain "over a reasonable period of time" a dry bulk fleet capacity sufficient to handle 30 percent of total import-export commerce. The Committee also recommended that the construction subsidies be changed to a program of direct support to the shipbuilding industry. (Under the existing program, the subsidies were paid to the shipyard in behalf of an operator who had qualified to buy the subsidized-built vessel.)

The Committee recommended continuation of existing cargo preference laws and that the Government adopt methods to ensure that at least 30 percent of liquid bulk import cargo be carried in American-flag tankers.

The Committee urged that subsidies to passenger liners be continued for reasons of "national prestige." The Committee said, "We do not agree with the view that our pre-eminence in so many other areas is so great that the contribution made by the U.S.-flag passenger liners is relatively insignificant." It urged that the U.S. Travel Service make efforts to accelerate travel promotion on U.S. flag ships and that a careful study be undertaken to determine whether and under what circumstances foreign flag vessels operating out of U.S. ports to nearby cruise areas should be restricted.

The Committee recommended that the "essential" trade routes over which ship operators must travel if they are to be eligible for operating-differential subsidies be maintained; that participation of American-flag liners in ocean rate-making conferences be continued as provided in the Shipping Act of 1916; that agreements between the shipowners and unions on questions of manning (number of employees on each ship) new ships and related questions be reached before the construction of the vessels; that the Government support carriers of proprietary cargoes as well as dry bulk cargoes; that efforts be made to improve the competitive position of American flag carriers through promotion and possible restrictions on foreign flag ships operating out of U.S. ports to nearby cruise areas; that the Government establish a national maritime research foundation with cooperation and involvement of all segments of the industry; and that a labor-management council in the Department of Labor be established to resolve all issues relating to these things.

For American owners of flags-of-convenience dry bulk carriers, the report recommended that they be permitted to apply for U.S. constructed bulk carriers and to receive operating subsidies for such vessels, provided that the operators agree to eliminate the approximately equivalent tonnage capacity of the U.S. bulk carriers from their flag-of-convenience fleets; and, further, that there be no subsequent increase in their flag-of-convenience fleets. The same benefits would also apply to tanker flag-of-convenience operators.

Reaction to Task Force Report. The Task Force proposals touched off a storm of controversy. The report was immediately and unanimously disapproved by the President's Maritime Advisory Committee.

The Committee based its rejection of the proposals on the report's assumption that merchant marine subsidies would be based on military requirements, contending that this violated the purpose of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936. It also held that the report ran counter to the mandate to strengthen the industry that President Johnson issued when he established the Maritime Advisory Committee.

Kheel, who was largely responsible for the Committee's report, said the Task Force report was not "in the directive of the President to us (the Committee) which speaks about policies and practices which may be followed by labor-management or the Government for strengthening the trade, national defense, manpower and labor relations program of the maritime industry."

The report was also sharply criticized by members of the shipping industry and maritime unions. The shipbuilders and the unions especially opposed the proposals that American ship operators be allowed to buy vessels abroad where they could be purchased for about half the cost of comparable ships built in U.S. yards. According to the Task Force report, the number of American-flag ships could in theory be increased without any substantial hike in construction subsidies.

The International Brotherhood of Boilermakers called for a three-day labor-management conference Nov. 16-19 in an attempt to work out its own recommendations. At the same time, Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union and a member of the Advisory Committee, representing employees of passenger vessels, called for the resignation of Maritime Administrator Johnson, who strongly backed the Task Force program and whose own proposals for reform bore close resemblance to the Task Force report. Curran said Johnson was "incapable of carrying out the duties of his office" under the mandate of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936.

Addressing the Boilermakers' conference, Sen. Daniel B. Brewster (D Md.) said he opposed rescinding cargo preference laws and the recommendations that U.S. shipbuilders and ship operators be allowed to build and repair ships in foreign yards. In an earlier speech on the floor of the Senate, Brewster had expressed concern over Maritime Administrator Johnson's "failure to commit himself" to an aggressive maritime policy.

Addressing the conference Nov. 17, Johnson said that the American shipping industry had to accept the need for ship construction overseas. He said that, as maritime administrator, he was prepared to say that "no single policy" bore as much responsibility for the "dwindling and uncompetitive American merchant fleet" as the "combination of the prohibition on foreign building and the limited construction subsidy appropriation."

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey told the conference that the Task Force report was not official Administration policy. "This Administration has not determined the long-range merchant marine policy," he said. He assured the shipbuilding union that its "voice" would be heard in the formation of a final policy.

The Task Force proposals met stiff opposition from Members of Congress, particularly from members of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee. Rep. Herbert C. Bonner (D N.C.), Committee chairman, introduced legislation to establish a new and independent Federal Maritime Administration. Shortly before his death, Bonner said he planned to hold hearings "as soon as possible" in the next session of Congress. The Committee's ranking minority member, William S. Mailliard (R Calif.), and Edward A. Garmatz (D Md.) introduced identical bills. (Garmatz became Committee chairman after Bonner's death.)

In a speech to the House, Garmatz criticized the Task Force report, stating that elimination of U.S. passenger vessels would worsen the balance-of-payments deficits by compelling U.S. travelers to travel on foreign passenger vessels. He added that crew reductions and discontinued shipyard operations would have a harmful effect on the economy.

RAILROAD LABOR DISPUTE NOT SETTLED BY ARBITRATION LAW

The problem of "featherbedding" in railroad jobs, threatening again a nationwide railroad strike in 1966, was the subject of Congressional inquiry in 1965. The 1963 law requiring compulsory arbitration of a dispute over eliminating most firemen and helpers on railroads and prohibiting strikes or lockouts in the meantime, was to expire March 31, 1966. Barring Congressional action or settlement at the bargaining table, a strike could result at that time.

The Senate Commerce Committee, looking ahead to that deadline, held 18 days of hearings in August and September on the administration of PL 88-108, the nation's first peacetime compulsory arbitration law. The law was passed in 1963. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers (BLF&E) had charged that the law was not being administered properly, and the Committee looked into the charges. Following the hearings, the Committee adopted a resolution urging the carriers and the operators' unions to return to the bargaining table.

The key issue remained the future of the locomotive fireman on diesel or electric engines. Under terms of the arbitration award, virtually all of these positions were eliminated on freight and yard engines and by October 1965, almost 18,000 firemen had lost their jobs.

Meanwhile, a joint carriers-union board to study administration of the arbitration award (National Joint Board) convened in Washington, and the Supreme Court was asked to rule on the question of whether state safety laws requiring a fireman in the locomotive cab were pre-empted by PL 88-108.

The Court ruled in 1966 that PL 88-108 did not supersede state "full-crew" laws requiring specified train crew sizes for safety purposes. The decision left such laws in force in seven states. (See next page)

Background

REFERENCES -- Congress and the Nation p. 553; 1964 CQ Almanac p. 570.

The "featherbedding" dispute between the carriers and the unions became serious in the late 1950s and appeared headed for a nationwide rail strike in 1963. The issue was the presence of firemen or helpers in the locomotive cab; the carriers argued that these employees were unnecessary while the unions responded that for purposes of safety, the firemen were indispensable.

Congress met the strike threat by enacting PL 88-108. Under its provisions, Arbitration Board No. 282 was established, consisting of union, carrier and neutral representatives. This board made its award Nov. 26, 1963, the union members dissenting, and held that almost all (up to 90 percent) of the approximately 35,000 firemen should be eliminated by stated procedures. The law prohibited strikes or lockouts for disputes over provisions of the award. It covered all railroads except Southern Railway.

A dispute over other issues, the so-called "secondary issues," again raised the specter of a nationwide strike in 1964. These issues were those other than the use of firemen or the makeup of train crews: such issues as paid holidays, expenses when away from home, a wage raise and the size of yard crews. In a dramatic nationwide television broadcast April 22, 1964, President Johnson disclosed that a settlement had been reached between the carriers and the operators' unions on these issues. The settlement was considered a personal triumph for the President, who noted in his announcement that a strike would have idled six million workers and cut the gross national produce by 13 percent while driving up prices.

Another strike threat in 1964 was averted when Mr. Johnson invoked the 60-day cooling off period provisions of the Railway Labor Act on March 17, 1964. This dispute involved the carriers and the nonoperators' unions, who represented about 300,000 clerks, telegraphers, signalmen, maintenance workers and dining-car employees. The settlement was based on the carriers' acceptance of the principle of attrition in reducing work forces and the unions' acceptance of management's right to transfer workers between areas. Final settlement of the outstanding issues was arrived at on Feb. 7, 1965, without a strike. For the first time since 1959, the railroads and nonoperators' unions had no major national collective bargaining dispute.

If peace was achieved with the nonoperators' unions, however, it seemed far off in the continuing dispute over firemen and crew makeup as the two major operators' unions, the BLF&E and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (BLE), pressed the issue vigorously. These two unions were themselves engaged in a battle for representation dominance in the industry, and the firemen issue was a key one in that battle. Each union tried to outdo the other in urging methods of keeping the firemen employed.

There were three other operators' unions: the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the Order of Railway Conductors and Brakemen, and the Switchmen's Union of North America. All were members of the AFL-CIO except the BLE and the Order of Railway Conductors and Brakemen, which were independent unions.

Altogether, the five operators' unions represented about 200,000 employees. By October 1965, almost 18,000 firemen had been discharged under terms of the arbitration award. The methods by which they were discharged and the particular employees discharged were the subjects of the Senate Commerce Committee hearings.

Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Senate Commerce.

HELD HEARINGS -- Intermittently for 18 days from Aug. 2 through Sept. 28 on the administration of PL 88-108, the compulsory railroad arbitration law, and on Arbitration Board Award No. 282, dated Nov. 26, 1963, and expiring March 31, 1966. The award, made under provisions of PL 88-108, permitted railroads to eliminate virtually all firemen or helpers from freight and yard locomotive crews.

Following the hearings, the Committee Oct. 12 adopted a "sense of the Committee" resolution urging the carriers and unions to return to collective bargaining to resolve their disputes. It noted a Committee "dislike for legislating solutions to labor-management disputes" and called attention to "the obvious dangers of repeated Congressional intervention in this field." The resolution said the "public interest" would be served if the carriers and the BLF&E and the BLE returned to the bargaining table, and it called on the National Mediation Board and the Secretary of Labor to assist in bringing the parties together.

TESTIMONY -- Aug. 2-4 -- H.E. Gilbert, president of the BLF&E, who had said the union would insist on restoring the abolished jobs after the March 31, 1966, deadline, asked the Committee to use its legislative powers to oversee a resumption of negotiations. He said there had been a sharp rise in railroad accidents since the firemen were eliminated, a proposition subsequently challenged by railroad management representatives.

Aug. 31 -- Ralph T. Seward, chairman and a "neutral" (i.e., representing neither union nor management) member of the Arbitration Board No. 282, said BLF&E charges of maladministration of the arbitration award were essentially the same that that union made in federal district court in the District of Columbia in a suit to impeach the award. The district court rejected the charges, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia upheld that finding and the Supreme Court denied a hearing, he said. Seward said the disagreement between the unions and carriers was greatest over exactly what had been agreed to prior to the award; the arbitration board examined these prior agreements and took them into consideration in making the award, he said. Since the board found no agreement on the over-all maximum number of firemen's jobs to be eliminated, he added, it felt free to set that figure (about 90 percent) itself. As to the safety question, he said, "the evidence convinced us that the need for a fireman was very rare, but it did not convince us that such a need was nonexistent."

Seward said that in administering its award, Arbitration Board No. 282 had met nine times and ruled on 236 questions, of which 45 were presented by the carriers, 134 by the BLF&E, 10 by the BLE, and the rest by the other three operators' unions, that is, 31 by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, 11 by the Switchmen's Union of North America and five by the Order of Railway Conductors and Brakemen. Seward defended the board's administration of its award as fair and sensible.

Sept. 15 -- Alan S. Boyd, Under Secretary of Commerce for Transportation, said that between 1947 and 1963, railroad employment dropped almost 50 percent, for a net loss of 672,000 jobs. Under the arbitration award, he said, the number of locomotive firemen and helpers had been halved in little more than a year. He suggested, among other things, that the narrow jurisdictions of the various unions inhibited flexibility in moving displaced workers to new jobs within the transportation industry.

Sept. 16 -- James J. Reynolds, Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations, said that retraining programs for firemen to train them as engineers had been discussed with the BLF&E, but that the union broke off the talks. He added that collective bargaining rather than further Congressional action appeared preferable at the moment.

Sept. 20 -- Perry S. Heath, grand chief engineer of the BLE, said the effect of the arbitration award had been "detrimental" and that the award should not be extended. He said that PL 88-108 should not be allowed to become a precedent for compulsory arbitration in other labor matters.

Sept. 21-23 -- J.E. Wolfe, chief negotiator for the carriers, urged extension of PL 88-108 and maintenance of the status quo under the arbitration award for two years. The problem could be studied in the meantime by the National Joint Board, he said. (See below) Of the 17,250 firemen jobs eliminated in freight and yard service, he said, 8,675 were eliminated by natural attrition or promotion of firemen to engineers. Another 4,465 were abolished when firemen chose severance pay averaging $5,600 rather than comparable jobs while another 950 firemen accepted comparable jobs and the remaining 3,160 firemen, 18.3 percent of the total, were released with severance pay since they had less than two years' seniority.

A number of union representatives, including firemen, engineers, and in some cases, their wives, testified as to the adverse effects of the arbitration award, while railroad management representatives outlined procedures under which the firemen were laid off or transferred to other jobs.

Other Matters

The National Joint Board, which was set up to study implementation of the arbitration award, was supposed to have convened by late February 1964, within 90 days of the award. The board was composed of two union and two carrier representatives. It did not meet until Oct. 12, 1965. Even then, J.L. Shattuck, vice president of the BLF&E, boycotted the meeting, which the BLF&E called a "maneuver" to delay further collective bargaining. Other members of the National Joint Board were Wolfe and E.H. Hallman, chairman of the Western Carriers Conference, representing railroad management and C.J. Coughlin, first assistant grand chief of the BLE, the other union representative.

Supreme Court Test. The Supreme Court, meanwhile, was asked to rule on a key aspect of PL 88-108. That was whether state safety laws requiring certain crew sizes, the so-called "full-crew laws" were preempted by PL 88-108 and were therefore inapplicable. The case, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Co., involved the conflict between PL 88-108 and the Arkansas full-crew law which required a fireman on every train and a crew of six men on every train, with some exceptions. The Arkansas laws were adopted in 1907 and 1913. The case arose when six railroads sued to enjoin state prosecuting attorneys from continuing to enforce the Arkansas statutes. The BLE intervened, a three-judge federal district court ruled that the state law was in "substantial conflict" with PL 88-108 and therefore had to yield to the federal law, and the BLE appealed the case to the Court. The Brotherhood argued in its brief that the state law was aimed at safety and thus did not conflict with PL 88-108, which was aimed at economic problems, and further that the arbitration award under PL 88-108 merely established minimum crew make-ups and did not preclude states from increasing crew sizes. The state of Wisconsin, with a similar law, filed a brief in support of the BLE.

1966 Decision. The Supreme Court Jan. 31, 1966, by a 7-1 vote held that PL 88-108 and Arbitration Award No. 282 did not supersede state "full-crew" laws which required specified train crew sizes for safety purposes. Such laws were in effect in seven states (Ark., Ind., Mass., N.Y., Ohio, Wash. and Wis.).

Justice William O. Douglas dissented and Justice Abe Fortas, whose former law firm represented parties in the case, did not participate. Justice Hugo L. Black wrote the Court's opinion for the case, which consolidated two suits, BLE v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Co. and Hardin v. Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Co.

Justice Black wrote that Congress sought in enacting PL 88-108 to deal specifically with a labor issue and did not intend to extend the law's impact into the area of state safety laws. Justice Douglas said Congress did not intend PL 88-108 to be effective in some states but not in others -- those having "full-crew" laws.

U.S. PROMOTES SPREAD OF TECHNICAL INNOVATION

S 949 -- Reported by Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 421) July 1, 1965.
● Passed by voice vote of the Senate July 19.
HR 3420 -- Reported by House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee (H Rept 817) Aug. 19.
S 949 -- Passed, amended, by voice vote of the House Sept. 1.
● House amendments agreed to by voice vote of the Senate Sept. 7.
PL 89-182 -- Signed into law Sept. 14.

Congress in 1965 enacted a little-noticed program to help businessmen and industries gain access to the growing body of nonproprietary scientific and technical information available from both federal and private research and development. On signing the State Technical Services Act cf 1965 (S 949 -- PL 89 - 182) into law Sept. 14, President Johnson called it "the 'sleeper' of the 89th Congress." He said, "If we had had this legislation 25 or 30 years ago, we might have prevented the economic depression that today exists in Appalachia."

The Act provided $60 million over three years for matching federal grants to states which established technical information programs in connection with state universities, land grant colleges, technical institutions and business administration schools. Under the state programs, businesses and industries would be appraised of the opportunities for applying new -- or even well-established -- scientific information and techniques to create new products, improve sales, administration and production methods, and adjust to coming trends in the economy of their state and region.

In connection with the state programs, the Commerce Department would provide a central clearinghouse for collecting pertinent scientific and technological information. At the state level, business-oriented scientific and technical libraries and information services would be established. The states would sponsor workshops, seminars, field visits and similar means of educating administrators and technical personnel.

Trade secrets and other proprietary information would not be available for dissemination under the program, Commerce Department officials explained, but there would remain a vast body of information which was freely available but not widely known. As an example, one official said that a company might be unaware of what computer programming can do in pointing to the best methods of inventory control, warehouse location and production scheduling. But the company's administrators could find out if, under the Act, a state university offered seminars in business application of computer technology.

State, Regional Economic Planning. A major feature of the Act was that it required states which wanted federal assistance to set up five-year economic plans for themselves. The plans would identify the economic resources and problems of the state and region, the major businesses and industries and their resources and problems, and proposed methods of attacking the problems.

The Act also promoted a regional approach to providing technical services and to planning by permitting states to combine their programs. It authorized grants to each state of $25,000 a year, with no matching requirement, for planning purposes. The Commerce Department announced that it planned to spend no more than $2 million a year and no less than $150,000 a year in each state that signed up to provide technical services.

In promoting state and regional economic planning, the Act paralleled the Economic Development Act of 1965, which authorized grants to regional planning commissions modeled on the Appalachian Regional Commission. (See story p. 798)

Innovation, Diffusion. The State Technical Services Act was devised in the office of the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Science and Technology, which oversees -- among other things -- patent policy and the National Bureau of Standards.

The Act was shaped by two quiet but persistent themes of President Johnson's Great Society program -- the need to promote innovation and the need to diffuse the economic and social benefits of the nation to all its regions and classes.

Federal officials pointed out that economic growth comes through innovation. They believed it is the role of the federal and state governments to encourage innovation. This can be done by making innovation more profitable and less disruptive. Into the first category falls current Government policy concerning ownership of patents derived through the use of federal funds, which in many cases permits the inventor to retain the patent rights rather than reserving them to the public. Into the second category fall such programs as manpower retraining and dissemination of information about new technology. (Some critics say Administration patent policy retards diffusion of technology. See stories on patent policy, p. 887 and manpower training, p. 810.)

On the matter of diffusion of scientific and technical knowledge, Jerome B. Weisner, then science adviser to President Johnson, testified Dec. 4, 1963, before the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Subcommittee on Employment and Manpower, "We are now entering a period when our long-term interests demand special attention to the strengthening of scientific and technological capabilities in regions where they do not now exist." Weisner said this was necessary both to encourage the economic well-being of those regions and to develop the needed scientific and technical manpower which the economy required.

In a Sept. 14, 1965, statement, President Johnson ordered the heads of executive departments and agencies, in making research contracts and grants with institutions of higher learning, to give attention to the need of "strengthening academic institutions and increasing the number of institutions capable of performing research of high quality." In a statement, also on Sept. 14, to the Cabinet on the same subject, Mr. Johnson said, "We must... devote ourselves purposefully to developing and diffusing -- throughout the nation -- a strong and solid scientific capability, especially in our many centers of advanced education."

(The Act, plus other administration policies promoting diffusion of scientific and technological capabilities, also helped meet complaints of certain areas of the country, such as the Midwest, that they were not getting a fair share of federal research and development funds and so were lagging in new industries. 1964 Almanac p. 450)

Economic Conversion Potential. The Report of the President's Committee on the Economic Impact of Defense and Disarmament, delivered to President Johnson July 30, pointed to another aspect of the State Technical Services Act -- its potential in alleviating the economic effect of shifts and reductions in defense spending. The report said the Act, and programs of the Institute for Applied Technology in the National Bureau of Standards "aimed at creating an environment more conducive to technical innovation in industry," would "strengthen civilian demand for R&D (research and development) personnel, thereby helping to assure an adequate demand for the services of scientific and technical personnel at a time when demand for them by defense industry may have leveled off."

By promoting economic planning at the state level, the Act could also help states to anticipate problems that might be caused by the loss of an important defense contract or base.

PROVISIONS

As signed by the President, S 949, the State Technical Services Act of 1965:

Stated that a wider diffusion of science and technology in business, commerce and industry was essential to the growth of the economy, higher levels of employment and the competitive position of U.S. products in world markets; and that the benefits of federally financed and other research must be placed more fully in the hands of American business by means of federally supported state action.

Authorized the Secretary of Commerce to make matching grants of up to $10 million in fiscal 1966, $20 million in fiscal 1967 and $30 million in fiscal 1968 in support of technical service programs approved by the states through designated state agencies. (Planning grants would not require matching.) Permitted him to reserve 20 percent each year for programs which he determined to have special merit or to be otherwise needed.

Defined technical services as "activities or programs designed to enable businesses, commerce and industrial establishments to acquire and use scientific and engineering information more effectively," such as: disseminating technical information by means of reports, computer tapes, microfilms and reviews and the establishment of state or interstate technical information centers; providing a reference service to identify sources of scientific and engineering expertise; and sponsoring industrial workshops, seminars, training programs, extension courses, demonstrations and field visits to encourage more effective application of technology.

Directed the state agency designated as administrator of the technical services program in each state to use the resources of state and private institutions of higher education which offered degrees in science, engineering or business administration in carrying out the Act.

As a condition for federal grants, directed each designated state agency to prepare a five-year plan outlining the economic and technological conditions of the state, taking into account the region's business, commerce and industrial potential and identifying the major regional and industrial problems; directed that the plan would also specify the general approaches and methods to be used in the solution of these problems and outline the means of measuring the impact of such assistance on the state and regional economy; and directed that the plan specify how technical services would be administered and coordinated. The five-year plan could be revised annually. Each state would get $25,000 in non-matching funds to prepare its plan.

Also directed the designated state agency to prepare an annual plan for technical services, detailing specific services and showing how they advanced the five-year plan, containing a budget and indicating specific responsibilities assigned to various institutions in the state.

Directed that the annual plans and the five-year plans be filed with the Secretary of Commerce after clearance by the state's Governor. Directed the Secretary to reject a plan if the services were in competition with privately available services.

Encouraged interstate agreements by two or more states combining and coordinating their technical services programs. A single agency could administer combined programs.

Directed designated state agencies to appoint advisory boards representing community interests.

Background

The Commerce Department Jan. 15 sent to Congress draft legislation to establish a state technical services program. In a transmittal letter, then-Commerce Secretary Luther H. Hodges said the bill would carry out a recommendation in President Johnson's 1964 Economic Report that "the Federal Government should join with private business and our universities in speeding the development and spread of new technology." (1964 Almanac p. 871)

The draft bill, introduced in the Senate (S 949) by Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) and in the House (HR 3420) by Oren Harris (D Ark.), was similar in most respects to the final version (see Provisions, above), but it specified that a land grant college or state university would administer the program in each state unless the Governor explained why he had chosen a different agent, and it provided for a five-year program without authorization limits.

In a campaign speech to the Scientists and Engineers for Johnson-Humphrey on Oct. 11, 1964, Hubert H. Humphrey outlined a Democratic program for "obtaining more knowledge and...making sure that all the people reap the benefits." One point of the program was to establish "industrial clinics, taking advantage of the resources in engineering, business, economics and other academic specialties possessed by our fine universities." (In following up other promises made by Humphrey in the speech, the Administration in 1965 formed a Panel on Invention and Innovation in the National Bureau of Standards. The panel was composed of representatives of industry, commerce and education. It was concerned with finding ways to improve uses of research, including a study of tax policies affecting investment in research.)

The concept of a state technical services program had been promoted by J. Herbert Hollomon, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Science and Technology, who revived a long-standing argument that the Federal Government should encourage innovation and experimentation in industry in the same way that it has done in agriculture. In 1963 and 1964, Congress rejected Hollomon's requests for modest funds ($6.4 million in fiscal 1964) for a federal civilian industrial technology program to support and encourage research in various industries and to promote the dissemination of information about research. The 1965 state technical services proposal, which concentrated on state action and did not propose any new federally financed research, by contrast was widely supported in Congress. Congress also liked the idea that the program was designed to reap additional benefits from current and past federal (and other) research investments.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Commerce.

HELD HEARINGS -- June 8-10 on S 949, as proposed by the Commerce Department.

TESTIMONY -- June 8 -- Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor said major regional and industrial "imbalances" existed "in our use of advanced technology." He continued, "Some industries are unable to adapt to new technology. Some companies within prosperous industries do not take advantage of the latest technology available. Our large expenditures for national defense and space exploration, while justified for their direct ends, are limited in the extent to which they contribute to the productivity of the rest of our economy. The regions of the country which are economically most successful and the companies and industries that have thrived did not generally achieve their healthy position by discovering new knowledge in a laboratory -- they achieved it by putting new or advanced technology to work."

Connor said the legislation would: "help to increase the industrial strength of the entire country, including those areas which are now economically weak...; stimulate an increase in technological manpower and employment opportunities...; enhance our competitive position in world markets....; (and) stimulate creation of new businesses and industries."

Connor said that the high costs of American labor put American products with a high labor content "increasingly at a competitive disadvantage." Moreover, he said, "Imports are successfully competing in our domestic markets, even in high technological products such as machine tools, scientific instruments, office and computing machines, motors and generators, railway equipment and aircraft. European plants are frequently more productive than our own." Connor said that it appeared on the basis of studies of selected industries that were at least 20 years old that "a few modern plants are highly productive but a large proportion of establishments are using obsolete techniques that reduce their competitive position." He observed that innovation was often risky and costly for a company, but could be encouraged through a federal-state program to spread knowledge of the results of scientific and technological discoveries and opportunities, using the services of universities and technical institutions. As examples, he suggested that "the principal industry of a state might benefit from demonstrations of the latest technology pertinent to the area, or from practical workshops or seminars designed to upgrade the training of businessmen and their key skilled technicians" or that "seminars and demonstrations on new welding techniques would be useful" to a variety of local businesses, or that programs might be developed to introduce businessmen to the advantages of computers in planning market surveys or supply distribution.

J. Herbert Hollomon, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Science and Technology, said that it would probably take five years for all states to prepare plans and start technical services under the program.

Dr. Donald Hornig, special assistant to the President for science and technology, said that since the beginning of World War II, the United States had spent more than $100 billion in public and private funds on research and development, "principally in fields directly related to military hardware but also in pure, unapplied research and to some extent in fields related to civilian applications." He called S 949 an "experiment" to "narrow the gap between what is known and what is used; between the best industrial techniques based on latest technology and outmoded, inefficient practices."

Philip K. Reily, representing the Atlantic Research Corp. of Alexandria, Va., supported S 949 and said he had already helped to organize a regional conference on application of science and technology. He referred to a National Education Assn. illustration of the rate of growth of knowledge and technology which stated that the total body of man's knowledge doubled in the period 1 AD - 1750 AD, doubled again between 1750 and 1900, again between 1900 and 1950, and a fourth time between 1950 and 1960.

June 9 -- George G. Marra, head of the wood technology section of the Division of Industrial Research, Washington State University, said, "Technical information is now at a flood stage, and the need for it in industry has never been greater.... However, the channels by which the information and the problems can meet have become inadequate." He supported S 949.

The following witnesses also gave testimony supporting S 949 and described efforts in their states in similar programs: Chris E. Barthel Jr., executive director of the Research Foundation of Kansas; Jean Paul Mather, executive vice president of the University City Science Center, Philadelphia, Pa.; Waldo W. Wegner, director of the Center for Industrial Research and Services, Iowa State University; Thomas F. Malone, vice president for research, Travelers Insurance Co., Hartford, Conn.; and George W. Hubley, director, State of Maryland Department of Economic Development.

June 10 -- John P. McGowan, director of the Franklin Institute library, Philadelphia, testified that Franklin Institute had, since its founding in 1824, carried on scientific and technical information services for Pennsylvania. He said the Institute had developed a library with "vast resources" for information on engineering, physics and chemistry and was making this information available to industry through a technical information service. McGowan said that nonprofit institutions, such as the Franklin Institute, should play a role under S 949, as should individual companies with a large store of technical information for sale, and professional societies.

Thomas Marshall Hahn, president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, representing the National Assn. of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, supported S 949. He said, "The universities can perform for industry the same research and development function they have peformed so effectively for agriculture."

Donald E. Marlowe, dean of engineering and architecture at Catholic University, Washington, D.C., representing the National Society of Professional Engineers, supported S 949 but said it should place stress on disseminating information, not "services" and avoid competition with consultants and other private firms operating "in the area of the application of advanced scientific and technical information to the problems of industry."

Henry R. Chope, representing the Industrial Nucleonics Corp. of Columbus, Ohio, supported S 949.

Edwin W. Webber, director of interstate relations for the New England Council, stated that a regional technical services program under S 949 would accelerate expansion of the economy of New England.

In a statement filed with the Committee, the National Assn. of Manufacturers opposed S 949, saying that it tended to duplicate existing services provided by government and business. The statement also said that the NAM did not believe additional education and information would stimulate the growth potential of small businesses, because their problems were more related to lack of management skills and inadequate financing.

In a statement filed with the Committee, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States supported S 949 but recommended that the $25,000 in annual planning funds be made contingent upon state matching.

ACTION -- The Committee July 1 reported S 949 (S Rept 421), amended to authorize a five-year program with $10 million in the first year, $20 million in the second year, $30 million in the third and $40 million in each of the last two years. The bill also was amended to permit a state to designate any agency, instead of just land grant institutions, to administer its program.

FLOOR ACTION

The Senate July 19 passed S 949 by voice vote, without amendment, and sent it to the House. During brief debate, the bill's floor manager, Commerce Committee Chairman Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.), said it "uniquely treats the results of science as a national resource, to be diffused more efficiently by state and local action." He said that there was currently "no national effort...to take the results of this federally financed research and development, as well as other significant scientific findings, and put them to use effectively by those who comprehend local needs: by the local businesses, by the industries of states and regions, by local chambers of commerce, by labor, by the universities and by responsible state and local officials." S 949 would do this, he said. Magnuson added that Secretary Connor had stated that no state would be allocated more than $2 million or less than $150,000 in a single year under the program.

Hugh Scott (R Pa.) said the bill could result in the development of new products and "new technologies to aid in the revival of declining industries." He said the bill would be "a great help to the industrial complex of Pennsylvania."

House

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

HELD HEARINGS -- July 1-3 on an Administration bill (HR 3420) authorizing federal grants to the states to establish technical services for industry. The bill was identical to S 949. Testimony at the hearings was similar to that delivered before the Senate Commerce Committee (see above).

ACTION -- Aug. 19 reported HR 3420 (H Rept 817) with amendments. As reported, the bill differed from S 949 as passed by the Senate principally in providing a three-year authorization of $60 million instead of a five-year authorization of $140 million; and in eliminating a provision which permitted the Secretary of Commerce to provide up to 10 percent in additional funds to regional or interstate technical service programs without a requirement for matching funds from nonfederal sources.

Majority Views. The report said about 28 states currently operated programs to disseminate scientific and technical information to businesses and industries. It said a federal program would entice other states to establish such services and would help existing programs.

The report also said that the Commerce Department would establish an office to coordinate the state programs and provide, in conjunction with the existing Clearinghouse for Federal Scientific and Technical Information, a center for both federal and nonfederal scientific and technological information.

Additional Views. Reps. William L. Springer (R Ill.), Hastings Keith (R Mass), James T. Broyhill (R N.C.), Ancher Nelsen (R Minn.), Albert W. Watson (R S.C.), Willard S. Curtin (R Pa.) and Samuel L. Devine (R Ohio) signed additional views supporting the bill but objecting that there were no safeguards "as to the way the money will be handled in the planning stages." They recommended that plans be required to have a detailed assessment of the needs of the states or regions for the services provided under the bill; that greater recognition be made of a variety of existing federal programs for disseminating scientific and technological material; and that greater recognition be made of "some 300" private and institutional programs which currently furnished technical services to commerce and industry.

FLOOR ACTION

The House Sept. 1 passed HR 3420 by voice vote. It then substituted the provisions of the bill for those of S 949 as passed by the Senate and returned the latter bill to the Senate.

During debate, the bill's floor manager, Torbert H. Macdonald (D Mass.), said the bill would provide businesses and industries with "a new and important pipeline of commercial information. This can serve as a vital stimulus, particularly to the smaller and less sophisticated businesses and industries." He said the Department of Commerce would establish an Office of State Technical Services to "serve as a clearinghouse for information coming in on all...subjects."

The House by voice vote rejected an amendment by Hastings Keith (R Mass.) to require that the $25,000 a year in planning money authorized for each state under the bill be matched by nonfederal funds.

Final Action

The Senate Sept. 7 by voice vote accepted the House version of S 949, clearing the bill for the President's signature.

Bill Signed. The State Technical Services Act of 1965 was signed into law Sept. 14 at the White House (PL 89-182). On signing the law, President Johnson said that 20 years hence, Americans would look back on the bill as the "sleeper" of the 89th Congress.

He said, "The test of our generation will not be the accumulation of knowledge. In that, we have surpassed all of the ages of man combined. Our test will be how well we apply that knowledge for the betterment of all mankind.... This bill will do for the American businessman what the great Agricultural Extension Service has done for the American farmer.... The vehicles for success will be 250 colleges and technical schools throughout the land. They will distribute the information. They will serve as the economic planning centers for their areas...."

CONGRESS FAILED TO REVISE U.S. COPYRIGHT LAW

Congress in 1965 failed to act on legislation substantially revising the 1909 Copyright Law. Extensive hearings by House Judiciary Subcommittee No. 3 on an omnibus copyright revision bill (HR 4347) revealed so many conflicting views on how the Copyright Law should be revised that Congress put off action on the bill. Two days of hearings on an identical bill (S 1006) by the Senate Judiciary Patents, Trademarks and Copyrights Subcommittee also brought out conflicting views.

For lack of consensus, Congress Aug. 28, 1965, enacted stop-gap legislation (H J Res 431 -- PL 89-142) which extended through Dec. 31, 1967, the renewal term of any copyright due to expire prior to that time. The purpose of the measure was to provide a temporary extension of existing copyrights pending Congressional consideration of a complete revision of the Copyright Law. A similar extension (PL 87-668) enacted in 1962 expired Dec. 31, 1965. (1962 Almanac p. 415)

HR 4347 was the outgrowth of a ten-year study of the existing copyright statute by the Copyright Office of the Library of Congress. The omnibus revision bill was drafted by the Register of Copyrights, Abraham L. Kaminstein, members of his staff and a panel of 29 copyright specialists appointed by the Librarian of Congress.

Copyright is the right of an author to control the reproduction and dissemination of his work after it has been disclosed. Copyright does not preclude others from using the ideas or information contained in the work; it pertains to the literary, musical, artistic or graphic form in which the concepts are expressed. The primary purposes of copyright legislation were to foster the creation and dissemination of works for the public benefit, and to give authors due reward for their contribution to society.

Background

REFERENCE -- Revision of U.S. Copyright Laws (Congress and the Nation p. 658).

Statutes for copyright protection were among the earliest laws enacted in the United States. The Constitution empowered Congress "to promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries" (Article 1, Section 8).

In 1909, all prior statutes enacted in the United States were replaced by a single comprehensive copyright law which expanded the scope of copyright protection from written and dramatic works to musical and pictorial works. The 1909 law was codified and re-enacted in 1947 as Title 17 of the United States Code.

Since 1909 the development of commercial radio, motion pictures and sound recordings contributed to the view that the Copyright Law of 1909 was inadequate and inadaptable. The situation was complicated further by advances made in more recent years in the area of electronic, as distinct from mechanical, means of reproduction -- television, film slides, computer outprints and xerography.

Several attempts were made during the past 50 years to revise the Copyright Law. Conflicts among various interest groups over the basic provisions of the statute contributed to the failure of these attempts in all but a few details. In 1954, the United States became a member of the Universal Copyright Convention and amended (PL 83-743) Title 17 of the Copyright Law in minor details to conform to the Convention. The Convention provided for reciprocal copyright protection to the scientific and artistic works of member nations.

Preparation of the 1965 Bill. Beginning in 1955, the Copyright Office of the Library of Congress sponsored 35 studies analyzing the major problems of the Copyright Law. In 1961, the Library of Congress submitted to Congress the Report of the Register of Copyrights on the General Revision of the Copyright Law.

Meanwhile, Congress in 1962 enacted H J Res 627 (PL 87-668) extending the renewal term of existing copyrights through 1965. The Department of Justice, in a letter from Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, then Acting Deputy Attorney General, objected to an extension on the grounds that copyrights were a form of monopoly and should not be extended for periods longer than provided by law.

In the light of extensive comments on the 1961 report by consultants and representatives of various interest groups, the Copyright Office substantially revised its recommendations and prepared a preliminary draft revision bill. The bill (S 3008, HR 11947) was introduced in the 88th Congress for purposes of consideration and comment.

During 1964, the Register of Copyrights conducted discussions on the draft bill with interested parties. As a result of these discussions, legislation drafted by the Copyright Office (S 1006, HR 4347) and introduced in Congress Feb. 4, 1965, included technical and substantive changes intended to clarify provisions of the 1964 bill.

Provisions

As introduced in the 89th Congress, the omnibus bill would have amended the Copyright Law as follows:

Duration of Term. Provided for copyright protection during the creator's life, plus 50 years. The life-plus-50-years term was in line with the term in most countries of the world, including all of Western Europe. Existing law provided for a term of 28 years, with a renewal term of 28 years by the author or certain of his heirs, after which the work passed into the public domain.

In the case of anonymous or pseudonymous works, or works made for hire -- that is, work prepared by an employee within the scope of his employment with copyright ownership by existing law vested in the employer or, additionally, work commissioned for use in a collective work (i.e. translations, indexes, movies) -- copyright protection applied 75 years from publication, or 100 years from creation, whichever expired first.

Reversion. Permitted authors to terminate a transfer of copyright ownership or right of first publication during a five-year period beginning 35 years after transfer or anytime 35 years after first publication.

Government Publications. Continued the existing prohibition against copyright protection of work by an employee of the United States Government within the scope of his official duties or employment. Provided, however, that the Government was not precluded from receiving or holding copyrights transferred to it.

For-Profit Limitation. Removed the exemption from royalty payments for all non-profit performances of a non-dramatic literary or musical work. Authorized, instead, exemptions for specific types of non-profit performances and, in addition, non-profit exhibitions: classroom instruction, intramural educational broadcasting, religious assembly, non-public performances where performers were not paid and spectators not charged admission or where the proceeds were used for educational, religious or charitable purposes, and non-profit retransmissions to the public (i.e., via a "booster" or "translator") which did not change the content of the original transmission and did not charge the recipients. The bill did not exempt community antenna television (CATV) systems and other commercial systems that transmitted broadcasts of copyrighted material to the public.

"Ephemeral" Recordings. Permitted broadcasting organizations entitled to transmit a performance of a copyrighted work to make single "ephemeral" recordings or copies for public transmission or archival preservation, but prohibited transmission after six months.

Sound Recordings. Extended copyright protection to sound recordings and limited exclusive rights to protection against public performance, duplication and sale of records recapturing or "dubbing" the actual sounds fixed in the copyrighted recording. Copyright would not extend, therefore, to recordings that simulated or imitated the copyrighted work.

Jukebox Exemption. Repealed the existing exemption of jukebox operators (owners and lessors) from paying performance royalties and instead stipulated that jukebox owners must pay license fees (presumably to a "performing rights society") for the public performance of music for profit. Existing law exempted an operator if there was no admission charge to the place where the jukebox operated.

Compulsory License. Retained the existing compulsory license for making and distributing records of a non-dramatic musical work. Increased the mechanical (manufacturing) royalties from two cents per work contained in a record to three cents per work or one cent per minute (or fraction of a minute) of playing time, whichever was greater. (Thus a manufacturer would pay the flat three-cent rate for a work up to three minutes long, and the one-cent rate for any work over three minutes long).

Fair Use. Recognized the doctrine of "fair use" of copyrighted material, but did not indicate the application or define the scope of the doctrine. "Fair use" of copyrighted material thus remained a judicial doctrine based on decisional law. The doctrine permitted reproduction of excerpts for such purposes as criticism and scholarship.

Notice of Copyright. Continued the requirement that published copies of a work indicate their copyright, as a condition of protection. Provided further, however, that omission or error (i.e., in name or date) would not forfeit the copyright. Innocent infringers misled by the omission or error would not be held liable.

Manufacturing Clause. Retained the present requirement that English-language books and periodicals be manufactured in the United States in order to obtain full copyright protection, except for importation of a limited number of foreign editions of a work. Increased the import limit from 1,500 copies to 3,500. Importation of additional copies, however, would no longer result in forfeit of the copyright. Illegally imported copies would be subject to forfeiture.

Further, exempted books from the manufacturing requirement which were not written by an American citizen or resident, or were imported for use by the Federal or a state government, or were intended for non-profit scholarly, educational or religious use, or were written in Braille.

INTEREST GROUPS

During House and Senate hearings, controversies arose between copyright owners and users. Authors and educators expressed strongly conflicting views on free educational use of copyrighted work. Other points at issue included the status of jukeboxes and CATV systems; license fees for making a record of copyrighted music; and the manufacturing clause.

Authors and Composers. Groups representing authors' and composers' interests generally favored the bill, with a few reservations. The groups supported repeal of a blanket exemption for non-profit uses of copyrighted material and, in some cases, demanded greater restrictions against free use of such material than the bill provided. They asserted that a protective copyright law was in the public interest, benefiting users as well as owners, because it promoted creation of valuable materials that would be available in education. Authors' and composers' groups supported the proposed extension of copyright term, the right of reversion, repeal of the jukebox exemption and higher license fees for record-making. The groups generally opposed proposed "works for hire" provisions (see Duration of Term, above). Irwin Karp, Counsel to the Authors League of America, in the Jan. 6, 1965, issue of Variety, said that because works written on "special order of commission" would be in the "works for hire" category, such works would not receive the protection authors desired.

Educators. Educators generally opposed HR 4347, which, they said, failed to protect and advance the rights of education. Opposition centered on provisions in the bill which limited copying and using excerpts of copyrighted works to specific categories of non-profit use. Educational television and radio, along with educators, asked for a general, uniform exemption for limited copying for non-profit educational use and for statutory expansion of the doctrine of "fair use" to permit any educational use of copyrighted work. Educators also opposed lengthening the term of copyright.

Publishers. While publishers generally favored proposals contained in HR 4347, they opposed the right of reversion and extension of the copyright term. However, they favored proposed "works for hire" provisions, which gave them copyright ownership over works they had commissioned for a certain period of time, without the right of reversion.

Some publishers, particularly textbook publishers, opposed the manufacturing clause. They argued that were it not possible to perform certain types of complex composition abroad, many books used in higher education could not be published because of high composition costs in the United States.

Manufacturers. Book manufacturers and typesetters favored retention of the manufacturing clause. They argued that work sent abroad where composition cost less meant loss of business to them.

(Continued on next page)

Other Groups. The record manufacturing industry consistently opposed the proposed increase in license fees for making and distributing records of a copyrighted work. Composers and music publishers generally favored the fee increase.

Juke box owners and lessors opposed repeal of the jukebox exemption. They said the cost of performance royalties would put them out of business and that composers were already sufficiently compensated for their work through royalties paid by record manufacturers.

While commercial broadcasters insisted CATV systems pay license fees, CATV spokesmen claimed there was no technical or legal basis on which CATV should pay fees for retransmitting a broadcast.

House Hearings

COMMITTEE -- House Judiciary Subcommittee No. 3.

HELD HEARINGS -- May 26-June 30, Aug. 12, 18, 19, 26, Sept. 1-2 on a bill (HR 4347) amending the Copyright Law of 1909.

TESTIMONY -- May 26 -- George D. Cary, Deputy Register of Copyrights, whose office prepared HR 4347, said extension of the term of copyright protection to cover the author's life, plus an additional 50 years -- the term of copyright in most European countries -- was necessary because of the "many legal problems" which could result when the copyright of a work had expired in the United States but continued in effect in other countries. "We are entirely sympathetic with the aims of non-profit users" of copyrighted material, such as teachers and educational broadcasters, he said, but he added that the "unrestrained use of photocopying, recording and other devices for the reproduction of authors' works...may severely curtail the copyright owner's market of his work." About jukeboxes, he said, "No satisfactory explanation has been given why the circumstances of coin operation alone should exempt the performance of jukebox music, while all other commercial performances of copyrighted music remain subject to protection." Of CATV, he said, "It is our view that the CATV operators are making a performance to the public of a copyright owner's work (which) results in a profit which, in all fairness, the copyright owner should share." Cary said the bill "specifically and unequivocally affirms" the "primary goal" of educating children, by authorizing the unrestricted use in a classroom of all copyrighted materials and recognizing the doctrine of fair use. Cary explained the bill would only exclude the right to make multiple copies of excerpts or a complete copy of any copyrighted work. He also stated, "It does not seem too much to ask that some of the money going to support educational broadcasting activities be used to compensate authors and publishers whose works are essential to those activities."

Publishers, Authors Testify

Lee Deighton, chairman of the Macmillan Company, represented the American Textbook Publishers Institute. He supported the bill generally but criticized exemptions for instructional use as "free use which would ...ultimately destroy our market" and which would "determine by policy that the private publication of instructional materials is to be discontinued." He called it "an outright tariff provision that has no place in a copyright law" and a provision which would place "an impossible burden upon the publication of scholarly and technical books for which type must be set abroad."

Former Sen. Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y. 1959-1965), counsel for a group of 10 publishers, supported the bill and urged the Committee "to see to it that the private property rights of the intellectual and creative people of our nation are guarded and protected with the same respect as any other segment of our national gross product."

Members of the Authors League of America also testified in general support of the bill, with reservations. John Hersey said the League's members had indicated their average annual earnings from writing was $3,000 and he urged Congress to protect these "relatively small earnings." Herman Wouk said any form of copying without compensation was "piracy" and suggested that a community of art and intelligence in a free country rested on restriction of the right to copy.

May 27 -- Tom Mahoney, member of the Society of Magazine Writers, supported HR 4347. He said the provision stating that in collective works the copyright vested in the author (rather than the compiler or publisher, for example) was "a major improvement" over existing law.

Harriet F. Pilpel, general counsel to the American Society of Magazine Photographers and the Society of Magazine Writers, said the most prevalent kind of copying was that from contributions to periodicals. She endorsed HR 4347 but criticized the "manufacturing clause" and said a photograph or article appearing in a collective work would not be protected should the total work "run afoul" of the clause by being printed abroad.

Photographer Edward Steichen said the bill would give photography (the "young giant among arts") equal rights "by having its peculiar problems taken into account."

David Linton, representing the American Society of Magazine Photographers, said the proposal to revise the definition of "publication" to include "exhibition" of a work was "of great importance" to creators of graphic works.

Alfred H. Wasserstrom, representing the Magazine Publishers Assn., backed the bill but recommended amendments intended to omit an author's right of reversion and to restrict the duration of copyright "to a definite and ascertainable time."

Composers Propose Changes

Roger Sessions, composer and music educator, proposed exemptions for educational institutions for music performances but he objected to any exemptions for "enterprises, such as broadcasting, which, though characterized as 'educational,' serve the public at large." Sessions also said copyright royalties were often the only means of compensation for a work if the work was not at first "accepted by the public" because of "fluctuation" in music fashions.

William Dillon, composer of the song, "I Want a Girl Just Like the Girl That Married Dear Old Dad," said the proposed extension of copyright term would mean continued income from royalties on this song, "the primary source" of financial support for him. The copyright on the song was due to expire in two years under existing law, Dillon said.

Herman Finklestein, general counsel for the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP), supported repeal of the jukebox exemption. Finklestein said automated music had "greatly diminished" the demand for sheet music and income from that source. Repeal of the jukebox exemption, he said, would restore to the songwriter and copyright owner "the same property rights the farmer, the shopkeeper, and the candlestick maker have...the right to own his property, to control it, and to make a living from it, without special exemptions to any profit-making enterprise."

Sydney M. Kaye, general counsel of Broadcast Music, Inc. (BMI), an organization which licensed performances, called the jukebox exemption "the core defect" of existing copyright law. He said any exemption for musical performances by educational television stations would be "intolerable and unjust," as the distinctions between educational and commercial television "are even now being eroded."

May 28 -- Richard B. Jablow, general counsel to the National Council on the Arts and Government, called HR 4347 "a great step forward...(towards) the progress of the arts and artists." Jablow's single criticism of the bill was the proposed "works made for hire" provisions which, he said, prevented the author from receiving "the maximum benefits from the exploitation" of his work.

Philip B. Wattenberg, representing the Music Publisher's Assn., said passage of the bill would "greatly stimulate creativity in all fields of art and...activity in industries dependent upon copyright" and would "modernize" the copyright law "to make it fit the vast technological changes and developments" since 1909. Wattenberg specifically endorsed the proposed increase in the royalty rate for recording musical works.

James R. Webb, former chairman of the Writers Guild of America, objected to the "works for hire" clause which, he said, would "discriminate" against authors whose works functioned "almost without exception" within an employment or commissioned relationship, i.e., were written for motion pictures, radio or television.

Ad Hoc Committee on Revision

June 2 -- The Ad Hoc Committee on Copyright Law Revision, composed of 34 leading educational organizations, sent representatives to propose revisions in the bill. The Ad Hoc Committee, formed in 1963, asked for "copying privileges" necessary for "good teaching practices."

Harold E. Wigren, chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee, said HR 4347 did not give teachers the kind of privileges they needed. "Good teaching practice and modern instructional technology mandate certain (free) uses of copyrighted materials" which the proposed bill did not support, Wigren said. He suggested that the law "give to education an automatic limited exemption," which would solve the "difficulties and delays in obtaining clearances for use of materials and in the requirement which is often imposed of paying for such uses." Wigren emphasized that teachers were not asking for privileges "forbidden by law," such as making a copy of an entire work, such as a textbook, a novel or a reference work, but were asking for "privileges" which would allow books and technological resources, including educational broadcasting, to be "immediately available for the 'teachable moment' when the learner is motivated to learn." Wigren said such free uses of copyrighted material would include making multiple copies of entire short poems or essays, reproducing maps or graphs and taping radio programs for classroom use. Wigren said the Ad Hoc Committee opposed the proposed lack of statutory definition of "fair use," the categorical exemptions rather than a "uniform general" exemption under the limitations on performances of works for profit, the limitation of educational television exemptions to telecasts received in classrooms ("this ignores the great potentiality of instructional television in reaching adults and children in their homes"), the six-month limitation on television's or broadcasting's use (play-back) of a recorded performance (this "would render copying privileges" for educational television "useless"), and extension of the copyright term through an author's lifetime which would prevent teachers from using "the great majority" of copyrighted material in the public domain.

Harry N. Rosenfield, counsel to the Ad Hoc Committee, recommended the following amendments to HR 4347: an educational exemption for limited copying for non-profit educational purposes, including making "one copy or phonorecord" of a full non-dramatic work or multiple copies of excerpts or quotations except from "consumable" works (workbook exercises, answer sheets); permission for one copy of a dramatic work if its use was restricted to students; permission for general, non-profit broadcast of a work; clarification of the "fair use" provision to provide free use of copyrighted material for criticism, comment, teaching, scholarship, research and "non-commercial educational use by a non-profit educational institution or organization"; authorize a court to waive statutory damages for innocent infringement of copyright by teachers; and a copyright term of 28 years plus a renewal term of either 28 or 48 years.

Lois V. Edinger, president of the National Education Assn. of the United States, endorsed the Ad Hoc Committee's recommendations as "essential" and urged Congress not to "undercut its own great achievements in educational legislation" by enacting HR 4347 in its present form, which was "not in harmony with the best interests of education."

June 3 -- Charles F. Gosnell, chairman of the Committee on Copyright Issues of the American Library Assn., said he was alarmed by the attempts of "special interests to convert the proposed modernization of the copyright law into a grab-bag (and) to revoke the...rights and customs of scholars and researchers by (restricting) the use of copyrighted material, while extending almost ad infinitum the rights of authors." Gosnell recommended amending HR 4347 to exempt libraries from import restrictions and penalties, make the duration of copyright for a "fixed term," and authorize libraries to make single photocopies of works in certain cases.

Views of Educational Broadcasters

June 4 -- Opposing HR 4347, Raymond D. Hurlbert, president of the National Assn. for Educational Television, said the bill would impose an "embarrassing, if not impossible, financial burden" on educational television (ETV) stations.

(Continued on next page)

Eugene N. Aleinikoff, chairman of the Joint National Educational Television - Educational Stations Committee on Music and Copyright, emphasized that ETV stations were "closely allied" to local educational institutions and therefore should be accorded "the same copyright exemption status...as enjoyed" by the institutions.

William J. Harley, president of the National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters (NAEB), said the bill as presently drafted "would effectively preclude substantially all instruction and enrichment (through educational radio and television) of persons unable to come to classrooms on a regular basis or any basis at all."

June 9 -- Robert E. Nims, owner of A.M.A. Distributors, which distributes coin operated phonographs (jukeboxes), and representing the National Small Business Assn., objected to repeal of the jukebox exemption. Nims said performance royalties were "not intended for the phonograph record business." Under present law, he argued, authors and composers were "equitably compensated through mechanical (manufacturing) royalty fees by the bulk purchase of phonograph records" used in jukeboxes.

June 10 -- Ernest S. Meyers, counsel for the Record Industry Assn. of America, opposed the proposed increase in record manufacturers' royalties. He said the increase would "impose a burden on the whole record industry, would not be in the public interest, and... would invite record bootlegging."

David Kapp, president of Kapp Records Inc., also opposed the record manufacturers' royalty increase, saying it could "force many record companies to close their doors, because the additional royalty cost...would wipe out the manufacturer's profits...and discourage new enterprise."

John Desmond Glover, speaking for the Record Industry Assn. of America, opposed the rate increase for record manufacturers on the grounds that copyright owners were receiving "a far greater share of the record manufacturer's dollar" than in 1909 (when the law was enacted) because, he said, the number of record selections had increased and the price of records had decreased.

Amendment for U.S. Uses Urged

June 17 -- Dr. Robert H. Bahmer, Deputy Archivist of the United States, urged amendments to HR 4347 to provide that the Federal Government would not be liable for infringement of literary copyrights through using copyrighted material for display, inspection, research or reproduction. The amendment, Bahmer said, would allow the General Services Administration to carry out its responsibility as "custodian and user" of unpublished material, particularly of historically valuable manuscripts. (Unpublished works were currently protected under common law from being published by any other than the owner; HR 4347 would give statutory protection to unpublished works and make them subject to copyright law.) Bahmer also urged amending HR 4347 to allow institutions having legal custody of "historically valuable manuscript collections" to reproduce them for the manuscripts' preservation and security, or for research, without paying royalties.

June 23 -- Albert J. Rosenberg, vice president of the McGraw-Hill book company and manager of the Text-Film Division, opposed the proposed free use by educational television (ETV) of educational films broadcast primarily for classroom reception. Rosenberg argued that such free use by ETV would result in a smaller sales volume for the films and in a reduction of income to the films' producers and of royalties to authors and sponsors.

Mark Carroll, representing the Assn. of American University Presses, opposed the prohibition against copyright protection for a work by an employee of the Federal Government on the grounds that it would not be "fair" to the "tens of thousands" of scholar-authors on the Government payroll or whose research was carried on with the aid of federal grants. Government employees "should enjoy copyright protection for their contributions to scholarship equivalent to that of their fellow scholars outside the Federal Government," Carroll said.

Maxwell C. Freudenberg, patent attorney for the United States Air Force, stated that the Defense Department "basically" favored HR 4347, but he recommended that Government works be allowed copyright protection "for those exceptional cases" which were in the "public interest." He suggested that copyright protection for Government works be given for a "short period of time consistent with the need to provide an incentive to obtain publication and maximum distribution of the work." Freudenberg also recommended that "governmental activities" such as military band concerts or military broadcasts be exempt from paying performance royalties.

CATV "Discrimination" Cited

June 24 -- Frederick W. Ford, former Federal Communications Commission chairman (1960-1961) and president of the National Community Television Assn., Inc., proposed that HR 4347 be amended to exempt community antenna systems (CATV) from paying performance royalties. Ford said that charging CATV royalties would be "an invidious discrimination between Americans" because CATV subscribers would be subjected to a copyright fee merely because "geographic chance" due to "unfavorable terrain or high buildings" interfered with television reception. Among the major reasons Ford contended CATV should be exempt were: unlike a broadcast station, CATV did not "perform" works but merely received and transmitted broadcast signals in the same manner as a private, individual antenna or other connecting equipment; CATV was technically unable to alter material originally transmitted, a condition which, under HR 4347, exempted "boosters"; the CATV viewing public would be "saddled" with a "discriminatory double burden" by having to pay twice to see the same program.

Howard A. Meyerhoff, president of the Committee to Investigate Copyright Problems Affecting Communication in Science and Education (CICP), said the majority of copyright users, including educators, objected to paying royalties because there was "no easy way to do so." He recommended that Congress consider "chartering" a non-profit utility or semi-private corporation as a "copyright clearing house," to be operated jointly by representatives of both consumers and producers of copyrighted works, in order to provide for a "rapid, inexpensive and convenient economic exchange of moderate fees or royalties for rights to copy" or use copyrighted material.

June 30 -- Stanley Ballard, Secretary-Treasurer of the American Federation of Musicians, AFL-CIO, opposed HR 4347 and recommended a copyright law which would give the performing musician a "modicum of economic incentive" and participation in profits derived from the public performance of records.

Aug. 12 -- Eli Cantor, testifying on behalf of the International Typographic Composition Assn., Inc., and the Advertising Typographers Assn. of America, Inc., strongly supported the copyright manufacturing clause as "essential" for the protection of the U.S. printing and typographic industry which, he said, was "at a competitive disadvantage with industries abroad." Cantor recommended, however, that typesetting be specifically required under the manufacturing clause, regardless of the printing process used; that the ceiling for imported foreign editions be lowered from the proposed 3,500 copies to 2,000 copies; and that criminal penalties under the bill be extended to anyone who willfully had a copyrighted work typeset abroad.

Davis A. Boehm, president of the Sterling Publishing Co., Inc., opposed the manufacturing clause and said that the United States was "the only country in the world with a provision that ties copyright to the place where a book is produced. This places the author's work under the control of the printer and binder" who could refuse to produce a work they disapproved of. Boehm also argued that the manufacturing clause had raised the price of U.S. non-fiction books so high that few students could afford to buy them. "And abroad, we cannot compete -- we sell almost entirely to institutions."

Dubbing Restrictions Opposed

Aug. 18 -- Douglas A. Anello, general counsel for the National Assn. of Broadcasters, supported language in the bill which would require community antenna television (CATV) systems to pay copyright royalties. He proposed language to require royalty fees whenever an "indirect charge" was made to hear or see a performance. This would preclude, he said, any argument that CATV does not charge for reception but only for service. Anello opposed proposed restrictions on "dubbing" of sound recordings, recommending that restrictions apply to the sale of a copy of copyrighted material, "not to its mere use."

Aug. 19 -- Robert R. Nathan, representing the Music Publishers' Protective Assn., opposed retaining a statutory fee (provided under current law) for manufacturing records of a copyrighted work. Nathan said he opposed such "statutory price-fixing" on the grounds of "equity" and because, he said, it "severely limits" the bargaining area in which market forces could influence royalty arrangements.

Aug. 26 -- Philip H. Trezise, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, said his Department supported the bill generally and, in particular, supported a provision which allowed the President to grant copyright protection to works of foreign countries with which the United States had no copyright relations.

Sept. 1 -- Commissioner Joe Foss of the American Football League urged that copyright protection be extended to live telecasts of pro football games and other sports events. He said the AFL was threatened with reduced revenues because community antenna television systems were beaming game telecasts into "blacked-out" areas.

Pete Rozelle, National Football League commissioner, and Paul A. Porter, an attorney for professional baseball interests, also asked that copyright laws be extended to CATV relays of live sports events.

Porter said that CATV broadcasts had seriously cut into baseball receipts of minor league clubs.

SENATE HEARINGS

The Senate Judiciary Patents, Trademarks and Copyrights Subcommittee Aug. 18-19 heard much the same testimony as the House Subcommittee did.

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- June 2 -- Members of the International Publisher's Assn., including 700 publishers from 40 countries, meeting in the District of Columbia, expressed criticism of HR 4347, particularly the "manufacturing clause." Sir Stanley Unwin, a British publisher, said the provision was discriminatory. "The United States, which denounces discrimination more vigorously than any other country, discriminates against certain books" in the English language, he said. Sir Stanley stated that the fact that the United States exports "three and one half times as many books as it imports" was proof that the American printing industry did not need protection. "On the contrary," he said, "in view of these figures, any impartial person would suggest that it was we in Britain who needed protection."

Copyright Office Fees

Congress in 1965 enacted a bill (HR 2853 -- PL 89-297) increasing copyright fees, for the first time since 1948, to enable the Copyright Office to recover a larger share of its costs. The bill was expected to raise the Copyright Office's income to 80 percent of expenditures in the first fiscal year following enactment. (The Office was appropriated $2,021,000 for fiscal 1966.) The percentage of recovered costs was in line with the 75-percent recovery provided in a bill raising Patent Office fees (HR 4185 -- PL 89-83). (See story p. 887.)

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 2853 contained the following major provisions:

Increased the maximum price for an entire set of the Catalog of Copyright Entries from $25 to $75.

Increased the majority of registration fees from $4 to $6.

Increased the fee for renewing a copyright from $2 to $4.

Provided, for the first time, a $3 fee for recording a "notice of intention to use" a musical composition and increased from $2 to $3 the fee for recording a "notice of use" of a composition.

BACKGROUND -- HR 2853 was reported by the House Judiciary Committee Aug. 31 (H Rept 895), and passed by the House Sept. 7 by voice vote. The Senate Judiciary Committee reported the bill Oct. 4 (S Rept 814) and the Senate passed it by voice vote Oct. 13. The fee increases had been part of the bill (HR 4347) pending before the House Judiciary Committee which provided for a complete revision of the 1909 Copyright Law.

STUDY OF METRIC SYSTEM VOTED BY SENATE

HR 10329 -- Reported by House Science and Astronautics Committee (H Rept 850) Aug. 24, 1965.
S 774 -- Reported, amended, by Senate Commerce Committee (S Rept 751) Sept. 16.
● Passed by the Senate by voice vote Sept. 20.

Congress in 1965 considered a proposal to study converting the United States to the metric system -- a move debated on and off in the nation for 175 years. The Senate passed a bill (S 774) authorizing such a study, but a similar House bill was held up in the Rules Committee.

S 774 was introduced by Sen. Claiborne Pell (D R.I.), who said the United States should pay more attention to the worldwide trend toward adopting the metric system.

Perhaps the main impetus to renewed debate on conversion was a growing awareness in business and government that the United States might be suffering economically from its position as one of the last major powers to remain on a system of inches, pounds and Fahrenheit degrees. Britain May 24 announced its intention to convert to the metric system of meters, grams and centigrade degrees over the next 10 years. Canada later announced plans to undertake a feasibility study of conversion to the metric system.

The possibility that the United States might be losing some foreign trade by remaining on non-metric standards had caused some businessmen formerly opposed to conversion to reconsider their position.

Opposition to conversion to the metric system continued to stem largely from major industries mass-producing complicated goods such as machine tools and automobiles. These industries would face elaborate and expensive retooling of machines and redesign of thousands of component parts to conform to metric equivalents. Other opposition came from interests with widespread international agreements based on the American non-metric system, such as those involving the machine screw industry.

The feasibility study was supported by the Commerce Department, which called the study "long overdue." The Department said that American trade with metric nations was declining but was increasing with non-metric nations. Certain scientific, trade and business organizations also voiced support for a feasibility study on the grounds that the "metric trend" was moving most foreign nations toward adoption of the metric system.

Background

REFERENCE: "Decimal Currencies, Weights and Measures" (1964 Editorial Research Reports, p. 621)

Systems of measurement had their origins in earliest times, as man developed measurements based on factors of 10, corresponding to the 10 fingers on his hands, and on fractions, based on a circle, which could be divided easily into halves, quarters, eighths, etc.

The present American system was inherited from the British system in Colonial days. The British system was arbitrary, based on such equivalents as three barley corns laid end to end to equal one inch. Units of measurement gaining common acceptance in the American Colonies included the 8-furlong, the 3-mile league, the fathom of two yards, the yard of three feet, the foot of 12 inches and the inch of 10 peppercorns.

In 18th Century France, the confusion over various systems of measurement became so extreme that the French Academy of Sciences undertook to devise a new system. This system was based on the meter, or one ten-millionth of the distance from the equator to true North. The system was adopted by France in 1795 along with the decimal system for currency and the centigrade scale for temperature, with zero equaling the freezing point and 100 the boiling point of water. A central difference between the metric and non-metric systems, therefore, was that the former was based on demonstrable scientific evidence.

In America, various proposals to adopt the metric system were put forward in the early decades of the Republic, but Congress failed to act on them. Between 1830 and 1836, executive action established standard units of weights and measures. In 1866, Congress permitted use of the metric system, but it failed to gain popular acceptance. The United States did participate in international conventions and agreements establishing standards of the metric system, but successive efforts to adopt it for the nation failed.

The United States remained on its elaborate system of avoirdupois and apothecary weights and measures -- 16 ounces in a pound, 2,000 pounds in a short ton, 2,240 pounds in a long ton; 12 inches in a foot, three feet in a yard, 16-1/2 feet in a rod, 5,280 feet in a mile; 16 fluid ounces in a pint, two pints in a quart and four quarts in a gallon. Dry measure consisted of eight quarts in a peck and four pecks in a bushel. In troy weight, 12 ounces equaled a pound. Americans customarily used short tons while the British reckoned in long tons, and the British imperial gallon was slightly larger than the American gallon.

The metric system, properly called the International System of Units, used the meter (39.37 inches) as the unit of length, the gram (.035 of an avoirdupois ounce) for weight or mass and the liter (1.06 of a liquid quart or .908 of a dry quart) for capacity. Metric units could be made larger or smaller by factors of 10 by adding prefixes, such as centimeter for 1/100 of a meter or kilometer for 1,000 meters.

The United States, however, began to adopt the metric system piecemeal and developed a mixed system of weights and measures. It adopted the second, which is the basic metric unit of time, and the watt (named for the 18th Century Scottish instrument maker and engineer, James Watt) which is the standard metric unit of power, whether mechanical, thermal, electric or nuclear.

The error factor in mixed usage proved high, and the pharmaceutical and optical industries, for example, adopted the metric system in the United States. The medical profession moved toward metric measurements for prescriptions, and in 1957 the U.S. Army and Marine Corps adopted it for all weapons measurements, sights, training aids and firing tables, with total conversion scheduled to be completed by 1966. The major part of activities of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration were converted to the metric system to reduce errors from mixed usage.

Pros and Cons

Proponents of conversion to the metric system argue that America's position as the only major non-metric power could jeopardize its role in world trade. About 90 percent of the world's population lives in nations using the metric system, they say. Most of Europe adopted the metric system in the 19th Century, and in recent years more nations have adopted that system -- Egypt (1951), Israel, Jordan and Taiwan (all 1954), Sudan (1955), India (1958) and Greece and Japan (1959). The Soviet Union adopted it in 1927, and Communist China turned to the metric system in 1949.

The difficulties in trade with metric countries, proponents of conversion argue, range from the inability to interchange small parts for machines and tools to major problems of adapting engineering and other technical designs to metric equivalents. American engineers use the non-metric system, and a construction blueprint drafted in this nation is difficult to translate into metric measures and may even require some re-calculation.

Supporters of metric conversion also point out that United States foreign assistance programs, designed to strengthen recipient countries' economies and help develop them into trading partners, may fail of full benefit if those nations tend to trade with countries on the metric system.

Scientists, many of whom use the metric system, advocate its adoption for the sake of simplicity and international uniformity, as do educators.

Opponents of conversion say that the move would be too costly, confusing and complicated to American industry and to the public. They point out that the American system is widely accepted in certain major areas of production, such as machine screws and automobile tires, in which American industry is dominant. Moreover, they say, the American system works just as well for production and engineering purposes as does the metric system.

While some difficulties in foreign trade might be encountered, opponents say, American producers should not suffer substantially from the "metric trend" overseas since they are so technologically advanced that their products will continue to be in demand.

If the United States converts to the metric system, opponents say, major industries would have to retool and frequently re-build machines at enormous expense; suppliers would need to maintain double inventories during the process of conversion; and everyday items from road signs to the butcher's scale would have to be altered to the new scheme.

Both sides of the dispute agree that it would be costly in any event and that a method of conversion that would be sensible and equitable would be difficult to work out. Some supporters of conversion say the entire economy should be converted over a period of years, while others suggest that selected areas be converted and that economic incentives be offered to industries complying with the move.

Senate Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Senate Commerce.

HELD HEARINGS -- July 14 on S 774 to direct the Secretary of Commerce to undertake a study on the feasibility, cost and methods of adopting the metric system and authorizing $2.5 million for the study.

TESTIMONY -- July 14 -- Sen. Pell said that since the cost of conversion is the "crux of the problem," a feasibility study would be a logical move. "Persons who state that it will cost between $10 billion and $500 billion to convert are, in fact, skating on the thin ice of emotionalism," he said. "Some estimates have the United States losing between $10 billion and $20 billion in foreign trade annually because we do not use the metric system." In either case, he said, a feasibility study was warranted. "The longer we delay, the more serious the problem will become," he said.

J. Herbert Hollomon, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for science and technology, supporting S 774, said that American exports to 16 nations on the metric system amounted to $5.3 billion in 1957 and $5.2 billion in 1963, a decline of 2 percent. Exports to non-metric nations, he said, rose from $5.8 billion to $6.5 billion over the same period, an increase of 12 percent.

Hollomon emphasized that no inference should be drawn from those figures but said they pointed up the need for a comprehensive feasibility study on metric conversion and the relationship between use of the metric system and world trade.

Irving Lipkowitz, a member of the manufacture-distribution committee of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said the Chamber supported S 774 provided it was amended to specify that American business and industry would participate in the feasibility study. Despite the confusion, expense and other difficulties of conversion, he said, the Chamber felt that the worldwide "metric trend" warranted the study.

Leroy M. Alexander, chairman of the Industrial Fasteners Institute, a trade association representing firms doing a $1.2-billion-a-year business in screws, bolts, nuts and rivets, said the Institute supported the study but also insisted on industry participation.

Joseph V. Swintosky, president-elect of the Academy of Pharmaceutical Sciences of the American Pharmaceutical Assn., expressed that group's support of S 774, adding that conversion to the metric system already appeared to be desirable for the United States.

Robert M. Byrne, technical director of the Aircraft Locknut Manufacturers Assn. and seven related trade groups, said those groups opposed the study plan but would voluntarily participate in it if Congress authorized the study.

Action. Sept. 16 the Committee reported S 774 (S Rept 751) with amendments directing that the study concentrate on foreign trade aspects of conversion to the metric system and that the study utilize advice from industrial, engineering, labor, consumer and government interests. The bill authorized an appropriation of $500,000 for the first year of the three-year study.

The Senate Sept. 20 by voice vote passed S 774 as reported by the Committee. There was no opposition.

House Action

The House Science and Astronautics Committee held hearings Aug. 2,3,4,5 and 9 on a bill (HR 2626) which was similar to S 774 but which directed that the study be made by the National Bureau of Standards (an agency of the Commerce Department) instead of the Secretary of Commerce. Committee Chairman George P. Miller (D Calif.) introduced the bill.

The Committee Aug. 24 reported a bill (HR 10329 -- H Rept 850) which closely followed S 774's text.

The House Rules Committee Sept. 9 deferred action on HR 10329. No explanation for the action was made public.

SECTION 4

ROLL-CALL VOTES

CQ House Votes 1 through 3.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 2, 3, 4.)

House Elects McCormack; Votes to Seat Delegation from Mississippi; Approves Changes in Rules Giving the Speaker Additional Authority

1. Election of Speaker of the House of Representatives for the 89th Congress. The nominees were Reps. John W. McCormack (D Mass.), Speaker since January 1962, and Gerald R. Ford Jr. (R Mich.), newly elected Minority Leader. McCormack was elected 290–139: R 0–139; D 290–0, Jan. 4, 1965. (See story p. 24) An "M" on the chart represents a vote for McCormack, an "F" a vote for Ford.

2. H Res 1. Authorize the Speaker to administer the oath of office to five Mississippi Congressmen-elect. Albert (D Okla.) motion to consider the previous question, cutting off debate and precluding amendments. Motion agreed to 276-149: R 115-24; D 161-125 (ND 66-123; SD 95-2), Jan. 4, 1965. The President did not take a position on the vote. (See story p. 609; for later vote, see RC 158.)

3. H Res 8. Adopt the rules of the 88th Congress with an amendment making these changes in the rules: allow the Speaker to recognize a Member to call up for floor action a bill that had been before the Rules Committee for 21 days without being granted a rule; allow the Speaker to recognize a Member to make a privileged motion to send a bill to conference by majority vote; and eliminate the existing rule that allowed a Member to demand an engrossed copy of a bill prior to final action on the bill. Albert (D Okla.) motion to consider the previous question, cutting off debate and precluding amendments. Motion agreed to 224–202; R 16–123; D 208-79 (ND 185-4; SD 23–75), Jan. 4, 1965. The President did not take a position on the vote. (See story p. 585)

	1	2	3
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	M	Y	N
8 Jones	M	Y	Y
5 Selden	M	Y	N
4 Andrews	F	Y	N
6 Buchanan	F	Y	N
2 Dickinson	F	Y	N
1 Edwards	F	Y	N
7 Martin	F	Y	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	M	N	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	M	?	Y
2 Udall	M	N	Y
1 Rhodes	F	Y	N
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	M	Y	N
4 Harris	M	Y	N
2 Mills	M	Y	Y
3 Trimble	M	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	M	N	Y
7 Cohelan	M	N	Y
33 Dyal	M	N	Y
9 Edwards	M	N	Y
18 Hagen	M	Y	Y
34 Hanna	M	Y	Y
2 Johnson	M	Y	Y
4 Leggett	M	N	Y
15 McFall	M	Y	Y
8 Miller	M	N	Y
3 Moss	M	Y	Y
16 Sisk	M	Y	Y
38 Tunney	M	Y	‡
37 Van Deerlin	M	N	Y
14 Baldwin	F	N	N
1 Clausen	F	Y	N
10 Gubser	F	Y	N
6 Mailliard	F	N	N
12 Talcott	F	Y	N
13 Teague	F	Y	N
35 Utt	F	Y	N
36 Wilson	F	Y	N
11 Younger	F	Y	N

	1	2	3
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	M	N	Y
25 Cameron	M	Y	Y
22 Corman	M	N	Y
21 Hawkins	M	N	Y
19 Holifield	M	N	Y
17 King	M	Y	Y
26 Roosevelt	M	N	Y
30 Roybal	M	N	Y
31 Wilson	M	Y	Y
28 Bell	F	N	N
23 Clawson	F	Y	N
32 Hosmer	F	Y	N
24 Lipscomb	F	Y	N
27 Reinecke	F	Y	N
20 Smith	F	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	M	Y	Y
3 Evans	M	N	Y
2 McVicker	M	Y	Y
1 Rogers	M	N	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	M	N	Y
3 Giaimo	M	N	Y
6 Grabowski	M	N	Y
4 Irwin	M	N	Y
5 Monagan	M	Y	Y
2 St. Onge	M	N	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	M	N	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	M	Y	N
4 Fascell	M	Y	Y
9 Fuqua	M	Y	N
10 Gibbons	M	Y	Y
7 Haley	M	Y	N
5 Herlong	M	Y	N
8 Matthews	M	Y	N
3 Pepper	M	Y	Y
6 Rogers	M	Y	N
1 Sikes	M	Y	N
12 Cramer	F	Y	N
11 Gurney	F	Y	N

	1	2	3
GEORGIA
7 Davis	M	Y	N
6 Flynt	M	Y	N
1 Hagan	M	Y	N
9 Landrum	M	Y	N
4 Mackay	M	Y	Y
2 O'Neal	M	Y	N
10 Stephens	M	Y	N
8 Tuten	M	Y	N
5 Weltner	M	Y	Y
3 Callaway	F	Y	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	M	Y	Y
AL Mink	M	N	Y
IDAHO
1 White	M	Y	Y
2 Hansen	F	Y	N
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	M	Y	Y
24 Price	M	N	Y
19 Schisler	M	N	Y
23 Shipley	M	N	Y
16 Anderson	F	Y	N
17 Arends	F	Y	N
14 Erlenborn	F	Y	N
20 Findley	F	Y	N
12 McClory	F	Y	N
18 Michel	F	Y	N
15 Reid	F	Y	N
22 Springer	F	Y	N
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	M	N	Y
1 Dawson	M	N	Y
5 Kluczynski	M	N	Y
3 Murphy	M	N	Y
2 O'Hara	M	N	Y
11 Pucinski	M	N	Y
6 Ronan	M	N	Y
8 Rostenkowski	M	N	Y
9 Yates	M	N	Y
10 Collier	F	Y	N
4 Derwinski	F	Y	N
13 Rumsfeld	F	Y	N

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	1	2	3
INDIANA
3 Brademas	M	N	Y
8 Denton	M	N	Y
9 Hamilton	M	Y	Y
11 Jacobs	M	N	Y
1 Madden	M	N	Y
5 Roush	M	Y	Y
4 Adair	F	Y	N
7 Bray	F	Y	N
2 Halleck	F	Y	N
10 Harvey	F	Y	N
6 Roudebush	F	Y	N
IOWA
4 Bandstra	M	Y	Y
2 Culver	M	Y	Y
6 Greigg	M	N	Y
7 Hansen	M	N	Y
1 Schmidhauser	M	N	Y
5 Smith	M	Y	Y
3 Gross	F	Y	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	F	Y	N
3 Ellsworth	F	Y	N
4 Shriver	F	Y	N
2 Mize	F	Y	N
5 Skubitz	F	Y	N
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	M	Y	N
3 Farnsley	M	N	Y
2 Natcher	M	Y	N

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 1 through 3.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 2, 3, 4.)

	1	2	3
7 Perkins	M	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	M	Y	N
6 Watts	M	Y	N
5 Carter	F	Y	N
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	M	Y	Y
1 Hebert	M	Y	-
8 Long	M	Y	N
6 Morrison	M	Y	Y
5 Passman	M	Y	N
7 Thompson	M	Y	N
4 Waggonner	M	Y	N
3 Willis	M	Y	N
MAINE
2 Hathaway	M	N	Y
1 Tupper	F	N	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	M	Y	Y
7 Friedel	M	Y	Y
3 Garmatz	M	Y	Y
2 Long	M	N	Y
5 Machen	M	Y	Y
AL Sickles	M	N	Y
6 Mathias	F	N	Y
1 Morton	F	Y	N
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	M	N	Y
11 Burke	M	N	Y
4 Donohue	M	N	Y
7 Macdonald	M	N	Y
9 McCormack	?
8 O'Neill	M	N	Y
3 Philbin	M	N	Y
6 Bates	F	Y	N
1 Conte	F	N	N
12 Keith	F	Y	N
10 Martin	F	Y	N
5 Morse	F	N	N
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	M	N	Y
19 Farnum	M	N	Y
7 Mackie	M	N	Y
12 O'Hara	M	N	Y
3 Todd	M	N	Y
2 Vivian	M	N	Y
18 Broomfield	F	N	Y
10 Cederberg	F	Y	N
6 Chamberlain	F	Y	N
5 Ford	?	Y	N
9 Griffin	F	Y	N
8 Harvey	F	N	N
4 Hutchinson	F	Y	N
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	M	N	Y
13 Diggs	M	N	Y
16 Dingell	M	N	Y
15 Ford	M	N	Y
17 Griffiths	M	N	Y
14 Nedzi	M	N	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	M	N	Y
5 Fraser	M	N	Y
4 Karth	M	N	Y
6 Olson	M	N	Y
7 Langen	F	Y	N
3 MacGregor	F	Y	N
2 Nelsen	F	Y	N
1 Quie	F	Y	N
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	M	?	N
5 Colmer	M	?	N
2 Whitten	M	?	N
3 Williams	M	?	N
4 Walker	F	?	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	M	N	Y
6 Hull	M	Y	N
9 Hungate	M	Y	Y
8 Ichord	M	Y	N
10 Jones	M	Y	N
1 Karsten	M	N	Y
4 Randall	M	Y	Y
3 Sullivan	M	N	Y
2 Curtis	F	Y	N
7 Hall	F	Y	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	M	N	Y
2 Battin	F	Y	N
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	M	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	F	Y	N
3 Martin	F	Y	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	M	Y	N
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	M	N	Y
2 Cleveland	F	N	N
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	M	N	Y
13 Gallagher	M	N	Y
9 Helstoski	M	N	Y
3 Howard	M	N	Y
8 Joelson	M	N	Y
12 Krebs	M	N	Y
11 Minish	M	N	Y
2 McGrath	M	N	Y
15 Patten	M	N	Y
10 Rodino	M	N	Y
4 Thompson	M	N	Y
1 Cahill	F	N	Y
6 Dwyer	F	N	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	F	Y	N
7 Widnall	F	Y	N
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	M	Y	Y
AL Walker	M	Y	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	M	N	Y
41 Dulski	M	N	Y
34 Hanley	M	N	Y
39 McCarthy	M	N	Y
29 O'Brien	M	N	Y
25 Ottinger	M	?	Y
1 Pike	M	N	Y
28 Resnick	M	N	Y
35 Stratton	M	N	Y
5 Tenzer	M	N	Y
3 Wolff	M	N	Y
37 Conable	F	N	N
38 Goodell	F	Y	N
2 Grover	F	Y	N
36 Horton	F	N	Y
30 King	F	Y	N
31 McEwen	F	Y	N
32 Pirnie	F	Y	N
26 Reid	F	N	Y
33 Robison	F	Y	N
40 Smith	F	Y	N
4 Wydler	F	N	N
New York City
7 Addabbo	M	Y	Y
23 Bingham	M	N	Y
15 Carey	M	Y	Y
10 Celler	M	Y	Y
9 Delaney	M	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	M	N	Y
22 Gilbert	M	N	Y
12 Kelly	M	Y	Y
11 Keogh	M	Y	Y
13 Multer	M	Y	Y
16 Murphy	M	Y	Y
18 Powell	M	N	Y
14 Rooney	M	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	M	N	Y
20 Ryan	M	N	Y
21 Scheuer	M	N	Y
24 Fino	F	N	Y
6 Halpern	F	N	Y
17 Lindsay	F	N	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	M	Y	N
4 Cooley	M	Y	N
2 Fountain	M‡	Y	N
3 Henderson	M	Y	N
6 Kornegay	M	Y	N
7 Lennon	M	Y	N
5 Scott	M	Y	N
11 Taylor	M	Y	N
10 Whitener	M	Y	N
9 Broyhill	F	Y	N
8 Jonas	F	Y	N
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	M	Y	Y
1 Andrews	F	Y	-
OHIO
9 Ashley	M	N	Y
20 Feighan	M	Y	Y
1 Gilligan	M	N	Y
18 Hays	M	Y	Y
19 Kirwan	M	Y	Y
3 Love	M	N	Y
10 Moeller	M	Y	Y
15 Secrest	M	Y	Y
AL Sweeney	M	N	Y
21 Vanik	M	N	Y
17 Ashbrook	F	Y	N
14 Ayres	F	N	Y
8 Betts	F	Y	N
22 Bolton	F	Y	N
16 Bow	F	Y	N
7 Brown	F	Y	N
2 Clancy	F	Y	N
12 Devine	F	Y	N
6 Harsha	F	Y	N
5 Latta	F	Y	N
4 McCulloch	F	Y	N
23 Minshall	F	Y	N
13 Mosher	F	N	N
11 Stanton	F	Y	N
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	M	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	M	Y	Y
5 Jarman	M	Y	N
6 Johnson	M	Y	Y
4 Steed	M	Y	N
1 Belcher	F	Y	N
OREGON
4 Duncan	M	N	Y
3 Green	M	N	Y
2 Ullman	M	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	F	Y	N
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	M	Y	Y
19 Craley	M	N	Y
21 Dent	M	N	Y
11 Flood	M	Y	Y
20 Holland	?	?	?
14 Moorhead	M	Y	Y
26 Morgan	M	N	Y
6 Rhodes	M	N	Y
15 Rooney	M	N	Y
24 Vigorito	M	Y	Y
18 Corbett	F	Y	Y
8 Curtin	F	Y	N
9 Dague	F	Y	N
27 Fulton	F	Y	Y
23 Johnson	F	Y	N
16 Kunkel	F	N	N
10 McDade	F	Y	Y
22 Saylor	F	Y	N
17 Schneebeli	F	Y	N
13 Schweiker	F	N	Y
7 Watkins	F	Y	N
12 Whalley	F	Y	N
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	M	N	Y
3 Byrne	M	N	Y
5 Green	M	N	Y
2 Nix	M	N	Y
4 Toll	?	?	?
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	M	Y	Y
1 St. Germain	M	Y	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	M	Y	N
3 Dorn	M	Y	N
5 Gettys	M	Y	N
6 McMillan	M	Y	N
1 Rivers	M	Y	X
2 Vacancy	?	Y	N
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	F	Y	N
1 Reifel	F	Y	N
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	M	Y	Y
8 Everett	M	Y	N
4 Evins	M	Y	Y
5 Fulton	M	Y	Y
9 Grider	M	Y	Y
7 Murray	M	Y	N
3 Brock	F	Y	N
2 Duncan	F	Y	N
1 Quillen	F	Y	N
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	M	Y	N
2 Brooks	M	Y	Y
17 Burleson	M	Y	N
5 Cabell	M	Y	N
22 Casey	M	Y	N
15 De la Garza	M	Y	N
7 Dowdy	M	Y	N
21 Fisher	M	Y	N
20 Gonzalez	M	N	Y
19 Mahon	M	Y	N
1 Patman	M	Y	N
10 Pickle	M	Y	N
11 Poage	M	Y	N
AL Pool	M	Y	N
13 Purcell	M	Y	N
4 Roberts	M	Y	N
18 Rogers	M	Y	N
6 Teague	M	Y	N
8 Thomas	M	Y	?
9 Thompson	M	Y	Y
16 White	M	Y	N
12 Wright	M	Y	Y
14 Young	M	Y	N
UTAH
2 King	M	N	Y
1 Burton	F	Y	N
VERMONT
AL Stafford	F	N	N
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	M	Y	N
1 Downing	M	Y	N
2 Hardy	M	Y	N
9 Jennings	M	Y	N
7 Marsh	M	Y	N
3 Satterfield	M	Y	N
8 Smith	M	Y	N
5 Tuck	M	Y	N
10 Broyhill	F	Y	N
6 Poff	F	Y	N
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	M	Y	Y
5 Foley	M	Y	Y
3 Hansen	M	Y	Y
6 Hicks	M	Y	Y
2 Meeds	M	Y	Y
4 May	F	Y	N
1 Pelly	F	Y	N
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	M	Y	Y
5 Kee	M	Y	Y
3 Slack	M	Y	Y
2 Staggers	M	Y	Y
1 Moore	F	Y	N
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	M	N	Y
6 Race	M	N	Y
5 Reuss	M	N	Y
1 Stalbaum	M	N	Y
4 Zablocki	M	Y	Y
8 Byrnes	F	Y	N
7 Laird	F	Y	N
10 O'Konski	F	Y	Y
3 Thomson	F	Y	N
9 Davis	F	Y	N
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	M	N	✓

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 4 through 5.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 6, 7.)

House Dismisses Challenge to Ottinger's Election; Adds Restriction On PL 480 Assistance to Egypt to Supplemental Agriculture Bill

4. H Res 126. Dismiss a pending contest of the election of Rep. Richard L. Ottinger (D N.Y.) on the grounds that the person challenging the election's outcome, James R. Frankenberry, was not qualified to bring a contest because he was not a candidate for the seat won by Ottinger. Adopted 245–102: R 5–100; D 240–2 (ND 157–2; SD 83–0), Jan. 19, 1965. The President did not take a position on the resolution. (See story p. 609)

5. H J Res 234. Make fiscal 1965 supplemental appropriations of $1.6 billion to the Department of Agriculture to reimburse the Commodity Credit Corp. for farm price support and other activities. Michel (R Ill.) motion to recommit the bill to the House Appropriations Committee with instruction to report it back with an amendment prohibiting use of the funds during fiscal 1965 to finance export of surplus U.S. agricultural commodities to the United Arab Republic (Egypt) under Title I of PL 480. Adopted 204–177: R 128–0; D 76–177 (ND 45–121; SD 31–56), Jan. 26, 1965. The President did not take a position on the motion. (See story p. 190; for later vote, see RC 6.)

	4	5
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	Y	Y
8 Jones	?	N
5 Selden	Y	N
4 Andrews	N	Y
6 Buchanan	N	Y
2 Dickinson	N	Y
1 Edwards	N	Y
7 Martin	N	Y
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	N
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	‡
2 Udall	Y	‡
1 Rhodes	N	✓
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	Y	N
4 Harris	Y	N
2 Mills	‡	N
3 Trimble	Y	N
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	N
7 Cohelan	Y	N
33 Dyal	Y	N
9 Edwards	Y	N
18 Hagen	Y	N
34 Hanna	Y	?
2 Johnson	Y	N
4 Leggett	‡	-
15 McFall	Y	N
8 Miller	Y	N
3 Moss	Y	-
16 Sisk	Y	N
38 Tunney	Y	N
37 Van Deerlin	-	N
14 Baldwin	N	Y
1 Clausen	?	Y
10 Gubser	N	Y
6 Mailliard	N	Y
12 Talcott	N	Y
13 Teague	N	Y
35 Utt	N	Y
36 Wilson	N	Y
11 Younger	N	Y

	4	5
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	Y	N
25 Cameron	Y	‡
22 Corman	Y	N
21 Hawkins	‡	-
19 Holifield	Y	N
17 King	Y	X
26 Roosevelt	✓	‡
30 Roybal	Y	N
31 Wilson	Y	N
28 Bell	N	Y
23 Clawson	N	Y
32 Hosmer	-	‡
24 Lipscomb	N	‡
27 Reinecke	N	Y
20 Smith	N	Y
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	N
3 Evans	Y	N
2 McVicker	Y	N
1 Rogers	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	N
3 Giaimo	Y	N
6 Grabowski	Y	Y
4 Irwin	Y	N
5 Monagan	Y	N
2 St. Onge	Y	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	‡	N
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	?
9 Fuqua	Y	Y
10 Gibbons	Y	Y
7 Haley	Y	Y
5 Herlong	Y	Y
8 Matthews	Y	N
3 Pepper	Y	N
6 Rogers	Y	Y
1 Sikes	Y	Y
12 Cramer	N	Y
11 Gurney	N	Y

	4	5
GEORGIA
7 Davis	‡	N
6 Flynt	Y	?
1 Hagan	Y	Y
9 Landrum	?	N
4 Mackay	‡	N
2 O'Neal	?	Y
10 Stephens	‡	N
8 Tuten	Y	N
5 Weltner	‡	Y
3 Callaway	-	Y
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	N
AL Mink	Y	N
IDAHO
1 White	‡	N
2 Hansen	N	Y
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	?	N
24 Price	Y	N
19 Schisler	Y	N
23 Shipley	?	?
16 Anderson	N	Y
17 Arends	N	Y
14 Erlenborn	N	Y
20 Findley	N	Y
12 McClory	N	Y
18 Michel	-	Y
15 Reid	N	Y
22 Springer	N	Y
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	N
1 Dawson	Y	N
5 Kluczynski	Y	N
3 Murphy	Y	N
2 O'Hara	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	Y
6 Ronan	Y	N
8 Rostenkowski	‡	?
9 Yates	Y	Y
10 Collier	X	Y
4 Derwinski	N	Y
13 Rumsfeld	N	‡

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	4	5
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	N
8 Denton	Y	N
9 Hamilton	Y	N
11 Jacobs	Y	N
1 Madden	Y	N
5 Roush	Y	N
4 Adair	N	Y
7 Bray	N	Y
2 Halleck	N	✓
10 Harvey	X	‡
6 Roudebush	N	Y
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	N
2 Culver	Y	N
6 Greigg	Y	N
7 Hansen	Y	N
1 Schmidhauser	Y	N
5 Smith	Y	N
3 Gross	?	Y
KANSAS
1 Dole	N	Y
3 Ellsworth	N	Y
4 Shriver	N	Y
2 Mize	N	Y
5 Skubitz	N	Y
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	N
3 Farnsley	Y	N
2 Natcher	Y	N

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 4 through 5.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 6, 7.)

	4	5
7 Perkins	Y	N
1 Stubblefield	Y	N
6 Watts	Y	N
5 Carter	N	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	N
1 Hebert	Y	?
8 Long	‡	Y
6 Morrison	Y	N
5 Passman	Y	Y
7 Thompson	Y	N
4 Waggonner	Y	‡
3 Willis	Y	X
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	N
1 Tupper	?	?
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	N
7 Friedel	Y	Y
3 Garmatz	✓	‡
2 Long	?	Y
5 Machen	Y	N
AL Sickles	Y	N
6 Mathias	?	Y
1 Morton	-	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	N
11 Burke	Y	Y
4 Donohue	Y	✓
7 Macdonald	?	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	✓
3 Philbin	Y	Y
6 Bates	N	?
1 Conte	N	Y
12 Keith	N	Y
10 Martin	?	?
5 Morse	N	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	N
19 Farnum	Y	N
7 Mackie	Y	-
12 O'Hara	?	N
3 Todd	Y	N
2 Vivian	Y	N
18 Broomfield	N	Y
10 Cederberg	N	Y
6 Chamberlain	X	Y
5 Ford	N	Y
9 Griffin	N	Y
8 Harvey	N	Y
4 Hutchinson	N	Y
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	Y	N
13 Diggs	Y	N
16 Dingell	Y	?
15 Ford	Y	N
17 Griffiths	?	N
14 Nedzi	Y	N
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	‡	N
5 Fraser	?	N
4 Karth	Y	N
6 Olson	Y	N
7 Langen	N	Y
3 MacGregor	N	Y
2 Nelsen	X	Y
1 Quie	N	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	Y	Y
5 Colmer	Y	?
2 Whitten	Y	N
3 Williams	Y	?
4 Walker	Y	Y
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	‡	N
6 Hull	Y	N
9 Hungate	Y	N
8 Ichord	‡	Y
10 Jones	Y	N
1 Karsten	Y	N
4 Randall	‡	N
3 Sullivan	Y	?
2 Curtis	N	Y
7 Hall	Y	Y
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	N
2 Battin	X	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	N
2 Cunningham	N	Y
3 Martin	X	Y
NEVADA
AL Baring	?	Y
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	N
2 Cleveland	N	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	X
13 Gallagher	Y	X
9 Helstoski	Y	Y
3 Howard	Y	Y
8 Joelson	Y	N
12 Krebs	Y	Y
11 Minish	Y	Y
2 McGrath	Y	N
15 Patten	Y	N
10 Rodino	Y	N
4 Thompson	✓	-
1 Cahill	?	Y
6 Dwyer	-	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	N	Y
7 Widnall	N	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	N
AL Walker	Y	‡
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	N
41 Dulski	Y	Y
34 Hanley	Y	N
39 McCarthy	Y	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	N
25 Ottinger	?	N
1 Pike	Y	Y
28 Resnick	Y	N
35 Stratton	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y
37 Conable	N	Y
38 Goodell	N	Y
2 Grover	N	Y
36 Horton	N	Y
30 King	-	Y
31 McEwen	N	Y
32 Pirnie	-	Y
26 Reid	N	Y
33 Robison	N	Y
40 Smith	N	Y
4 Wydler	-	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	Y
23 Bingham	Y	Y
15 Carey	Y	Y
10 Celler	Y	Y
9 Delaney	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	‡	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	Y
12 Kelly	‡	Y
11 Keogh	Y	Y
13 Multer	Y	Y
16 Murphy	Y	✓
18 Powell	?	?
14 Rooney	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	Y
20 Ryan	N	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	Y
24 Fino	Y	Y
6 Halpern	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	?	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	Y	N
4 Cooley	Y	N
2 Fountain	Y	Y
3 Henderson	Y	N
6 Kornegay	Y	N
7 Lennon	Y	Y
5 Scott	Y	N
11 Taylor	Y	N
10 Whitener	Y	Y
9 Broyhill	N	Y
8 Jonas	?	Y
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	N
1 Andrews	N	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	N
20 Feighan	Y	N
1 Gilligan	Y	N
18 Hays	Y	‡
19 Kirwan	✓	N
3 Love	Y	N
10 Moeller	Y	N
15 Secrest	Y	Y
AL Sweeney	Y	N
21 Vanik	Y	?
17 Ashbrook	Y	Y
14 Ayres	‡	Y
8 Betts	N	Y
22 Bolton	?	Y
16 Bow	-	Y
7 Brown	N	Y
2 Clancy	-	Y
12 Devine	-	Y
6 Harsha	?	‡
5 Latta	N	Y
4 McCulloch	N	?
23 Minshall	-	Y
13 Mosher	N	Y
11 Stanton	N	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	N
2 Edmondson	Y	?
5 Jarman	‡	Y
6 Johnson	Y	N
4 Steed	Y	N
1 Belcher	N	Y
OREGON
4 Duncan	?	N
3 Green	Y	Y
2 Ullman	Y	N
1 Wyatt	N	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	N
19 Craley	‡	N
21 Dent	Y	N
11 Flood	Y	N
20 Holland	✓	X
14 Moorhead	Y	N
26 Morgan	Y	N
6 Rhodes	Y	N
15 Rooney	Y	N
24 Vigorito	Y	N
18 Corbett	?	Y
8 Curtin	N	Y
9 Dague	N	Y
27 Fulton	N	Y
23 Johnson	N	Y
16 Kunkel	N	Y
10 McDade	N	Y
22 Saylor	?	Y
17 Schneebeli	N	Y
13 Schweiker	N	Y
7 Watkins	?	Y
12 Whalley	N	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	?	N
3 Byrne	Y	N
5 Green	Y	Y
2 Nix	N	N
4 Toll	✓	✓
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	Y	Y
1 St. Germain	Y	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	Y	Y
3 Dorn	Y	Y
5 Gettys	Y	Y
6 McMillan	?	Y
1 Rivers	Y	‡
2 Watson	-	Y
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	N	Y
1 Reifel	-	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	N
8 Everett	‡	N
4 Evins	Y	N
5 Fulton	Y	N
9 Grider	Y	N
7 Murray	Y	N
3 Brock	N	Y
2 Duncan	N	Y
1 Quillen	N	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	N
2 Brooks	Y	N
17 Burleson	Y	Y
5 Cabell	Y	N
22 Casey	?	Y
15 De la Garza	Y	N
7 Dowdy	Y	Y
21 Fisher	Y	Y
20 Gonzalez	Y	N
19 Mahon	Y	N
1 Patman	Y	?
10 Pickle	Y	N
11 Poage	Y	N
AL Pool	Y	Y
13 Purcell	Y	N
4 Roberts	Y	N
18 Rogers	Y	N
6 Teague	?	N
8 Thomas	Y	N
9 Thompson	?	?
16 White	Y	N
12 Wright	?	N
14 Young	Y	N
UTAH
2 King	Y	N
1 Burton	N	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	N	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	?
1 Downing	Y	‡
2 Hardy	Y	N
9 Jennings	Y	N
7 Marsh	Y	Y
3 Satterfield	Y	Y
8 Smith	Y	Y
5 Tuck	‡	Y
10 Broyhill	N	Y
6 Poff	-	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	N
5 Foley	Y	N
3 Hansen	?	N
6 Hicks	Y	N
2 Meeds	Y	N
4 May	?	Y
1 Pelly	N	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	N
5 Kee	Y	N
3 Slack	Y	N
2 Staggers	?	Y
1 Moore	N	‡
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	N
6 Race	Y	N
5 Reuss	Y	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	Y	N
8 Byrnes	N	Y
7 Laird	N	Y
10 O'Konski	N	Y
3 Thomson	N	?
9 Davis	N	Y
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	‡	N

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 6 through 8.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 10, 12, 13.)

House Refuses to Instruct Conferees on Food-for-Egypt Amendment, Passes Administration Bill to Reduce Gold Backing Requirements

6. H J Res 234. Make fiscal 1965 supplemental appropriations of $1.6 billion to the Department of Agriculture to reimburse the Commodity Credit Corp. for farm price support and other activities. Michel (R Ill.) motion that House conferees be instructed not to accept a Senate amendment to eliminate a provision -- added to the bill in the House -- prohibiting use of H J Res 234 funds during fiscal 1965 to finance export to Egypt of U.S. surplus farm commodities under Title I of PL 480 and to substitute wording to permit use of the funds for the exports if the President determined that such exports were in the national interest. Rejected 165-241: R 128-1; D 37-240 (ND 15-171; SD 22-69), Feb. 8, 1965. A "nay" was a vote in support of the President's position. (See story p. 190; for later vote, see RC 57.)

7. HR 3818. Elimination of the requirement that each Federal Reserve Bank maintain gold certificate reserves of not less than 25 percent of the amount of commercial bank deposits it holds. Clawson (R Calif.) motion to recommit the bill to the Banking and Currency Committee. Rejected 93-289; R 84-33; D 9-256 (ND 3-174; SD 6-82), Feb. 9, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 879)

8. HR 3818. Passage of the bill to eliminate the requirement that each Federal Reserve Bank maintain gold certificate reserves of not less than 25 percent of the amount of commercial deposits it holds. Passed 300-82: R 45-71; D 255-11 (ND 173-4; SD 82-7), Feb. 9, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

	6	7	8
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	Y	N	Y
8 Jones	N	N	Y
5 Selden	N	N	Y
4 Andrews	Y	N	Y
6 Buchanan	Y	Y	N
2 Dickinson	Y	Y	N
1 Edwards	Y	Y	N
7 Martin	Y	Y	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	N	N	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	N	Y
2 Udall	N	N	Y
1 Rhodes	Y	Y	N
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	N	N	Y
4 Harris	N	N	Y
2 Mills	N	X	‡
3 Trimble	N	N	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	N	N	Y
7 Cohelan	N	N	Y
33 Dyal	N	N	Y
9 Edwards	N	N	Y
18 Hagen	N	N	Y
34 Hanna	N	N	Y
2 Johnson	N	Y	N
4 Leggett	N	N	Y
15 McFall	N	N	Y
8 Miller	N	N	Y
3 Moss	N	N	Y
16 Sisk	N	N	Y
38 Tunney	N	N	Y
37 Van Deerlin	N	N	Y
14 Baldwin	Y	Y	N
1 Clausen	Y	Y	N
10 Gubser	Y	Y	N
6 Mailliard	Y	N	Y
12 Talcott	Y	Y	N
13 Teague	Y	Y	N
35 Utt	Y	Y	N
36 Wilson	?	✓	X
11 Younger	Y	Y	N
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	N	N	Y
25 Cameron	Y	N	Y
22 Corman	N	-	‡
21 Hawkins	N	N	Y
19 Holifield	X	X	‡
17 King	N	X	‡
26 Roosevelt	Y	X	‡
30 Roybal	N	N	Y
31 Wilson	N	N	Y
28 Bell	?	?	?
23 Clawson	Y	Y	N
32 Hosmer	Y	Y	Y
24 Lipscomb	Y	Y	N
27 Reinecke	Y	Y	N
20 Smith	Y	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	N	N	Y
3 Evans	N	-	‡
2 McVicker	N	N	Y
1 Rogers	N	N	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	N	N	Y
3 Giaimo	N	N	Y
6 Grabowski	N	N	Y
4 Irwin	N	N	Y
5 Monagan	N	N	Y
2 St. Onge	N	N	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	N	N	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	N	Y
4 Fascell	N	N	Y
9 Fuqua	N	N	Y
10 Gibbons	✓	-	✓
7 Haley	Y	N	N
5 Herlong	‡	-	‡
8 Matthews	N	N	Y
3 Pepper	N	N	Y
6 Rogers	Y	N	Y
1 Sikes	N	N	Y
12 Cramer	Y	Y	N
11 Gurney	Y	Y	N
GEORGIA
7 Davis	N	N	Y
6 Flynt	N	N	Y
1 Hagan	?	?	?
9 Landrum	?	?	?
4 Mackay	N	N	Y
2 O'Neal	Y	N	Y
10 Stephens	N	N	Y
8 Tuten	N	N	Y
5 Weltner	Y	N	Y
3 Callaway	Y	Y	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	N	N	Y
AL Mink	N	N	Y
IDAHO
1 White	N	Y	N
2 Hansen	Y	Y	N
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	N	N	Y
24 Price	N	N	Y
19 Schisler	N	N	Y
23 Shipley	X	?	?
16 Anderson	Y	-	‡
17 Arends	Y	Y	Y
14 Erlenborn	Y	Y	N
20 Findley	Y	✓	X
12 McClory	Y	Y	Y
18 Michel	Y	Y	N
15 Reid	Y	Y	N
22 Springer	Y	Y	N
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	N	N	Y
1 Dawson	N	N	Y
5 Kluczynski	N	N	Y
3 Murphy	N	N	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	N	Y
11 Pucinski	‡	-	‡
6 Ronan	N	N	Y
8 Rostenkowski	N	N	Y
9 Yates	Y	N	Y
10 Collier	Y	Y	N
4 Derwinski	Y	Y	N
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	6	7	8
INDIANA
3 Brademas	N	N	Y
8 Denton	N	N	Y
9 Hamilton	N	N	Y
11 Jacobs	N	N	Y
1 Madden	N	N	Y
5 Roush	N	N	Y
4 Adair	Y	✓	X
7 Bray	Y	Y	N
2 Halleck	Y	Y	N
10 Harvey	Y	✓	X
6 Roudebush	Y	✓	X
IOWA
4 Bandstra	N	N	Y
2 Culver	N	N	Y
6 Greigg	N	N	Y
7 Hansen	N	N	Y
1 Schmidhauser	N	N	Y
5 Smith	N	N	Y
3 Gross	Y	Y	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	Y	N
3 Ellsworth	Y	N	Y
4 Shriver	Y	N	Y
2 Mize	Y	Y	N
5 Skubitz	Y	Y	N
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	N	N	Y
3 Farnsley	N	N	Y
2 Natcher	N	N	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 6 through 8.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 10, 12, 13.)

	6	7	8
7 Perkins	N	N	Y
1 Stubblefield	N	N	Y
6 Watts	N	N	Y
5 Carter	Y	N	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	N	N	Y
1 Hebert	N	X	✓
8 Long	Y	Y	N
6 Morrison	N	N	Y
5 Passman	Y	Y	N
7 Thompson	N	N	Y
4 Waggonner	Y	Y	N
3 Willis	N	N	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	N	N	Y
1 Tupper	Y	N	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	N	N	Y
7 Friedel	N	N	Y
3 Garmatz	N	X	✓
2 Long	N	N	Y
5 Machen	N	N	Y
AL Sickles	N	N	Y
6 Mathias	Y	N	Y
1 Morton	Y	N	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	N	N	Y
11 Burke	N	N	Y
4 Donohue	N	N	Y
7 Macdonald	N	N	N
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	N	N	Y
3 Philbin	N	N	Y
6 Bates	Y	Y	Y
1 Conte	Y	N	Y
12 Keith	Y	Y	Y
10 Martin	?	X	✓
5 Morse	Y	N	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	N	N	Y
19 Farnum	N	N	Y
7 Mackie	N	N	Y
12 O'Hara	N	N	Y
3 Todd	N	N	Y
2 Vivian	N	N	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	N	✓
10 Cederberg	?	Y	N
6 Chamberlain	Y	Y	N
5 Ford	Y	N	Y
9 Griffin	Y	?	?
8 Harvey	Y	N	Y
4 Hutchinson	Y	Y	N
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	N	N	Y
13 Diggs	N	N	Y
16 Dingell	N	N	Y
15 Ford	N	N	Y
17 Griffiths	N	N	Y
14 Nedzi	N	N	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	X	N	Y
5 Fraser	N	N	Y
4 Karth	N	N	Y
6 Olson	N	N	Y
7 Langen	Y	Y	N
3 MacGregor	Y	Y	Y
2 Nelsen	Y	Y	N
1 Quie	Y	N	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	‡	‡	-
5 Colmer	Y	Y	N
2 Whitten	N	Y	Y
3 Williams	?	?	?
4 Walker	Y	✓	X
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	N	N	Y
6 Hull	N	N	Y
9 Hungate	N	?	✓
8 Ichord	N	-	‡
10 Jones	N	N	Y
1 Karsten	N	N	Y
4 Randall	N	N	Y
3 Sullivan	N	N	Y
2 Curtis	Y	✓	X
7 Hall	Y	Y	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	N	Y	N
2 Battin	?	✓	X
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	N	N	Y
2 Cunningham	Y	Y	N
3 Martin	Y	Y	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	✓	✓	X
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	N	N	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	Y	N
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	N	N	Y
13 Gallagher	N	N	Y
9 Helstoski	N	N	Y
3 Howard	N	N	Y
8 Joelson	N	N	Y
12 Krebs	N	N	Y
11 Minish	N	N	Y
2 McGrath	N	N	Y
15 Patten	N	N	Y
10 Rodino	N	N	Y
4 Thompson	N	N	Y
1 Cahill	✓	N	Y
6 Dwyer	Y	N	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	Y	Y	Y
7 Widnall	Y	N	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	N	N	Y
AL Walker	Y	N	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	N	N	Y
41 Dulski	N	N	Y
34 Hanley	N	N	Y
39 McCarthy	N	N	Y
29 O'Brien	N	-	✓
25 Ottinger	N	N	Y
1 Pike	Y	N	Y
28 Resnick	N	N	Y
35 Stratton	Y	N	Y
5 Tenzer	N	N	Y
3 Wolff	N	N	Y
37 Conable	Y	N	Y
38 Goodell	Y	‡	‡
2 Grover	Y	Y	N
36 Horton	Y	N	Y
30 King	Y	Y	N
31 McEwen	Y	Y	Y
32 Pirnie	Y	N	Y
26 Reid	N	N	Y
33 Robison	Y	Y	Y
40 Smith	Y	Y	Y
4 Wydler	Y	Y	N
New York City
7 Addabbo	N	N	Y
23 Bingham	Y	N	Y
15 Carey	N	N	Y
10 Celler	N	N	Y
9 Delaney	N	N	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	N	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	X	✓
12 Kelly	N	N	Y
11 Keogh	N	N	Y
13 Multer	N	N	Y
16 Murphy	X	N	Y
18 Powell	N	N	Y
14 Rooney	N	N	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	N	Y
20 Ryan	Y	N	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	N	Y
24 Fino	Y	N	Y
6 Halpern	Y	N	Y
17 Lindsay	Y	N	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	N	N	Y
4 Cooley	N	N	Y
2 Fountain	N	N	Y
3 Henderson	N	N	Y
6 Kornegay	N	N	Y
7 Lennon	Y	N	Y
5 Scott	N	-	‡
11 Taylor	N	N	Y
10 Whitener	N	N	Y
9 Broyhill	Y	Y	N
8 Jonas	Y	Y	N
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	N	N	Y
1 Andrews	Y	Y	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	N	N	Y
20 Feighan	N	N	Y
1 Gilligan	N	N	Y
18 Hays	N	-	‡
19 Kirwan	N	N	Y
3 Love	N	N	Y
10 Moeller	N	N	Y
15 Secrest	Y	N	Y
AL Sweeney	N	N	Y
21 Vanik	N	N	Y
17 Ashbrook	Y	Y	N
14 Ayres	Y	-	‡
8 Betts	Y	Y	N
22 Bolton	Y	Y	N
16 Bow	Y	Y	N
7 Brown	Y	Y	N
2 Clancy	‡	✓	X
12 Devine	Y	Y	N
6 Harsha	Y	Y	N
5 Latta	Y	Y	N
4 McCulloch	Y	Y	N
23 Minshall	Y	Y	N
13 Mosher	Y	N	Y
11 Stanton	Y	N	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	N	N	Y
2 Edmondson	N	N	Y
5 Jarman	Y	N	Y
6 Johnson	N	N	Y
4 Steed	N	N	Y
1 Belcher	Y	Y	N
OREGON
4 Duncan	N	N	Y
3 Green	N	N	Y
2 Ullman	N	N	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	N	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	N	N	Y
19 Craley	N	N	Y
21 Dent	N	N	Y
11 Flood	N	N	Y
20 Holland	N	-	‡
14 Moorhead	N	N	Y
26 Morgan	N	N	Y
6 Rhodes	N	N	Y
15 Rooney	N	N	Y
24 Vigorito	N	N	Y
18 Corbett	✓	X	✓
8 Curtin	Y	Y	N
9 Dague	Y	Y	N
27 Fulton	Y	N	Y
23 Johnson	Y	Y	N
16 Kunkel	Y	N	Y
10 McDade	Y	Y	Y
22 Saylor	Y	Y	N
17 Schneebeli	Y	-	‡
13 Schweiker	Y	N	Y
7 Watkins	Y	Y	N
12 Whalley	Y	Y	N
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	N	N	Y
3 Byrne	N	N	Y
5 Green	N	N	Y
2 Nix	N	N	Y
4 Toll	X	X	✓
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	N	N	Y
1 St. Germain	N	N	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	Y	N	Y
3 Dorn	Y	N	Y
5 Gettys	N	N	Y
6 McMillan	N	N	Y
1 Rivers	N	N	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	Y	N
1 Reifel	Y	Y	N
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	N	N	Y
8 Everett	N	N	Y
4 Evins	X	X	✓
5 Fulton	N	N	Y
9 Grider	N	N	Y
7 Murray	N	N	Y
3 Brock	Y	N	Y
2 Duncan	Y	Y	N
1 Quillen	Y	Y	N
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	N	N	Y
2 Brooks	X	N	Y
17 Burleson	N	N	Y
5 Cabell	N	N	Y
22 Casey	N	N	Y
15 De la Garza	N	N	Y
7 Dowdy	Y	?	N
21 Fisher	Y	N	Y
20 Gonzalez	N	N	Y
19 Mahon	N	N	Y
1 Patman	N	N	Y
10 Pickle	N	N	Y
11 Poage	N	N	Y
AL Pool	Y	N	Y
13 Purcell	N	N	Y
4 Roberts	N	N	Y
18 Rogers	N	N	Y
6 Teague	N	N	Y
8 Thomas	N	N	Y
9 Thompson	N	N	Y
16 White	N	N	Y
12 Wright	N	N	Y
14 Young	N	N	Y
UTAH
2 King	N	N	Y
1 Burton	✓	✓	X
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	N	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	N	Y
1 Downing	Y	N	Y
2 Hardy	-	-	‡
9 Jennings	N	N	Y
7 Marsh	Y	N	Y
3 Satterfield	Y	N	Y
8 Smith	N	N	Y
5 Tuck	Y	N	Y
10 Broyhill	Y	N	Y
6 Poff	Y	Y	N
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	N	N	Y
5 Foley	N	N	Y
3 Hansen	N	N	Y
6 Hicks	N	N	Y
2 Meeds	N	N	Y
4 May	Y	Y	N
1 Pelly	✓	X	✓
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	N	N	Y
5 Kee	N	N	Y
3 Slack	N	N	Y
2 Staggers	N	N	Y
1 Moore	Y	Y	N
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	N	N	Y
6 Race	N	N	Y
5 Reuss	N	N	Y
1 Stalbaum	N	N	Y
4 Zablocki	N	N	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	-	‡
7 Laird	✓	✓	X
10 O'Konski	Y	Y	N
3 Thomson	Y	?	?
9 Davis	Y	‡	-
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	N	N	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 9 through 11.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 16, 19, 20.)

House Votes $40 Million Authorization for Arms Control Agency, Approves $750 Million for Inter-American Development Bank Fund

9. HR 2998. Passage of the bill to authorize $40 million in appropriations for fiscal years 1966-68 for the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. Passed 302-63: R 80-35; D 222-28 (ND 165-1; SD 57-27), Feb. 17, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 497; for later vote, see RC 36.)

10. HR 45. Amend the Inter-American Development Bank Act of 1959 to authorize a $750 million increase in the U.S. contribution to the Bank's Fund for Special Operations. Fino (R N.Y.) motion to recommit the bill to the Banking and Currency Committee with instructions to reduce the authorization to $725 million. Rejected 142-237: R 109-9; D 33-228 (ND 5-166; SD 28-62), Feb. 18, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 492)

11. HR 45. Passage of the bill to amend the Inter-American Development Bank Act of 1959 to authorize a $750 million increase in the U.S. contribution to the Bank's Fund for Special Operations ($250 million per year in fiscal 1965, 1966 and 1967). Passed 288-93: R 61-59; D 227-34 (ND 166-4; SD 61-30), Feb. 18, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

	9	10	11
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	N	Y	N
8 Jones	Y	N	Y
5 Selden	Y	Y	Y
4 Andrews	N	Y	N
6 Buchanan	N	Y	N
2 Dickinson	N	Y	N
1 Edwards	N	Y	N
7 Martin	N	Y	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	✓	N	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	N	Y
2 Udall	‡	X	‡
1 Rhodes	X	✓	✓
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	N	Y	N
4 Harris	Y	N	N
2 Mills	Y	N	Y
3 Trimble	Y	N	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	N	Y
7 Cohelan	Y	N	Y
33 Dyal	Y	N	Y
9 Edwards	Y	N	Y
18 Hagen	‡	X	‡
34 Hanna	Y	N	Y
2 Johnson	✓	X	‡
4 Leggett	Y	N	Y
15 McFall	Y	N	Y
8 Miller	Y	N	Y
3 Moss	Y	N	Y
16 Sisk	✓	X	‡
38 Tunney	‡	X	‡
37 Van Deerlin	Y	N	Y
14 Baldwin	-	Y	Y
1 Clausen	N	Y	N
10 Gubser	-	-	‡
6 Mailliard	Y	N	Y
12 Talcott	N	Y	Y
13 Teague	Y	Y	N
35 Utt	X	Y	N
36 Wilson	N	Y	N
11 Younger	N	Y	N

	9	10	11
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	✓	X	‡
25 Cameron	‡	N	Y
22 Corman	‡	X	‡
21 Hawkins	Y	N	Y
19 Holifield	Y	N	Y
17 King	✓	X	✓
26 Roosevelt	✓	X	✓
30 Roybal	Y	N	Y
31 Wilson	?	X	?
28 Bell	‡	?	‡
23 Clawson	X	✓	X
32 Hosmer	X	✓	X
24 Lipscomb	N	Y	N
27 Reinecke	X	✓	X
20 Smith	N	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	✓	X	✓
3 Evans	Y	N	Y
2 McVicker	Y	N	Y
1 Rogers	Y	N	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	N	Y
3 Giaimo	Y	N	Y
6 Grabowski	Y	N	Y
4 Irwin	Y	N	Y
5 Monagan	Y	N	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	N	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	✓	N	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	N	Y
9 Fuqua	N	Y	N
10 Gibbons	Y	N	Y
7 Haley	N	Y	N
5 Herlong	Y	Y	Y
8 Matthews	Y	-	‡
3 Pepper	Y	N	Y
6 Rogers	Y	Y	Y
1 Sikes	N	Y	Y
12 Cramer	N	Y	N
11 Gurney	N	Y	N

	9	10	11
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	N	Y
6 Flynt	Y	N	Y
1 Hagan	?	Y	N
9 Landrum	Y	N	Y
4 Mackay	Y	N	Y
2 O'Neal	?	✓	X
10 Stephens	Y	N	Y
8 Tuten	Y	N	Y
5 Weltner	N	N	Y
3 Callaway	N	Y	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	N	Y
AL Mink	Y	N	Y
IDAHO
1 White	✓	X	‡
2 Hansen	N	Y	N
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	Y	N	Y
24 Price	Y	N	Y
19 Schisler	Y	N	Y
23 Shipley	Y	N	Y
16 Anderson	Y	Y	N
17 Arends	Y	Y	Y
14 Erlenborn	X	‡	‡
20 Findley	N	Y	Y
12 McClory	Y	Y	Y
18 Michel	N	Y	Y
15 Reid	N	Y	N
22 Springer	‡	‡	Y
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	N	Y
1 Dawson	Y	N	Y
5 Kluczynski	Y	N	Y
3 Murphy	Y	N	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	N	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	N	Y
6 Ronan	Y	N	Y
8 Rostenkowski	Y	N	Y
9 Yates	Y	N	Y
10 Collier	N	Y	Y
4 Derwinski	?	Y	Y
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	9	10	11
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	N	Y
8 Denton	Y	N	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	N	Y
11 Jacobs	Y	N	Y
1 Madden	Y	N	Y
5 Roush	Y	N	Y
4 Adair	Y	Y	N
7 Bray	Y	Y	N
2 Halleck	Y	Y	N
10 Harvey	Y	Y	N
6 Roudebush	-	✓	X
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	N	Y
2 Culver	Y	N	Y
6 Greigg	Y	N	Y
7 Hansen	Y	N	Y
1 Schmidhauser	Y	N	Y
5 Smith	Y	N	Y
3 Gross	N	Y	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	N	Y	N
3 Ellsworth	Y	Y	Y
4 Shriver	Y	Y	Y
2 Mize	Y	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	Y	Y	Y
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	N	Y
3 Farnsley	?	?	?
2 Natcher	Y	N	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 9 through 11.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 16, 19, 20.)

	9	10	11
7 Perkins	Y	N	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y	Y
5 Carter	Y	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	N	Y
1 Hebert	Y	Y	N
8 Long	X	✓	X
6 Morrison	Y	N	Y
5 Passman	N	Y	N
7 Thompson	Y	N	Y
4 Waggonner	N	Y	N
3 Willis	Y	N	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	N	Y
1 Tupper	Y	N	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	✓	N	Y
7 Friedel	Y	N	Y
3 Garmatz	Y	N	Y
2 Long	Y	N	Y
5 Machen	Y	N	Y
AL Sickles	Y	N	Y
6 Mathias	Y	?	Y
1 Morton	✓	Y	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	N	Y
11 Burke	Y	N	Y
4 Donohue	Y	N	Y
7 Macdonald	✓	X	✓
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	N	Y
3 Philbin	Y	N	Y
6 Bates	Y	Y	Y
1 Conte	Y	N	Y
12 Keith	Y	Y	Y
10 Martin	Y	Y	Y
5 Morse	✓	N	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	N	Y
19 Farnum	Y	N	Y
7 Mackie	Y	N	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	N	Y
3 Todd	Y	N	Y
2 Vivian	Y	N	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	N	Y
10 Cederberg	X	✓	X
6 Chamberlain	Y	Y	N
5 Ford	Y	Y	Y
9 Griffin	Y	Y	Y
8 Harvey	?	?	?
4 Hutchinson	Y	Y	N
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	Y	N	Y
13 Diggs	Y	X	‡
16 Dingell	Y	N	Y
15 Ford	Y	N	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	N	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	N	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	Y	N	Y
5 Fraser	Y	N	Y
4 Karth	Y	N	Y
6 Olson	Y	N	Y
7 Langen	Y	Y	N
3 MacGregor	Y	‡	‡
2 Nelsen	Y	✓	‡
1 Quie	Y	✓	✓
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	N	Y	N
5 Colmer	X	?	?
2 Whitten	N	Y	N
3 Williams	N	Y	N
4 Walker	X	✓	X
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	‡	-	‡
6 Hull	Y	N	Y
9 Hungate	Y	N	Y
8 Ichord	Y	Y	N
10 Jones	Y	N	N
1 Karsten	Y	N	Y
4 Randall	Y	Y	N
3 Sullivan	Y	N	Y
2 Curtis	Y	Y	N
7 Hall	N	Y	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	N	Y
2 Battin	X	Y	N
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	N	Y
2 Cunningham	Y	Y	N
3 Martin	N	Y	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	X	✓	X
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	N	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	N	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	N	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	N	Y
3 Howard	Y	N	Y
8 Joelson	Y	N	Y
12 Krebs	Y	N	Y
11 Minish	Y	N	Y
2 McGrath	Y	N	Y
15 Patten	Y	N	Y
10 Rodino	Y	N	Y
4 Thompson	✓	N	Y
1 Cahill	Y	Y	Y
6 Dwyer	Y	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	Y	N	Y
7 Widnall	Y	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	N	Y
AL Walker	Y	N	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	N	Y
41 Dulski	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanley	Y	N	Y
39 McCarthy	Y	N	Y
29 O'Brien	✓	X	✓
25 Ottinger	Y	N	Y
1 Pike	Y	N	Y
28 Resnick	Y	N	Y
35 Stratton	Y	N	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	N	Y
3 Wolff	Y	N	Y
37 Conable	Y	Y	Y
38 Goodell	Y	Y	N
2 Grover	Y	Y	Y
36 Horton	Y	Y	Y
30 King	X	✓	X
31 McEwen	Y	Y	N
32 Pirnie	Y	Y	Y
26 Reid	Y	N	Y
33 Robison	Y	Y	Y
40 Smith	Y	Y	Y
4 Wydler	Y	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	Y	Y
23 Bingham	Y	N	Y
15 Carey	Y	N	Y
10 Celler	Y	X	✓
9 Delaney	Y	N	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	N	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	N	Y
12 Kelly	Y	N	Y
11 Keogh	Y	N	Y
13 Multer	Y	N	Y
16 Murphy	Y	N	Y
18 Powell	Y	N	Y
14 Rooney	Y	N	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	N	Y
20 Ryan	Y	N	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	N	Y
24 Fino	Y	Y	Y
6 Halpern	Y	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	Y	N	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	Y	N	N
4 Cooley	Y	N	Y
2 Fountain	Y	N	N
3 Henderson	?	N	Y
6 Kornegay	Y	Y	N
7 Lennon	N	N	N
5 Scott	N	N	Y
11 Taylor	Y	Y	N
10 Whitener	Y	N	N
9 Broyhill	N	Y	N
8 Jonas	Y	Y	N
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	N	Y
1 Andrews	Y	Y	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	N	Y
20 Feighan	Y	N	Y
1 Gilligan	Y	N	Y
18 Hays	Y	N	Y
19 Kirwan	Y	N	Y
3 Love	Y	N	Y
10 Moeller	Y	N	Y
15 Secrest	Y	Y	N
AL Sweeney	Y	N	Y
21 Vanik	Y	N	Y
17 Ashbrook	N	Y	N
14 Ayres	Y	Y	N
8 Betts	-	‡	-
22 Bolton	X	✓	✓
16 Bow	Y	Y	N
7 Brown	Y	Y	N
2 Clancy	N	Y	N
12 Devine	N	Y	N
6 Harsha	N	Y	N
5 Latta	Y	Y	N
4 McCulloch	Y	Y	N
23 Minshall	N	Y	N
13 Mosher	Y	N	Y
11 Stanton	Y	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	N	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	N	Y
5 Jarman	Y	N	N
6 Johnson	Y	N	Y
4 Steed	N	N	Y
1 Belcher	N	Y	N
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	N	Y
3 Green	Y	-	‡
2 Ullman	Y	N	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	N	Y
19 Craley	Y	N	Y
21 Dent	Y	N	Y
11 Flood	Y	N	Y
20 Holland	Y	N	Y
14 Moorhead	✓	X	‡
26 Morgan	Y	N	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	N	Y
15 Rooney	Y	N	Y
24 Vigorito	Y	N	Y
18 Corbett	Y	Y	Y
8 Curtin	Y	Y	Y
9 Dague	Y	Y	N
27 Fulton	Y	Y	Y
23 Johnson	Y	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	Y	✓	✓
10 McDade	Y	Y	Y
22 Saylor	Y	Y	Y
17 Schneebeli	Y	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	Y	Y	Y
7 Watkins	Y	Y	N
12 Whalley	Y	Y	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	N	Y
3 Byrne	Y	N	Y
5 Green	Y	N	Y
2 Nix	‡	N	Y
4 Toll	✓	X	✓
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	Y	N	Y
1 St. Germain	Y	N	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	N	Y	N
3 Dorn	N	Y	N
5 Gettys	Y	N	Y
6 McMillan	X	✓	?
1 Rivers	-	Y	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	Y	N
1 Reifel	Y	Y	N
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	N	Y
8 Everett	Y	Y	Y
4 Evins	Y	N	Y
5 Fulton	Y	N	Y
9 Grider	Y	N	Y
7 Murray	Y	N	Y
3 Brock	N	Y	N
2 Duncan	N	Y	N
1 Quillen	X	✓	X
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	N	Y
2 Brooks	?	N	Y
17 Burleson	N	N	N
5 Cabell	?	X	?
22 Casey	N	N	Y
15 De la Garza	‡	N	Y
7 Dowdy	N	Y	N
21 Fisher	N	✓	N
20 Gonzalez	‡	N	Y
19 Mahon	Y	N	Y
1 Patman	Y	N	Y
10 Pickle	Y	N	Y
11 Poage	Y	N	Y
AL Pool	N	Y	N
13 Purcell	Y	N	Y
4 Roberts	N	N	N
18 Rogers	N	N	N
6 Teague	N	N	N
8 Thomas	Y	N	Y
9 Thompson	Y	?	?
16 White	N	N	Y
12 Wright	‡	N	Y
14 Young	Y	N	Y
UTAH
2 King	Y	N	Y
1 Burton	X	✓	‡
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	?	?	?
1 Downing	Y	N	Y
2 Hardy	‡	N	Y
9 Jennings	Y	N	N
7 Marsh	N	Y	Y
3 Satterfield	N	N	Y
8 Smith	Y	N	Y
5 Tuck	-	Y	N
10 Broyhill	‡	Y	N
6 Poff	N	Y	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	N	Y
5 Foley	?	N	Y
3 Hansen	Y	N	Y
6 Hicks	Y	N	Y
2 Meeds	Y	N	Y
4 May	Y	Y	Y
1 Pelly	‡	Y	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	N	Y
5 Kee	Y	N	Y
3 Slack	Y	N	Y
2 Staggers	?	N	Y
1 Moore	N	Y	N
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	?	?	?
6 Race	Y	N	Y
5 Reuss	Y	N	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	N	Y
4 Zablocki	Y	N	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	Y	N
7 Laird	Y	Y	N
10 O'Konski	N	Y	N
3 Thomson	Y	Y	N
9 Davis	Y	Y	Y
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	N	N	-

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 12 through 15.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 23, 24, 28, 29.)

House Rejects Holding Hearings on HUAC Funds, Approves $370,000; Sends Appalachia Bill to President After Defeating GOP Substitute

12. H Res 188. Authorize $370,000 for investigation expenses of the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1965. Edwards (D Calif.) motion to recommit the resolution to the Committee on House Administration with instructions that it hold open hearings on the justification for the funds. Rejected 58-333: R 1-126; D 57-207 (ND 56-113; SD 1-94), Feb. 25, 1965. The President did not take a position on the motion. (See story p. 1517; for later vote, see RC 38.)

13. H Res 188. Passage of the resolution. Passed 360-29; R 125-0; D 235-29 (ND 140-29; SD 95-0), Feb. 25, 1965. The President did not take a position on the resolution.

14. S 3. Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965, authorizing a total of $1,092,400,000 for the development of the economically depressed 11-state Appalachian region. Cramer (R Fla.) motion to recommit the bill to the House Public Works Committee with instructions to report it back with an amendment to delete the provisions and substitute the text of HR 4466 (a Republican-sponsored alternative to S 3) which authorized $995 million for a two-year economic development program for all depressed areas in the United States. Rejected 100-323; R 92-44; D 8-279 (ND 2-185; SD 6-94), March 3, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 788)

15. S 3. Passage of the Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965, authorizing $840 million for construction of 3,350 miles of roads in the 11-state Appalachian region and $252.4 million for the period ending June 30, 1967, for construction of health facilities, vocational schools, housing and sewage works; land improvement; reclamation of mining areas; development of timber and water resources; and to supplement federal grant-in-aid programs. Passed 257-165: R 25-109; D 232-56 (ND 173-15; SD 59-41), March 3, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

	12	13	14	15
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	N	Y	N	N
8 Jones	N	Y	N	Y
5 Selden	N	Y	N	N
4 Andrews	N	Y	N	N
6 Buchanan	N	Y	Y	N
2 Dickinson	N	Y	Y	N
1 Edwards	N	Y	Y	N
7 Martin	N	Y	Y	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	N	Y	N	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	N	Y	N	Y
2 Udall	N	Y	N	Y
1 Rhodes	N	Y	Y	N
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	N	Y	N	N
4 Harris	N	Y	N	Y
2 Mills	N	Y	N	Y
3 Trimble	N	Y	N	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	N	N	Y
7 Cohelan	N	Y	N	Y
33 Dyal	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Edwards	Y	N	N	Y
18 Hagen	-	‡	N	Y
34 Hanna	-	‡	-	✓
2 Johnson	N	Y	N	Y
4 Leggett	Y	N	N	Y
15 McFall	N	Y	N	Y
8 Miller	?	?	N	Y
3 Moss	N	Y	N	Y
16 Sisk	N	Y	N	Y
38 Tunney	Y	Y	N	Y
37 Van Deerlin	N	Y	N	Y
14 Baldwin	N	Y	Y	N
1 Clausen	N	Y	Y	N
10 Gubser	N	‡	Y	N
6 Mailliard	-	‡	Y	N
12 Talcott	N	Y	Y	N
13 Teague	N	Y	Y	N
35 Utt	N	Y	N	N
36 Wilson	N	Y	Y	N
11 Younger	N	Y	Y	N
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	Y	N	N	Y
25 Cameron	Y	Y	N	Y
22 Corman	N	Y	N	Y
21 Hawkins	Y	N	N	Y
19 Holifield	X	‡	N	Y
17 King	X	✓	N	Y
26 Roosevelt	Y	N	X	✓
30 Roybal	Y	N	N	Y
31 Wilson	-	‡	N	Y
28 Bell	N	Y	Y	N
23 Clawson	N	Y	Y	N
32 Hosmer	N	Y	Y	N
24 Lipscomb	N	Y	Y	N
27 Reinecke	N	Y	Y	N
20 Smith	N	Y	N	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	N	Y	N	Y
3 Evans	N	Y	N	Y
2 McVicker	N	Y	-	✓
1 Rogers	N	Y	N	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	N	Y	N	N
3 Giaimo	N	Y	N	N
6 Grabowski	N	Y	N	N
4 Irwin	N	Y	N	N
5 Monagan	N	Y	N	N
2 St. Onge	N	Y	N	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	N	Y	N	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	N	Y	N	N
4 Fascell	N	Y	N	Y
9 Fuqua	N	Y	N	N
10 Gibbons	N	Y	N	Y
7 Haley	N	Y	N	N
5 Herlong	N	Y	N	N
8 Matthews	N	Y	N	N
3 Pepper	N	Y	N	Y
6 Rogers	N	Y	N	N
1 Sikes	N	Y	N	Y
12 Cramer	N	Y	Y	N
11 Gurney	-	‡	Y	N
GEORGIA
7 Davis	N	Y	N	Y
6 Flynt	N	Y	N	Y
1 Hagan	N	Y	N	Y
9 Landrum	N	Y	N	Y
4 Mackay	N	Y	N	Y
2 O'Neal	N	Y	N	N
10 Stephens	N	Y	N	Y
8 Tuten	N	Y	N	Y
5 Weltner	N	Y	N	Y
3 Callaway	N	Y	N	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	Y	N	Y
AL Mink	Y	Y	N	Y
IDAHO
1 White	N	Y	N	Y
2 Hansen	N	Y	Y	N
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	N	Y	N	Y
24 Price	N	Y	N	Y
19 Schisler	N	Y	N	Y
23 Shipley	N	Y	N	Y
16 Anderson	N	Y	Y	N
17 Arends	N	Y	Y	N
14 Erlenborn	N	Y	Y	N
20 Findley	N	Y	Y	N
12 McClory	N	Y	Y	N
18 Michel	N	Y	Y	N
15 Reid	N	Y	Y	N
22 Springer	N	Y	N	N
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	N	Y	N	Y
1 Dawson	?	?	N	Y
5 Kluczynski	N	Y	N	Y
3 Murphy	N	Y	N	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	N	N	Y
11 Pucinski	N	Y	N	Y
6 Ronan	N	Y	N	Y
8 Rostenkowski	N	Y	N	Y
9 Yates	N	Y	N	Y
10 Collier	N	Y	Y	N
4 Derwinski	N	Y	Y	N
13 Rumsfeld	N	Y	Y	N

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	12	13	14	15
INDIANA
3 Brademas	N	Y	N	Y
8 Denton	N	Y	N	Y
9 Hamilton	N	Y	-	X
11 Jacobs	N	Y	N	Y
1 Madden	N	Y	N	Y
5 Roush	N	Y	N	N
4 Adair	N	Y	Y	N
7 Bray	N	Y	N	N
2 Halleck	?	?	Y	N
10 Harvey	N	Y	Y	N
6 Roudebush	N	Y	N	N
IOWA
4 Bandstra	N	Y	N	Y
2 Culver	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Greigg	N	Y	N	Y
7 Hansen	N	Y	N	Y
1 Schmidhauser	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Smith	N	Y	N	Y
3 Gross	N	Y	N	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	N	Y	N	N
3 Ellsworth	N	Y	✓	X
4 Shriver	N	Y	N	N
2 Mize	N	Y	Y	N
5 Skubitz	N	Y	N	N
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	N	Y	N	Y
3 Farnsley	?	?	N	Y
2 Natcher	N	Y	N	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 12 through 15.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 23, 24, 28, 29.)

	12	13	14	15
7 Perkins	N	Y	N	Y
1 Stubblefield	N	Y	N	Y
6 Watts	N	Y	N	Y
5 Carter	N	Y	N	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	-	✓	N	Y
1 Hebert	N	Y	N	N
8 Long	N	Y	N	N
6 Morrison	N	Y	N	Y
5 Passman	N	Y	Y	N
7 Thompson	N	Y	N	Y
4 Waggonner	N	Y	N	N
3 Willis	N	Y	N	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	N	Y	N	Y
1 Tupper	N	Y	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	N	Y	N	Y
7 Friedel	N	Y	N	Y
3 Garmatz	X	Y	N	Y
2 Long	N	Y	N	Y
5 Machen	N	Y	N	Y
AL Sickles	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Mathias	N	Y	N	Y
1 Morton	N	Y	Y	N
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	N	Y	N	Y
11 Burke	N	Y	N	Y
4 Donohue	N	Y	N	Y
7 Macdonald	X	?	N	N
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	N	Y	N	Y
3 Philbin	N	Y	N	Y
6 Bates	N	Y	Y	N
1 Conte	N	Y	Y	N
12 Keith	N	Y	Y	X
10 Martin	?	?	Y	N
5 Morse	‡	‡	Y	N
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Farnum	N	Y	N	Y
7 Mackie	Y	N	N	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Todd	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Vivian	Y	N	N	Y
18 Broomfield	N	Y	N	N
10 Cederberg	N	Y	Y	N
6 Chamberlain	N	Y	Y	N
5 Ford	N	Y	Y	N
9 Griffin	N	Y	?	X
8 Harvey	N	Y	Y	N
4 Hutchinson	N	Y	Y	N
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	Y	N	-	Y
13 Diggs	Y	N	N	Y
16 Dingell	Y	N	N	Y
15 Ford	Y	Y	N	Y
17 Griffiths	N	Y	N	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	N	N	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Fraser	Y	N	N	Y
4 Karth	N	Y	N	Y
6 Olson	N	Y	N	Y
7 Langen	N	Y	Y	N
3 MacGregor	N	Y	Y	N
2 Nelsen	N	Y	Y	N
1 Quie	N	Y	Y	N
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	N	Y	Y	N
5 Colmer	N	Y	N	N
2 Whitten	N	Y	Y	N
3 Williams	N	Y	Y	N
4 Walker	N	Y	N	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	N	Y	N	Y
6 Hull	N	Y	N	N
9 Hungate	N	Y	N	Y
8 Ichord	N	Y	N	N
10 Jones	-	‡	N	N
1 Karsten	-	‡	N	Y
4 Randall	N	Y	N	N
3 Sullivan	?	?	N	Y

	12	13	14	15
2 Curtis	N	Y	Y	N
7 Hall	-	‡	N	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	N	Y	N	Y
2 Battin	N	Y	Y	N
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	N	Y	N	Y
2 Cunningham	N	Y	Y	N
3 Martin	N	Y	N	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	N	Y	Y	N
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	N	Y	N	Y
2 Cleveland	N	Y	Y	N
NEW JERSEY	N	Y	Y	N
14 Daniels	N	Y	N	Y
13 Gallagher	N	Y	N	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	N	N	Y
3 Howard	N	Y	N	Y
8 Joelson	N	Y	N	Y
12 Krebs	N	Y	N	Y
11 Minish	N	Y	N	Y
2 McGrath	N	Y	N	Y
15 Patten	N	Y	N	Y
10 Rodino	N	Y	N	Y
4 Thompson	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Cahill	N	Y	Y	N
6 Dwyer	N	Y	Y	N
5 Frelinghuysen	N	Y	Y	N
7 Widnall	?	‡	✓	X
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	N	Y	N	Y
AL Walker	Y	Y	Y	N
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	N	N	Y
41 Dulski	N	Y	N	Y
34 Hanley	N	Y	N	Y
39 McCarthy	N	Y	N	Y
29 O'Brien	-	‡	N	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	N	N	Y
1 Pike	N	Y	N	N
28 Resnick	Y	N	N	Y
35 Stratton	N	Y	N	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	N	Y
37 Conable	N	Y	Y	N
38 Goodell	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Grover	N	Y	Y	N
36 Horton	N	Y	Y	N
30 King	N	Y	Y	N
31 McEwen	N	Y	Y	N
32 Pirnie	N	Y	Y	N
26 Reid	‡	‡	Y	Y
33 Robison	N	Y	Y	N
40 Smith	?	?	Y	?
4 Wydler	N	Y	Y	N
New York City
7 Addabbo	N	Y	N	Y
23 Bingham	Y	N	N	Y
15 Carey	N	Y	N	Y
10 Celler	?	?	N	Y
9 Delaney	N	Y	N	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	N	N	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	N	N	Y
12 Kelly	-	‡	N	Y
11 Keogh	X	✓	N	Y
13 Multer	✓	X	N	Y
16 Murphy	N	Y	N	Y
18 Powell	?	?	N	Y
14 Rooney	N	Y	N	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	N	N	Y
20 Ryan	Y	N	N	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	N	N	Y
24 Fino	N	Y	N	Y
6 Halpern	N	Y	N	Y
17 Lindsay	Y	Y	Y	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	N	Y	N	Y
4 Cooley	N	Y	N	N
2 Fountain	N	Y	N	N
3 Henderson	N	Y	N	Y
6 Kornegay	N	Y	N	Y
7 Lennon	N	Y	N	N

	12	13	14	15
5 Scott	N	Y	N	Y
11 Taylor	N	Y	N	Y
10 Whitener	N	Y	N	Y
9 Broyhill	N	Y	Y	N
8 Jonas	N	Y	N	N
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	N	‡	N	Y
1 Andrews	N	Y	Y	N
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	N	N	Y
20 Feighan	N	Y	N	Y
1 Gilligan	N	Y	N	Y
18 Hays	-	‡	N	Y
19 Kirwan	N	Y	N	Y
3 Love	N	Y	N	Y
10 Moeller	N	Y	N	Y
15 Secrest	N	Y	N	Y
AL Sweeney	N	Y	N	Y
21 Vanik	N	Y	N	Y
17 Ashbrook	N	Y	N	Y
14 Ayres	N	Y	Y	N
8 Betts	N	Y	Y	N
22 Bolton	N	Y	Y	N
16 Bow	-	‡	Y	N
7 Brown	N	Y	Y	N
2 Clancy	N	Y	N	Y
12 Devine	N	Y	N	N
6 Harsha	N	Y	N	Y
5 Latta	N	Y	Y	N
4 McCulloch	N	Y	Y	N
23 Minshall	N	Y	Y	N
13 Mosher	N	Y	N	N
11 Stanton	N	Y	Y	N
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	N	Y	N	Y
2 Edmondson	N	Y	N	Y
5 Jarman	N	Y	N	N
6 Johnson	N	Y	N	Y
4 Steed	N	Y	N	Y
1 Belcher	?	?	Y	N
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	N	N	Y
3 Green	✓	X	N	N
2 Ullman	N	Y	N	Y
1 Wyatt	N	Y	Y	N
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	N	Y	N	Y
19 Craley	Y	N	N	Y
21 Dent	N	Y	N	Y
11 Flood	N	Y	N	Y
20 Holland	✓	X	N	Y
14 Moorhead	Y	Y	N	Y
26 Morgan	N	Y	N	Y
6 Rhodes	N	Y	N	Y
15 Rooney	N	Y	N	Y
24 Vigorito	N	Y	N	Y
18 Corbett	N	Y	N	Y
8 Curtin	N	‡	N	Y
9 Dague	N	Y	N	N
27 Fulton	N	Y	N	Y
23 Johnson	N	Y	N	Y
16 Kunkel	N	Y	X	✓
10 McDade	N	Y	N	Y
22 Saylor	N	Y	N	Y
17 Schneebeli	-	‡	N	Y
13 Schweiker	N	Y	N	Y
7 Watkins	N	Y	N	Y
12 Whalley	N	Y	N	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Byrne	✓	‡	N	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Nix	✓	-	N	Y
4 Toll	✓	‡	-	✓
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	N	Y	N	Y
1 St. Germain	N	Y	N	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	N	Y	N	N
3 Dorn	N	Y	N	Y
5 Gettys	N	Y	N	Y
6 McMillan	N	Y	N	Y

	12	13	14	15
1 Rivers	N	Y	N	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	N	Y	N	N
1 Reifel	N	Y	N	N
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	N	Y	N	Y
8 Everett	?	?	N	Y
4 Evins	N	Y	N	Y
5 Fulton	X	‡	N	Y
9 Grider	N	Y	N	Y
7 Murray	N	Y	N	Y
3 Brock	N	Y	N	N
2 Duncan	N	Y	N	Y
1 Quillen	N	Y	N	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	N	Y	N	Y
2 Brooks	N	Y	N	Y
17 Burleson	N	Y	N	N
5 Cabell	N	Y	N	Y
22 Casey	N	Y	N	N
15 De la Garza	N	Y	N	N
7 Dowdy	N	Y	Y	N
21 Fisher	N	Y	N	N
20 Gonzalez	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Mahon	N	Y	N	N
1 Patman	N	Y	N	Y
10 Pickle	N	Y	N	Y
11 Poage	N	Y	N	N
AL Pool	N	Y	Y	N
13 Purcell	N	Y	N	Y
4 Roberts	N	Y	N	N
18 Rogers	N	Y	N	N
6 Teague	N	Y	N	N
8 Thomas	N	Y	N	Y
9 Thompson	?	?	N	Y
16 White	N	Y	N	Y
12 Wright	N	Y	N	Y
14 Young	N	Y	N	Y
UTAH
2 King	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Burton	-	‡	Y	N
VERMONT
AL Stafford	N	Y	Y	N
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	N	Y	N	N
1 Downing	N	Y	N	N
2 Hardy	N	Y	N	N
9 Jennings	N	Y	N	Y
7 Marsh	N	Y	N	N
3 Satterfield	N	Y	N	N
8 Smith	N	Y	N	N
5 Tuck	N	Y	N	N
10 Broyhill	N	Y	Y	N
6 Poff	N	Y	Y	N
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Foley	N	Y	N	Y
3 Hansen	N	Y	N	Y
6 Hicks	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Meeds	Y	Y	N	Y
4 May	N	Y	Y	N
1 Pelly	N	Y	Y	N
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Kee	N	Y	N	Y
3 Slack	N	Y	N	Y
2 Staggers	N	Y	N	Y
1 Moore	N	Y	N	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	N	N	Y
6 Race	N	Y	N	Y
5 Reuss	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Stalbaum	N	Y	N	Y
4 Zablocki	N	Y	N	Y
8 Byrnes	N	Y	Y	N
7 Laird	N	Y	Y	N
10 O'Konski	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Thomson	N	Y	N	N
9 Davis	N	Y	N	N
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	Y	Y	N	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 16 through 20.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 31, 33, 35, 38, 39.)

House Approves Drug Control, Congressional Districting Bills; Rejects Arts Council Authorization Bill, Supreme Court Pay Raise

16. HR 2. Passage of a bill to expand federal controls over distribution, possession and manufacture of barbiturates, amphetamines and other drugs affecting the central nervous system. Passed 402-0: R 131-0; D 271-0 (ND 175-0; SD 96-0), March 10, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 352)

17. HR 4714. Amend the National Arts and Cultural Development Act of 1964 to provide that the $150,000 appropriations authorization for the National Council on the Arts -- provided in the Act -- be on an annual basis. Thompson (D N.J.) motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill (two-thirds majority vote required). Rejected 217-113: R 47-68; D 170-45 (ND 126-3; SD 44-42), March 15, 1965 (220 "yeas" were necessary for passage). A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 621; for passage, see RC 44.)

18. HR 5505. Establish standards for Congressional districts. Mathias (R Md.) amendment authorizing a state to elect its Members at large if it had not complied with the redistricting requirements of the bill and allowing a state that had never before districted (New Mexico and Hawaii) to continue to elect its Members at large. Rejected 147-255: R 47-85; D 100-170 (ND 32-145; SD 68-25), March 16, 1965. The President did not take a position on the amendment. (See story p. 603)

19. H Res 276. Open rule (permitting amendments and one hour of general debate) for floor consideration of HR 5374 (below), increasing the pay of Supreme Court Justices by $3,000. Adopted 202-183: R 33-93; D 169-90 (ND 141-27; SD 28-63), March 17, 1965. The President did not take a position on the rule. (See story p. 647)

20. HR 5374. Passage of the bill to provide a $3,000-a-year pay increase for the Chief Justice (to $43,000) and the eight Associate Justices (to $42,500) of the Supreme Court, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1965. Rejected 178-202: R 23-104; D 155-98 (ND 134-30; SD 21-68), March 17, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill.

	16	17	18	19	20
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	Y	N	Y	N	N
8 Jones	Y	Y	N	Y	N
5 Selden	Y	-	Y	N	N
4 Andrews	Y	Y	N	N	N
6 Buchanan	Y	N	Y	N	N
2 Dickinson	Y	-	Y	X	N
1 Edwards	Y	N	‡	X	X
7 Martin	?	N	Y	N	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Udall	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y	N	N
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	Y	Y	Y	N	N
4 Harris	Y	Y	Y	N	N
2 Mills	Y	Y	Y	N	N
3 Trimble	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Cohelan	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
33 Dyal	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Edwards	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
18 Hagen	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
34 Hanna	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Johnson	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Leggett	‡	‡	N	Y	Y
15 McFall	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Miller	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Moss	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
16 Sisk	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
38 Tunney	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
37 Van Deerlin	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
14 Baldwin	Y	N	N	N	N
1 Clausen	‡	N	N	N	N
10 Gubser	Y	N	N	N	N
6 Mailliard	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
12 Talcott	Y	N	N	N	N
13 Teague	Y	N	N	N	N
35 Utt	‡	N	N	N	N
36 Wilson	Y	?	N	N	N
11 Younger	Y	N	N	N	N

	16	17	18	19	20
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	‡	Y	N	Y	‡
25 Cameron	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
22 Corman	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Hawkins	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
19 Holifield	‡	Y	N	Y	Y
17 King	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
26 Roosevelt	‡	‡	-	‡	‡
30 Roybal	Y	‡	-	‡	‡
31 Wilson	Y	‡	N	Y	N
28 Bell	Y	N	N	Y	Y
23 Clawson	‡	N	N	N	N
32 Hosmer	Y	-	N	N	N
24 Lipscomb	Y	N	N	N	N
27 Reinecke	‡	Y	N	N	N
20 Smith	Y	X	N	N	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Evans	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 McVicker	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Rogers	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Giaimo	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Grabowski	Y	?	N	Y	Y
4 Irwin	Y	‡	Y	Y	Y
5 Monagan	Y	‡	Y	Y	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	‡	Y	Y	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	N	Y	N	N
4 Fascell	Y	?	N	Y	Y
9 Fuqua	Y	Y	N	N	N
10 Gibbons	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Haley	Y	N	Y	N	N
5 Herlong	Y	-	Y	X	X
8 Matthews	Y	Y	Y	N	N
3 Pepper	Y	‡	Y	Y	Y
6 Rogers	Y	Y	N	N	N
1 Sikes	Y	N	Y	N	X
12 Cramer	Y	Y	N	N	N
11 Gurney	Y	N	N	N	N

	16	17	18	19	20
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	N	N	N	N
6 Flynt	Y	N	N	N	N
1 Hagan	Y	N	N	X	X
9 Landrum	Y	?	N	N	N
4 Mackay	Y	Y	N	N	N
2 O'Neal	Y	N	N	N	N
10 Stephens	Y	N	‡	X	X
8 Tuten	Y	N	N	N	N
5 Weltner	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Callaway	Y	N	Y	N	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Mink	‡	Y	Y	‡	Y
IDAHO
1 White	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Hansen	Y	N	N	N	N
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	Y	?	N	N	N
24 Price	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
19 Schisler	Y	Y	N	N	N
23 Shipley	Y	?	N	N	N
16 Anderson	Y	N	Y	N	N
17 Arends	Y	N	N	N	N
14 Erlenborn	Y	N	N	Y	Y
20 Findley	Y	N	?	-	N
12 McClory	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
18 Michel	Y	N	N	Y	N
15 Reid	Y	N	N	N	N
22 Springer	Y	N	N	N	N
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Dawson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Kluczynski	Y	?	?	?	?
3 Murphy	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	Y	N	✓	✓
6 Ronan	Y	‡	-	‡	‡
8 Rostenkowski	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
9 Yates	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Collier	‡	N	N	N	N
4 Derwinski	Y	-	N	N	N
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	N	Y	N

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against.
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	16	17	18	19	20
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Denton	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
11 Jacobs	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Madden	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Roush	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Adair	Y	N	N	N	N
7 Bray	Y	N	Y	N	N
2 Halleck	Y	N	Y	?	N
10 Harvey	Y	N	Y	N	N
6 Roudebush	Y	N	Y	N	N
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	?	N	Y	N
2 Culver	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Greigg	Y	Y	N	N	N
7 Hansen	Y	Y	N	Y	N
1 Schmidhauser	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Smith	Y	Y	N	Y	N
3 Gross	Y	N	N	N	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	N	Y	N	N
3 Ellsworth	Y	‡	Y	N	N
4 Shriver	Y	N	Y	N	N
2 Mize	Y	Y	N	X	X
5 Skubitz	Y	N	?	N	N
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	Y	Y	N	N
3 Farnsley	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Natcher	Y	Y	Y	N	N

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 16 through 20.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 31, 33, 35, 38, 39.)

	16	17	18	19	20
7 Perkins	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	Y	N	N
6 Watts	Y	Y	Y	N	N
5 Carter	Y	Y	N	?	?
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Hebert	Y	N	?	N	N
8 Long	Y	N	Y	N	N
6 Morrison	Y	Y	N	N	N
5 Passman	Y	N	Y	N	N
7 Thompson	‡	Y	N	Y	N
4 Waggonner	Y	N	Y	N	N
3 Willis	Y	?	?	?	?
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Tupper	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	?	?	?	✓
7 Friedel	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
3 Garmatz	Y	Y	Y	Y	✓
2 Long	Y	?	Y	Y	Y
5 Machen	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Sickles	Y	‡	Y	Y	Y
6 Mathias	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Morton	Y	Y	Y	‡	✓
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	‡	N	‡	‡
11 Burke	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Donohue	Y	?	N	?	?
7 Macdonald	Y	?	N	Y	✓
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	-	N	Y	‡
3 Philbin	Y	‡	N	‡	‡
6 Bates	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Conte	Y	‡	Y	✓	✓
12 Keith	Y	Y	Y	N	N
10 Martin	?	?	?	✓	✓
5 Morse	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	?	?	Y	Y
19 Farnum	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Mackie	Y	‡	N	N	Y
12 O'Hara	‡	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Todd	Y	?	N	Y	Y
2 Vivian	Y	?	N	Y	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	Y	N	N	X
10 Cederberg	Y	N	N	?	?
6 Chamberlain	Y	N	N	N	N
5 Ford	Y	Y	-	Y	Y
9 Griffin	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Harvey	Y	Y	N	N	N
4 Hutchinson	Y	N	N	N	N
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	Y	‡	-	‡	Y
13 Diggs	‡	‡	N	Y	Y
16 Dingell	Y	Y	N	Y	N
15 Ford	‡	‡	N	Y	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	?	N	Y	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
5 Fraser	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Karth	Y	Y	N	N	N
6 Olson	Y	Y	Y	N	N
7 Langen	Y	N	N	N	N
3 MacGregor	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
2 Nelsen	Y	Y	N	N	N
1 Quie	Y	Y	N	Y	N
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	Y	-	Y	N	N
5 Colmer	Y	N	Y	N	N
2 Whitten	Y	?	?	X	X
3 Williams	Y	?	Y	N	N
4 Walker	Y	-	-	N	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
6 Hull	Y	N	N	N	N
9 Hungate	Y	Y	N	N	N
8 Ichord	Y	Y	N	N	N
10 Jones	Y	N	N	N	N
1 Karsten	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Randall	Y	Y	N	N	N
3 Sullivan	Y	Y	N	N	N

	16	17	18	19	20
2 Curtis	Y	X	N	Y	Y
7 Hall	Y	N	N	X	X
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Battin	Y	N	N	N	N
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	Y	Y	N	N
2 Cunningham	Y	N	Y	N	N
3 Martin	Y	N	N	N	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	Y	N	Y	N	N
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	✓	N	N	N
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	?	N	Y	Y
3 Howard	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Joelson	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
12 Krebs	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
11 Minish	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
2 McGrath	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
15 Patten	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Rodino	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
4 Thompson	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Cahill	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Dwyer	Y	✓	N	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Widnall	‡	✓	?	✓	✓
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	Y	Y	N	N
AL Walker	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	Y	-	Y	Y
41 Dulski	Y	Y	N	Y	N
34 Hanley	Y	Y	N	?	?
39 McCarthy	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Pike	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
28 Resnick	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
35 Stratton	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
37 Conable	Y	‡	N	N	N
38 Goodell	Y	Y	N	Y	N
2 Grover	Y	Y	N	N	N
36 Horton	Y	Y	N	Y	N
30 King	Y	N	N	N	N
31 McEwen	Y	N	N	N	N
32 Pirnie	Y	✓	N	Y	N
26 Reid	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
33 Robison	Y	N	N	Y	N
40 Smith	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Wydler	Y	Y	N	N	N
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
23 Bingham	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
15 Carey	Y	‡	N	✓	‡
10 Celler	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Delaney	Y	?	N	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	✓	N	Y	Y
12 Kelly	Y	Y	N	✓	‡
11 Keogh	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Multer	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Murphy	Y	?	N	N	N
18 Powell	Y	?	?	?	?
14 Rooney	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
20 Ryan	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
21 Scheuer	‡	‡	-	Y	Y
24 Fino	Y	-	N	N	N
6 Halpern	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	Y	✓	Y	Y	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	Y	N	Y	N	X
4 Cooley	Y	N	Y	N	N
2 Fountain	Y	N	Y	N	N
3 Henderson	Y	N	Y	N	N
6 Kornegay	Y	N	Y	N	N
7 Lennon	Y	N	Y	N	N

	16	17	18	19	20
5 Scott	‡	Y	Y	N	N
11 Taylor	Y	N	Y	N	N
10 Whitener	Y	N	Y	N	N
9 Broyhill	Y	X	Y	N	N
8 Jonas	Y	N	Y	N	N
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	Y	Y	N	N
1 Andrews	Y	Y	Y	N	N
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	‡	-	Y	Y
20 Feighan	Y	Y	N	N	N
1 Gilligan	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
18 Hays	Y	‡	N	N	N
19 Kirwan	?	?	?	✓	✓
3 Love	Y	?	N	Y	Y
10 Moeller	Y	Y	N	N	N
15 Secrest	Y	Y	Y	N	N
AL Sweeney	Y	Y	?	?	?
21 Vanik	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
17 Ashbrook	Y	‡	Y	N	N
14 Ayres	Y	Y	N	‡	‡
8 Betts	Y	N	Y	N	N
22 Bolton	Y	✓	Y	N	N
16 Bow	Y	N	N	N	N
7 Brown	Y	N	Y	N	N
2 Clancy	Y	N	Y	N	N
12 Devine	Y	N	Y	N	N
6 Harsha	Y	N	Y	N	N
5 Latta	Y	N	Y	N	N
4 McCulloch	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
23 Minshall	Y	N	Y	N	N
13 Mosher	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Stanton	Y	N	Y	N	N
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Jarman	Y	N	N	Y	Y
6 Johnson	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Steed	Y	N	Y	N	N
1 Belcher	Y	N	N	N	N
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Green	Y	‡	Y	Y	Y
2 Ullman	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	Y	N	N	N
19 Craley	Y	Y	N	‡	‡
21 Dent	Y	Y	N	N	Y
11 Flood	Y	Y	N	Y	✓
20 Holland	‡	✓	Y	Y	✓
14 Moorhead	Y	?	N	Y	Y
26 Morgan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Rooney	Y	Y	N	Y	‡
24 Vigorito	Y	Y	N	N	Y
18 Corbett	Y	?	Y	Y	N
8 Curtin	Y	Y	N	N	N
9 Dague	Y	N	Y	N	N
27 Fulton	Y	‡	Y	N	N
23 Johnson	Y	N	N	N	N
16 Kunkel	Y	Y	N	N	N
10 McDade	Y	Y	Y	N	X
22 Saylor	Y	Y	N	N	N
17 Schneebeli	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
13 Schweiker	Y	Y	N	N	N
7 Watkins	Y	N	N	N	N
12 Whalley	Y	?	N	N	N
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	N	✓	✓
3 Byrne	‡	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Nix	‡	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Toll	‡	‡	-	✓	‡
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	‡	Y	N	✓	✓
1 St. Germain	Y	?	N	?	✓
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	Y	N	Y	N	N
3 Dorn	Y	N	Y	X	X
5 Gettys	Y	N	Y	N	N
6 McMillan	Y	?	Y	N	N

	16	17	18	19	20
1 Rivers	‡	Y	Y	X	X
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	N	N	N	N
1 Reifel	Y	Y	N	N	N
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Everett	Y	Y	Y	N	N
4 Evins	Y	Y	N	?	N
5 Fulton	Y	-	-	Y	N
9 Grider	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Murray	Y	N	N	N	N
3 Brock	‡	N	Y	N	N
2 Duncan	Y	N	N	N	N
1 Quillen	Y	N	N	N	N
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	Y	Y	N	N
2 Brooks	Y	?	?	Y	Y
17 Burleson	Y	N	Y	N	N
5 Cabell	Y	N	Y	Y	N
22 Casey	Y	N	Y	N	N
15 De la Garza	Y	Y	Y	N	N
7 Dowdy	Y	N	Y	N	N
21 Fisher	Y	N	Y	N	N
20 Gonzalez	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
19 Mahon	Y	Y	Y	N	N
1 Patman	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
10 Pickle	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Poage	Y	Y	Y	N	N
AL Pool	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
13 Purcell	Y	-	Y	Y	‡
4 Roberts	‡	N	Y	N	N
18 Rogers	Y	N	Y	N	N
6 Teague	Y	N	Y	N	N
8 Thomas	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Thompson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 White	Y	N	N	N	N
12 Wright	Y	Y	?	‡	‡
14 Young	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
UTAH
2 King	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Burton	Y	N	N	N	N
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	?	Y	N	N
1 Downing	Y	Y	Y	N	N
2 Hardy	Y	Y	Y	N	N
9 Jennings	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
7 Marsh	Y	Y	Y	N	N
3 Satterfield	Y	N	Y	N	N
8 Smith	Y	N	Y	N	N
5 Tuck	Y	N	Y	N	N
10 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y	N	N
6 Poff	Y	N	Y	N	N
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Foley	Y	?	N	Y	Y
3 Hansen	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Hicks	Y	Y	N	N	N
2 Meeds	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 May	Y	?	?	X	X
1 Pelly	Y	Y	N	N	N
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Kee	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Slack	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Staggers	Y	?	N	N	N
1 Moore	Y	N	N	N	N
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Race	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
5 Reuss	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	Y	Y	N	✓	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	N	N	Y	Y
7 Laird	Y	‡	N	N	N
10 O'Konski	Y	N	N	N	N
3 Thomson	Y	Y	N	N	N
9 Davis	Y	Y	N	N	N
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	Y	‡	-	‡	‡

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 21 through 23.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 42, 43, 45.)

House Approves D.C. Crime Bill After Rejecting Recommittal Motion; Votes Acreage-Poundage Marketing Quotas for Flue-Cured Tobacco

21. HR 5688. Amend the District of Columbia crime laws. Mathias (R Md.) motion to recommit the bill to the House District Committee with instructions to hold public hearings on "criminal legislation" for the District of Columbia. Rejected 166-216: R 20-98; D 146-118 (ND 142-33; SD 4-85), March 22, 1965. The President did not take a position on the motion. (See story p. 662)

22. HR 5688. Passage of the bill amending the District of Columbia crime laws to nullify the Mallory and Durham rules of evidence, allow investigative arrests, establish robbery as a crime of violence, set mandatory minimum sentences for certain crimes and provide new controls over obscene materials. Passed 251-131: R 106-11; D 145-120 (ND 59-117; SD 86-3), March 22, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill.

23. HR 5721. Passage of a bill to provide acreage-poundage marketing quotas on flue-cured tobacco beginning with the 1965 crop if approved by two-thirds of the growers in a referendum. Passed 206-170: R 11-110; D 195-60 (ND 131-34; SD 64-26), March 23, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 134)

	21	22	23
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	N	Y	N
8 Jones	?	?	?
5 Selden	N	Y	N
4 Andrews	?	?	N
6 Buchanan	-	‡	N
2 Dickinson	N	Y	-
1 Edwards	N	Y	N
7 Martin	N	Y	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	N	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	N	Y
2 Udall	Y	N	Y
1 Rhodes	X	✓	N
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	N	Y	N
4 Harris	N	Y	Y
2 Mills	N	Y	Y
3 Trimble	N	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	N	N
7 Cohelan	Y	N	N
33 Dyal	Y	N	N
9 Edwards	Y	N	Y
18 Hagen	N	Y	Y
34 Hanna	Y	N	Y
2 Johnson	N	Y	Y
4 Leggett	Y	N	‡
15 McFall	Y	N	‡
8 Miller	Y	N	-
3 Moss	Y	N	Y
16 Sisk	Y	N	Y
38 Tunney	Y	Y	N
37 Van Deerlin	Y	N	N
14 Baldwin	N	Y	N
1 Clausen	‡	‡	N
10 Gubser	N	Y	N
6 Mailliard	Y	Y	N
12 Talcott	N	Y	N
13 Teague	N	Y	-
35 Utt	N	Y	N
36 Wilson	-	‡	N
11 Younger	N	Y	N

	21	22	23
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	Y	N	‡
25 Cameron	✓	N	N
22 Corman	Y	N	N
21 Hawkins	Y	N	N
19 Holifield	Y	N	Y
17 King	Y	N	Y
26 Roosevelt	✓	X	‡
30 Roybal	✓	X	N
31 Wilson	Y	Y	N
28 Bell	N	Y	N
23 Clawson	N	Y	N
32 Hosmer	N	Y	N
24 Lipscomb	N	Y	N
27 Reinecke	N	Y	N
20 Smith	N	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	N	Y	Y
3 Evans	Y	N	Y
2 McVicker	?	?	Y
1 Rogers	Y	N	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	N	Y
3 Giaimo	Y	N	?
6 Grabowski	Y	N	‡
4 Irwin	Y	N	-
5 Monagan	N	Y	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	N	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	Y	N
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	N	Y	N
4 Fascell	N	Y	N
9 Fuqua	N	Y	N
10 Gibbons	X	✓	N
7 Haley	N	Y	N
5 Herlong	N	Y	N
8 Matthews	N	Y	N
3 Pepper	N	Y	Y
6 Rogers	N	Y	N
1 Sikes	N	Y	N
12 Cramer	N	Y	N
11 Gurney	N	Y	-

	21	22	23
GEORGIA
7 Davis	N	Y	N
6 Flynt	-	‡	N
1 Hagan	N	Y	N
9 Landrum	N	Y	N
4 Mackay	N	Y	N
2 O'Neal	N	Y	N
10 Stephens	N	Y	N
8 Tuten	N	Y	N
5 Weltner	N	Y	Y
3 Callaway	N	Y	-
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	N	Y
AL Mink	Y	N	Y
IDAHO
1 White	Y	N	Y
2 Hansen	N	Y	-
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	N	Y	Y
24 Price	Y	N	Y
19 Schisler	Y	Y	‡
23 Shipley	Y	N	Y
16 Anderson	N	Y	N
17 Arends	‡	‡	N
14 Erlenborn	N	Y	N
20 Findley	?	?	N
12 McClory	N	Y	N
18 Michel	N	Y	N
15 Reid	N	Y	N
22 Springer	N	Y	N
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	N	Y
1 Dawson	Y	N	Y
5 Kluczynski	Y	N	Y
3 Murphy	Y	N	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	N	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	Y	Y
6 Ronan	Y	N	Y
8 Rostenkowski	Y	N	Y
9 Yates	Y	N	Y
10 Collier	N	Y	N
4 Derwinski	N	Y	-
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	N

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	21	22	23
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	N	Y
8 Denton	Y	Y	Y
9 Hamilton	N	Y	‡
11 Jacobs	Y	Y	N
1 Madden	Y	Y	Y
5 Roush	N	Y	N
4 Adair	N	Y	N
7 Bray	N	Y	-
2 Halleck	N	Y	N
10 Harvey	‡	‡	N
6 Roudebush	N	Y	?
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	Y	Y
2 Culver	Y	N	Y
6 Greigg	Y	N	Y
7 Hansen	Y	Y	Y
1 Schmidhauser	‡	‡	Y
5 Smith	Y	N	Y
3 Gross	N	Y	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	N	Y	N
3 Ellsworth	Y	‡	‡
4 Shriver	N	Y	N
2 Mize	N	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	?	?	Y
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	N	Y	Y
3 Farnsley	N	Y	Y
2 Natcher	N	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 21 through 23.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 42, 43, 45.)

	21	22	23
7 Perkins	Y	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	N	Y	Y
6 Watts	N	Y	Y
5 Carter	N	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	X	✓	Y
1 Hebert	N	Y	?
8 Long	N	Y	Y
6 Morrison	N	Y	Y
5 Passman	N	Y	Y
7 Thompson	N	Y	Y
4 Waggonner	X	✓	Y
3 Willis	N	Y	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	N	Y	Y
1 Tupper	Y	N	N
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	N	Y	Y
7 Friedel	✓	✓	‡
3 Garmatz	Y	Y	Y
2 Long	Y	N	Y
5 Machen	N	Y	Y
AL Sickles	Y	N	Y
6 Mathias	Y	N	N
1 Morton	Y	Y	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	N	N
11 Burke	Y	N	Y
4 Donohue	Y	N	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	N	N
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	N	Y
3 Philbin	Y	N	Y
6 Bates	N	Y	N
1 Conte	Y	N	N
12 Keith	N	Y	N
10 Martin	N	Y	?
5 Morse	Y	N	N
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	N	Y
19 Farnum	Y	N	N
7 Mackie	Y	N	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	N	Y
3 Todd	Y	N	Y
2 Vivian	✓	X	?
18 Broomfield	N	Y	N
10 Cederberg	?	?	N
6 Chamberlain	N	Y	N
5 Ford	X	✓	N
9 Griffin	?	?	N
8 Harvey	N	Y	N
4 Hutchinson	N	Y	N
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	Y	N	?
13 Diggs	Y	N	Y
16 Dingell	Y	N	N
15 Ford	Y	N	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	N	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	N	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	Y	N	‡
5 Fraser	Y	N	Y
4 Karth	N	Y	Y
6 Olson	Y	N	Y
7 Langen	N	Y	N
3 MacGregor	Y	Y	N
2 Nelsen	N	Y	N
1 Quie	Y	Y	N
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	N	Y	Y
5 Colmer	N	Y	Y
2 Whitten	N	Y	Y
3 Williams	N	Y	Y
4 Walker	N	Y	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	Y	N	-
6 Hull	N	Y	Y
9 Hungate	Y	Y	Y
8 Ichord	N	Y	Y
10 Jones	N	Y	Y
1 Karsten	Y	N	Y
4 Randall	Y	Y	Y
3 Sullivan	Y	N	Y
2 Curtis	Y	N	N
7 Hall	N	Y	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	N	Y
2 Battin	N	Y	N
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	N	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	N	Y	N
3 Martin	N	Y	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	N	Y	?
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	N	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	Y	N
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	N	‡
13 Gallagher	Y	N	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	N	Y
3 Howard	?	?	?
8 Joelson	Y	N	N
12 Krebs	Y	N	N
11 Minish	Y	N	N
2 McGrath	Y	N	Y
15 Patten	Y	N	Y
10 Rodino	Y	N	Y
4 Thompson	Y	N	-
1 Cahill	Y	N	N
6 Dwyer	✓	X	N
5 Frelinghuysen	‡	‡	-
7 Widnall	X	✓	?
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	N	Y	Y
AL Walker	Y	N	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	N	Y
41 Dulski	✓	‡	Y
34 Hanley	?	?	N
39 McCarthy	Y	N	N
29 O'Brien	Y	Y	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	N	N
1 Pike	N	Y	N
28 Resnick	Y	N	‡
35 Stratton	X	‡	N
5 Tenzer	Y	Y	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	-
37 Conable	Y	N	-
38 Goodell	Y	Y	N
2 Grover	N	Y	N
36 Horton	Y	N	N
30 King	N	Y	N
31 McEwen	N	Y	N
32 Pirnie	N	Y	N
26 Reid	✓	X	-
33 Robison	N	Y	N
40 Smith	N	Y	Y
4 Wydler	N	Y	N
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	Y	Y
23 Bingham	Y	N	Y
15 Carey	N	Y	Y
10 Celler	✓	X	Y
9 Delaney	Y	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	N	N
22 Gilbert	Y	N	Y
12 Kelly	Y	Y	Y
11 Keogh	✓	X	Y
13 Multer	Y	N	Y
16 Murphy	Y	Y	Y
18 Powell	Y	N	Y
14 Rooney	Y	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	N	Y
20 Ryan	Y	N	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	N	Y
24 Fino	-	‡	N
6 Halpern	Y	N	N
17 Lindsay	Y	N	N
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	?	✓	?
4 Cooley	N	Y	Y
2 Fountain	N	Y	Y
3 Henderson	N	Y	Y
6 Kornegay	N	Y	Y
7 Lennon	N	Y	Y
5 Scott	N	Y	Y
11 Taylor	N	Y	?
10 Whitener	N	Y	Y
9 Broyhill	N	Y	Y
8 Jonas	N	Y	Y
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	N	Y
1 Andrews	N	Y	N
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	N	N
20 Feighan	Y	Y	N
1 Gilligan	Y	N	Y
18 Hays	Y	N	Y
19 Kirwan	Y	Y	Y
3 Love	Y	Y	Y
10 Moeller	N	Y	?
15 Secrest	N	Y	Y
AL Sweeney	Y	N	Y
21 Vanik	Y	N	Y
17 Ashbrook	N	Y	N
14 Ayres	N	Y	N
8 Betts	N	Y	N
22 Bolton	N	Y	N
16 Bow	N	Y	N
7 Brown	N	Y	N
2 Clancy	N	Y	N
12 Devine	N	Y	N
6 Harsha	N	Y	N
5 Latta	N	Y	N
4 McCulloch	N	Y	N
23 Minshall	N	Y	N
13 Mosher	Y	N	N
11 Stanton	N	Y	N
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	N	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	N	Y	Y
5 Jarman	-	‡	N
6 Johnson	X	✓	‡
4 Steed	N	Y	Y
1 Belcher	N	Y	N
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	N	Y
3 Green	Y	N	N
2 Ullman	Y	N	Y
1 Wyatt	N	Y	N
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	N	Y	Y
19 Craley	N	Y	Y
21 Dent	N	N	?
11 Flood	N	Y	Y
20 Holland	X	‡	‡
14 Moorhead	Y	N	Y
26 Morgan	N	Y	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y
15 Rooney	✓	X	Y
24 Vigorito	Y	Y	Y
18 Corbett	N	Y	N
8 Curtin	N	Y	-
9 Dague	N	Y	N
27 Fulton	-	‡	N
23 Johnson	N	Y	N
16 Kunkel	N	Y	N
10 McDade	✓	X	N
22 Saylor	N	Y	N
17 Schneebeli	N	Y	N
13 Schweiker	N	Y	N
7 Watkins	N	Y	?
12 Whalley	N	Y	-
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	N	Y
3 Byrne	Y	N	Y
5 Green	Y	N	Y
2 Nix	Y	N	?
4 Toll	✓	X	?
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	Y	N	N
1 St. Germain	Y	N	N
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	N	Y	Y
3 Dorn	N	Y	Y
5 Gettys	N	Y	Y
6 McMillan	N	Y	N
1 Rivers	N	Y	N
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	N	Y	N
1 Reifel	N	Y	N
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	N	Y	N
8 Everett	X	‡	‡
4 Evins	N	Y	Y
5 Fulton	N	Y	N
9 Grider	Y	N	N
7 Murray	N	Y	Y
3 Brock	N	Y	N
2 Duncan	N	Y	N
1 Quillen	N	Y	N
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	N	Y	Y
2 Brooks	N	Y	Y
17 Burleson	N	Y	Y
5 Cabell	N	Y	Y
22 Casey	N	Y	Y
15 De la Garza	N	Y	Y
7 Dowdy	N	Y	Y
21 Fisher	N	Y	Y
20 Gonzalez	Y	N	Y
19 Mahon	N	Y	Y
1 Patman	N	Y	Y
10 Pickle	N	Y	Y
11 Poage	N	Y	Y
AL Pool	N	Y	Y
13 Purcell	N	Y	Y
4 Roberts	N	Y	Y
18 Rogers	Y	N	Y
6 Teague	X	✓	?
8 Thomas	N	Y	?
9 Thompson	N	Y	Y
16 White	N	Y	Y
12 Wright	N	Y	?
14 Young	N	Y	Y
UTAH
2 King	N	Y	N
1 Burton	N	Y	N
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	Y	N
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	N	Y	Y
1 Downing	N	Y	Y
2 Hardy	N	Y	Y
9 Jennings	X	‡	‡
7 Marsh	N	Y	Y
3 Satterfield	N	Y	Y
8 Smith	N	Y	Y
5 Tuck	N	Y	Y
10 Broyhill	N	Y	Y
6 Poff	N	Y	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	N	Y	‡
5 Foley	Y	N	Y
3 Hansen	X	‡	‡
6 Hicks	Y	Y	Y
2 Meeds	N	Y	Y
4 May	‡	‡	‡
1 Pelly	N	Y	N
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	N	Y
5 Kee	N	Y	Y
3 Slack	N	Y	Y
2 Staggers	N	Y	Y
1 Moore	-	‡	N
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	N	Y
6 Race	Y	N	N
5 Reuss	Y	N	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	N	Y
4 Zablocki	N	Y	Y
8 Byrnes	N	Y	N
7 Laird	‡	‡	-
10 O'Konski	N	Y	Y
3 Thomson	N	Y	Y
9 Davis	N	Y	N
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	?	?	N

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 24 through 28.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 51, 52, 53, 57, 58.)

House Passes Administration's Elementary-Secondary Education Bill; Votes Older Americans Act, Bill to Aid Water Resources Planning

24. Albert (D Okla.) motion that the Journal be approved without further actual reading--a move to halt Republican delays in consideration of HR 2362, the education bill (below). Albert motion to consider the previous question, cutting off debate and permitting immediate consideration of his motion to approve the Journal, Adopted 274-119: R 7-116; D 267-3 (ND 183-0; SD 84-3), March 26, 1965. The President did not take a position on the motion.

25. HR 2362. Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965. Goodell (R N.Y.) motion to recommit the bill to the House Education and Labor Committee with instructions to substitute for the Title I allocation formula a straight $200 grant for each child from a low-income family. Rejected 149-267: R 89-42; D 60-225 (ND 3-187; SD 57-38), March 26, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 275)

26. HR 2362. Passage of the bill, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, providing: a three-year program of grants to states for allocation to school districts with large numbers of children from low-income families; grants for purchase of books and library materials; funds to improve educational research; and grants to strengthen state departments of education. Passed 263-153: R 35-96; D 228-57 (ND 187-3; SD 41-54), March 26, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

27. HR 3708. Passage of the bill, the Older Americans Act of 1965, establishing an Administration on Aging in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and authorizing a total of $17.5 million in appropriations in fiscal 1966 and 1967 for grants to states and public or private non-profit organizations for developing programs for the aging. Passed 395-1: R 128-1; D 267-0 (ND 179-0; SD 88-0), March 31, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 356)

28. HR 1111. Passage of the bill, the Water Resources Planning Act, establishing a Federal Water Resources Council and authorizing appropriations of $11,550,000 a year for 10 years for federal-state water resources development programs. Passed 384-0: R 130-0; D 254-0 (ND 174-0; SD 80-0), March 31, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 759)

	24	25	26	27	28
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Jones	?	?	?	?	?
5 Selden	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Andrews	N	Y	N	Y	?
6 Buchanan	N	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Dickinson	-	✓	X	Y	Y
1 Edwards	N	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Martin	N	Y	N	Y	Y
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Udall	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Rhodes	N	Y	N	Y	Y
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Harris	Y	N	N	Y	Y
2 Mills	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Trimble	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Cohelan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
33 Dyal	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
9 Edwards	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
18 Hagen	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanna	Y	N	Y	?	Y
2 Johnson	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Leggett	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
15 McFall	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
8 Miller	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Moss	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
16 Sisk	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
38 Tunney	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
37 Van Deerlin	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
14 Baldwin	Y	N	Y	‡	‡
1 Clausen	‡	N	N	‡	‡
10 Gubser	N	N	N	Y	Y
6 Mailliard	-	N	N	Y	Y
12 Talcott	N	Y	N	Y	Y
13 Teague	N	Y	N	Y	Y
35 Utt	N	N	N	Y	Y
36 Wilson	N	Y	N	Y	Y
11 Younger	N	Y	N	Y	Y
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
25 Cameron	Y	N	N	Y	Y
22 Corman	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
21 Hawkins	Y	N	Y	‡	‡
19 Holifield	Y	N	N	Y	Y
17 King	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
26 Roosevelt	Y	N	Y	‡	‡
30 Roybal	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
31 Wilson	Y	N	Y	‡	‡
28 Bell	N	N	Y	Y	Y
23 Clawson	N	Y	N	Y	Y
32 Hosmer	N	N	Y	Y	Y
24 Lipscomb	N	Y	N	Y	Y
27 Reinecke	N	Y	N	Y	Y
20 Smith	-	Y	N	‡	Y
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Evans	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 McVicker	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Rogers	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Giaimo	Y	N	Y	‡	Y
6 Grabowski	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Irwin	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Monagan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	N	Y	‡	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
9 Fuqua	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Gibbons	Y	Y	Y	Y	‡
7 Haley	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Herlong	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Matthews	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Pepper	Y	N	Y	‡	‡
6 Rogers	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Sikes	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
12 Cramer	N	Y	N	Y	Y
11 Gurney	N	Y	N	Y	Y
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Flynt	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Hagan	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Landrum	Y	N	Y	Y	?
4 Mackay	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Neal	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Stephens	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Tuten	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Weltner	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Callaway	N	Y	N	Y	Y
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
AL Mink	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
IDAHO
1 White	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Hansen	N	Y	N	Y	Y
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	?	N	Y	?	Y
24 Price	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
19 Schisler	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
23 Shipley	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
16 Anderson	N	Y	N	Y	Y
17 Arends	N	Y	N	Y	Y
14 Erlenborn	N	Y	N	Y	Y
20 Findley	N	Y	N	Y	Y
12 McClory	N	N	N	Y	Y
18 Michel	Y	Y	N	‡	‡
15 Reid	N	Y	N	Y	Y
22 Springer	-	‡	-	Y	Y
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Dawson	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Kluczynski	Y	N	Y	Y	?
3 Murphy	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Ronan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
8 Rostenkowski	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
9 Yates	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
10 Collier	N	N	N	Y	Y
4 Derwinski	N	Y	N	Y	Y
13 Rumsfeld	N	Y	N	Y	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	24	25	26	27	28
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
8 Denton	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
11 Jacobs	Y	N	Y	Y	?
1 Madden	Y	N	Y	Y	?
5 Roush	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Adair	N	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Bray	N	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Halleck	N	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Harvey	‡	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Roudebush	N	Y	N	Y	Y
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Culver	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Greigg	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Hansen	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Schmidhause	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Smith	Y	N	Y	‡	‡
3 Gross	N	Y	N	Y	Y
KANSAS
1 Dole	N	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Ellsworth	N	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Shriver	N	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Mize	N	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	N	N	N	Y	Y
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Farnsley	Y	N	Y	Y	‡
2 Natcher	Y	N	Y	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 24 through 28.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 51, 52, 53, 57, 58.)

	24	25	26	27	28
7 Perkins	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Watts	Y	N	Y	Y	?
5 Carter	N	N	Y	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Hebert	?	Y	N	?	?
8 Long	N	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Morrison	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Passman	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Thompson	N	Y	N	?	?
4 Waggonner	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Willis	Y	N	Y	Y	‡
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Tupper	?	?	✓	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	N	Y	Y	‡
7 Friedel	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Garmatz	Y	N	Y	Y	‡
2 Long	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Machen	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
AL Sickles	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Mathias	N	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Morton	N	N	Y	Y	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
11 Burke	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Donohue	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Philbin	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Bates	N	N	N	Y	Y
1 Conte	N	N	Y	Y	Y
12 Keith	N	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Martin	?	N	Y	Y	?
5 Morse	N	Y	Y	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
19 Farnum	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Mackie	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Todd	Y	N	Y	?	?
2 Vivian	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
18 Broomfield	N	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Cederberg	N	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Chamberlain	N	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Ford	N	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Griffin	N	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Harvey	N	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Hutchinson	N	Y	N	Y	Y
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
13 Diggs	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
16 Dingell	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
15 Ford	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	N	Y	Y	‡
14 Nedzi	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Fraser	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Karth	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Olson	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Langen	N	Y	N	Y	Y
3 MacGregor	-	✓	X	‡	‡
2 Nelsen	N	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Quie	N	Y	N	Y	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Colmer	?	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Whitten	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Williams	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Walker	N	Y	N	?	Y
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Hull	?	?	✓	Y	Y
9 Hungate	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
8 Ichord	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
10 Jones	?	?	?	Y	Y
1 Karsten	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Randall	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Sullivan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Curtis	N	Y	N	Y	‡
7 Hall	N	Y	N	Y	Y
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Battin	-	N	N	Y	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	N	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Martin	Y	Y	N	N	Y
NEVADA
AL Baring	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Cleveland	N	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Howard	Y	N	Y	‡	Y
8 Joelson	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
12 Krebs	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
11 Minish	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 McGrath	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
15 Patten	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
10 Rodino	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Thompson	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Cahill	N	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Dwyer	N	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	-	‡	X	Y	Y
7 Widnall	?	?	?	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
AL Walker	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
41 Dulski	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanley	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
39 McCarthy	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Pike	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
28 Resnick	Y	N	Y	Y	‡
35 Stratton	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Wolff	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
37 Conable	N	Y	N	Y	Y
38 Goodell	N	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Grover	N	N	Y	Y	Y
36 Horton	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
30 King	N	N	N	Y	Y
31 McEwen	N	Y	N	Y	Y
32 Pirnie	N	N	Y	Y	Y
26 Reid	N	N	Y	‡	‡
33 Robison	N	Y	N	Y	Y
40 Smith	N	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Wydler	N	N	Y	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
23 Bingham	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
15 Carey	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
10 Celler	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
9 Delaney	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
12 Kelly	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
11 Keogh	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
13 Multer	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
16 Murphy	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
18 Powell	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
14 Rooney	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
20 Ryan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
24 Fino	N	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Halpern	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	?	?	?	?	?
4 Cooley	Y	Y	Y	‡	‡
2 Fountain	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Henderson	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Kornegay	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Lennon	‡	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Scott	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
11 Taylor	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Whitener	?	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Broyhill	N	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Jonas	N	Y	N	Y	Y
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Andrews	N	Y	N	Y	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	N	Y	Y	‡
20 Feighan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Gilligan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
18 Hays	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
19 Kirwan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Love	Y	N	Y	?	?
10 Moeller	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
15 Secrest	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
AL Sweeney	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
21 Vanik	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
17 Ashbrook	N	Y	N	Y	Y
14 Ayres	‡	✓	X	‡	‡
8 Betts	N	Y	N	Y	Y
22 Bolton	N	Y	N	Y	Y
16 Bow	N	N	N	Y	Y
7 Brown	N	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Clancy	N	N	N	Y	Y
12 Devine	N	N	N	Y	Y
6 Harsha	?	N	N	Y	Y
5 Latta	N	Y	N	Y	Y
4 McCulloch	N	Y	N	Y	Y
23 Minshall	N	Y	N	Y	Y
13 Mosher	-	‡	X	Y	Y
11 Stanton	N	Y	N	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Jarman	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Johnson	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Steed	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Belcher	N	N	N	Y	Y
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Green	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Ullman	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	N	Y	N	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
19 Craley	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
21 Dent	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
11 Flood	Y	N	Y	‡	‡
20 Holland	Y	N	Y	Y	‡
14 Moorhead	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
26 Morgan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
15 Rooney	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
24 Vigorito	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
18 Corbett	N	N	Y	Y	Y
8 Curtin	N	N	Y	Y	Y
9 Dague	-	‡	-	‡	Y
27 Fulton	N	N	Y	Y	Y
23 Johnson	N	N	N	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	N	N	N	Y	Y
10 McDade	N	N	Y	Y	Y
22 Saylor	N	Y	N	Y	Y
17 Schneebeli	N	Y	N	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	N	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Watkins	N	N	Y	?	?
12 Whalley	N	N	Y	Y	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Byrne	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Green	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Nix	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Toll	?	X	✓	?	?
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
1 St. Germain	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Dorn	N	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Gettys	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 McMillan	‡	Y	N	Y	‡
1 Rivers	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	N	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Reifel	N	Y	N	Y	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
8 Everett	‡	X	✓	‡	‡
4 Evins	Y	X	✓	‡	‡
5 Fulton	Y	N	Y	‡	‡
9 Grider	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Murray	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Brock	N	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Duncan	N	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Quillen	N	Y	N	Y	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Brooks	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
17 Burleson	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Cabell	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
22 Casey	‡	Y	N	‡	‡
15 De la Garza	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Dowdy	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
21 Fisher	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
20 Gonzalez	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
19 Mahon	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Patman	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
10 Pickle	Y	N	Y	‡	‡
11 Poage	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
AL Pool	Y	Y	N	Y	?
13 Purcell	Y	N	Y	‡	‡
4 Roberts	Y	N	N	Y	Y
18 Rogers	Y	N	N	Y	Y
6 Teague	?	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Thomas	Y	N	Y	Y	?
9 Thompson	‡	-	-	Y	Y
16 White	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Wright	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
14 Young	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
UTAH
2 King	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Burton	N	Y	Y	Y	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	N	Y	Y	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Downing	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Hardy	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Jennings	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Marsh	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Satterfield	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Smith	?	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Tuck	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Broyhill	N	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Poff	N	Y	N	Y	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Foley	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Hansen	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Hicks	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Meeds	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 May	N	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Pelly	?	Y	N	Y	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Kee	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Slack	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Staggers	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Moore	N	Y	Y	Y	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	N	Y	‡	‡
6 Race	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Reuss	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
8 Byrnes	N	Y	N	‡	Y
7 Laird	N	Y	N	Y	Y
10 O'Konski	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Thomson	N	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Davis	N	Y	N	Y	Y
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	Y	N	Y	Y	?

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 29 through 33.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 60, 62, 63, 64, 66.)

House Approves Treasury- Post Office, Supplemental Appropriations; Authorizes Saigon Chancery; Passes Manpower, Obscene Mail Bills

29. HR 4257. Passage of the bill extending the Manpower Development and Training Act for two years through June 30, 1968, with full federal financing of training programs through June 30, 1966, expanding the Act's coverage and transferring Area Redevelopment Act training programs to the MDTA program. Passed 395-0: R 131-0; D 264-0 (ND 178-0; SD 86-0), April 1, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 810)

30. HR 980. Passage of the bill permitting any person who received mail which he considered "obscene, lewd, lascivious, indecent, filthy or vile" to take action, through the U.S. Postal Service, to prevent the sender from mailing more unsolicited similar material to him or his children. Morrison (D La.) motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill (two-thirds majority required). Passed 360-21: R 123-2; D 237-19 (ND 147-19; SD 90-0), April 5, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 666)

31. HR 7064. Passage of the bill to authorize appropriations of $1 million for construction of a new building to replace the existing U.S. chancery in Saigon, South Viet Nam. Passed 378-0: R 124-0; D 254-0 (ND 164-0; SD 90-0), April 5, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 449)

32. HR 7060. Passage of the bill appropriating $6,604,404,000 in fiscal 1966 for the Treasury and Post Office Departments, the Executive Office of the President and four independent agencies. Passed 347-7: R 114-7; D 233-0 (ND 156-0; SD 77-0), April 5, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 213)

33. HR 7091. Passage of the bill, the Second Supplemental Appropriations bill for fiscal 1965, appropriating $2,118,333,083, including $1,493,037,395 in direct appropriations for various programs, $606,880,688 for pay increases voted in 1964, $16 million from the Land and Water Conservation Fund and $2,415,000 in other indefinite appropriations. Passed 248-62: R 85-49; D 163-13 (ND 81-2; SD 82-11), April 6, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 227)

	29	30	31	32	33
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Jones	?	?	?	?	?
5 Selden	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Andrews	Y	?	?	?	N
6 Buchanan	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
2 Dickinson	Y	Y	Y	N	N
1 Edwards	Y	‡	‡	‡	N
7 Martin	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Udall	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
4 Harris	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Mills	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Trimble	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Cohelan	Y	-	‡	Y	Y
33 Dyal	Y	-	Y	Y	Y
9 Edwards	Y	N	Y	‡	Y
18 Hagen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanna	Y	Y	Y	Y	‡
2 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Leggett	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
15 McFall	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Miller	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Moss	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Sisk	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
38 Tunney	Y	‡	‡	‡	‡
37 Van Deerlin	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Baldwin	‡	‡	‡	‡	‡
1 Clausen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Gubser	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Mailliard	Y	‡	‡	‡	‡
12 Talcott	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Teague	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
35 Utt	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
36 Wilson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Younger	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
25 Cameron	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
22 Corman	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Hawkins	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
19 Holifield	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
17 King	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
26 Roosevelt	‡	-	‡	‡	‡
30 Roybal	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
31 Wilson	Y	‡	‡	Y	Y
28 Bell	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Clawson	Y	Y	‡	Y	Y
32 Hosmer	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
24 Lipscomb	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
27 Reinecke	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Smith	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
3 Evans	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 McVicker	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	Y	‡	Y	Y
3 Giaimo	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Grabowski	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
4 Irwin	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
5 Monagan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Fuqua	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Gibbons	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
7 Haley	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
5 Herlong	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Matthews	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Pepper	‡	Y	Y	Y	?
6 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Sikes	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Cramer	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
11 Gurney	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Flynt	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Hagan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Landrum	Y	Y	Y	?	Y
4 Mackay	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Neal	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
10 Stephens	‡	Y	Y	‡	Y
8 Tuten	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
5 Weltner	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Callaway	Y	‡	‡	Y	Y
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
AL Mink	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
IDAHO
1 White	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	?	Y	Y	Y	Y
24 Price	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
19 Schisler	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Shipley	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Anderson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Arends	Y	‡	‡	Y	N
14 Erlenborn	‡	Y	Y	Y	N
20 Findley	Y	Y	Y	?	N
12 McClory	‡	Y	Y	Y	N
18 Michel	‡	Y	Y	Y	N
15 Reid	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
22 Springer	Y	‡	‡	‡	‡
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Dawson	?	Y	Y	Y	?
5 Kluczynski	Y	?	?	?	Y
3 Murphy	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Ronan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Rostenkowski	‡	‡	‡	‡	Y
9 Yates	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Collier	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
4 Derwinski	Y	Y	Y	‡	-
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	Y	Y	N

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	29	30	31	32	33
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
8 Denton	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Jacobs	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Madden	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Roush	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Adair	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
7 Bray	Y	‡	‡	‡	N
2 Halleck	Y	Y	Y	Y	?
10 Harvey	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
6 Roudebush	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Culver	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Greigg	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Schmidhauser	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Smith	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Gross	Y	Y	Y	N	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Ellsworth	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
4 Shriver	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Mize	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Farnsley	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
2 Natcher	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 29 through 33.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 60, 62, 63, 64, 66.)

	29	30	31	32	33
7 Perkins	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y	Y	Y	?
5 Carter	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
1 Hebert	?	Y	Y	?	Y
8 Long	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
6 Morrison	Y	Y	Y	?	?
5 Passman	Y	‡	-	‡	Y
7 Thompson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Waggonner	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
3 Willis	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Tupper	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Friedel	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Garmatz	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Long	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Machen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Sickles	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Mathias	?	?	?	Y	Y
1 Morton	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	Y	‡	Y	Y
11 Burke	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Donohue	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Philbin	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Bates	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Conte	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Keith	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Martin	Y	Y	Y	?	Y
5 Morse	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Farnum	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Mackie	Y	Y	‡	‡	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Todd	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Vivian	Y	?	?	?	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Cederberg	Y	Y	Y	?	Y
6 Chamberlain	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
5 Ford	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Griffin	Y	Y	Y	?	Y
8 Harvey	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Hutchinson	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
13 Diggs	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
16 Dingell	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Ford	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Fraser	Y	N	Y	?	Y
4 Karth	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
6 Olson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Langen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 MacGregor	‡	‡	‡	‡	Y
2 Nelsen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Quie	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
5 Colmer	‡	Y	Y	Y	N
2 Whitten	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Williams	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
4 Walker	Y	?	?	Y	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Hull	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Hungate	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Ichord	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Jones	Y	Y	Y	‡	N
1 Karsten	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Randall	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Sullivan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Curtis	‡	Y	Y	N	N
7 Hall	Y	Y	Y	N	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Battin	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Martin	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEVADA
AL Baring	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
3 Howard	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Joelson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Krebs	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Minish	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 McGrath	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Patten	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Rodino	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Thompson	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
1 Cahill	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
6 Dwyer	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Widnall	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Walker	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	?	‡	‡	Y
41 Dulski	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanley	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
39 McCarthy	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Pike	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
28 Resnick	Y	‡	‡	‡	‡
35 Stratton	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
3 Wolff	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
37 Conable	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
38 Goodell	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Grover	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
36 Horton	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
30 King	Y	Y	Y	‡	N
31 McEwen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
32 Pirnie	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
26 Reid	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
33 Robison	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
40 Smith	Y	‡	‡	Y	N
4 Wydler	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Bingham	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Carey	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Celler	Y	?	?	?	?
9 Delaney	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
12 Kelly	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
11 Keogh	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
13 Multer	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
16 Murphy	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Powell	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
14 Rooney	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
20 Ryan	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
24 Fino	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
6 Halpern	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	Y	?	?	?	?
4 Cooley	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Fountain	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Henderson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Kornegay	Y	Y	‡	Y	Y
7 Lennon	‡	Y	Y	Y	N
5 Scott	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
11 Taylor	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Whitener	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
8 Jonas	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Andrews	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	‡	?	‡	‡	‡
20 Feighan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Gilligan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Hays	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Kirwan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Love	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Moeller	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Secrest	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Sweeney	Y	‡	‡	‡	‡
21 Vanik	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Ashbrook	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
14 Ayres	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Betts	Y	Y	‡	Y	Y
22 Bolton	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
16 Bow	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Brown	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
2 Clancy	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Devine	Y	Y	Y	N	N
6 Harsha	Y	Y	Y	?	Y
5 Latta	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
4 McCulloch	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
23 Minshall	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
13 Mosher	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
11 Stanton	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Jarman	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Steed	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Belcher	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Green	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Ullman	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Craley	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
21 Dent	Y	Y	Y	?	Y
11 Flood	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Holland	Y	Y	Y	‡	‡
14 Moorhead	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
26 Morgan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Rooney	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
24 Vigorito	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Corbett	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Curtin	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Dague	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
27 Fulton	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
23 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 McDade	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Saylor	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Schneebeli	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Watkins	?	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Whalley	Y	‡	Y	‡	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Byrne	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Nix	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
4 Toll	?	?	?	?	?
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 St. Germain	Y	?	?	?	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Dorn	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
5 Gettys	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 McMillan	Y	Y	Y	-	Y
1 Rivers	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	Y	Y	Y	‡
1 Reifel	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Everett	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Evins	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Fulton	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Grider	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Murray	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
3 Brock	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Duncan	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Quillen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Brooks	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Burleson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Cabell	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Casey	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
15 De la Garza	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
7 Dowdy	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Fisher	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Gonzalez	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Mahon	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Patman	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Pickle	Y	‡	‡	‡	Y
11 Poage	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Pool	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Purcell	‡	‡	Y	Y	Y
4 Roberts	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
18 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Teague	Y	?	?	?	?
8 Thomas	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Thompson	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 White	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Wright	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Young	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
UTAH
2 King	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Burton	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Downing	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Hardy	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Jennings	Y	‡	‡	‡	‡
7 Marsh	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Satterfield	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Smith	Y	Y	Y	?	N
5 Tuck	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
10 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Poff	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Foley	?	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Hicks	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Meeds	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 May	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Pelly	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Kee	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Slack	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Staggers	Y	?	?	?	Y
1 Moore	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Race	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Reuss	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	‡	‡	‡	N
7 Laird	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
10 O'Konski	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Thomson	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
9 Davis	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	Y	Y	Y	?	N

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 34 through 35.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 70, 71.)

House Passes Administration-Backed Medicare Bill, 313-115; Rejects GOP Recommittal Motion Providing for Voluntary Health Care Plan

34. HR 6675. Provide a basic compulsory health insurance program for the aged financed mainly by a payroll tax, a supplementary voluntary health insurance program financed by general revenue and contributions from participants, increases in Social Security cash benefits and expansion of the Kerr-Mills program, child health-care program and other federal-state public assistance programs. Byrnes (R Wis.) motion to recommit the bill to the House Ways and Means Committee with instructions to report it back with the provisions of a substitute bill, HR 7057, which would provide a voluntary, comprehensive health insurance program for the aged financed by general revenue and contributions from participants. Rejected 191-236: R 128-10; D 63-226 (ND 3-188; SD 60-38), April 8, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 236)

35. HR 6675. Passage of the bill to: provide a basic compulsory health insurance program for the aged, financed mainly by a payroll tax; a supplementary voluntary health insurance program financed by general revenue and contributions from participants; increases in Social Security cash benefits; and expansion of the Kerr-Mills program, child health-care program and other federal-state public assistance programs. Passed 313-115: R 65-73; D 248-42 (ND 189-2; SD 59-40), April 8, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (For final vote, see RC 97)

	34	35
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	Y	N
8 Jones	X	?
5 Selden	Y	N
4 Andrews	Y	N
6 Buchanan	Y	N
2 Dickinson	Y	N
1 Edwards	Y	N
7 Martin	Y	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	N	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	N	Y
2 Udall	N	Y
1 Rhodes	Y	N
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	Y	N
4 Harris	N	Y
2 Mills	N	Y
3 Trimble	N	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	N	Y
7 Cohelan	N	Y
33 Dyal	N	Y
9 Edwards	N	Y
18 Hagen	N	Y
34 Hanna	N	Y
2 Johnson	N	Y
4 Leggett	N	Y
15 McFall	N	Y
8 Miller	N	Y
3 Moss	N	Y
16 Sisk	N	Y
38 Tunney	N	Y
37 Van Deerlin	N	Y
14 Baldwin	-	‡
1 Clausen	Y	N
10 Gubser	Y	Y
6 Mailliard	✓	?
12 Talcott	Y	Y
13 Teague	Y	Y
35 Utt	Y	N
36 Wilson	Y	N
11 Younger	Y	N
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	N	Y
25 Cameron	N	Y
22 Corman	N	Y
21 Hawkins	N	Y
19 Holifield	N	Y
17 King	N	Y
26 Roosevelt	N	Y
30 Roybal	N	Y
31 Wilson	N	Y
28 Bell	Y	N
23 Clawson	Y	N
32 Hosmer	Y	N
24 Lipscomb	Y	N
27 Reinecke	Y	Y
20 Smith	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	N	Y
3 Evans	N	Y
2 McVicker	N	Y
1 Rogers	N	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	N	Y
3 Giaimo	N	Y
6 Grabowski	N	Y
4 Irwin	N	Y
5 Monagan	N	Y
2 St. Onge	N	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	N	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	N
4 Fascell	N	Y
9 Fuqua	Y	N
10 Gibbons	N	Y
7 Haley	Y	Y
5 Herlong	Y	Y
8 Matthews	Y	Y
3 Pepper	N	Y
6 Rogers	Y	Y
1 Sikes	Y	Y
12 Cramer	Y	Y
11 Gurney	Y	Y
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	N
6 Flynt	Y	N
1 Hagan	Y	N
9 Landrum	N	Y
4 Mackay	N	Y
2 O'Neal	Y	N
10 Stephens	Y	N
8 Tuten	Y	Y
5 Weltner	N	Y
3 Callaway	Y	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	N	Y
AL Mink	N	Y
IDAHO
1 White	N	Y
2 Hansen	Y	N
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	N	Y
24 Price	N	Y
19 Schisler	N	Y
23 Shipley	N	Y
16 Anderson	Y	N
17 Arends	Y	N
14 Erlenborn	Y	N
20 Findley	Y	N
12 McClory	Y	Y
18 Michel	Y	N
15 Reid	Y	N
22 Springer	Y	N
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	N	Y
1 Dawson	N	Y
5 Kluczynski	N	Y
3 Murphy	N	Y
2 O'Hara	N	Y
11 Pucinski	N	Y
6 Ronan	N	Y
8 Rostenkowski	N	Y
9 Yates	N	Y
10 Collier	Y	N
4 Derwinski	Y	N
13 Rumsfeld	Y	N

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	34	35
INDIANA
3 Brademas	N	Y
8 Denton	N	Y
9 Hamilton	N	Y
11 Jacobs	N	Y
1 Madden	N	Y
5 Roush	N	Y
4 Adair	Y	N
7 Bray	Y	N
2 Halleck	Y	N
10 Harvey	Y	N
6 Roudebush	Y	N
IOWA
4 Bandstra	N	Y
2 Culver	N	Y
6 Greigg	N	Y
7 Hansen	N	Y
1 Schmidhauser	N	Y
5 Smith	N	Y
3 Gross	Y	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	N
3 Ellsworth	Y	N
4 Shriver	Y	N
2 Mize	Y	N
5 Skubitz	Y	N
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	Y
3 Farnsley	N	Y
2 Natcher	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 34 through 35.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 70, 71.)

	34	35
7 Perkins	N	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y
5 Carter	Y	N
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	N	Y
1 Hebert	Y	N
8 Long	Y	N
6 Morrison	N	Y
5 Passman	Y	N
7 Thompson	Y	Y
4 Waggonner	Y	N
3 Willis	N	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	N	Y
1 Tupper	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	N	Y
7 Friedel	N	Y
3 Garmatz	N	Y
2 Long	N	Y
5 Machen	N	Y
AL Sickles	N	Y
6 Mathias	Y	Y
1 Morton	Y	N
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	N	Y
11 Burke	N	Y
4 Donohue	N	Y
7 Macdonald	N	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	N	Y
3 Philbin	N	Y
6 Bates	Y	Y
1 Conte	Y	Y
12 Keith	N	Y
10 Martin	Y	Y
5 Morse	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	N	Y
19 Farnum	N	Y
7 Mackie	N	Y
12 O'Hara	N	Y
3 Todd	N	Y
2 Vivian	N	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	Y
10 Cederberg	Y	Y
6 Chamberlain	Y	Y
5 Ford	Y	N
9 Griffin	Y	Y
8 Harvey	Y	Y
4 Hutchinson	Y	Y
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	N	Y
13 Diggs	N	Y
16 Dingell	N	Y
15 Ford	N	Y
17 Griffiths	N	Y
14 Nedzi	N	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	N	Y
5 Fraser	N	Y
4 Karth	N	Y
6 Olson	N	Y
7 Langen	Y	N
3 MacGregor	Y	N
2 Nelsen	Y	N
1 Quie	Y	N
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	Y	N
5 Colmer	Y	N
2 Whitten	Y	N
3 Williams	Y	N
4 Walker	Y	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	N	Y
6 Hull	Y	Y
9 Hungate	N	Y
8 Ichord	N	Y
10 Jones	N	N
1 Karsten	N	Y
4 Randall	N	Y
3 Sullivan	N	Y
2 Curtis	Y	N
7 Hall	Y	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	N	Y
2 Battin	Y	N
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	Y	Y
3 Martin	Y	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	Y	N
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	N	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	N	Y
13 Gallagher	N	Y
9 Helstoski	N	Y
3 Howard	N	Y
8 Joelson	N	Y
12 Krebs	N	Y
11 Minish	N	Y
2 McGrath	N	Y
15 Patten	N	Y
10 Rodino	N	Y
4 Thompson	N	Y
1 Cahill	Y	Y
6 Dwyer	N	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	Y	Y
7 Widnall	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	N	Y
AL Walker	N	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	N	Y
41 Dulski	N	Y
34 Hanley	N	Y
39 McCarthy	N	Y
29 O'Brien	N	Y
25 Ottinger	N	Y
1 Pike	N	Y
28 Resnick	N	Y
35 Stratton	N	Y
5 Tenzer	N	Y
3 Wolff	N	Y
37 Conable	Y	Y
38 Goodell	Y	Y
2 Grover	Y	Y
36 Horton	N	Y
30 King	Y	Y
31 McEwen	Y	Y
32 Pirnie	N	Y
26 Reid	N	Y
33 Robison	Y	Y
40 Smith	Y	Y
4 Wydler	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	N	Y
23 Bingham	N	Y
15 Carey	N	Y
10 Celler	N	Y
9 Delaney	N	Y
19 Farbstein	N	Y
22 Gilbert	N	Y
12 Kelly	N	Y
11 Keogh	N	Y
13 Multer	N	Y
16 Murphy	N	Y
18 Powell	N	Y
14 Rooney	N	Y
8 Rosenthal	N	Y
20 Ryan	N	Y
21 Scheuer	N	Y
24 Fino	N	Y
6 Halpern	N	Y
17 Lindsay	N	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	Y	Y
4 Cooley	Y	Y
2 Fountain	Y	Y
3 Henderson	Y	Y
6 Kornegay	Y	N
7 Lennon	Y	N
5 Scott	Y	Y
11 Taylor	Y	Y
10 Whitener	Y	Y
9 Broyhill	Y	Y
8 Jonas	Y	N
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	N	Y
1 Andrews	Y	N
OHIO
9 Ashley	X	?
20 Feighan	N	Y
1 Gilligan	N	Y
18 Hays	N	Y
19 Kirwan	N	Y
3 Love	N	Y
10 Moeller	N	Y
15 Secrest	N	Y
AL Sweeney	N	Y
21 Vanik	N	Y
17 Ashbrook	Y	N
14 Ayres	N	Y
8 Betts	Y	N
22 Bolton	Y	N
16 Bow	Y	Y
7 Brown	Y	N
2 Clancy	Y	N
12 Devine	Y	N
6 Harsha	Y	N
5 Latta	Y	N
4 McCulloch	Y	Y
23 Minshall	Y	Y
13 Mosher	Y	Y
11 Stanton	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	N	Y
2 Edmondson	N	Y
5 Jarman	Y	N
6 Johnson	N	Y
4 Steed	N	N
1 Belcher	Y	N
OREGON
4 Duncan	N	Y
3 Green	N	Y
2 Ullman	N	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	N	Y
19 Craley	N	Y
21 Dent	N	Y
11 Flood	N	Y
20 Holland	N	Y
14 Moorhead	N	Y
26 Morgan	N	Y
6 Rhodes	N	Y
15 Rooney	N	Y
24 Vigorito	N	Y
18 Corbett	Y	Y
8 Curtin	Y	Y
9 Dague	Y	Y
27 Fulton	Y	Y
23 Johnson	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	Y	Y
10 McDade	Y	Y
22 Saylor	Y	Y
17 Schneebeli	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	N	Y
7 Watkins	Y	Y
12 Whalley	Y	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	N	Y
3 Byrne	N	Y
5 Green	N	Y
2 Nix	N	Y
4 Toll	-	?
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	N	Y
1 St. Germain	N	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	Y	Y
3 Dorn	Y	N
5 Gettys	Y	Y
6 McMillan	Y	N
1 Rivers	Y	N
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	N
1 Reifel	Y	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	N	Y
8 Everett	N	Y
4 Evins	N	Y
5 Fulton	N	Y
9 Grider	N	Y
7 Murray	N	Y
3 Brock	Y	N
2 Duncan	Y	N
1 Quillen	Y	N
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	Y
2 Brooks	N	Y
17 Burleson	Y	N
5 Cabell	N	N
22 Casey	Y	N
15 De la Garza	Y	Y
7 Dowdy	Y	Y
21 Fisher	Y	N
20 Gonzalez	N	Y
19 Mahon	N	N
1 Patman	N	Y
10 Pickle	Y	N
11 Poage	N	N
AL Pool	Y	N
13 Purcell	N	Y
4 Roberts	N	Y
18 Rogers	Y	Y
6 Teague	N	N
8 Thomas	N	Y
9 Thompson	N	Y
16 White	Y	Y
12 Wright	N	Y
14 Young	N	Y
UTAH
2 King	N	Y
1 Burton	Y	N
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	N
1 Downing	Y	N
2 Hardy	?	Y
9 Jennings	N	Y
7 Marsh	Y	N
3 Satterfield	Y	N
8 Smith	Y	N
5 Tuck	Y	N
10 Broyhill	Y	N
6 Poff	Y	N
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	N	Y
5 Foley	N	Y
3 Hansen	N	Y
6 Hicks	N	Y
2 Meeds	N	Y
4 May	Y	N
1 Pelly	Y	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	N	Y
5 Kee	N	Y
3 Slack	N	Y
2 Staggers	N	Y
1 Moore	Y	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	N	Y
6 Race	N	Y
5 Reuss	N	Y
1 Stalbaum	N	Y
4 Zablocki	N	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	N
7 Laird	Y	N
10 O'Konski	Y	Y
3 Thomson	Y	N
9 Davis	Y	N
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	N	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 36 through 38.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 72, 74, 76.)

House Approves Presidential Continuity Proposal; Authorizes Funds For HUAC Investigation of KKK; Votes Conference Report on ACDA

36. HR 2998. Adoption of the conference report authorizing appropriations of $30 million during fiscal 1966-68 for the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. Adopted: 316-65: R 86-38; D 230-27 (ND 173-1; SD 57-26), April 13, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 497)

37. H J Res 1. Passage of the resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to permit the Vice President to become Acting President if the President were unable to perform his duties, and to provide for filling a vacancy in the office of Vice President. Passed 368-29: R 122-8; D 246-21 (ND 172-6; SD 74-15), April 13, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 573)

38. H Res 310. Adoption of the resolution authorizing expenditure of $50,000 by the House Un-American Activities Committee for an investigation of the Ku Klux Klan. Adopted 313-43: R 108-3; D 205-40 (ND 127-35; SD 78-5), April 14, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 1517)

	36	37	38
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	N	N	Y
8 Jones	?	?	?
5 Selden	Y	Y	Y
4 Andrews	X	Y	Y
6 Buchanon	N	N	Y
2 Dickinson	N	Y	Y
1 Edwards	N	Y	Y
7 Martin	N	N	Y
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	Y	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	Y	Y
2 Udall	Y	Y	Y
1 Rhodes	N	Y	Y
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	N	Y	‡
4 Harris	N	Y	Y
2 Mills	Y	Y	Y
3 Trimble	Y	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	Y	N
7 Cohelan	Y	Y	Y
33 Dyal	Y	Y	N
9 Edwards	Y	Y	N
18 Hagen	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanna	Y	Y	Y
2 Johnson	Y	Y	Y
4 Leggett	Y	Y	N
15 McFall	Y	Y	Y
8 Miller	Y	Y	Y
3 Moss	Y	Y	Y
16 Sisk	Y	Y	Y
38 Tunney	Y	Y	Y
37 Van Deerlin	Y	Y	Y
14 Baldwin	-	‡	‡
1 Clausen	X	Y	Y
10 Gubser	‡	‡	Y
6 Mailliard	Y	Y	Y
12 Talcott	N	Y	Y
13 Teague	Y	Y	Y
35 Utt	N	Y	Y
36 Wilson	X	Y	‡
11 Younger	N	Y	Y
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	Y	Y	N
25 Cameron	Y	Y	N
22 Corman	Y	Y	Y
21 Hawkins	Y	Y	N
19 Holifield	Y	Y	Y
17 King	✓	Y	Y
26 Roosevelt	✓	‡	-
30 Roybal	Y	Y	N
31 Wilson	Y	Y	Y
28 Bell	Y	Y	Y
23 Clawson	N	Y	Y
32 Hosmer	N	Y	Y
24 Lipscomb	N	Y	Y
27 Reinecke	X	Y	Y
20 Smith	N	Y	Y
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	Y	Y
3 Evans	Y	Y	Y
2 McVicker	Y	Y	Y
1 Rogers	Y	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	Y	Y
3 Giaimo	Y	Y	Y
6 Grabowski	Y	Y	Y
4 Irwin	‡	Y	Y
5 Monagan	Y	Y	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	Y	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	Y	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	Y	Y
9 Fuqua	N	Y	Y
10 Gibbons	Y	Y	Y
7 Haley	N	Y	Y
5 Herlong	Y	Y	‡
8 Matthews	Y	Y	Y
3 Pepper	Y	Y	Y
6 Rogers	Y	Y	Y
1 Sikes	N	Y	Y
12 Cramer	N	Y	Y
11 Gurney	N	Y	?
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	Y	Y
6 Flynt	N	N	Y
1 Hagan	?	Y	Y
9 Landrum	Y	Y	Y
4 Mackay	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Neal	N	N	N
10 Stephens	Y	Y	Y
8 Tuten	Y	Y	Y
5 Weltner	X	‡	‡
3 Callaway	N	N	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	Y	Y
AL Mink	Y	Y	N
IDAHO
1 White	Y	Y	Y
2 Hansen	Y	Y	Y
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	?	Y	Y
24 Price	Y	Y	Y
19 Schisler	Y	Y	Y
23 Shipley	Y	?	?
16 Anderson	✓	Y	Y
17 Arends	Y	Y	Y
14 Erlenborn	N	Y	Y
20 Findley	N	Y	Y
12 McClory	Y	Y	‡
18 Michel	X	‡	Y
15 Reid	N	Y	Y
22 Springer	Y	Y	Y
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	Y	Y
1 Dawson	?	?	?
5 Kluczynski	?	?	?
3 Murphy	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	Y	N
11 Pucinski	Y	Y	Y
6 Ronan	Y	Y	Y
8 Rostenkowski	✓	-	‡
9 Yates	‡	‡	Y
10 Collier	N	Y	‡
4 Derwinski	Y	Y	Y
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	36	37	38
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	Y	‡
8 Denton	Y	Y	?
9 Hamilton	Y	Y	‡
11 Jacobs	Y	Y	Y
1 Madden	Y	Y	?
5 Roush	Y	Y	‡
4 Adair	Y	Y	?
7 Bray	N	Y	‡
2 Halleck	Y	Y	Y
10 Harvey	‡	‡	‡
6 Roudebush	Y	Y	Y
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	Y	N
2 Culver	Y	Y	Y
6 Greigg	Y	Y	Y
7 Hansen	Y	Y	Y
1 Schmidhauser	‡	Y	Y
5 Smith	Y	Y	Y
3 Gross	N	N	Y
KANSAS
1 Dole	N	Y	Y
3 Ellsworth	Y	Y	Y
4 Shriver	Y	Y	Y
2 Mize	Y	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	Y	Y	Y
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	Y	Y
3 Farnsley	Y	Y	Y
2 Natcher	Y	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 36 through 38.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 72, 74, 76.)

	36	37	38
7 Perkins	Y	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y	?
5 Carter	Y	Y	?
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	Y	Y
1 Hebert	Y	?	?
8 Long	N	Y	?
6 Morrison	Y	Y	Y
5 Passman	X	N	?
7 Thompson	Y	Y	Y
4 Waggonner	N	Y	Y
3 Willis	Y	Y	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	Y	‡
1 Tupper	Y	Y	?
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	Y	Y
7 Friedel	Y	Y	Y
3 Garmatz	Y	Y	Y
2 Long	Y	Y	Y
5 Machen	Y	Y	Y
AL Sickles	Y	Y	N
6 Mathias	Y	N	Y
1 Morton	Y	Y	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	Y	Y
11 Burke	Y	Y	Y
4 Donohue	Y	Y	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	Y	?
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	Y	Y
3 Philbin	Y	Y	Y
6 Bates	Y	Y	‡
1 Conte	Y	Y	Y
12 Keith	Y	Y	Y
10 Martin	✓	?	?
5 Morse	Y	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	Y	Y
19 Farnum	?	?	?
7 Mackie	Y	Y	N
12 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y
3 Todd	Y	Y	N
2 Vivian	Y	Y	N
18 Broomfield	Y	Y	Y
10 Cederberg	?	Y	Y
6 Chamberlain	Y	Y	Y
5 Ford	Y	Y	Y
9 Griffin	Y	Y	Y
8 Harvey	Y	Y	Y
4 Hutchinson	Y	N	Y
Detroit—Wayne Co
1 Conyers	Y	Y	N
13 Diggs	Y	Y	N
16 Dingell	Y	Y	N
15 Ford	Y	Y	N
17 Griffiths	Y	Y	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	Y	N
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	‡	Y	Y
5 Fraser	Y	?	?
4 Karth	Y	Y	‡
6 Olson	Y	Y	‡
7 Langen	Y	Y	?
3 MacGregor	Y	Y	‡
2 Nelsen	Y	‡	‡
1 Quie	Y	Y	‡
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	N	Y	Y
5 Colmer	X	?	?
2 Whitten	N	N	N
3 Williams	N	N	?
4 Walker	N	N	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	Y	‡	Y
6 Hull	Y	N	Y
9 Hungate	Y	Y	Y
8 Ichord	Y	N	Y
10 Jones	Y	Y	Y
1 Karsten	Y	Y	Y
4 Randall	Y	Y	Y
3 Sullivan	Y	Y	Y
2 Curtis	Y	Y	Y
7 Hall	N	Y	Y
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	Y	Y
2 Battin	N	Y	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	Y	Y	‡
3 Martin	N	Y	?
NEVADA
AL Baring	N	N	Y
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	Y	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	Y	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	N	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	Y	N
3 Howard	Y	Y	Y
8 Joelson	‡	‡	Y
12 Krebs	Y	Y	Y
11 Minish	Y	Y	Y
2 McGrath	Y	Y	Y
15 Patten	Y	Y	Y
10 Rodino	Y	Y	Y
4 Thompson	Y	Y	-
1 Cahill	Y	Y	Y
6 Dwyer	Y	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	Y	Y	Y
7 Widnall	Y	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	Y	Y
AL Walker	Y	Y	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	Y	N
41 Dulski	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanley	Y	Y	Y
39 McCarthy	Y	Y	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	Y	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	Y	N
1 Pike	Y	Y	Y
28 Resnick	‡	Y	N
35 Stratton	Y	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	Y	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	Y
37 Conable	Y	Y	Y
38 Goodell	Y	Y	Y
2 Grover	Y	Y	Y
36 Horton	Y	Y	‡
30 King	N	Y	Y
31 McEwen	Y	Y	Y
32 Pirnie	✓	‡	‡
26 Reid	Y	Y	Y
33 Robison	Y	Y	Y
40 Smith	Y	Y	Y
4 Wydler	Y	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	Y	Y
23 Bingham	Y	Y	N
15 Carey	Y	‡	‡
10 Celler	Y	Y	?
9 Delaney	Y	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	Y	N
22 Gilbert	Y	Y	Y
12 Kelly	Y	Y	Y
11 Keogh	Y	Y	Y
13 Multer	Y	Y	Y
16 Murphy	Y	Y	Y
18 Powell	?	Y	N
14 Rooney	Y	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	Y	N
20 Ryan	Y	Y	N
21 Scheuer	Y	Y	Y
24 Fino	‡	‡	‡
6 Halpern	Y	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	Y	Y	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	?	?	?
4 Cooley	Y	Y	Y
2 Fountain	Y	N	Y
3 Henderson	?	N	Y
6 Kornegay	Y	Y	Y
7 Lennon	N	Y	N
5 Scott	X	‡	‡
11 Taylor	Y	Y	?
10 Whitener	Y	Y	Y
9 Broyhill	N	Y	?
8 Jonas	Y	Y	Y
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	Y	‡
1 Andrews	Y	?	?
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	Y	-
20 Feighan	Y	Y	?
1 Gilligan	Y	Y	‡
18 Hays	Y	N	Y
19 Kirwan	Y	?	Y
3 Love	Y	Y	?
10 Moeller	Y	Y	Y
15 Secrest	Y	Y	Y
AL Sweeney	Y	Y	‡
21 Vanik	Y	Y	?
17 Ashbrook	N	Y	Y
14 Ayres	Y	Y	‡
8 Betts	Y	Y	Y
22 Bolton	Y	Y	Y
16 Bow	Y	Y	?
7 Brown	Y	N	Y
2 Clancy	N	Y	Y
12 Devine	N	Y	Y
6 Harsha	N	Y	?
5 Latta	Y	Y	Y
4 McCulloch	Y	Y	Y
23 Minshall	N	Y	Y
13 Mosher	Y	Y	‡
11 Stanton	Y	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	Y	Y
5 Jarman	Y	Y	Y
6 Johnson	Y	Y	Y
4 Steed	-	Y	Y
1 Belcher	?	?	?
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	Y	N
3 Green	Y	Y	N
2 Ullman	Y	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	Y	Y
19 Craley	Y	Y	N
21 Dent	Y	N	Y
11 Flood	Y	Y	Y
20 Holland	‡	Y	?
14 Moorhead	?	Y	Y
26 Morgan	Y	Y	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y
15 Rooney	Y	Y	?
24 Vigorito	Y	Y	Y
18 Corbett	Y	Y	Y
8 Curtin	Y	Y	Y
9 Dague	Y	Y	Y
27 Fulton	Y	Y	Y
23 Johnson	‡	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	Y	Y	Y
10 McDade	Y	Y	Y
22 Saylor	Y	Y	N
17 Schneebeli	Y	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	Y	Y	Y
7 Watkins	Y	Y	Y
12 Whalley	Y	Y	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	Y
3 Byrne	Y	Y	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	Y
2 Nix	‡	‡	?
4 Toll	✓	?	?
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	Y	Y	Y
1 St. Germain	Y	Y	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	X	Y	Y
3 Dorn	N	N	Y
5 Gettys	Y	Y	Y
6 McMillan	N	N	Y
1 Rivers	N	Y	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	Y	Y
1 Reifel	✓	Y	‡
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	Y	Y
8 Everett	Y	Y	Y
4 Evins	✓	‡	?
5 Fulton	✓	‡	‡
9 Grider	Y	Y	Y
7 Murray	Y	Y	Y
3 Brock	Y	Y	Y
2 Duncan	N	Y	Y
1 Quillen	N	Y	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	Y	Y
2 Brooks	Y	Y	Y
17 Burleson	Y	Y	Y
5 Cabell	Y	Y	Y
22 Casey	X	Y	Y
15 De la Garza	Y	Y	Y
7 Dowdy	N	Y	Y
21 Fisher	X	Y	Y
20 Gonzalez	Y	N	N
19 Mahon	Y	Y	Y
1 Patman	Y	N	?
10 Pickle	Y	Y	Y
11 Poage	Y	Y	Y
AL Pool	N	Y	Y
13 Purcell	‡	‡	‡
4 Roberts	N	Y	Y
18 Rogers	N	N	Y
6 Teague	N	N	Y
8 Thomas	Y	Y	Y
9 Thompson	‡	Y	Y
16 White	N	N	Y
12 Wright	Y	Y	Y
14 Young	Y	Y	?
UTAH
2 King	Y	Y	Y
1 Burton	Y	Y	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	Y	Y
1 Downing	Y	Y	Y
2 Hardy	Y	Y	Y
9 Jennings	✓	‡	Y
7 Marsh	N	Y	Y
3 Satterfield	N	Y	Y
8 Smith	Y	?	N
5 Tuck	N	Y	Y
10 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y
6 Poff	Y	Y	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	Y	Y
5 Foley	Y	Y	Y
3 Hansen	Y	Y	Y
6 Hicks	Y	Y	N
2 Meeds	Y	Y	Y
4 May	Y	Y	Y
1 Pelly	Y	Y	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	Y
5 Kee	Y	Y	Y
3 Slack	Y	Y	Y
2 Staggers	Y	Y	Y
1 Moore	N	Y	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	Y	N
6 Race	Y	Y	Y
5 Reuss	Y	Y	N
1 Stalbaum	✓	‡	‡
4 Zablocki	Y	Y	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	Y	Y
7 Laird	Y	Y	Y
10 O'Konski	N	Y	Y
3 Thomson	N	Y	Y
9 Davis	Y	Y	Y
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	Y	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 39 through 41.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 78, 79, 82.)

House Authorizes Increased Contribution to IMF by United States; Passes Water Pollution Bill Without Federal-Standards Provision

39. HR 6497. Authorize the United States to increase its subscription to the International Monetary Fund by $1,035,000,000, to a total of $5,160,000,000. Collier (R Ill.) motion to recommit (kill) the bill. Rejected 113-275: R 97-34; D 16-241 (ND 3-168; SD 13-73), April 27, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 486)

40. HR 6497. Passage of the bill to authorize the United States to increase its subscription to the International Monetary Fund by $1,035,000,000, to a total of $5,160,000,000. Passed 301-88: R 74-58; D 227-30 (ND 166-4; SD 61-26), April 27, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

41. S 4. Passage of the bill to amend the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to authorize $20 million annually during fiscal 1966-69 for grants to states and municipalities to demonstrate improved methods of controlling water pollution from storm and sanitary sewers, to provide other means of increased federal participation in preventing, controlling and abating pollution of interstate and navigable waters, and to require that a state, in order to receive federal grants for water pollution control activities, file a letter with the Federal Government stating that it intends to establish by June 30, 1967, water quality "criteria" applicable to interstate waters and portions thereof within its boundaries. Passed 396-0: R 135-0; D 261-0 (ND 171-0; SD 90-0), April 28, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 743)

	39	40	41
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	N	N	Y
8 Jones	?	?	‡
5 Selden	N	N	Y
4 Andrews	Y	N	Y
6 Buchanan	Y	N	Y
2 Dickinson	Y	N	Y
1 Edwards	Y	N	Y
7 Martin	Y	N	Y
ALASKA
AL Rivers	N	Y	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	N	Y	Y
2 Udall	-	‡	Y
1 Rhodes	N	Y	Y
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	Y	N	Y
4 Harris	N	Y	Y
2 Mills	N	Y	Y
3 Trimble	N	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	N	Y	Y
7 Cohelan	N	Y	Y
33 Dyal	N	Y	Y
9 Edwards	N	Y	Y
18 Hagen	N	Y	Y
34 Hanna	-	‡	‡
2 Johnson	Y	N	Y
4 Leggett	N	Y	Y
15 McFall	N	Y	Y
8 Miller	N	Y	Y
3 Moss	N	Y	Y
16 Sisk	-	‡	‡
38 Tunney	-	‡	Y
37 Van Deerlin	-	‡	‡
14 Baldwin	Y	N	Y
1 Clausen	Y	N	Y
10 Gubser	Y	N	Y
6 Mailliard	N	Y	Y
12 Talcott	N	Y	Y
13 Teague	Y	N	Y
35 Utt	Y	N	Y
36 Wilson	N	Y	Y
11 Younger	Y	N	Y
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	N	Y	‡
25 Cameron	N	Y	Y
22 Corman	N	Y	‡
21 Hawkins	-	‡	‡
19 Holifield	N	Y	Y
17 King	N	Y	Y
26 Roosevelt	N	Y	Y
30 Roybal	N	Y	Y
31 Wilson	N	Y	Y
28 Bell	Y	Y	Y
23 Clawson	‡	-	Y
32 Hosmer	Y	Y	Y
24 Lipscomb	✓	X	Y
27 Reinecke	Y	N	Y
20 Smith	Y	N	Y
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	N	Y	Y
3 Evans	N	Y	Y
2 McVicker	N	Y	Y
1 Rogers	N	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	N	Y	Y
3 Giaimo	-	‡	‡
6 Grabowski	N	Y	Y
4 Irwin	N	Y	Y
5 Monagan	N	Y	Y
2 St. Onge	X	‡	‡
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	N	Y	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	N	Y	Y
4 Fascell	N	Y	Y
9 Fuqua	N	Y	Y
10 Gibbons	N	Y	‡
7 Haley	Y	N	Y
5 Herlong	N	Y	Y
8 Matthews	N	Y	Y
3 Pepper	N	Y	Y
6 Rogers	N	Y	Y
1 Sikes	N	N	Y
12 Cramer	Y	Y	Y
11 Gurney	Y	N	Y
GEORGIA
7 Davis	N	Y	Y
6 Flynt	N	Y	Y
1 Hagan	N	Y	Y
9 Landrum	N	Y	Y
4 Mackay	N	Y	Y
2 O'Neal	N	Y	Y
10 Stephens	N	Y	Y
8 Tuten	N	Y	Y
5 Weltner	N	Y	Y
3 Callaway	Y	N	Y
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	N	Y	Y
AL Mink	N	Y	Y
IDAHO
1 White	-	‡	‡
2 Hansen	Y	Y	Y
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	N	Y	Y
24 Price	N	Y	Y
19 Schisler	-	‡	‡
23 Shipley	N	Y	Y
16 Anderson	N	Y	Y
17 Arends	Y	Y	Y
14 Erlenborn	Y	Y	Y
20 Findley	Y	Y	Y
12 McClory	N	Y	Y
18 Michel	Y	N	Y
15 Reid	Y	N	Y
22 Springer	Y	Y	Y
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	N	Y	Y
1 Dawson	N	Y	Y
5 Kluczynski	N	Y	Y
3 Murphy	N	Y	Y
2 O'Hara	N	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	N	Y	Y
6 Ronan	-	‡	Y
8 Rostenkowski	N	Y	Y
9 Yates	N	Y	Y
10 Collier	Y	N	Y
4 Derwinski	Y	N	Y
13 Rumsfeld	N	Y	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	39	40	41
INDIANA
3 Brademas	N	Y	Y
8 Denton	N	Y	Y
9 Hamilton	N	Y	Y
11 Jacobs	N	Y	Y
1 Madden	N	Y	Y
5 Roush	N	Y	Y
4 Adair	Y	N	Y
7 Bray	Y	N	Y
2 Halleck	Y	Y	Y
10 Harvey	Y	N	Y
6 Roudebush	Y	N	Y
IOWA
4 Bandstra	N	Y	Y
2 Culver	-	‡	‡
6 Greigg	N	Y	Y
7 Hansen	N	Y	Y
1 Schmidhauser	N	Y	Y
5 Smith	N	Y	Y
3 Gross	Y	N	Y
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	N	Y
3 Ellsworth	Y	N	Y
4 Shriver	Y	Y	Y
2 Mize	N	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	Y	Y	Y
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	N	Y	Y
3 Farnsley	-	‡	‡
2 Natcher	N	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 39 through 41.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 78, 79, 82.)

	39	40	41
7 Perkins	N	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	N	Y	Y
6 Watts	N	Y	Y
5 Carter	N	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	N	Y	Y
1 Hebert	?	N	Y
8 Long	?	?	Y
6 Morrison	?	✓	?
5 Passman	Y	N	Y
7 Thompson	N	Y	Y
4 Waggonner	‡	-	‡
3 Willis	N	Y	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	N	Y	Y
1 Tupper	N	Y	‡
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	N	Y	Y
7 Friedel	N	Y	Y
3 Garmatz	N	Y	‡
2 Long	N	Y	Y
5 Machen	N	Y	Y
AL Sickles	N	Y	Y
6 Mathias	?	?	?
1 Morton	Y	Y	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	-	‡	Y
11 Burke	N	Y	Y
4 Donohue	N	Y	Y
7 Macdonald	N	Y	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	N	Y	Y
3 Philbin	N	Y	Y
6 Bates	Y	Y	Y
1 Conte	N	Y	Y
12 Keith	N	Y	Y
10 Martin	N	Y	Y
5 Morse	Y	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	N	Y	Y
19 Farnum	N	Y	Y
7 Mackie	N	Y	Y
12 O'Hara	N	Y	Y
3 Todd	N	Y	Y
2 Vivian	N	Y	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	Y	Y
10 Cederberg	Y	N	Y
6 Chamberlain	Y	N	Y
5 Ford	Y	Y	Y
9 Griffin	Y	Y	Y
8 Harvey	N	Y	Y
4 Hutchinson	Y	N	Y
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	N	Y	‡
13 Diggs	N	Y	Y
16 Dingell	N	Y	‡
15 Ford	N	Y	Y
17 Griffiths	N	Y	Y
14 Nedzi	N	Y	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	N	Y	Y
5 Fraser	N	Y	Y
4 Karth	N	Y	Y
6 Olson	N	Y	Y
7 Langen	Y	N	Y
3 MacGregor	Y	Y	Y
2 Nelsen	Y	N	Y
1 Quie	N	Y	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	Y	N	Y
5 Colmer	Y	N	Y
2 Whitten	Y	N	Y
3 Williams	Y	N	Y
4 Walker	Y	N	Y
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	N	Y	Y
6 Hull	N	Y	Y
9 Hungate	N	Y	Y
8 Ichord	?	?	Y
10 Jones	N	Y	Y
1 Karsten	N	Y	Y
4 Randall	N	Y	Y
3 Sullivan	N	Y	Y
2 Curtis	✓	X	Y
7 Hall	Y	N	Y
MONTANA
1 Olsen	N	N	Y
2 Battin	Y	N	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	N	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	Y	N	Y
3 Martin	Y	N	Y
NEVADA
AL Baring	Y	N	Y
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	N	Y	Y
2 Cleveland	N	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	N	Y	Y
13 Gallagher	N	Y	Y
9 Helstoski	N	Y	Y
3 Howard	N	Y	Y
8 Joelson	N	Y	Y
12 Krebs	N	Y	Y
11 Minish	N	Y	Y
2 McGrath	N	Y	Y
15 Patten	N	Y	Y
10 Rodino	N	Y	Y
4 Thompson	N	Y	Y
1 Cahill	N	Y	Y
6 Dwyer	N	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	N	Y	Y
7 Widnall	N	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	N	Y	Y
AL Walker	N	Y	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	N	Y	Y
41 Dulski	N	Y	Y
34 Hanley	N	Y	Y
39 McCarthy	-	‡	Y
29 O'Brien	‡	‡	‡
25 Ottinger	N	Y	Y
1 Pike	N	Y	Y
28 Resnick	N	Y	‡
35 Stratton	N	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	N	Y	Y
3 Wolff	N	Y	Y
37 Conable	N	Y	Y
38 Goodell	?	?	Y
2 Grover	N	Y	Y
36 Horton	N	Y	Y
30 King	Y	N	Y
31 McEwen	?	Y	Y
32 Pirnie	N	Y	Y
26 Reid	N	Y	Y
33 Robison	Y	Y	Y
40 Smith	Y	Y	Y
4 Wydler	Y	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	N	Y	Y
23 Bingham	N	Y	Y
15 Carey	N	Y	Y
10 Celler	N	Y	Y
9 Delaney	N	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	N	Y	Y
22 Gilbert	N	Y	Y
12 Kelly	N	Y	Y
11 Keogh	N	Y	Y
13 Multer	N	Y	Y
16 Murphy	N	Y	Y
18 Powell	N	Y	Y
14 Rooney	N	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	N	Y	Y
20 Ryan	N	Y	Y
21 Scheuer	N	Y	Y
24 Fino	N	Y	Y
6 Halpern	?	?	?
17 Lindsay	N	Y	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	N	N	Y
4 Cooley	-	-	‡
2 Fountain	N	N	Y
3 Henderson	N	N	Y
6 Kornegay	N	Y	Y
7 Lennon	Y	N	Y
5 Scott	‡	-	‡
11 Taylor	N	Y	Y
10 Whitener	N	N	Y
9 Broyhill	Y	N	Y
8 Jonas	Y	N	Y
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	N	Y	Y
1 Andrews	Y	Y	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	-	‡	‡
20 Feighan	N	Y	Y
1 Gilligan	N	Y	Y
18 Hays	N	Y	Y
19 Kirwan	N	Y	Y
3 Love	N	Y	Y
10 Moeller	N	?	?
15 Secrest	Y	N	Y
AL Sweeney	N	Y	Y
21 Vanik	N	Y	Y
17 Ashbrook	Y	N	‡
14 Ayres	Y	Y	Y
8 Betts	Y	N	Y
22 Bolton	Y	Y	Y
16 Bow	Y	N	Y
7 Brown	Y	N	Y
2 Clancy	Y	N	Y
12 Devine	Y	N	Y
6 Harsha	Y	N	Y
5 Latta	Y	N	Y
4 McCulloch	Y	N	Y
23 Minshall	Y	N	Y
13 Mosher	Y	Y	Y
11 Stanton	N	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	N	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	N	Y	Y
5 Jarman	‡	-	‡
6 Johnson	N	Y	Y
4 Steed	-	‡	Y
1 Belcher	Y	N	Y
OREGON
4 Duncan	N	Y	Y
3 Green	-	‡	‡
2 Ullman	N	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	N	Y	Y
19 Craley	N	Y	Y
21 Dent	?	?	Y
11 Flood	N	Y	Y
20 Holland	-	‡	‡
14 Moorhead	N	Y	Y
26 Morgan	N	Y	Y
6 Rhodes	N	Y	Y
15 Rooney	N	Y	Y
24 Vigorito	N	Y	Y
18 Corbett	Y	Y	Y
8 Curtin	Y	Y	Y
9 Dague	Y	Y	Y
27 Fulton	N	Y	Y
23 Johnson	Y	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	N	Y	Y
10 McDade	N	Y	Y
22 Saylor	N	Y	Y
17 Schneebeli	Y	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	N	Y	Y
7 Watkins	Y	Y	Y
12 Whalley	Y	Y	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	N	Y	Y
3 Byrne	N	Y	Y
5 Green	N	Y	Y
2 Nix	X	‡	‡
4 Toll	X	?	?
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	N	Y	Y
1 St. Germain	N	Y	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	Y	N	Y
3 Dorn	Y	N	Y
5 Gettys	N	Y	Y
6 McMillan	N	Y	Y
1 Rivers	N	N	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	N	Y
1 Reifel	Y	N	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	N	Y	Y
8 Everett	-	‡	‡
4 Evins	N	Y	Y
5 Fulton	N	Y	Y
9 Grider	N	Y	Y
7 Murray	N	Y	Y
3 Brock	Y	Y	Y
2 Duncan	Y	N	Y
1 Quillen	Y	N	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	N	Y	Y
2 Brooks	N	Y	Y
17 Burleson	N	N	Y
5 Cabell	N	Y	Y
22 Casey	N	N	Y
15 De la Garza	N	N	Y
7 Dowdy	Y	N	Y
21 Fisher	N	N	Y
20 Gonzalez	N	Y	Y
19 Mahon	N	Y	Y
1 Patman	N	Y	Y
10 Pickle	N	Y	Y
11 Poage	N	Y	Y
AL Pool	?	?	Y
13 Purcell	N	Y	Y
4 Roberts	N	N	Y
18 Rogers	?	?	Y
6 Teague	N	N	Y
8 Thomas	N	Y	Y
9 Thompson	N	Y	Y
16 White	N	Y	Y
12 Wright	N	Y	Y
14 Young	?	?	?
UTAH
2 King	N	Y	Y
1 Burton	‡	‡	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	N	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	Y	Y
1 Downing	N	Y	Y
2 Hardy	N	Y	Y
9 Jennings	N	Y	Y
7 Marsh	N	Y	Y
3 Satterfield	N	Y	Y
8 Smith	N	Y	Y
5 Tuck	Y	Y	Y
10 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y
6 Poff	Y	Y	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	N	Y	Y
5 Foley	N	Y	Y
3 Hansen	N	Y	Y
6 Hicks	N	Y	Y
2 Meeds	N	Y	Y
4 May	✓	✓	‡
1 Pelly	Y	Y	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	N	Y	Y
5 Kee	N	Y	Y
3 Slack	N	Y	Y
2 Staggers	N	Y	Y
1 Moore	Y	N	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	N	Y	Y
6 Race	N	Y	Y
5 Reuss	N	Y	Y
1 Stalbaum	N	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	N	Y	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	Y	Y
7 Laird	Y	Y	Y
10 O'Konski	Y	N	Y
3 Thomson	Y	N	Y
9 Davis	Y	N	Y
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	N	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 42 through 44.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 84, 85, 86.)

House Rejects Additional Money for Helicopter Subsidies; Votes $2.2 Billion Supplemental; Revises Arts Council Authorization

42. HR 7091. Second Supplemental Appropriations bill for fiscal 1965. Adoption of the conference report, appropriating $2,227,563,977 in fiscal 1965 supplemental funds including direct appropriations of $1,598,551,844 for various programs and $610,597,133 for military and civilian pay increases, indirect appropriations of $16 million from the Land and Water Conservation Fund, and $2,415,000 in other indefinite appropriations. Adopted 316-55: R 77-52; D 239-3 (ND 156-0; SD 83-3), April 29, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 227)

43. HR 7091. Keogh (D N.Y.) motion that the House recede from its disagreement with the Senate's addition of $942,000 for subsidies for helicopter services in New York City, Los Angeles and Chicago. Rejected 144-228: R 34-97; D 110-131 (ND 103-53; SD 7-78), April 29, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

44. HR 4714. Passage of a bill to amend the National Arts and Cultural Development Act of 1964 to provide that the $150,000 appropriations authorization for the National Council on the Arts -- provided in the Act -- be on an annual basis. Passed 239-116: R 55-70; D 184-46 (ND 141-5; SD 43-41), April 29, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 621; for earlier vote, see RC 17.)

	42	43	44
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	Y	N	N
8 Jones	?	?	?
5 Selden	Y	N	N
4 Andrews	N	N	?
6 Buchanan	N	N	N
2 Dickinson	N	X	-
1 Edwards	N	N	N
7 Martin	N	N	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	?	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	‡	‡	‡
2 Udall	Y	N	Y
1 Rhodes	N	N	N
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	Y	N	Y
4 Harris	‡	‡	‡
2 Mills	Y	N	N
3 Trimble	Y	N	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	Y	Y
7 Cohelan	Y	N	Y
33 Dyal	Y	Y	Y
9 Edwards	Y	Y	Y
18 Hagen	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanna	‡	‡	‡
2 Johnson	Y	Y	Y
4 Leggett	‡	✓	Y
15 McFall	Y	N	Y
8 Miller	Y	N	Y
3 Moss	Y	Y	Y
16 Sisk	‡	Y	Y
38 Tunney	Y	Y	Y
37 Van Deerlin	‡	‡	‡
14 Baldwin	Y	N	N
1 Clausen	Y	N	N
10 Gubser	Y	N	N
6 Mailliard	‡	N	Y
12 Talcott	N	N	N
13 Teague	Y	Y	N
35 Utt	N	Y	N
36 Wilson	Y	N	N
11 Younger	N	N	N
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	Y	Y	Y
25 Cameron	Y	Y	Y
22 Corman	‡	?	‡
21 Hawkins	‡	-	‡
19 Holifield	Y	Y	Y
17 King	Y	Y	Y
26 Roosevelt	Y	Y	Y
30 Roybal	Y	Y	Y
31 Wilson	Y	Y	‡
28 Bell	N	Y	N
23 Clawson	N	Y	N
32 Hosmer	N	Y	N
24 Lipscomb	Y	Y	N
27 Reinecke	Y	Y	N
20 Smith	N	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	N	Y
3 Evans	‡	-	‡
2 McVicker	Y	Y	Y
1 Rogers	Y	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	‡	✓	‡
3 Giaimo	‡	✓	‡
6 Grabowski	Y	Y	Y
4 Irwin	‡	N	Y
5 Monagan	Y	N	Y
2 St. Onge	‡	‡	✓
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	Y	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	N	N
4 Fascell	Y	N	Y
9 Fuqua	Y	N	Y
10 Gibbons	‡	-	‡
7 Haley	N	N	N
5 Herlong	Y	N	‡
8 Matthews	Y	N	Y
3 Pepper	Y	Y	Y
6 Rogers	Y	N	Y
1 Sikes	Y	N	N
12 Cramer	N	N	Y
11 Gurney	N	N	N
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	N	N
6 Flynt	Y	N	N
1 Hagan	Y	N	N
9 Landrum	Y	N	?
4 Mackay	Y	‡	Y
2 O'Neal	N	N	N
10 Stephens	Y	X	X
8 Tuten	Y	N	N
5 Weltner	Y	N	Y
3 Callaway	N	N	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	Y	Y
AL Mink	Y	N	Y
IDAHO
1 White	‡	-	‡
2 Hansen	Y	N	N
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	Y	Y	Y
24 Price	Y	Y	Y
19 Schisler	‡	‡	‡
23 Shipley	Y	N	N
16 Anderson	Y	N	N
17 Arends	Y	Y	N
14 Erlenborn	N	Y	N
20 Findley	N	N	X
12 McClory	N	N	Y
18 Michel	Y	Y	Y
15 Reid	-	N	N
22 Springer	Y	-	Y
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	Y	Y
1 Dawson	?	✓	?
5 Kluczynski	Y	Y	?
3 Murphy	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	Y	Y
6 Ronan	Y	Y	Y
8 Rostenkowski	Y	Y	Y
9 Yates	Y	Y	Y
10 Collier	N	Y	N
4 Derwinski	N	Y	N
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	Y
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	N	Y
8 Denton	Y	N	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	N	Y
11 Jacobs	Y	N	Y
1 Madden	?	?	?
5 Roush	Y	N	Y
4 Adair	Y	N	N
7 Bray	N	N	N
2 Halleck	Y	Y	X
10 Harvey	Y	N	N
6 Roudebush	Y	N	N
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	N	Y
2 Culver	‡	-	‡
6 Greigg	Y	Y	Y
7 Hansen	Y	N	Y
1 Schmidhauser	Y	N	Y
5 Smith	Y	N	Y
3 Gross	N	N	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	N	N	N
3 Ellsworth	Y	Y	Y
4 Shriver	N	N	N
2 Mize	Y	N	Y
5 Skubitz	N	N	N
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	N	Y
3 Farnsley	‡	-	‡
2 Natcher	Y	N	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 42 through 44.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 84, 85, 86.)

	42	43	44
7 Perkins	Y	N	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	N	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y	Y
5 Carter	Y	N	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	‡	-	✓
1 Hebert	Y	X	X
8 Long	Y	N	N
6 Morrison	?	X	?
5 Passman	Y	N	N
7 Thompson	Y	N	Y
4 Waggonner	-	X	N
3 Willis	?	N	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	N	Y
1 Tupper	?	?	?
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	‡	X	‡
7 Friedel	Y	N	‡
3 Garmatz	‡	X	‡
2 Long	Y	N	Y
5 Machen	Y	N	Y
AL Sickles	Y	Y	Y
6 Mathias	?	?	?
1 Morton	Y	N	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	N	Y
11 Burke	Y	Y	Y
4 Donohue	Y	Y	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	Y	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	N	‡
3 Philbin	Y	Y	Y
6 Bates	Y	N	Y
1 Conte	Y	N	✓
12 Keith	Y	N	Y
10 Martin	Y	Y	Y
5 Morse	Y	N	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	Y	Y
19 Farnum	Y	N	?
7 Mackie	Y	N	N
12 O'Hara	Y	N	Y
3 Todd	?	N	?
2 Vivian	Y	N	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	N	Y
10 Cederberg	Y	N	N
6 Chamberlain	N	N	Y
5 Ford	Y	N	Y
9 Griffin	Y	N	Y
8 Harvey	Y	N	Y
4 Hutchinson	N	N	N
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	Y	?	‡
13 Diggs	‡	✓	Y
16 Dingell	?	✓	?
15 Ford	Y	N	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	Y	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	Y	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	‡	-	‡
5 Fraser	Y	Y	Y
4 Karth	Y	Y	Y
6 Olson	‡	-	‡
7 Langen	N	N	N
3 MacGregor	N	N	Y
2 Nelsen	N	N	N
1 Quie	N	N	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	Y	N	N
5 Colmer	Y	N	N
2 Whitten	Y	N	N
3 Williams	Y	N	N
4 Walker	N	N	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	Y	N	Y
6 Hull	Y	N	N
9 Hungate	Y	N	Y
8 Ichord	Y	N	Y
10 Jones	Y	?	?
1 Karsten	Y	Y	Y
4 Randall	Y	N	Y
3 Sullivan	Y	N	Y
2 Curtis	N	N	N
7 Hall	N	N	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	Y	Y
2 Battin	Y	N	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	N	Y
2 Cunningham	N	N	N
3 Martin	Y	N	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	Y	N	N
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	Y	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	N	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	Y	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	Y	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	Y	Y
3 Howard	Y	Y	Y
8 Joelson	Y	N	Y
12 Krebs	Y	Y	Y
11 Minish	Y	Y	Y
2 McGrath	Y	Y	Y
15 Patten	Y	Y	Y
10 Rodino	Y	Y	Y
4 Thompson	Y	Y	Y
1 Cahill	Y	Y	Y
6 Dwyer	Y	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	Y	Y	Y
7 Widnall	Y	Y	✓
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	N	Y
AL Walker	Y	N	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	‡	✓	‡
41 Dulski	‡	✓	‡
34 Hanley	Y	Y	Y
39 McCarthy	Y	Y	Y
29 O'Brien	‡	✓	‡
25 Ottinger	Y	Y	Y
1 Pike	Y	Y	Y
28 Resnick	‡	✓	‡
35 Stratton	‡	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	Y	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	Y
37 Conable	Y	N	Y
38 Goodell	?	N	Y
2 Grover	N	Y	Y
36 Horton	Y	N	Y
30 King	N	Y	N
31 McEwen	Y	Y	N
32 Pirnie	Y	Y	Y
26 Reid	Y	Y	Y
33 Robison	Y	N	N
40 Smith	Y	Y	Y
4 Wydler	N	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	‡	✓	✓
23 Bingham	Y	Y	Y
15 Carey	Y	Y	Y
10 Celler	Y	Y	?
9 Delaney	Y	Y	✓
19 Farbstein	Y	Y	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	Y	Y
12 Kelly	Y	Y	‡
11 Keogh	Y	Y	✓
13 Multer	Y	Y	Y
16 Murphy	Y	Y	Y
18 Powell	Y	Y	Y
14 Rooney	Y	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	Y	Y
20 Ryan	Y	Y	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	Y	Y
24 Fino	Y	Y	Y
6 Halpern	‡	✓	‡
17 Lindsay	?	✓	✓
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	Y	N	N
4 Cooley	Y	Y	Y
2 Fountain	Y	N	N
3 Henderson	Y	N	N
6 Kornegay	Y	N	N
7 Lennon	‡	X	X
5 Scott	‡	X	X
11 Taylor	Y	N	N
10 Whitener	Y	N	N
9 Broyhill	N	N	N
8 Jonas	Y	N	N
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	‡	-	‡
1 Andrews	Y	N	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	N	Y
20 Feighan	Y	N	Y
1 Gilligan	Y	Y	Y
18 Hays	‡	Y	‡
19 Kirwan	Y	N	✓
3 Love	Y	Y	Y
10 Moeller	?	?	?
15 Secrest	Y	Y	N
AL Sweeney	Y	Y	Y
21 Vanik	Y	N	Y
17 Ashbrook	-	X	X
14 Ayres	Y	Y	Y
8 Betts	N	N	N
22 Bolton	?	Y	N
16 Bow	Y	N	N
7 Brown	N	N	N
2 Clancy	Y	N	N
12 Devine	N	N	X
6 Harsha	Y	N	N
5 Latta	Y	N	N
4 McCulloch	Y	N	N
23 Minshall	N	N	N
13 Mosher	N	N	Y
11 Stanton	Y	N	N
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	N	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	N	Y
5 Jarman	‡	-	-
6 Johnson	Y	N	Y
4 Steed	Y	N	N
1 Belcher	N	N	?
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	N	Y
3 Green	Y	-	Y
2 Ullman	Y	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	N	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	‡	‡
19 Craley	Y	N	Y
21 Dent	Y	Y	Y
11 Flood	Y	N	Y
20 Holland	‡	X	‡
14 Moorhead	Y	Y	Y
26 Morgan	Y	Y	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y
15 Rooney	Y	Y	Y
24 Vigorito	Y	N	Y
18 Corbett	Y	Y	Y
8 Curtin	Y	N	Y
9 Dague	N	N	N
27 Fulton	Y	Y	Y
23 Johnson	Y	N	N
16 Kunkel	Y	N	Y
10 McDade	Y	N	Y
22 Saylor	Y	N	Y
17 Schneebeli	Y	N	Y
13 Schweiker	Y	N	Y
7 Watkins	Y	N	N
12 Whalley	Y	N	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	?
3 Byrne	Y	Y	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	Y
2 Nix	‡	✓	‡
4 Toll	?	✓	?
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	Y	N	✓
1 St. Germain	Y	Y	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	N	N	N
3 Dorn	Y	N	N
5 Gettys	Y	N	Y
6 McMillan	Y	N	-
1 Rivers	Y	N	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	N	N
1 Reifel	Y	N	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	Y	‡
8 Everett	Y	N	Y
4 Evins	Y	N	Y
5 Fulton	Y	Y	Y
9 Grider	Y	Y	Y
7 Murray	Y	N	N
3 Brock	-	X	X
2 Duncan	N	N	N
1 Quillen	Y	N	N
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	N	Y
2 Brooks	Y	N	Y
17 Burleson	Y	N	N
5 Cabell	Y	N	N
22 Casey	Y	N	N
15 De la Garza	Y	N	Y
7 Dowdy	Y	N	N
21 Fisher	Y	N	N
20 Gonzalez	Y	N	Y
19 Mahon	Y	N	Y
1 Patman	Y	N	Y
10 Pickle	Y	N	Y
11 Poage	Y	N	Y
AL Pool	?	N	N
13 Purcell	Y	N	Y
4 Roberts	Y	N	N
18 Rogers	?	N	N
6 Teague	Y	N	Y
8 Thomas	Y	N	Y
9 Thompson	Y	N	Y
16 White	Y	N	N
12 Wright	Y	Y	Y
14 Young	?	X	?
UTAH
2 King	Y	Y	Y
1 Burton	Y	N	N
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	N	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	N	N
1 Downing	Y	N	Y
2 Hardy	Y	X	Y
9 Jennings	Y	N	Y
7 Marsh	Y	N	Y
3 Satterfield	Y	N	N
8 Smith	Y	N	N
5 Tuck	Y	N	N
10 Broyhill	‡	X	‡
6 Poff	N	N	N
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	Y	Y
5 Foley	Y	Y	Y
3 Hansen	Y	N	Y
6 Hicks	Y	Y	Y
2 Meeds	Y	Y	Y
4 May	Y	N	Y
1 Pelly	Y	N	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	N	Y
5 Kee	Y	Y	Y
3 Slack	Y	Y	Y
2 Staggers	?	?	?
1 Moore	Y	N	N
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	Y	Y
6 Race	Y	Y	Y
5 Reuss	Y	Y	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	N	Y
4 Zablocki	Y	Y	Y
8 Byrnes	N	Y	Y
7 Laird	Y	N	N
10 O'Konski	Y	N	N
3 Thomson	N	N	Y
9 Davis	N	N	Y
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	Y	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 45 through 48.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 87, 90, 92, 94.)

House Passes Mental Health Grants, Extends Health Programs; Votes Extra Defense Funds, Military Procurement Authorization

45. HR 2986. Passage of the bill extending and amending existing programs of health services for migrant workers, vaccination of preschool children, grants to the states for general health assistance and grants for community health services. Passed 347-0: R 114-0; D 233-0 (ND 145-0; SD 88-0), May 3, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 132)

46. HR 2985. Passage of the bill authorizing a four-year program of federal grants to public or non-profit private organizations or agencies for the initial costs of professional and technical personnel at community mental health centers. Passed 389-0: R 128-0; D 261-0 (ND 171-0; SD 90-0), May 4, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 329; for later vote, see RC 99.)

47. H J Res 447. Passage of the bill providing $700 million in fiscal 1965 supplementary appropriations for United States military operations in Southeast Asia, to remain available until expended. Passed 408-7: R 135-0; D 273-7 (ND 174-7; SD 99-0), May 5, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 180)

48. HR 7657. Passage of the bill authorizing $15,303,400,000 in fiscal 1966 for procurement of aircraft, missiles and ships for the military services, and for defense research and development. Passed 396-0; R 129-0; D 267-0 (ND 175-0; SD 92-0), May 5, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 684)

	45	46	47	48
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Jones	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Selden	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Andrews	Y	Y	Y	?
6 Buchanan	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Dickinson	‡	‡	Y	‡
1 Edwards	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Martin	Y	Y	Y	Y
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	?	Y	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	‡	‡	‡	‡
2 Udall	‡	Y	Y	Y
1 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y	Y
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Harris	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Mills	?	Y	Y	Y
3 Trimble	Y	Y	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Cohelan	‡	Y	Y	Y
33 Dyal	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Edwards	‡	Y	N	Y
18 Hagen	Y	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanna	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Johnson	‡	Y	Y	Y
4 Leggett	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 McFall	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Miller	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Moss	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Sisk	Y	Y	Y	Y
38 Tunney	Y	Y	Y	Y
37 Van Deerlin	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Baldwin	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Clausen	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Gubser	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Mailliard	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Talcott	Y	Y	Y	‡
13 Teague	Y	Y	Y	Y
35 Utt	Y	Y	Y	Y
36 Wilson	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Younger	Y	Y	Y	Y
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	Y	Y	N	Y
25 Cameron	‡	Y	Y	Y
22 Corman	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Hawkins	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Holifield	Y	‡	Y	Y
17 King	Y	Y	Y	Y
26 Roosevelt	Y	Y	Y	Y
30 Roybal	Y	Y	Y	Y
31 Wilson	‡	Y	Y	Y
28 Bell	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Clawson	Y	Y	Y	Y
32 Hosmer	‡	Y	Y	Y
24 Lipscomb	Y	Y	Y	Y
27 Reinecke	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Smith	Y	Y	Y	Y
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Evans	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 McVicker	‡	Y	Y	Y
1 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Giaimo	‡	‡	‡	‡
6 Grabowski	‡	Y	Y	Y
4 Irwin	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Monagan	‡	Y	Y	Y
2 St. Onge	‡	Y	Y	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	Y	Y	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Fuqua	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Gibbons	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Haley	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Herlong	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Matthews	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Pepper	‡	Y	Y	Y
6 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Sikes	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Cramer	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Gurney	Y	Y	Y	Y
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Flynt	Y	Y	Y	‡
1 Hagan	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Landrum	Y	?	Y	Y
4 Mackay	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Neal	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Stephens	Y	‡	Y	Y
8 Tuten	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Weltner	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Callaway	Y	Y	Y	Y
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Mink	Y	Y	Y	Y
IDAHO
1 White	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	Y
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	?	Y	Y	Y
24 Price	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Schisler	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Shipley	?	Y	Y	Y
16 Anderson	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Arends	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Erlenborn	‡	Y	Y	Y
20 Findley	?	Y	Y	Y
12 McClory	‡	Y	Y	Y
18 Michel	‡	Y	Y	Y
15 Reid	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Springer	Y	Y	Y	Y
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Dawson	?	Y	Y	Y
5 Kluczynski	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Murphy	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Ronan	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Rostenkowski	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Yates	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Collier	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Derwinski	‡	Y	Y	Y
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	Y	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	45	46	47	48
INDIANA
3 Brademas	‡	Y	Y	Y
8 Denton	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Jacobs	?	Y	Y	?
1 Madden	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Roush	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Adair	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Bray	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Halleck	?	?	?	?
10 Harvey	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Roudebush	Y	Y	Y	Y
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Culver	‡	Y	Y	Y
6 Greigg	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Schmidhauser	‡	‡	Y	Y
5 Smith	‡	‡	Y	Y
3 Gross	Y	Y	Y	Y
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Ellsworth	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Shriver	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Mize	‡	Y	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	Y	Y	Y	Y
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	Y	Y	‡
3 Farnsley	‡	Y	Y	Y
2 Natcher	Y	Y	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 45 through 48.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 87, 90, 92, 94.)

	45	46	47	48
7 Perkins	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Carter	Y	Y	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	Y	Y	‡
1 Hebert	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Long	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Morrison	?	?	Y	?
5 Passman	Y	‡	Y	Y
7 Thompson	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Waggonner	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Willis	?	?	Y	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Tupper	Y	Y	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Friedel	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Garmatz	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Long	?	Y	Y	Y
5 Machen	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Sickles	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Mathias	?	?	?	?
1 Morton	‡	Y	Y	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Burke	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Donohue	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	‡	Y	Y	Y
3 Philbin	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Bates	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Conte	‡	Y	Y	Y
12 Keith	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Martin	Y	?	Y	Y
5 Morse	Y	Y	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	‡	Y	Y	Y
19 Farnum	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Mackie	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Todd	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Vivian	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Cederberg	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Chamberlain	Y	?	Y	Y
5 Ford	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Griffin	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Harvey	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Hutchinson	Y	Y	Y	Y
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	‡	Y	N	?
13 Diggs	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Dingell	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Ford	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	‡	‡	‡
14 Nedzi	Y	Y	Y	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	‡	‡	‡	‡
5 Fraser	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Karth	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Olson	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Langen	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 MacGregor	‡	‡	‡	‡
2 Nelsen	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Quie	Y	Y	Y	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Colmer	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Whitten	?	?	Y	Y
3 Williams	Y	Y	?	?
4 Walker	Y	Y	Y	Y
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	‡	Y	Y	Y
6 Hull	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Hungate	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Ichord	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Jones	‡	‡	‡	‡
1 Karsten	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Randall	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Sullivan	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Curtis	‡	‡	-	‡
7 Hall	Y	Y	Y	‡
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Battin	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Martin	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEVADA
AL Baring	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	‡	Y	Y
13 Gallagher	‡	Y	Y	‡
9 Helstoski	Y	Y	‡	Y
3 Howard	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Joelson	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Krebs	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Minish	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 McGrath	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Patten	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Rodino	‡	‡	‡	‡
4 Thompson	‡	Y	Y	Y
1 Cahill	‡	‡	‡	‡
6 Dwyer	‡	Y	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	‡	Y	Y	Y
7 Widnall	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	‡	Y	Y
AL Walker	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	Y	N	?
41 Dulski	‡	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanley	Y	Y	Y	Y
39 McCarthy	Y	Y	Y	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	Y	Y	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Pike	Y	Y	Y	Y
28 Resnick	‡	‡	‡	‡
35 Stratton	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	Y	Y
37 Conable	Y	Y	Y	Y
38 Goodell	Y	?	Y	Y
2 Grover	Y	Y	Y	Y
36 Horton	Y	Y	Y	Y
30 King	Y	Y	Y	Y
31 McEwen	Y	Y	Y	Y
32 Pirnie	‡	Y	Y	Y
26 Reid	Y	Y	Y	Y
33 Robison	Y	Y	Y	Y
40 Smith	Y	‡	Y	‡
4 Wydler	Y	Y	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Bingham	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Carey	‡	Y	Y	Y
10 Celler	?	Y	Y	Y
9 Delaney	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Kelly	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Keogh	‡	Y	Y	Y
13 Multer	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Murphy	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Powell	?	?	?	?
14 Rooney	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Ryan	Y	Y	N	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	Y	Y	Y
24 Fino	‡	Y	Y	Y
6 Halpern	‡	Y	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	Y	Y	Y	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	?	Y	Y	Y
4 Cooley	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Fountain	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Henderson	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Kornegay	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Lennon	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Scott	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Taylor	Y	?	Y	Y
10 Whitener	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Jonas	Y	Y	Y	Y
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	‡	Y	‡	Y
1 Andrews	Y	Y	Y	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	‡	Y	Y	Y
20 Feighan	?	Y	Y	Y
1 Gilligan	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Hays	‡	‡	‡	‡
19 Kirwan	Y	Y	Y	?
3 Love	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Moeller	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Secrest	‡	Y	Y	Y
AL Sweeney	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Vanik	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Ashbrook	‡	Y	Y	Y
14 Ayres	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Betts	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Bolton	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Bow	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Brown	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Clancy	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Devine	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Harsha	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Latta	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 McCulloch	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Minshall	‡	Y	Y	Y
13 Mosher	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Stanton	Y	Y	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Jarman	‡	Y	Y	Y
6 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Steed	Y	‡	Y	Y
1 Belcher	?	Y	Y	Y
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Green	Y	Y	N	‡
2 Ullman	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	Y	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Craley	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Dent	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Flood	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Holland	‡	‡	Y	‡
14 Moorhead	‡	Y	Y	Y
26 Morgan	‡	Y	Y	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Rooney	Y	Y	Y	Y
24 Vigorito	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Corbett	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Curtin	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Dague	Y	Y	Y	Y
27 Fulton	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 McDade	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Saylor	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Schneebeli	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Watkins	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Whalley	Y	Y	Y	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Byrne	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Nix	‡	Y	Y	Y
4 Toll	?	?	?	?
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 St. Germain	Y	Y	Y	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Dorn	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Gettys	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 McMillan	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Rivers	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Reifel	Y	Y	Y	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Everett	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Evins	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Fulton	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Grider	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Murray	Y	‡	Y	Y
3 Brock	Y	Y	Y	‡
2 Duncan	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Quillen	Y	Y	Y	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Brooks	Y	Y	Y	?
17 Burleson	?	Y	Y	Y
5 Cabell	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Casey	Y	Y	Y	‡
15 De la Garza	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Dowdy	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Fisher	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Gonzalez	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Mahon	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Patman	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Pickle	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Poage	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Pool	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Purcell	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Roberts	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Teague	?	Y	Y	Y
8 Thomas	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Thompson	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 White	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Wright	Y	Y	Y	‡
14 Young	?	?	Y	Y
UTAH
2 King	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Burton	Y	Y	Y	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	Y	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Downing	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Hardy	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Jennings	‡	Y	Y	Y
7 Marsh	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Satterfield	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Smith	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Tuck	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Broyhill	‡	‡	Y	Y
6 Poff	Y	Y	Y	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	‡	Y	Y
5 Foley	Y	‡	Y	Y
3 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Hicks	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Meeds	Y	‡	Y	Y
4 May	‡	Y	Y	Y
1 Pelly	Y	Y	Y	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Kee	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Slack	?	Y	Y	Y
2 Staggers	?	?	Y	Y
1 Moore	Y	Y	Y	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Race	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Reuss	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Laird	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 O'Konski	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Thomson	?	?	Y	Y
9 Davis	Y	Y	Y	Y
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	Y	?	Y	?

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 49 through 52.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 96, 97, 99, 101.)

House Expands Grant Program for Construction of Health Facilities; Votes NASA Authorization; Passes Bill to Implement Coffee Agreement

49. H Res 366. Open rule (permitting amendment and three hours of general debate) for floor consideration of HR 7717 (below) authorizing appropriation of $5,183,844,850 for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in fiscal 1966. Adopted 389-0: R 131-0; D 258-0 (ND 167-0; SD 91-0), May 6, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 712)

50. HR 7717. Passage of the bill authorizing appropriation of $5,183,844,850 for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in fiscal 1966. Passed 389-11: R 120-11; D 269-0 (ND 175-0; SD 94-0), May 6, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

51. HR 2984. Passage of the bill to extend for three more years (fiscal 1967 through 1969) the existing program of federal grants for construction of health research facilities and to increase the program's appropriations authorization to $280 million for the period; to authorize the Public Health Service to enter into research contracts during fiscal 1966-68 (with expenditures under contracts limited to $43 million annually); and to authorize three additional Assistant Secretaries of Health, Education and Welfare. Passed 334-4: R 105-3; D 229-1 (ND 144-0; SD 85-1), May 10, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 342)

52. S 701. Passage of the bill to enable the United States to carry out its obligations under the International Coffee Agreement of 1962 by authorizing the President to require certificates of origin for all coffee imports and to limit coffee imports from countries not participating in the Agreement. Passed 300-97: R 50-80; D 250-17 (ND 171-4; SD 79-13), May 12, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 483)

	49	50	51	52
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	Y	Y	?	?
8 Jones	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Selden	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Andrews	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Buchanan	Y	Y	?	N
2 Dickinson	Y	‡	Y	N
1 Edwards	Y	Y	‡	N
7 Martin	Y	Y	Y	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	?	Y	Y	?
ARIZONA
3 Senner	‡	‡	Y	Y
2 Udall	‡	Y	Y	Y
1 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y	Y
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Harris	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Mills	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Trimble	Y	Y	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Cohelan	Y	Y	Y	Y
33 Dyal	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Edwards	Y	Y	‡	Y
18 Hagen	Y	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanna	Y	Y	‡	Y
2 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Leggett	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 McFall	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Miller	Y	Y	‡	‡
3 Moss	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Sisk	Y	Y	Y	Y
38 Tunney	‡	Y	Y	Y
37 Van Deerlin	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Baldwin	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Clausen	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Gubser	Y	Y	‡	X
6 Mailliard	Y	Y	‡	Y
12 Talcott	‡	‡	‡	N
13 Teague	Y	Y	Y	N
35 Utt	Y	N	N	N
36 Wilson	Y	Y	Y	N
11 Younger	Y	N	Y	N
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	Y	Y	‡	‡
25 Cameron	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Corman	‡	‡	Y	Y
21 Hawkins	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Holifield	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 King	Y	Y	Y	Y
26 Roosevelt	Y	Y	‡	Y
30 Roybal	Y	Y	Y	Y
31 Wilson	Y	Y	Y	Y
28 Bell	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Clawson	Y	Y	‡	N
32 Hosmer	Y	Y	Y	Y
24 Lipscomb	Y	Y	Y	N
27 Reinecke	Y	Y	Y	N
20 Smith	Y	Y	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Evans	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 McVicker	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Rogers	‡	‡	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Giaimo	‡	‡	‡	Y
6 Grabowski	Y	Y	‡	Y
4 Irwin	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Monagan	Y	Y	‡	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	Y	‡	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	‡	Y	‡	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Fuqua	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Gibbons	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Haley	Y	Y	Y	N
5 Herlong	Y	Y	Y	‡
8 Matthews	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Pepper	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Sikes	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Cramer	Y	Y	‡	N
11 Gurney	Y	Y	Y	N
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Flynt	‡	‡	Y	Y
1 Hagan	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Landrum	Y	Y	?	Y
4 Mackay	Y	‡	Y	Y
2 O'Neal	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Stephens	Y	Y	‡	Y
8 Tuten	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Weltner	Y	Y	Y	N
3 Callaway	Y	Y	Y	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Mink	Y	Y	Y	Y
IDAHO
1 White	Y	Y	‡	Y
2 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	N
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	?	Y	Y	Y
24 Price	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Schisler	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Shipley	Y	Y	?	Y
16 Anderson	Y	Y	Y	N
17 Arends	Y	Y	Y	N
14 Erlenborn	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Findley	?	Y	Y	N
12 McClory	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Michel	Y	N	Y	N
15 Reid	Y	N	Y	N
22 Springer	Y	Y	Y	N
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	Y	‡	Y
1 Dawson	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Kluczynski	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Murphy	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	Y	Y	-
6 Ronan	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Rostenkowski	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Yates	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Collier	Y	N	Y	✓
4 Derwinski	Y	Y	Y	N
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	Y	N

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	49	50	51	52
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	Y	‡	Y
8 Denton	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	Y	‡	‡
11 Jacobs	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Madden	Y	Y	Y	?
5 Roush	Y	Y	Y	‡
4 Adair	Y	Y	Y	N
7 Bray	Y	Y	Y	X
2 Halleck	?	?	Y	Y
10 Harvey	Y	Y	Y	N
6 Roudebush	Y	Y	Y	N
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Culver	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Greigg	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Schmidhauser	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Smith	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Gross	Y	N	N	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	Y	Y	N
3 Ellsworth	Y	Y	‡	Y
4 Shriver	?	?	?	N
2 Mize	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	Y	N	Y	N
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	‡	‡	‡	‡
3 Farnsley	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Natcher	Y	Y	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 49 through 52.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 96, 97, 99, 101.)

	49	50	51	52
7 Perkins	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Carter	Y	Y	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Hebert	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Long	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Morrison	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Passman	Y	Y	‡	Y
7 Thompson	Y	Y	?	Y
4 Waggonner	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Willis	Y	Y	Y	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Tupper	Y	Y	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	‡	‡	Y	Y
7 Friedel	‡	Y	Y	Y
3 Garmatz	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Long	?	Y	Y	N
5 Machen	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Sickles	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Mathias	?	?	?	?
1 Morton	Y	Y	‡	‡
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	Y	‡	Y
11 Burke	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Donohue	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	Y	?	?
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	Y	‡	Y
3 Philbin	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Bates	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Conte	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Keith	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Martin	Y	Y	Y	✓
5 Morse	Y	Y	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Farnum	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Mackie	Y	Y	‡	Y
12 O'Hara	‡	Y	Y	Y
3 Todd	Y	Y	?	Y
2 Vivian	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	Y	Y	N
10 Cederberg	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Chamberlain	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Ford	Y	Y	Y	N
9 Griffin	?	?	Y	Y
8 Harvey	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Hutchinson	Y	Y	Y	N
Detroit—Wayne
1 Conyers	‡	?	‡	Y
13 Diggs	Y	Y	Y	‡
16 Dingell	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Ford	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	Y	Y	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	‡	‡	Y	Y
5 Fraser	Y	Y	?	Y
4 Karth	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Olson	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Langen	Y	Y	Y	N
3 MacGregor	Y	‡	Y	N
2 Nelsen	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Quie	Y	Y	Y	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	Y	Y	Y	N
5 Colmer	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Whitten	Y	Y	Y	N
3 Williams	?	?	?	N
4 Walker	Y	Y	N	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	Y	‡	‡	Y
6 Hull	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Hungate	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Ichord	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Jones	‡	‡	Y	Y
1 Karsten	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Randall	Y	Y	Y	N
3 Sullivan	Y	Y	‡	Y
2 Curtis	‡	-	Y	Y
7 Hall	Y	Y	Y	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	Y	Y	‡
2 Battin	Y	Y	‡	X
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	‡	Y	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	Y	Y	Y	N
3 Martin	Y	Y	Y	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	Y	Y	Y	?
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	Y	Y	N
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	‡	‡	‡	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Howard	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Joelson	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Krebs	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Minish	Y	Y	‡	Y
2 McGrath	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Patten	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Rodino	‡	‡	‡	Y
4 Thompson	Y	Y	‡	Y
1 Cahill	‡	‡	‡	X
6 Dwyer	Y	Y	‡	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Widnall	Y	Y	?	N
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	Y	Y	✓
AL Walker	Y	Y	Y	✓
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	Y	Y	Y
41 Dulski	Y	Y	Y	N
34 Hanley	Y	Y	Y	Y
39 McCarthy	Y	Y	‡	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	Y	Y	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Pike	Y	Y	Y	Y
28 Resnick	‡	‡	‡	‡
35 Stratton	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	Y	✓
37 Conable	Y	Y	Y	Y
38 Goodell	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Grover	Y	Y	Y	Y
36 Horton	Y	Y	Y	N
30 King	Y	Y	Y	N
31 McEwen	Y	Y	Y	N
32 Pirnie	Y	Y	Y	Y
26 Reid	Y	Y	‡	Y
33 Robison	Y	Y	‡	N
40 Smith	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Wydler	Y	Y	Y	N
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Bingham	Y	Y	?	Y
15 Carey	Y	Y	‡	Y
10 Celler	?	?	?	Y
9 Delaney	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Kelly	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Keogh	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Multer	Y	Y	‡	Y
16 Murphy	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Powell	?	?	?	Y
14 Rooney	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Ryan	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	Y	Y	Y
24 Fino	Y	Y	‡	Y
6 Halpern	Y	Y	‡	Y
17 Lindsay	Y	Y	‡	✓
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Cooley	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Fountain	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Henderson	Y	Y	Y	N
6 Kornegay	Y	Y	Y	N
7 Lennon	Y	Y	‡	N
5 Scott	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Taylor	?	Y	Y	Y
10 Whitener	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Broyhill	‡	Y	‡	Y
8 Jonas	Y	Y	Y	N
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Andrews	Y	Y	Y	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	Y	‡	Y
20 Feighan	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Gilligan	Y	Y	‡	Y
18 Hays	‡	‡	Y	Y
19 Kirwan	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Love	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Moeller	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Secrest	Y	Y	Y	N
AL Sweeney	Y	Y	‡	Y
21 Vanik	Y	Y	?	Y
17 Ashbrook	Y	Y	Y	N
14 Ayres	Y	Y	‡	Y
8 Betts	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Bolton	Y	Y	Y	N
16 Bow	Y	Y	Y	N
7 Brown	Y	Y	Y	N
2 Clancy	Y	N	Y	N
12 Devine	Y	N	Y	N
6 Harsha	Y	Y	Y	N
5 Latta	Y	Y	Y	N
4 McCulloch	Y	Y	Y	N
23 Minshall	Y	Y	‡	N
13 Mosher	Y	Y	‡	Y
11 Stanton	Y	Y	Y	N
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Jarman	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Steed	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Belcher	Y	Y	Y	N
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Green	Y	Y	‡	Y
2 Ullman	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	Y	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Craley	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Dent	Y	Y	?	Y
11 Flood	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Holland	Y	‡	‡	‡
14 Moorhead	Y	Y	Y	Y
26 Morgan	Y	Y	‡	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Rooney	Y	Y	Y	Y
24 Vigorito	‡	Y	Y	Y
18 Corbett	Y	Y	Y	N
8 Curtin	Y	Y	‡	N
9 Dague	Y	Y	Y	N
27 Fulton	Y	Y	Y	N
23 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	N
16 Kunkel	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 McDade	Y	Y	Y	N
22 Saylor	Y	Y	‡	N
17 Schneebeli	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	Y	Y	Y	N
7 Watkins	Y	Y	?	N
12 Whalley	Y	Y	Y	N
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	?	Y
3 Byrne	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Nix	Y	Y	‡	Y
4 Toll	?	?	?	?
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	‡	‡	‡	X
1 St. Germain	Y	Y	?	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Dorn	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Gettys	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 McMillan	Y	Y	Y	‡
1 Rivers	‡	Y	Y	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	Y	‡	Y
1 Reifel	Y	Y	‡	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Everett	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Evins	‡	Y	Y	Y
5 Fulton	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Grider	‡	Y	Y	Y
7 Murray	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Brock	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Duncan	Y	Y	Y	N
1 Quillen	Y	Y	‡	N
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Brooks	?	?	?	Y
17 Burleson	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Cabell	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Casey	Y	Y	‡	Y
15 De la Garza	Y	Y	Y	‡
7 Dowdy	Y	Y	Y	N
21 Fisher	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Gonzalez	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Mahon	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Patman	Y	Y	‡	Y
10 Pickle	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Poage	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Pool	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Purcell	Y	Y	‡	‡
4 Roberts	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Teague	Y	Y	Y	?
8 Thomas	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Thompson	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 White	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Wright	Y	Y	‡	Y
14 Young	Y	Y	Y	Y
UTAH
2 King	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Burton	Y	Y	Y	N
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	Y	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	Y	Y	N
1 Downing	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Hardy	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Jennings	Y	Y	‡	Y
7 Marsh	Y	Y	Y	N
3 Satterfield	Y	Y	Y	N
8 Smith	?	?	Y	?
5 Tuck	Y	Y	Y	N
10 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Poff	Y	Y	Y	N
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Foley	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Hansen	Y	Y	‡	Y
6 Hicks	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Meeds	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 May	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Pelly	Y	Y	Y	N
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Kee	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Slack	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Staggers	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Moore	Y	Y	Y	N
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Race	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Reuss	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Laird	Y	N	‡	X
10 O'Konski	Y	Y	Y	N
3 Thomson	Y	Y	Y	N
9 Davis	Y	Y	‡	N
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	Y	Y	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 53 through 58.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 104, 105, 109, 110, 112, 113.)

House Rejects UAR-Indonesia PL 480 Restriction, Foreign Aid Cut, Reactor Plan Deletion; Votes Aid, AEC Bills and Agriculture Funds

53. HR 8122. Authorize $2,555,521,000 for the Atomic Energy Commission in fiscal 1966. Moore (R W.Va.) motion to recommit the bill to the Joint Atomic Energy Committee with instructions to delete authority for a cooperative arrangement to establish a large seed-blanket nuclear reactor. Rejected 43-313: R 35-83; D 8-230 (ND 5-147; SD 3-83), May 20, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 708)

54. HR 8122. Passage of the bill, authorizing appropriations of $2,555,521,000 for the Atomic Energy Commission in fiscal 1966. Passed 352-1: R 117-1; D 235-0 (ND 147-0; SD 88-0), May 20, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

55. HR 7750. Foreign Assistance Act of 1965. Adair (R Ind.) motion to recommit the bill to the Foreign Affairs Committee with instructions to reduce funds for development loans by $130,958,000, and to stipulate that labor unions participating in Latin American housing projects be "non-Communist dominated" as well as "free." Rejected 178-219: R 116-14; D 62-205 (ND 13-166; SD 49-39), May 25, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 422)

56. HR 7750. Passage of the bill, authorizing appropriations of $3,367,670,000 for foreign aid in fiscal 1966. Passed 249-148: R 44-86; D 205-62 (ND 167-12; SD 38-50), May 25, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (For later vote, see RC 120.)

57. HR 8370. Fiscal 1966 Appropriations Bill for the Department of Agriculture and related agencies. Bow (R Ohio) motion to recommit the bill to the Appropriations Committee with instructions to report it back with an amendment prohibiting use of any funds in the bill during fiscal 1966 to finance the export of U.S. agricultural commodities to the United Arab Republic (Egypt) or Indonesia under Title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (PL 480). Rejected 187-208: R 124-2; D 63-206 (ND 30-149; SD 33-57), May 26, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 194; For earlier votes, see RCs 5, 6.)

58. HR 8370. Passage of the bill, appropriating $5,717,832,000 for the Department of Agriculture and the National Commission on Food Marketing in fiscal 1966. Passed 354-41: R 93-33; D 261-8 (ND 174-5; SD 87-3), May 26, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill.

	53	54	55	56	57	58
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	?	?	✓	X	?	?
8 Jones	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
5 Selden	‡	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Andrews	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Buchanan	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Dickinson	N	Y	✓	X	Y	Y
1 Edwards	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	N
7 Martin	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	N	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Udall	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Rhodes	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
4 Harris	N	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Mills	N	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Trimble	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	N	Y	X	✓	N	Y
7 Cohelan	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
33 Dyal	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
9 Edwards	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
18 Hagen	N	Y	X	✓	‡	‡
34 Hanna	N	Y	X	✓	?	?
2 Johnson	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
4 Leggett	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
15 McFall	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
8 Miller	N	Y	N	✓	X	‡
3 Moss	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
16 Sisk	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
38 Tunney	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
37 Van Deerlin	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
14 Baldwin	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Clausen	‡	‡	Y	N	‡	‡
10 Gubser	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Mailliard	N	‡	N	Y	Y	N
12 Talcott	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
13 Teague	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
35 Utt	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
36 Wilson	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
11 Younger	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N

	53	54	55	56	57	58
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	N	Y	N	Y	X	‡
25 Cameron	N	Y	N	Y	N	N
22 Corman	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
21 Hawkins	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
19 Holifield	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
17 King	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
26 Roosevelt	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
30 Roybal	?	?	N	Y	N	Y
31 Wilson	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
28 Bell	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
23 Clawson	N	Y	✓	X	‡	X
32 Hosmer	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
24 Lipscomb	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
27 Reinecke	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
20 Smith	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
3 Evans	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 McVicker	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Rogers	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
3 Giaimo	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
6 Grabowski	-	?	N	Y	N	Y
4 Irwin	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
5 Monagan	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 St. Onge	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Fascell	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
9 Fuqua	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Gibbons	N	Y	N	Y	Y	N
7 Haley	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
5 Herlong	-	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Matthews	N	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Pepper	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
6 Rogers	N	Y	N	N	Y	N
1 Sikes	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
12 Cramer	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
11 Gurney	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N

	53	54	55	56	57	58
GEORGIA
7 Davis	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
6 Flynt	N	Y	✓	X	?	?
1 Hagan	N	Y	N	N	Y	Y
9 Landrum	N	Y	N	Y	?	?
4 Mackay	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
2 O'Neal	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Stephens	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
8 Tuten	N	Y	N	N	N	Y
5 Weltner	N	Y	?	?	?	?
3 Callaway	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
AL Mink	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
IDAHO
1 White	-	‡	X	✓	X	‡
2 Hansen	N	Y	Y	N	✓	✓
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	?	?	N	Y	N	Y
24 Price	-	‡	N	Y	X	‡
19 Schisler	N	‡	N	Y	N	Y
23 Shipley	?	?	Y	N	N	Y
16 Anderson	N	Y	Y	N	?	‡
17 Arends	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Erlenborn	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
20 Findley	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
12 McClory	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
18 Michel	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
15 Reid	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
22 Springer	N	Y	‡	✓	‡	‡
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Dawson	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
5 Kluczynski	?	?	N	Y	N	Y
3 Murphy	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
2 O'Hara	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Ronan	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
8 Rostenkowski	N	‡	N	Y	N	Y
9 Yates	-	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
10 Collier	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Derwinski	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	N
13 Rumsfeld	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	53	54	55	56	57	58
INDIANA
3 Brademas	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
8 Denton	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
9 Hamilton	N	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Jacobs	N	Y	N	Y	Y	N
1 Madden	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
5 Roush	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
4 Adair	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Bray	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Halleck	?	?	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Harvey	-	‡	✓	X	‡	‡
6 Roudebush	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
IOWA
4 Bandstra	N	Y	X	✓	N	Y
2 Culver	?	?	N	Y	N	Y
6 Greigg	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
7 Hansen	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
1 Schmidhauser	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
5 Smith	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
3 Gross	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
KANSAS
1 Dole	-	‡	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Ellsworth	✓	‡	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Shriver	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Mize	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	Y	Y	✓	X	?	?
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	N	Y	‡	X	N	Y
3 Farnsley	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 Natcher	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 53 through 58.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 104, 105, 109, 110, 112, 113.)

	53	54	55	56	57	58
7 Perkins	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Stubblefield	N	Y	?	?	N	Y
6 Watts	N	?	X	✓	N	Y
5 Carter	Y	Y	✓	X	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	N	‡	N	Y	N	Y
1 Hebert	?	?	✓	✓	✓	?
8 Long	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Morrison	?	Y	N	Y	N	Y
5 Passman	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Thompson	?	Y	Y	N	N	Y
4 Waggonner	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Willis	N	Y	?	X	?	?
MAINE
2 Hathaway	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Tupper	?	?	N	Y	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	?	?	N	Y	N	Y
7 Friedel	-	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Garmatz	-	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Long	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Machen	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
AL Sickles	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
6 Mathias	?	?	?	?	?	?
1 Morton	‡	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	N	‡	N	Y	N	Y
11 Burke	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
4 Donohue	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
7 Macdonald	N	Y	X	✓	Y	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
3 Philbin	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
6 Bates	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Conte	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
12 Keith	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Martin	X	?	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Morse	-	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
19 Farnum	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
7 Mackie	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
12 O'Hara	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
3 Todd	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 Vivian	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
18 Broomfield	N	Y	N	Y	Y	N
10 Cederberg	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Chamberlain	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Ford	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
9 Griffin	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Harvey	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
4 Hutchinson	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	-	Y	N	Y	N	Y
13 Diggs	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
16 Dingell	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
15 Ford	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
17 Griffiths	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
14 Nedzi	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
5 Fraser	?	?	N	Y	N	Y
4 Karth	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
6 Olson	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
7 Langen	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 MacGregor	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Nelsen	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Quie	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Colmer	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Whitten	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
3 Williams	?	?	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Walker	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	N	‡	N	Y	N	Y
6 Hull	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Hungate	N	Y	?	?	N	Y
8 Ichord	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Jones	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
1 Karsten	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
4 Randall	N	Y	Y	N	X	‡
3 Sullivan	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 Curtis	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
7 Hall	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
MONTANA
1 Olsen	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 Battin	-	‡	Y	N	Y	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
2 Cunningham	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Martin	?	?	Y	N	Y	Y
NEVADA
AL Baring	-	‡	Y	N	Y	Y
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Cleveland	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
13 Gallagher	-	‡	N	Y	X	Y
9 Helstoski	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
3 Howard	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
8 Joelson	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
12 Krebs	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
11 Minish	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 McGrath	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
15 Patten	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
10 Rodino	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
4 Thompson	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Cahill	N	Y	N	Y	Y	N
6 Dwyer	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Widnall	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	N	Y	N	N	N	Y
AL Walker	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
41 Dulski	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
34 Hanley	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
39 McCarthy	N	Y	N	Y	Y	N
29 O'Brien	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
25 Ottinger	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Pike	N	Y	N	Y	Y	N
28 Resnick	-	‡	X	✓	✓	‡
35 Stratton	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
3 Wolff	N	Y	N	Y	Y	N
37 Conable	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
38 Goodell	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
2 Grover	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
36 Horton	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
30 King	X	?	Y	N	Y	Y
31 McEwen	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
32 Pirnie	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
26 Reid	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
33 Robison	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
40 Smith	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Wydler	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
New York City
7 Addabbo	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
23 Bingham	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
15 Carey	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
10 Celler	?	?	N	Y	N	Y
9 Delaney	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
19 Farbstein	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
22 Gilbert	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
12 Kelly	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
11 Keogh	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
13 Multer	N	‡	N	Y	N	Y
16 Murphy	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
18 Powell	N	Y	X	✓	N	Y
14 Rooney	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
8 Rosenthal	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
20 Ryan	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
21 Scheuer	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
24 Fino	N	Y	Y	N	✓	‡
6 Halpern	?	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	-	‡	N	Y	✓	‡
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	?	?	✓	X	?	?
4 Cooley	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 Fountain	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Henderson	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
6 Kornegay	-	‡	Y	N	N	Y
7 Lennon	N	Y	✓	X	✓	‡
5 Scott	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
11 Taylor	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Whitener	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Jonas	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Andrews	-	‡	Y	N	Y	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	N	Y	N	Y	X	?
20 Feighan	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Gilligan	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
18 Hays	N	Y	N	Y	X	‡
19 Kirwan	N	Y	N	Y	N	?
3 Love	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
10 Moeller	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
15 Secrest	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
AL Sweeney	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
21 Vanik	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
17 Ashbrook	Y	Y	✓	X	‡	X
14 Ayres	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
8 Betts	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
22 Bolton	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Bow	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	N
7 Brown	?	?	✓	X	✓	✓
2 Clancy	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
12 Devine	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
6 Harsha	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Latta	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 McCulloch	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
23 Minshall	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
13 Mosher	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
11 Stanton	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 Edmondson	?	Y	N	Y	N	Y
5 Jarman	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Johnson	N	Y	N	N	N	Y
4 Steed	N	Y	N	Y	-	‡
1 Belcher	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
OREGON
4 Duncan	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
3 Green	N	Y	X	✓	N	Y
2 Ullman	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Wyatt	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
19 Craley	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
21 Dent	N	‡	N	Y	N	Y
11 Flood	?	‡	N	Y	N	Y
20 Holland	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
14 Moorhead	N	Y	X	✓	N	Y
26 Morgan	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
6 Rhodes	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
15 Rooney	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
24 Vigorito	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
18 Corbett	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
8 Curtin	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Dague	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
27 Fulton	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
23 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 McDade	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Saylor	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	N
17 Schneebeli	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Watkins	✓	?	Y	N	Y	N
12 Whalley	✓	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	?	?	N	Y	N	Y
3 Byrne	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
5 Green	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 Nix	-	‡	X	Y	N	Y
4 Toll	-	‡	X	✓	✓	‡
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	-	‡	N	Y	-	‡
1 St. Germain	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Dorn	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
5 Gettys	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
6 McMillan	?	?	Y	N	N	Y
1 Rivers	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	N	Y	✓	X	✓	?
1 Reifel	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
8 Everett	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
4 Evins	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
5 Fulton	N	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
9 Grider	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
7 Murray	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
3 Brock	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	N
2 Duncan	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Quillen	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 Brooks	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
17 Burleson	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
5 Cabell	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
22 Casey	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
15 De la Garza	N	Y	N	N	N	Y
7 Dowdy	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
21 Fisher	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
20 Gonzalez	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
19 Mahon	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Patman	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
10 Pickle	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
11 Poage	N	Y	N	N	N	Y
AL Pool	N	Y	✓	X	?	?
13 Purcell	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
4 Roberts	-	‡	N	N	N	Y
18 Rogers	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Teague	?	?	N	N	Y	Y
8 Thomas	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
9 Thompson	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
16 White	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
12 Wright	N	Y	-	‡	N	Y
14 Young	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
UTAH
2 King	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Burton	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	-	‡	Y	Y	‡	‡
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Downing	Y	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Hardy	N	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Jennings	Y	Y	Y	N	N	Y
7 Marsh	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Satterfield	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Smith	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Tuck	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Broyhill	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Poff	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	-	‡	N	Y	N	Y
5 Foley	?	?	N	Y	N	Y
3 Hansen	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
6 Hicks	-	‡	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Meeds	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
4 May	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Pelly	X	?	Y	N	Y	N
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	N	Y	N	Y
5 Kee	Y	Y	N	Y	N	Y
3 Slack	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
2 Staggers	Y	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Moore	Y	N	Y	N	Y	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
6 Race	N	Y	Y	N	N	Y
5 Reuss	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Stalbaum	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
4 Zablocki	N	Y	N	Y	N	Y
8 Byrnes	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Laird	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
10 O'Konski	N	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Thomson	?	?	Y	N	Y	Y
9 Davis	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	-	‡	X	‡	X	‡

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 59 through 61.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 116, 117, 119.)

House Approves Funds for State, Justice, Commerce Departments; Expands Federal Coal Mine Safety Law; Votes Excise Tax Reduction

59. HR 8639. Passage of the bill, appropriating $2,085,689,900 for the State, Justice and Commerce Departments, the Judiciary, and related agencies in fiscal 1966. Passed 322-60: R 97-19; D 225-41 (ND 174-1; SD 51-40), June 1, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 217)

60. HR 3584. Passage of the bill to extend the mandatory federal inspection and safety requirements of the 1952 Federal Coal Mine Safety Act to previously exempt small coal mines (mines regularly employing 14 or fewer persons underground). Passed 336-42: R 102-16; D 234-26 (ND 169-3; SD 65-23), June 1, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 388)

61. HR 8371. Excise Tax Reduction Act. Passage of the bill to reduce excise taxes by $4.8 billion between July 1, 1965, and Jan. 1, 1969, (including $3.4 billion in fiscal 1966), resulting in the elimination of all federal excise taxes by 1969 except user, regulatory and sumptuary levies; to transfer from general tax revenues to the Highway Trust Fund $70 million in existing highway user charges; and to make permanent sumptuary taxes and a 5 percent tax on commercial air travel, which were temporary under existing law. Passed 401-6: R 129-2; D 272-4 (ND 183-2; SD 89-2), June 2, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 835)

	59	60	61
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	?	?	?
8 Jones	Y	Y	Y
5 Selden	N	N	Y
4 Andrews	N	Y	Y
6 Buchanan	N	N	Y
2 Dickinson	?	?	Y
1 Edwards	N	N	Y
7 Martin	N	N	Y
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	Y	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	Y	Y
2 Udall	Y	Y	Y
1 Rhodes	N	N	Y
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	N	N	Y
4 Harris	N	Y	Y
2 Mills	N	Y	Y
3 Trimble	Y	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	Y	Y
7 Cohelan	Y	Y	Y
33 Dyal	Y	Y	Y
9 Edwards	‡	‡	Y
18 Hagen	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanna	Y	Y	Y
2 Johnson	Y	Y	Y
4 Leggett	Y	Y	Y
15 McFall	Y	Y	Y
8 Miller	‡	‡	Y
3 Moss	Y	Y	Y
16 Sisk	Y	Y	Y
38 Tunney	‡	‡	Y
37 Van Deerlin	Y	Y	Y
14 Baldwin	Y	Y	N
1 Clausen	Y	‡	Y
10 Gubser	Y	Y	Y
6 Mailliard	Y	Y	Y
12 Talcott	Y	Y	Y
13 Teague	Y	Y	Y
35 Utt	‡	‡	‡
36 Wilson	Y	Y	Y
11 Younger	N	Y	Y
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	Y	Y	Y
25 Cameron	Y	Y	Y
22 Corman	Y	Y	Y
21 Hawkins	Y	Y	Y
19 Holifield	Y	Y	Y
17 King	Y	Y	Y
26 Roosevelt	Y	Y	Y
30 Roybal	Y	Y	Y
31 Wilson	‡	‡	Y
28 Bell	Y	N	Y
23 Clawson	Y	Y	Y
32 Hosmer	Y	Y	Y
24 Lipscomb	Y	Y	Y
27 Reinecke	Y	Y	Y
20 Smith	N	Y	Y
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	N	Y
3 Evans	‡	‡	‡
2 McVicker	Y	Y	Y
1 Rogers	Y	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	Y	Y
3 Giaimo	Y	Y	Y
6 Grabowski	Y	Y	Y
4 Irwin	Y	Y	Y
5 Monagan	Y	Y	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	Y	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	Y	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	N	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	Y	Y
9 Fuqua	N	Y	Y
10 Gibbons	Y	Y	Y
7 Haley	N	Y	Y
5 Herlong	N	Y	Y
8 Matthews	N	Y	Y
3 Pepper	Y	Y	Y
6 Rogers	Y	Y	Y
1 Sikes	N	Y	Y
12 Cramer	‡	‡	‡
11 Gurney	N	Y	Y
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	N	Y
6 Flynt	N	Y	Y
1 Hagan	N	N	Y
9 Landrum	?	?	Y
4 Mackay	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Neal	N	N	Y
10 Stephens	Y	N	Y
8 Tuten	N	Y	Y
5 Weltner	Y	Y	Y
3 Callaway	N	N	Y
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	Y	Y
AL Mink	Y	Y	Y
IDAHO
1 White	Y	Y	Y
2 Hansen	Y	Y	Y
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	Y	Y	Y
24 Price	Y	Y	Y
19 Schisler	Y	Y	Y
23 Shipley	Y	Y	Y
16 Anderson	Y	Y	Y
17 Arends	Y	‡	Y
14 Erlenborn	Y	Y	Y
20 Findley	Y	Y	Y
12 McClory	‡	‡	Y
18 Michel	‡	‡	‡
15 Reid	Y	Y	Y
22 Springer	Y	Y	Y
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	Y	Y
1 Dawson	Y	Y	Y
5 Kluczynski	Y	Y	Y
3 Murphy	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	Y	Y
6 Ronan	Y	Y	Y
8 Rostenkowski	Y	Y	Y
9 Yates	Y	Y	Y
10 Collier	‡	‡	Y
4 Derwinski	N	Y	Y
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	59	60	61
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	Y	Y
8 Denton	Y	Y	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	Y	Y
11 Jacobs	Y	Y	Y
1 Madden	Y	Y	Y
5 Roush	Y	Y	Y
4 Adair	?	?	Y
7 Bray	N	Y	Y
2 Halleck	Y	Y	Y
10 Harvey	‡	‡	‡
6 Roudebush	Y	Y	Y
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	N	Y
2 Culver	Y	Y	Y
6 Greigg	Y	Y	Y
7 Hansen	Y	Y	Y
1 Schmidhauser	Y	Y	Y
5 Smith	Y	Y	Y
3 Gross	N	Y	Y
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	Y	Y
3 Ellsworth	Y	N	Y
4 Shriver	Y	Y	Y
2 Mize	Y	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	Y	Y	Y
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	Y	Y
3 Farnsley	Y	Y	Y
2 Natcher	Y	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 59 through 61.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 116, 117, 119.)

	59	60	61
7 Perkins	Y	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y	Y
5 Carter	Y	N	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	‡	Y
1 Hebert	?	?	?
8 Long	N	‡	Y
6 Morrison	Y	Y	Y
5 Passman	‡	‡	‡
7 Thompson	?	Y	Y
4 Waggonner	N	Y	Y
3 Willis	?	Y	?
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	Y	Y
1 Tupper	Y	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	?	Y
7 Friedel	Y	‡	Y
3 Garmatz	Y	‡	Y
2 Long	Y	Y	Y
5 Machen	Y	Y	Y
AL Sickles	Y	Y	Y
6 Mathias	?	?	?
1 Morton	‡	‡	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	‡	‡	Y
11 Burke	Y	Y	Y
4 Donohue	Y	Y	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	Y	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	‡	Y	Y
3 Philbin	Y	Y	Y
6 Bates	Y	Y	Y
1 Conte	Y	Y	Y
12 Keith	Y	Y	Y
10 Martin	Y	Y	Y
5 Morse	Y	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	Y	Y
19 Farnum	Y	Y	Y
7 Mackie	Y	Y	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y
3 Todd	Y	Y	Y
2 Vivian	Y	Y	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	Y	Y
10 Cederberg	Y	Y	Y
6 Chamberlain	Y	Y	Y
5 Ford	Y	Y	Y
9 Griffin	Y	Y	N
8 Harvey	Y	Y	Y
4 Hutchinson	?	?	Y
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	Y	Y	Y
13 Diggs	Y	‡	Y
16 Dingell	Y	Y	Y
15 Ford	Y	Y	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	Y	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	Y	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	Y	Y	Y
5 Fraser	Y	Y	Y
4 Karth	‡	‡	Y
6 Olson	Y	Y	Y
7 Langen	Y	Y	Y
3 MacGregor	Y	Y	Y
2 Nelsen	?	?	Y
1 Quie	Y	Y	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	N	N	Y
5 Colmer	N	N	?
2 Whitten	N	N	Y
3 Williams	N	N	Y
4 Walker	N	N	Y
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	Y	Y	Y
6 Hull	Y	Y	Y
9 Hungate	?	?	Y
8 Ichord	Y	Y	Y
10 Jones	Y	Y	N
1 Karsten	Y	Y	Y
4 Randall	Y	Y	Y
3 Sullivan	Y	Y	Y
2 Curtis	Y	Y	Y
7 Hall	-	‡	Y
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	Y	Y
2 Battin	Y	Y	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	‡	‡	‡
3 Martin	Y	N	Y
NEVADA
AL Baring	N	Y	Y
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	Y	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	Y	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	Y	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	Y	Y
3 Howard	Y	Y	Y
8 Joelson	Y	Y	N
12 Krebs	Y	Y	Y
11 Minish	Y	Y	Y
2 McGrath	Y	Y	Y
15 Patten	Y	Y	Y
10 Rodino	Y	Y	Y
4 Thompson	Y	Y	Y
1 Cahill	Y	Y	Y
6 Dwyer	Y	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	‡	N	Y
7 Widnall	Y	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	N	Y
AL Walker	Y	Y	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	Y	Y
41 Dulski	‡	‡	Y
34 Hanley	Y	Y	Y
39 McCarthy	Y	Y	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	Y	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	Y	Y
1 Pike	Y	Y	Y
28 Resnick	‡	‡	‡
35 Stratton	Y	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	Y	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	Y
37 Conable	Y	Y	Y
38 Goodell	Y	N	Y
2 Grover	Y	Y	Y
36 Horton	Y	Y	Y
30 King	Y	Y	Y
31 McEwen	Y	N	Y
32 Pirnie	Y	Y	Y
26 Reid	Y	Y	Y
33 Robison	‡	‡	Y
40 Smith	‡	‡	Y
4 Wydler	Y	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	Y	Y
23 Bingham	Y	Y	Y
15 Carey	‡	‡	Y
10 Celler	Y	?	Y
9 Delaney	Y	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	Y	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	Y	Y
12 Kelly	Y	Y	Y
11 Keogh	‡	‡	‡
13 Multer	Y	Y	Y
16 Murphy	Y	Y	Y
18 Powell	?	?	?
14 Rooney	Y	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	Y	Y
20 Ryan	Y	Y	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	Y	Y
24 Fino	Y	Y	Y
6 Halpern	‡	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	‡	?	‡
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	?	?	?
4 Cooley	Y	Y	Y
2 Fountain	N	Y	Y
3 Henderson	N	N	Y
6 Kornegay	N	Y	?
7 Lennon	N	Y	Y
5 Scott	N	N	Y
11 Taylor	?	?	Y
10 Whitener	N	Y	Y
9 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y
8 Jonas	Y	N	Y
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	Y	Y
1 Andrews	Y	Y	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	Y	Y
20 Feighan	Y	Y	Y
1 Gilligan	Y	Y	Y
18 Hays	Y	Y	Y
19 Kirwan	Y	Y	?
3 Love	Y	Y	Y
10 Moeller	Y	Y	Y
15 Secrest	Y	Y	Y
AL Sweeney	Y	Y	Y
21 Vanik	Y	Y	Y
17 Ashbrook	N	Y	Y
14 Ayres	‡	Y	Y
8 Betts	Y	Y	Y
22 Bolton	Y	Y	Y
16 Bow	Y	Y	‡
7 Brown	?	?	?
2 Clancy	Y	Y	Y
12 Devine	N	Y	Y
6 Harsha	N	Y	Y
5 Latta	N	Y	Y
4 McCulloch	Y	Y	Y
23 Minshall	Y	Y	Y
13 Mosher	Y	Y	Y
11 Stanton	Y	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	Y	Y
5 Jarman	Y	Y	Y
6 Johnson	Y	Y	Y
4 Steed	Y	Y	Y
1 Belcher	Y	Y	Y
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	Y	Y
3 Green	Y	Y	Y
2 Ullman	Y	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	Y	Y
19 Craley	Y	Y	‡
21 Dent	Y	Y	Y
11 Flood	Y	Y	Y
20 Holland	‡	Y	‡
14 Moorhead	Y	Y	Y
26 Morgan	Y	Y	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y
15 Rooney	Y	Y	Y
24 Vigorito	Y	Y	Y
18 Corbett	‡	Y	Y
8 Curtin	Y	Y	Y
9 Dague	Y	Y	Y
27 Fulton	Y	Y	Y
23 Johnson	Y	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	Y	Y	Y
10 McDade	‡	‡	Y
22 Saylor	Y	Y	Y
17 Schneebeli	Y	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	Y	Y	Y
7 Watkins	Y	Y	Y
12 Whalley	Y	Y	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	Y
3 Byrne	Y	Y	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	Y
2 Nix	Y	‡	Y
4 Toll	‡	‡	‡
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	‡	Y	Y
1 St. Germain	‡	‡	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	N	N	Y
3 Dorn	N	N	Y
5 Gettys	N	N	Y
6 McMillan	N	N	Y
1 Rivers	N	N	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	?	?	Y
1 Reifel	Y	Y	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	Y	Y
8 Everett	N	N	Y
4 Evins	Y	?	Y
5 Fulton	Y	Y	Y
9 Grider	Y	Y	Y
7 Murray	N	Y	Y
3 Brock	Y	N	Y
2 Duncan	N	N	Y
1 Quillen	N	Y	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	Y	Y
2 Brooks	Y	Y	Y
17 Burleson	Y	Y	Y
5 Cabell	Y	Y	Y
22 Casey	Y	Y	Y
15 De la Garza	Y	Y	Y
7 Dowdy	N	Y	Y
21 Fisher	‡	‡	‡
20 Gonzalez	Y	Y	Y
19 Mahon	Y	Y	Y
1 Patman	Y	Y	Y
10 Pickle	Y	Y	Y
11 Poage	Y	Y	Y
AL Pool	N	Y	Y
13 Purcell	Y	‡	Y
4 Roberts	Y	Y	Y
18 Rogers	N	Y	Y
6 Teague	Y	Y	?
8 Thomas	Y	?	Y
9 Thompson	Y	Y	Y
16 White	Y	Y	Y
12 Wright	Y	Y	Y
14 Young	Y	Y	Y
UTAH
2 King	Y	Y	Y
1 Burton	Y	Y	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	N	Y	Y
1 Downing	Y	Y	Y
2 Hardy	Y	Y	Y
9 Jennings	Y	N	Y
7 Marsh	Y	N	N
3 Satterfield	N	N	Y
8 Smith	N	N	N
5 Tuck	N	N	Y
10 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y
6 Poff	Y	Y	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	Y	Y
5 Foley	Y	Y	Y
3 Hansen	Y	Y	Y
6 Hicks	Y	Y	Y
2 Meeds	Y	Y	Y
4 May	Y	Y	Y
1 Pelly	Y	Y	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	Y
5 Kee	Y	Y	Y
3 Slack	Y	Y	Y
2 Staggers	Y	Y	Y
1 Moore	Y	Y	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	Y	Y
6 Race	Y	Y	Y
5 Reuss	Y	Y	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	Y	Y	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	Y	Y
7 Laird	Y	Y	Y
10 O'Konski	Y	Y	Y
3 Thomson	Y	Y	Y
9 Davis	Y	Y	Y
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	Y	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 62 through 65.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 121, 123, 126, 127.)

House Votes Bill to Allow McKee as FAA Head; Passes Retirement And Legislative Appropriations Bills; Extends Exports Control Act

62. HR 7777. Passage of the bill to authorize the President to appoint Gen. William F. McKee (U.S. Air Force, ret.) as administrator of the Federal Aviation Agency without the appointment affecting McKee's status as a retired officer in the Air Force, including his rights to retirement pay and other benefits. Passed 228-137: R 26-96; D 202-41 (ND 138-26; SD 64-15), June 3, 1965. A "yea" vote was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 1430)

63. HR 3157. Passage of the bill to amend the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937 to permit the wife of a railroad employee to receive both her retirement annuity as a spouse and Social Security and railroad retirement benefits earned in her own right without reduction in her annuity. Passed 323-0: R 104-0; D 219-0 (ND 143-0; SD 76-0), June 7, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 340)

64. HR 8775. Legislative appropriations bill for fiscal 1966, appropriating $150,589,107 to the House of Representatives and related offices. Gross (R Iowa) motion to recommit the bill to the Appropriations Committee with instructions to delete $35,000 for Rayburn House Office Building elevator operators. Rejected 149-244: R 128-1; D 21-243 (ND 13-164; SD 8-79), June 8, 1965. The President did not take a position on the amendment. (See story p. 221)

65. HR 7105. Passage of the bill to amend the Export Control Act and to extend the Act for four years, from June 30, 1965, to June 30, 1969. Passed 388-1: R 124-1; D 264-0; (ND 178-0; SD 86-0), June 8, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 500)

	62	63	64	65
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	?	?	?	?
8 Jones	Y	?	N	Y
5 Selden	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Andrews	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Buchanan	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Dickinson	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Edwards	N	Y	Y	‡
7 Martin	N	?	Y	Y
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	Y	N	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Udall	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Rhodes	N	Y	Y	Y
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Harris	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Mills	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Trimble	Y	Y	N	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Cohelan	Y	Y	N	Y
33 Dyal	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Edwards	N	‡	N	Y
18 Hagen	Y	Y	N	Y
34 Hanna	N	Y	N	Y
2 Johnson	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Leggett	Y	Y	N	‡
15 McFall	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Miller	Y	‡	N	Y
3 Moss	Y	Y	N	Y
16 Sisk	Y	Y	N	Y
38 Tunney	Y	Y	N	Y
37 Van Deerlin	Y	Y	N	Y
14 Baldwin	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Clausen	N	‡	Y	Y
10 Gubser	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Mailliard	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Talcott	N	‡	Y	Y
13 Teague	Y	Y	Y	Y
35 Utt	N	Y	Y	Y
36 Wilson	N	Y	Y	Y
11 Younger	N	Y	Y	Y
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	Y	‡	N	Y
25 Cameron	‡	‡	X	‡
22 Corman	Y	Y	N	Y
21 Hawkins	Y	Y	-	Y
19 Holifield	Y	‡	N	Y
17 King	Y	Y	N	Y
26 Roosevelt	N	‡	N	Y
30 Roybal	Y	Y	N	Y
31 Wilson	N	Y	N	‡
28 Bell	?	?	✓	?
23 Clawson	Y	‡	✓	‡
32 Hosmer	Y	Y	Y	Y
24 Lipscomb	N	Y	Y	Y
27 Reinecke	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Smith	Y	‡	Y	Y
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	?	X	Y
3 Evans	‡	Y	N	Y
2 McVicker	‡	‡	?	?
1 Rogers	Y	Y	N	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Giaimo	Y	‡	N	Y
6 Grabowski	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Irwin	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Monagan	N	‡	N	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	‡	N	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	‡	N	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Fuqua	‡	Y	N	Y
10 Gibbons	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Haley	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Herlong	‡	Y	Y	Y
8 Matthews	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Pepper	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Rogers	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Sikes	‡	Y	N	Y
12 Cramer	X	‡	Y	Y
11 Gurney	N	Y	Y	Y
GEORGIA
7 Davis	N	Y	N	Y
6 Flynt	N	?	?	?
1 Hagan	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Landrum	Y	?	?	?
4 Mackay	Y	‡	-	‡
2 O'Neal	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Stephens	N	Y	‡	‡
8 Tuten	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Weltner	N	?	N	Y
3 Callaway	Y	‡	✓	‡
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	‡	-	‡
AL Mink	Y	Y	N	Y
IDAHO
1 White	Y	Y	-	Y
2 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	Y
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	Y	?	N	Y
24 Price	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Schisler	N	Y	N	Y
23 Shipley	Y	?	N	Y
16 Anderson	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Arends	‡	‡	Y	Y
14 Erlenborn	N	Y	Y	Y
20 Findley	N	?	Y	Y
12 McClory	N	Y	Y	Y
18 Michel	?	‡	Y	‡
15 Reid	N	Y	Y	Y
22 Springer	N	‡	Y	Y
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	‡	Y	N	Y
1 Dawson	?	Y	N	Y
5 Kluczynski	?	Y	N	Y
3 Murphy	‡	Y	N	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Pucinski	‡	Y	N	Y
6 Ronan	‡	Y	N	Y
8 Rostenkowski	✓	Y	N	Y
9 Yates	X	Y	N	Y
10 Collier	N	Y	Y	‡
4 Derwinski	N	‡	Y	Y
13 Rumsfeld	N	Y	Y	Y
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Denton	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Hamilton	N	Y	N	Y
11 Jacobs	Y	‡	-	‡
1 Madden	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Roush	Y	‡	N	Y
4 Adair	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Bray	N	Y	Y	‡
2 Halleck	?	?	?	?
10 Harvey	-	‡	✓	‡
6 Roudebush	N	Y	Y	Y
IOWA
4 Bandstra	‡	Y	N	Y
2 Culver	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Greigg	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Hansen	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Schmidhauser	N	Y	N	Y
5 Smith	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Gross	N	Y	Y	Y
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Ellsworth	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Shriver	?	Y	Y	Y
2 Mize	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	N	Y	Y	Y
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Farnsley	Y	‡	N	Y
2 Natcher	Y	Y	N	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 62 through 65.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 121, 123, 126, 127.)

	62	63	64	65
7 Perkins	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Watts	?	Y	N	Y
5 Carter	N	Y	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Hebert	✓	?	X	?
8 Long	X	‡	N	Y
6 Morrison	Y	?	N	Y
5 Passman	X	‡	N	Y
7 Thompson	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Waggonner	N	Y	N	Y
3 Willis	?	?	?	?
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Tupper	Y	Y	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Friedel	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Garmatz	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Long	Y	?	N	Y
5 Machen	Y	Y	N	Y
AL Sickles	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Mathias	?	Y	Y	Y
1 Morton	N	‡	✓	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Burke	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Donohue	?	?	N	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	?	X	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Philbin	Y	‡	N	Y
6 Bates	‡	Y	Y	Y
1 Conte	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Keith	N	Y	Y	Y
10 Martin	N	?	Y	Y
5 Morse	N	‡	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	?	Y	N	Y
19 Farnum	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Mackie	N	‡	Y	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Todd	N	?	Y	Y
2 Vivian	Y	Y	N	Y
18 Broomfield	N	Y	Y	Y
10 Cederberg	Y	‡	✓	‡
6 Chamberlain	X	Y	Y	Y
5 Ford	N	‡	Y	Y
9 Griffin	N	?	Y	Y
8 Harvey	Y	?	✓	?
4 Hutchinson	N	Y	Y	Y
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	N	‡	N	Y
13 Diggs	‡	Y	N	Y
16 Dingell	Y	Y	N	Y
15 Ford	Y	Y	N	Y
17 Griffiths	N	Y	N	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	Y	N	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Fraser	Y	?	Y	Y
4 Karth	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Olson	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Langen	N	Y	Y	Y
3 MacGregor	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Nelsen	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Quie	N	Y	Y	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	N	Y	N	Y
5 Colmer	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Whitten	N	?	N	Y
3 Williams	N	?	Y	Y
4 Walker	N	Y	Y	Y
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Hull	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Hungate	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Ichord	N	Y	N	Y
10 Jones	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Karsten	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Randall	Y	‡	N	Y
3 Sullivan	‡	Y	N	Y
2 Curtis	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Hall	N	Y	Y	Y
MONTANA
1 Olsen	N	Y	N	Y
2 Battin	N	Y	Y	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Cunningham	-	Y	Y	Y
3 Martin	N	Y	Y	Y
NEVADA
AL Baring	N	‡	?	?
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Cleveland	N	Y	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	Y	N	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	‡	X	‡
3 Howard	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Joelson	Y	?	N	Y
12 Krebs	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Minish	Y	‡	N	Y
2 McGrath	Y	Y	N	Y
15 Patten	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Rodino	Y	‡	N	Y
4 Thompson	Y	‡	N	Y
1 Cahill	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Dwyer	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	N	‡	Y	Y
7 Widnall	N	Y	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	‡	Y	N	Y
AL Walker	Y	Y	N	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	Y	N	Y
41 Dulski	Y	Y	N	Y
34 Hanley	Y	Y	N	Y
39 McCarthy	N	Y	Y	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	Y	N	Y
25 Ottinger	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Pike	N	Y	N	Y
28 Resnick	‡	‡	N	Y
35 Stratton	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	‡	N	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	N	Y
37 Conable	Y	‡	Y	Y
38 Goodell	N	Y	Y	N
2 Grover	N	Y	Y	Y
36 Horton	Y	Y	Y	Y
30 King	N	Y	Y	Y
31 McEwen	X	‡	Y	Y
32 Pirnie	Y	‡	Y	Y
26 Reid	N	Y	Y	Y
33 Robison	N	Y	Y	Y
40 Smith	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Wydler	N	Y	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	Y	N	Y
23 Bingham	Y	‡	N	Y
15 Carey	Y	‡	N	Y
10 Celler	?	?	X	Y
9 Delaney	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	Y	N	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	Y	N	Y
12 Kelly	Y	?	N	Y
11 Keogh	✓	Y	N	Y
13 Multer	‡	Y	N	Y
16 Murphy	Y	?	N	Y
18 Powell	?	?	?	?
14 Rooney	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Rosenthal	N	Y	N	Y
20 Ryan	N	Y	N	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	Y	N	Y
24 Fino	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Halpern	Y	‡	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	-	‡	✓	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	?	?	?	?
4 Cooley	N	?	N	Y
2 Fountain	N	Y	N	Y
3 Henderson	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Kornegay	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Lennon	N	Y	N	Y
5 Scott	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Taylor	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Whitener	N	Y	N	Y
9 Broyhill	N	Y	Y	Y
8 Jonas	N	Y	Y	Y
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Andrews	N	Y	Y	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	Y	N	Y
20 Feighan	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Gilligan	‡	Y	N	Y
18 Hays	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Kirwan	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Love	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Moeller	Y	Y	N	Y
15 Secrest	Y	Y	N	Y
AL Sweeney	Y	Y	N	Y
21 Vanik	Y	Y	N	Y
17 Ashbrook	N	Y	Y	‡
14 Ayres	Y	‡	Y	Y
8 Betts	N	Y	Y	Y
22 Bolton	N	Y	Y	Y
16 Bow	‡	‡	✓	‡
7 Brown	?	?	✓	?
2 Clancy	N	Y	Y	Y
12 Devine	N	Y	Y	Y
6 Harsha	N	Y	Y	Y
5 Latta	N	Y	Y	Y
4 McCulloch	N	Y	Y	Y
23 Minshall	?	Y	Y	Y
13 Mosher	N	Y	Y	Y
11 Stanton	N	Y	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Jarman	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Johnson	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Steed	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Belcher	N	Y	Y	Y
OREGON
4 Duncan	✓	Y	N	?
3 Green	N	‡	?	‡
2 Ullman	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Wyatt	N	Y	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Craley	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Dent	?	Y	N	Y
11 Flood	Y	Y	N	Y
20 Holland	?	‡	-	‡
14 Moorhead	Y	Y	N	Y
26 Morgan	Y	‡	N	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	‡	N	Y
15 Rooney	Y	Y	N	Y
24 Vigorito	N	Y	Y	Y
18 Corbett	N	Y	Y	Y
8 Curtin	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Dague	N	Y	Y	Y
27 Fulton	N	Y	Y	Y
23 Johnson	N	Y	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	N	Y	Y	Y
10 McDade	N	Y	Y	Y
22 Saylor	N	Y	Y	Y
17 Schneebeli	N	Y	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	N	Y	Y	Y
7 Watkins	N	Y	Y	Y
12 Whalley	X	Y	Y	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Byrne	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Nix	Y	‡	N	Y
4 Toll	‡	‡	X	‡
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	‡	Y	X	‡
1 St. Germain	‡	‡	N	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Dorn	Y	Y	X	‡
5 Gettys	Y	Y	N	Y
6 McMillan	?	Y	N	Y
1 Rivers	✓	Y	N	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Reifel	Y	Y	N	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	?	N	Y
8 Everett	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Evins	Y	Y	X	?
5 Fulton	✓	Y	N	Y
9 Grider	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Murray	?	Y	N	Y
3 Brock	N	‡	Y	Y
2 Duncan	N	Y	Y	Y
1 Quillen	N	‡	Y	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Brooks	Y	Y	N	Y
17 Burleson	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Cabell	Y	Y	N	‡
22 Casey	✓	‡	N	Y
15 De la Garza	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Dowdy	Y	Y	N	Y
21 Fisher	‡	Y	N	Y
20 Gonzalez	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Mahon	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Patman	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Pickle	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Poage	Y	Y	N	Y
AL Pool	Y	Y	N	Y
13 Purcell	‡	‡	?	‡
4 Roberts	-	Y	N	Y
18 Rogers	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Teague	?	?	N	Y
8 Thomas	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Thompson	Y	Y	N	Y
16 White	Y	Y	N	Y
12 Wright	?	‡	N	Y
14 Young	?	Y	N	Y
UTAH
2 King	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Burton	N	Y	Y	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	Y	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	‡	N	Y
1 Downing	N	Y	-	‡
2 Hardy	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Jennings	Y	‡	N	Y
7 Marsh	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Satterfield	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Smith	Y	?	?	?
5 Tuck	N	Y	N	Y
10 Broyhill	N	‡	Y	Y
6 Poff	N	Y	Y	‡
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Foley	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Hansen	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Hicks	N	Y	Y	Y
2 Meeds	Y	Y	N	Y
4 May	N	‡	Y	Y
1 Pelly	N	?	Y	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Kee	Y	‡	N	Y
3 Slack	N	?	N	Y
2 Staggers	Y	Y	N	?
1 Moore	N	Y	Y	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	N	Y	N	Y
6 Race	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Reuss	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Stalbaum	N	Y	N	Y
4 Zablocki	Y	‡	N	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Laird	-	Y	Y	Y
10 O'Konski	N	Y	Y	Y
3 Thomson	N	Y	Y	Y
9 Davis	N	Y	Y	Y
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	Y	Y	N	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 66 through 69.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 129, 130, 131, 132.)

House Passes Bill to Increase National Debt Limit; Votes to Allow USIA's Film on President Kennedy to be Shown in the United States

66. H Res 413. Closed rule (limiting debate to four hours and precluding amendments) for floor consideration of HR 8464 (below) increasing the temporary national debt limit to $328 billion through June 30, 1966. Bolling (D Mo.) motion to consider the previous question, ending debate on the rule and bringing it to a vote. Motion agreed to 273-109: R 41-83; D 232-26 (ND 162-8; SD 70-18), June 9, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 857)

67. HR 8464. Passage of the bill to increase the temporary national debt limit to $328 billion through June 30, 1966. Passed 229-165: R 6-122; D 223-43 (ND 167-9; SD 56-34), June 9, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

68. H Con Res 285. Permit the release within the United States of the United States Information Agency's film about President Kennedy entitled "Years of Lightning, Day of Drums." Mailliard (R Calif.) amendment to require that the film be shown without charge. Rejected 174-216: R 125-0; D 49-216 (ND 21-155; SD 28-61), June 9, 1965. The President did not take a position on the amendment. (See story p. 659)

69. H Con Res 285. Passage of resolution to allow the USIA to make its film about President Kennedy, "Years of Lightning Day of Drums," available for distribution through educational and commercial media within the United States. Passed 311-75: R 55-68; D 256-7 (ND 174-1; SD 82-6), June 9, 1965. The President did not take a position on the resolution.

	66	67	68	69
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	?	X	✓	?
8 Jones	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Selden	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Andrews	N	N	Y	N
6 Buchanan	N	N	Y	N
2 Dickinson	N	N	Y	N
1 Edwards	N	N	Y	N
7 Martin	N	N	Y	?
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	Y	N	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Udall	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Rhodes	Y	N	Y	N
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	N	N	Y	Y
4 Harris	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Mills	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Trimble	Y	Y	N	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Cohelan	Y	Y	N	Y
33 Dyal	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Edwards	Y	Y	N	Y
18 Hagen	Y	Y	N	Y
34 Hanna	Y	✓	N	Y
2 Johnson	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Leggett	Y	Y	N	Y
15 McFall	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Miller	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Moss	Y	Y	N	Y
16 Sisk	Y	Y	N	Y
38 Tunney	Y	Y	N	Y
37 Van Deerlin	Y	Y	N	Y
14 Baldwin	N	N	Y	Y
1 Clausen	N	N	Y	Y
10 Gubser	N	N	Y	N
6 Mailliard	N	N	Y	N
12 Talcott	N	N	Y	N
13 Teague	N	Y	Y	N
35 Utt	Y	N	Y	N
36 Wilson	X	N	Y	N
11 Younger	N	N	Y	N
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	Y	Y	N	Y
25 Cameron	‡	✓	-	‡
22 Corman	Y	Y	N	Y
21 Hawkins	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Holifield	Y	Y	N	Y
17 King	Y	Y	N	Y
26 Roosevelt	Y	Y	N	Y
30 Roybal	Y	Y	N	Y
31 Wilson	Y	Y	N	Y
28 Bell	Y	N	Y	Y
23 Clawson	X	X	‡	-
32 Hosmer	N	N	Y	Y
24 Lipscomb	Y	N	Y	N
27 Reinecke	Y	N	Y	N
20 Smith	Y	N	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	✓	Y	N	Y
3 Evans	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 McVicker	✓	✓	-	?
1 Rogers	Y	Y	N	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Giaimo	✓	Y	N	Y
6 Grabowski	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Irwin	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Monagan	Y	Y	N	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	Y	N	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	?	N	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Fuqua	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Gibbons	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Haley	N	N	Y	Y
5 Herlong	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Matthews	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Pepper	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Rogers	N	N	N	Y
1 Sikes	Y	Y	N	Y
12 Cramer	N	N	Y	Y
11 Gurney	N	N	Y	N
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	Y	N	‡
6 Flynt	Y	Y	N	N
1 Hagan	Y	N	N	Y
9 Landrum	?	?	?	?
4 Mackay	Y	Y	N	Y
2 O'Neal	N	N	Y	N
10 Stephens	‡	Y	-	‡
8 Tuten	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Weltner	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Callaway	X	X	✓	-
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	‡	✓	-	‡
AL Mink	Y	Y	N	?
IDAHO
1 White	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Hansen	‡	N	Y	N
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	Y	Y	N	Y
24 Price	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Schisler	Y	N	N	Y
23 Shipley	Y	Y	N	Y
16 Anderson	-	N	Y	N
17 Arends	Y	N	Y	N
14 Erlenborn	N	N	Y	N
20 Findley	N	N	Y	Y
12 McClory	N	N	Y	N
18 Michel	N	N	Y	N
15 Reid	N	N	Y	N
22 Springer	N	N	Y	N
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Dawson	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Kluczynski	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Murphy	Y	Y	N	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Ronan	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Rostenkowski	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Yates	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Collier	‡	X	✓	‡
4 Derwinski	N	N	Y	N
13 Rumsfeld	N	N	Y	N

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	66	67	68	69
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Denton	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Jacobs	‡	✓	-	‡
1 Madden	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Roush	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Adair	N	N	Y	N
7 Bray	N	N	Y	N
2 Halleck	?	X	?	?
10 Harvey	‡	X	‡	-
6 Roudebush	N	N	Y	N
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Culver	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Greigg	Y	Y	?	?
7 Hansen	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Schmidhauser	N	N	N	Y
5 Smith	N	Y	N	Y
3 Gross	N	N	Y	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	N	N	Y	N
3 Ellsworth	N	Y	Y	N
4 Shriver	Y	N	Y	N
2 Mize	N	N	Y	N
5 Skubitz	N	N	Y	N
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	N	N	Y
3 Farnsley	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Natcher	Y	N	N	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 66 through 69.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 129, 130, 131, 132.)

	66	67	68	69
7 Perkins	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Carter	Y	N	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Hebert	✓	✓	X	?
8 Long	Y	X	N	Y
6 Morrison	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Passman	Y	N	N	Y
7 Thompson	Y	N	N	Y
4 Waggonner	Y	N	N	Y
3 Willis	?	✓	?	?
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Tupper	✓	Y	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Friedel	‡	Y	N	Y
3 Garmatz	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Long	?	Y	N	Y
5 Machen	Y	Y	N	Y
AL Sickles	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Mathias	Y	N	Y	N
1 Morton	N	N	Y	N
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Burke	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Donohue	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	N	N	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Philbin	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Bates	Y	X	Y	Y
1 Conte	Y	N	Y	Y
12 Keith	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Martin	N	N	?	✓
5 Morse	N	N	Y	✓
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Farnum	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Mackie	‡	‡	N	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Todd	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Vivian	Y	Y	✓	?
18 Broomfield	N	N	Y	N
10 Cederberg	Y	N	Y	N
6 Chamberlain	Y	N	Y	N
5 Ford	Y	N	Y	N
9 Griffin	N	N	Y	Y
8 Harvey	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Hutchinson	N	N	Y	N
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	‡	Y	N	Y
13 Diggs	Y	Y	N	Y
16 Dingell	Y	Y	N	Y
15 Ford	Y	Y	N	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	Y	N	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	Y	N	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Fraser	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Karth	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Olson	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Langen	?	X	?	?
3 MacGregor	Y	N	Y	N
2 Nelsen	N	N	Y	N
1 Quie	Y	N	Y	N
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	N	N	Y	Y
5 Colmer	N	N	Y	Y
2 Whitten	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Williams	N	N	Y	N
4 Walker	N	N	Y	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Hull	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Hungate	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Ichord	N	Y	N	Y
10 Jones	N	N	Y	Y
1 Karsten	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Randall	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Sullivan	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Curtis	N	N	Y	N
7 Hall	N	N	Y	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Battin	Y	N	Y	N
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Cunningham	N	N	Y	Y
3 Martin	Y	N	Y	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	N	N	?	?
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Cleveland	N	N	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	Y	N	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Helstoski	‡	✓	-	‡
3 Howard	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Joelson	Y	Y	N	Y
12 Krebs	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Minish	Y	Y	N	Y
2 McGrath	Y	Y	N	Y
15 Patten	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Rodino	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Thompson	Y	✓	X	‡
1 Cahill	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Dwyer	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	Y	Y	Y	N
7 Widnall	Y	N	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Walker	Y	Y	N	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	Y	Y	Y
41 Dulski	Y	Y	N	Y
34 Hanley	Y	Y	N	Y
39 McCarthy	‡	Y	Y	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	Y	N	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Pike	Y	Y	N	Y
28 Resnick	‡	‡	-	‡
35 Stratton	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	N	Y
37 Conable	N	N	Y	N
38 Goodell	Y	N	Y	Y
2 Grover	N	N	Y	Y
36 Horton	N	N	Y	Y
30 King	N	N	Y	Y
31 McEwen	N	N	Y	Y
32 Pirnie	Y	N	Y	Y
26 Reid	Y	N	Y	Y
33 Robison	N	N	Y	Y
40 Smith	N	N	Y	Y
4 Wydler	N	N	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	X	X	X	‡
23 Bingham	Y	Y	N	Y
15 Carey	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Celler	✓	Y	X	?
9 Delaney	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	Y	N	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	Y	N	Y
12 Kelly	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Keogh	Y	Y	N	Y
13 Multer	Y	Y	N	Y
16 Murphy	Y	Y	N	Y
18 Powell	?	✓	?	?
14 Rooney	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	Y	N	Y
20 Ryan	Y	Y	N	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	Y	N	Y
24 Fino	N	N	Y	Y
6 Halpern	Y	N	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	‡	?	?	‡
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	?	✓	?	?
4 Cooley	Y	Y	X	?
2 Fountain	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Henderson	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Kornegay	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Lennon	N	N	Y	Y
5 Scott	N	N	Y	Y
11 Taylor	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Whitener	N	N	N	Y
9 Broyhill	N	N	Y	N
8 Jonas	N	N	Y	Y
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Andrews	N	N	Y	N
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Feighan	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Gilligan	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Hays	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Kirwan	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Love	Y	N	Y	Y
10 Moeller	X	X	N	Y
15 Secrest	N	N	N	Y
AL Sweeney	Y	Y	N	Y
21 Vanik	Y	Y	N	Y
17 Ashbrook	X	N	Y	N
14 Ayres	‡	X	Y	Y
8 Betts	Y	N	‡	-
22 Bolton	Y	N	Y	N
16 Bow	X	X	-	-
7 Brown	?	X	?	?
2 Clancy	N	N	✓	X
12 Devine	N	N	✓	X
6 Harsha	N	N	Y	N
5 Latta	N	N	Y	Y
4 McCulloch	N	N	?	?
23 Minshall	N	N	Y	N
13 Mosher	N	N	Y	Y
11 Stanton	Y	N	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Jarman	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Johnson	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Steed	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Belcher	N	N	Y	N
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Green	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Ullman	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	N	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Craley	‡	Y	N	Y
21 Dent	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Flood	Y	Y	N	Y
20 Holland	‡	✓	?	‡
14 Moorhead	Y	Y	N	Y
26 Morgan	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	Y	N	Y
15 Rooney	Y	Y	N	Y
24 Vigorito	Y	Y	N	Y
18 Corbett	Y	N	Y	Y
8 Curtin	N	N	Y	Y
9 Dague	N	N	Y	Y
27 Fulton	N	N	Y	Y
23 Johnson	N	N	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	N	N	Y	Y
10 McDade	N	N	Y	Y
22 Saylor	N	N	Y	Y
17 Schneebeli	Y	N	Y	N
13 Schweiker	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Watkins	N	N	Y	Y
12 Whalley	N	N	Y	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Byrne	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Nix	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Toll	✓	✓	X	‡
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	✓	✓	X	‡
1 St. Germain	‡	Y	N	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	N	N	N	-
3 Dorn	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Gettys	N	N	Y	Y
6 McMillan	Y	Y	?	?
1 Rivers	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Vacancy
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	N	N	Y	N
1 Reifel	N	N	Y	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Everett	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Evins	✓	✓	X	‡
5 Fulton	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Grider	Y	Y	Y	N
7 Murray	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Brock	X	X	✓	-
2 Duncan	N	N	Y	N
1 Quillen	Y	N	Y	N
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Brooks	Y	Y	N	Y
17 Burleson	Y	N	N	Y
5 Cabell	‡	‡	-	‡
22 Casey	Y	N	N	Y
15 De la Garza	Y	N	N	Y
7 Dowdy	N	N	Y	Y
21 Fisher	N	N	Y	Y
20 Gonzalez	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Mahon	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Patman	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Pickle	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Poage	Y	Y	N	Y
AL Pool	Y	-	N	Y
13 Purcell	‡	‡	-	Y
4 Roberts	Y	Y	N	Y
18 Rogers	?	N	N	Y
6 Teague	X	Y	N	Y
8 Thomas	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Thompson	Y	Y	N	Y
16 White	N	N	N	Y
12 Wright	?	Y	N	Y
14 Young	Y	Y	N	Y
UTAH
2 King	N	N	N	Y
1 Burton	N	N	Y	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	N	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	N	N	Y	Y
1 Downing	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Hardy	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Jennings	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Marsh	Y	N	Y	N
3 Satterfield	Y	N	Y	N
8 Smith	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Tuck	N	N	Y	Y
10 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y	N
6 Poff	N	N	Y	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Foley	Y	Y	Y	N
3 Hansen	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Hicks	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Meeds	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 May	N	N	Y	Y
1 Pelly	N	N	Y	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Kee	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Slack	?	✓	✓	?
2 Staggers	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Moore	N	N	Y	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Race	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Reuss	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Byrnes	Y	Y	Y	N
7 Laird	Y	N	Y	N
10 O'Konski	N	N	Y	Y
3 Thomson	N	N	Y	N
9 Davis	N	N	Y	N
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	N	N	N	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 70 through 72.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 141, 142, 143.)

House Passes Bill to Create Housing-Urban Development Department, Rejects Recommittal Motion; Approves Congressional Intern Funds

70. HR 6927. Department of Housing and Urban Development Act. Dwyer (R N.J.) motion to recommit the bill to the Committee on Government Operations with instructions to report a Republican substitute, HR 8822, establishing an Office of Urban Affairs and Community Development in the Executive Office of the President (in place of a cabinet-level Department provided in HR 6927). Rejected 141-259: R 122-5; D 19-254 (ND 0-181; SD 19-73), June 16, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 382)

71. HR 6927. Passage of the bill establishing a cabinet-level Department of Housing and Urban Development to be headed by a Secretary appointed by the President with Senate confirmation; transferring to the Secretary all the functions, powers and duties of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, the Federal Housing Administration, the Public Housing Administration and the Federal National Mortgage Association; and specifying other functions, powers and duties of the Department. Passed 217-184: R 9-118; D 208-66 (ND 170-10; SD 38-56), June 16, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

72. H Res 416. Provide funds for each Representative to hire a college student for summer work as a "student Congressional intern" to be paid $300 per month. Adopted 229-153: R 41-81; D 188-72 (ND 148-22; SD 40-50), June 16, 1965. The President did not take a position on the resolution. (See story p. 648)

	70	71	72
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	N	N	N
8 Jones	N	Y	N
5 Selden	N	N	N
4 Andrews	Y	N	Y
6 Buchanan	Y	N	N
2 Dickinson	Y	N	?
1 Edwards	Y	N	N
7 Martin	?	X	?
ALASKA
AL Rivers	X	✓	?
ARIZONA
3 Senner	N	Y	Y
2 Udall	N	Y	Y
1 Rhodes	Y	N	N
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	N	N	N
4 Harris	N	N	N
2 Mills	N	Y	N
3 Trimble	N	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	N	Y	Y
7 Cohelan	N	Y	Y
33 Dyal	N	Y	Y
9 Edwards	N	Y	Y
18 Hagen	N	Y	Y
34 Hanna	N	Y	Y
2 Johnson	N	Y	Y
4 Leggett	N	Y	Y
15 McFall	N	Y	Y
8 Miller	N	Y	Y
3 Moss	N	Y	‡
16 Sisk	N	Y	Y
38 Tunney	N	Y	Y
37 Van Deerlin	N	Y	Y
14 Baldwin	Y	N	N
1 Clausen	✓	X	‡
10 Gubser	Y	N	Y
6 Mailliard	Y	N	Y
12 Talcott	Y	N	N
13 Teague	Y	N	N
35 Utt	✓	X	-
36 Wilson	Y	N	N
11 Younger	Y	N	N

	70	71	72
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	N	Y	Y
25 Cameron	X	✓	‡
22 Corman	X	✓	‡
21 Hawkins	N	Y	Y
19 Holifield	N	Y	Y
17 King	N	Y	N
26 Roosevelt	N	Y	Y
30 Roybal	N	Y	Y
31 Wilson	X	✓	‡
28 Bell	Y	N	Y
23 Clawson	Y	N	N
32 Hosmer	Y	N	Y
24 Lipscomb	Y	N	N
27 Reinecke	Y	N	N
20 Smith	Y	N	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	N	Y	N
3 Evans	N	Y	Y
2 McVicker	N	N	Y
1 Rogers	N	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	N	Y	Y
3 Giaimo	N	Y	Y
6 Grabowski	N	Y	Y
4 Irwin	N	Y	Y
5 Monagan	N	Y	N
2 St. Onge	N	Y	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	N	Y	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	N	N	N
4 Fascell	N	Y	Y
9 Fuqua	N	N	Y
10 Gibbons	N	Y	Y
7 Haley	Y	N	N
5 Herlong	N	N	N
8 Matthews	N	N	N
3 Pepper	N	Y	Y
6 Rogers	N	N	Y
1 Sikes	N	N	?
12 Cramer	Y	N	N
11 Gurney	Y	N	N

	70	71	72
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	N	Y
6 Flynt	N	N	N
1 Hagan	✓	X	?
9 Landrum	N	N	?
4 Mackay	N	N	Y
2 O'Neal	Y	N	Y
10 Stephens	N	N	Y
8 Tuten	N	N	N
5 Weltner	N	N	Y
3 Callaway	Y	N	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	X	✓	Y
AL Mink	N	Y	Y
IDAHO
1 White	N	Y	Y
2 Hansen	Y	N	Y
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	N	Y	Y
24 Price	N	Y	Y
19 Schisler	N	Y	Y
23 Shipley	N	N	Y
16 Anderson	Y	N	N
17 Arends	Y	N	N
14 Erlenborn	Y	N	N
20 Findley	✓	X	?
12 McClory	Y	N	Y
18 Michel	Y	N	N
15 Reid	Y	N	N
22 Springer	Y	N	N
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	N	Y	Y
1 Dawson	N	Y	Y
5 Kluczynski	N	Y	Y
3 Murphy	N	Y	Y
2 O'Hara	N	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	N	Y	Y
6 Ronan	N	Y	Y
8 Rostenkowski	N	Y	Y
9 Yates	N	Y	Y
10 Collier	Y	N	N
4 Derwinski	Y	N	Y
13 Rumsfeld	Y	N	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	70	71	72
INDIANA
3 Brademas	N	Y	Y
8 Denton	N	Y	Y
9 Hamilton	N	Y	Y
11 Jacobs	N	Y	Y
1 Madden	N	Y	N
5 Roush	N	Y	Y
4 Adair	Y	N	Y
7 Bray	✓	X	‡
2 Halleck	Y	N	N
10 Harvey	‡	-	‡
6 Roudebush	N	N	N
IOWA
4 Bandstra	N	Y	N
2 Culver	N	Y	Y
6 Greigg	N	Y	Y
7 Hansen	N	Y	Y
1 Schmidhauser	N	Y	Y
5 Smith	N	Y	Y
3 Gross	Y	N	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	N	N
3 Ellsworth	Y	N	N
4 Shriver	Y	N	N
2 Mize	Y	N	N
5 Skubitz	Y	N	N
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	N	Y	N
3 Farnsley	N	Y	Y
2 Natcher	N	Y	N

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 70 through 72.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 141, 142, 143.)

	70	71	72
7 Perkins	N	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	N	Y	N
6 Watts	N	Y	N
5 Carter	Y	N	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	N	Y	N
1 Hebert	✓	X	?
8 Long	Y	N	Y
6 Morrison	N	Y	N
5 Passman	N	N	N
7 Thompson	N	Y	N
4 Waggonner	N	N	Y
3 Willis	N	Y	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	N	Y	Y
1 Tupper	Y	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	N	Y	Y
7 Friedel	N	Y	Y
3 Garmatz	N	Y	Y
2 Long	N	Y	Y
5 Machen	N	Y	Y
AL Sickles	N	Y	Y
6 Mathias	Y	N	?
1 Morton	Y	N	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	N	Y	N
11 Burke	N	Y	N
4 Donohue	N	Y	Y
7 Macdonald	X	✓	?
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	N	Y	N
3 Philbin	N	Y	Y
6 Bates	Y	N	N
1 Conte	Y	N	N
12 Keith	✓	X	?
10 Martin	?	✓	?
5 Morse	Y	N	N
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	N	Y	Y
19 Farnum	N	Y	?
7 Mackie	N	Y	N
12 O'Hara	N	Y	Y
3 Todd	N	Y	Y
2 Vivian	N	Y	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	N	N
10 Cederberg	Y	N	N
6 Chamberlain	‡	-	-
5 Ford	Y	N	N
9 Griffin	Y	N	N
8 Harvey	Y	N	N
4 Hutchinson	Y	N	N
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	N	Y	Y
13 Diggs	N	Y	Y
16 Dingell	N	Y	Y
15 Ford	N	Y	Y
17 Griffiths	N	Y	Y
14 Nedzi	N	Y	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	N	Y	Y
5 Fraser	N	Y	Y
4 Karth	N	Y	Y
6 Olson	N	Y	N
7 Langen	Y	N	N
3 MacGregor	Y	N	Y
2 Nelsen	Y	N	N
1 Quie	Y	N	N
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	✓	X	-
5 Colmer	Y	N	N
2 Whitten	Y	N	N
3 Williams	Y	N	Y
4 Walker	Y	N	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	N	Y	Y
6 Hull	N	N	-
9 Hungate	N	Y	Y
8 Ichord	?	?	?
10 Jones	N	Y	N
1 Karsten	N	Y	Y
4 Randall	N	N	N
3 Sullivan	N	Y	Y
2 Curtis	Y	N	Y
7 Hall	Y	N	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	N	Y	Y
2 Battin	Y	N	N
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	N	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	Y	N	N
3 Martin	Y	N	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	N	N	N
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	N	Y	N
2 Cleveland	Y	N	N
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	N	Y	Y
13 Gallagher	N	Y	Y
9 Helstoski	N	Y	Y
3 Howard	N	Y	Y
8 Joelson	N	Y	N
12 Krebs	N	Y	Y
11 Minish	N	Y	Y
2 McGrath	N	Y	Y
15 Patten	N	Y	Y
10 Rodino	N	Y	Y
4 Thompson	N	Y	Y
1 Cahill	Y	Y	N
6 Dwyer	Y	N	N
5 Frelinghuysen	Y	N	Y
7 Widnall	Y	N	N
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	N	N	Y
AL Walker	N	Y	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	N	Y	‡
41 Dulski	N	Y	N
34 Hanley	N	Y	Y
39 McCarthy	N	Y	Y
29 O'Brien	N	Y	Y
25 Ottinger	N	Y	Y
1 Pike	X	✓	‡
28 Resnick	N	Y	Y
35 Stratton	N	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	N	Y	Y
3 Wolff	N	Y	Y
37 Conable	Y	N	Y
38 Goodell	Y	N	Y
2 Grover	Y	N	N
36 Horton	Y	Y	Y
30 King	Y	N	N
31 McEwen	✓	X	‡
32 Pirnie	‡	-	?
26 Reid	N	Y	Y
33 Robison	Y	N	Y
40 Smith	Y	N	Y
4 Wydler	Y	N	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	N	Y	Y
23 Bingham	N	Y	Y
15 Carey	N	Y	Y
10 Celler	N	Y	?
9 Delaney	N	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	N	Y	Y
22 Gilbert	N	Y	Y
12 Kelly	N	Y	Y
11 Keogh	N	Y	Y
13 Multer	N	Y	Y
16 Murphy	N	Y	Y
18 Powell	N	Y	?
14 Rooney	N	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	N	Y	Y
20 Ryan	N	Y	Y
21 Scheuer	N	*	Y
24 Fino	Y	Y	N
6 Halpern	N	Y	Y
17 Lindsay	N	Y	N
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	?	?	?
4 Cooley	N	N	Y
2 Fountain	N	N	N
3 Henderson	N	N	N
6 Kornegay	N	N	N
7 Lennon	Y	N	N
5 Scott	N	N	N
11 Taylor	N	N	N
10 Whitener	N	N	N
9 Broyhill	Y	N	N
8 Jonas	Y	N	N
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	N	Y	Y
1 Andrews	Y	N	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	N	Y	?
20 Feighan	N	Y	Y
1 Gilligan	N	Y	Y
18 Hays	N	Y	Y
19 Kirwan	N	Y	Y
3 Love	N	Y	Y
10 Moeller	N	N	Y
15 Secrest	N	N	N
AL Sweeney	N	Y	Y
21 Vanik	N	Y	Y
17 Ashbrook	Y	N	N
14 Ayres	‡	-	‡
8 Betts	Y	N	N
22 Bolton	Y	N	?
16 Bow	✓	-	‡
7 Brown	✓	X	?
2 Clancy	Y	N	N
12 Devine	Y	N	N
6 Harsha	Y	N	N
5 Latta	Y	N	N
4 McCulloch	Y	N	N
23 Minshall	Y	Y	-
13 Mosher	Y	N	Y
11 Stanton	Y	N	N
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	N	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	N	Y	Y
5 Jarman	N	Y	N
6 Johnson	N	Y	Y
4 Steed	N	Y	N
1 Belcher	Y	N	N
OREGON
4 Duncan	N	Y	Y
3 Green	N	Y	‡
2 Ullman	N	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	N	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	N	Y	N
19 Craley	N	Y	N
21 Dent	N	Y	?
11 Flood	N	Y	Y
20 Holland	N	Y	‡
14 Moorhead	N	Y	Y
26 Morgan	N	Y	Y
6 Rhodes	N	Y	Y
15 Rooney	N	Y	Y
24 Vigorito	N	Y	Y
18 Corbett	Y	N	Y
8 Curtin	Y	N	N
9 Dague	Y	N	N
27 Fulton	Y	N	Y
23 Johnson	Y	N	Y
16 Kunkel	Y	N	N
10 McDade	Y	N	Y
22 Saylor	Y	N	N
17 Schneebeli	Y	N	Y
13 Schweiker	Y	N	Y
7 Watkins	Y	N	N
12 Whalley	Y	N	N
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	N	Y	Y
3 Byrne	N	Y	Y
5 Green	N	Y	Y
2 Nix	N	Y	‡
4 Toll	X	✓	‡
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	N	Y	Y
1 St. Germain	N	Y	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	Y	N	Y
3 Dorn	Y	N	N
5 Gettys	Y	N	N
6 McMillan	Y	N	?
1 Rivers	X	N	N
2 Watson	Y	N	Y
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	N	N
1 Reifel	Y	N	N
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	N	Y	Y
8 Everett	N	Y	N
4 Evins	N	Y	Y
5 Fulton	N	Y	‡
9 Grider	N	Y	Y
7 Murray	N	N	N
3 Brock	Y	N	Y
2 Duncan	Y	N	N
1 Quillen	Y	N	N
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	N	Y	Y
2 Brooks	N	Y	Y
17 Burleson	N	N	Y
5 Cabell	Y	N	Y
22 Casey	N	N	N
15 De la Garza	N	N	Y
7 Dowdy	N	N	N
21 Fisher	✓	X	-
20 Gonzalez	N	Y	Y
19 Mahon	N	N	N
1 Patman	N	Y	Y
10 Pickle	N	Y	N
11 Poage	N	N	N
AL Pool	Y	N	Y
13 Purcell	N	Y	Y
4 Roberts	N	N	Y
18 Rogers	N	N	N
6 Teague	?	N	Y
8 Thomas	X	✓	?
9 Thompson	N	Y	Y
16 White	N	Y	N
12 Wright	N	N	Y
14 Young	N	Y	Y
UTAH
2 King	N	N	N
1 Burton	Y	N	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	N	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	N	N
1 Downing	N	Y	N
2 Hardy	N	Y	N
9 Jennings	N	Y	Y
7 Marsh	Y	N	N
3 Satterfield	Y	N	N
8 Smith	Y	N	N
5 Tuck	Y	N	N
10 Broyhill	Y	N	Y
6 Poff	Y	N	N
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	N	Y	Y
5 Foley	N	Y	Y
3 Hansen	N	Y	‡
6 Hicks	N	Y	N
2 Meeds	N	Y	Y
4 May	Y	N	Y
1 Pelly	Y	N	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	N	Y	Y
5 Kee	X	✓	‡
3 Slack	N	N	Y
2 Staggers	?	?	?
1 Moore	Y	N	‡
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	N	Y	Y
6 Race	N	Y	N
5 Reuss	N	Y	Y
1 Stalbaum	N	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	X	✓	‡
8 Byrnes	Y	N	N
7 Laird	Y	N	N
10 O'Konski	N	Y	Y
3 Thomson	Y	N	N
9 Davis	Y	N	N
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	N	Y	Y

*Scheuer present, but did not vote because of possible conflict of interest.

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 73 through 76.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 145, 146, 147, 153.)

House Votes Baltic States Resolution, Agriculture Disaster Aid Bill; Approves Vocational Student Loan Bill, Department of Defense Funds

73. HR 7743. National Vocational Student Loan Insurance Act of 1965. Provide a $75 million fund for insured loans and up to $1 million annually in direct loans for students attending vocational institutions above the high school level. Passed 300-0: R 96-0; D 204-0 (ND 125-0; SD 79-0), June 21, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 309)

74. HR 8620. Provide price support payments for wheat, feed grain and cotton growers who were not able to plant their crops in 1965 because of floods and other natural disasters. The bill applied only to farmers enrolled in voluntary acreage reduction programs prior to the disaster. Passed 297-2: R 95-2; D 202-0 (ND 125-0; SD 77-0), June 21, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 139)

75. H Con Res 416. Request the President to direct the attention of the United Nations and other international organizations to the denial of the rights of self-determination to the peoples of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Adopted 298-0: R 98-0; D 200-0 (ND 123-0; SD 77-0), June 21, 1965. The President did not take a position on the resolution.

76. HR 9221. Passage of the bill appropriating $45,188,244,000 to the Department of Defense for fiscal 1966. Passed 407-0: R 135-0; D 272-0 (ND 178-0; SD 94-0), June 23, 1965. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 168)

	73	74	75	76
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Jones	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Selden	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Andrews	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Buchanan	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Dickinson	‡	‡	‡	Y
1 Edwards	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Martin	Y	‡	Y	Y
ALASKA
AL Rivers	‡	‡	‡	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Udall	‡	‡	Y	Y
1 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y	Y
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Harris	?	‡	‡	Y
2 Mills	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Trimble	Y	Y	Y	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Cohelan	‡	?	Y	Y
33 Dyal	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Edwards	‡	‡	‡	Y
18 Hagen	Y	Y	Y	Y
34 Hanna	‡	Y	‡	Y
2 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Leggett	‡	‡	‡	‡
15 McFall	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Miller	‡	‡	?	Y
3 Moss	‡	‡	‡	Y
16 Sisk	Y	Y	Y	Y
38 Tunney	Y	Y	Y	Y
37 Van Deerlin	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Baldwin	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Clausen	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Gubser	‡	‡	‡	Y
6 Mailliard	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Talcott	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Teague	Y	Y	Y	Y
35 Utt	Y	Y	Y	Y
36 Wilson	‡	‡	‡	Y
11 Younger	Y	Y	Y	Y
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	‡	‡	‡	Y
25 Cameron	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Corman	Y	‡	Y	Y
21 Hawkins	‡	‡	‡	‡
19 Holifield	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 King	Y	Y	Y	Y
26 Roosevelt	Y	Y	Y	Y
30 Roybal	Y	Y	Y	Y
31 Wilson	‡	‡	‡	‡
28 Bell	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Clawson	Y	Y	Y	Y
32 Hosmer	Y	Y	Y	Y
24 Lipscomb	Y	Y	Y	Y
27 Reinecke	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Smith	Y	Y	Y	Y
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Evans	‡	‡	‡	‡
2 McVicker	‡	‡	‡	Y
1 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Giaimo	?	?	?	Y
6 Grabowski	‡	‡	‡	Y
4 Irwin	?	?	?	Y
5 Monagan	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 St. Onge	‡	‡	‡	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	‡	‡	‡	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Fuqua	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Gibbons	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Haley	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Herlong	Y	‡	‡	Y
8 Matthews	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Pepper	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Sikes	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Cramer	‡	‡	‡	‡
11 Gurney	‡	‡	‡	Y
GEORGIA
7 Davis	Y	Y	Y	‡
6 Flynt	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Hagan	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Landrum	?	?	?	?
4 Mackay	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Neal	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Stephens	‡	‡	‡	Y
8 Tuten	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Weltner	?	?	?	Y
3 Callaway	Y	Y	Y	Y
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Mink	Y	Y	Y	Y
IDAHO
1 White	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	Y
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	Y	Y	?	Y
24 Price	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Schisler	‡	‡	‡	Y
23 Shipley	?	?	?	Y
16 Anderson	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Arends	‡	‡	Y	Y
14 Erlenborn	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Findley	Y	Y	‡	Y
12 McClory	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Michel	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Reid	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Springer	Y	Y	Y	Y
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Dawson	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Kluczynski	‡	‡	‡	Y
3 Murphy	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Pucinski	‡	‡	‡	Y
6 Ronan	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Rostenkowski	‡	‡	‡	Y
9 Yates	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Collier	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Derwinski	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	Y	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

	73	74	75	76
INDIANA
3 Brademas	‡	‡	‡	Y
8 Denton	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Jacobs	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Madden	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Roush	‡	‡	‡	Y
4 Adair	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Bray	‡	‡	‡	Y
2 Halleck	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Harvey	‡	‡	‡	‡
6 Roudebush	Y	Y	Y	Y
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Culver	‡	‡	‡	Y
6 Greigg	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Schmidhauser	‡	‡	‡	Y
5 Smith	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Gross	Y	Y	Y	Y
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Ellsworth	‡	‡	‡	Y
4 Shriver	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Mize	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	Y	Y	Y	Y
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Farnsley	‡	‡	‡	Y
2 Natcher	Y	Y	Y	Y

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 73 through 76.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 145, 146, 147, 153.)

	73	74	75	76
7 Perkins	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Carter	Y	Y	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Hebert	Y	?	?	Y
8 Long	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Morrison	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Passman	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Thompson	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Waggonner	‡	‡	‡	Y
3 Willis	?	?	?	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Tupper	Y	Y	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Friedel	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Garmatz	‡	‡	‡	Y
2 Long	?	?	?	Y
5 Machen	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Sickles	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Mathias	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Morton	Y	Y	Y	Y
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	-	‡	‡	Y
11 Burke	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Donohue	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	?	‡	‡	Y
3 Philbin	‡	‡	‡	Y
6 Bates	‡	‡	‡	Y
1 Conte	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Keith	?	?	Y	Y
10 Martin	?	?	?	Y
5 Morse	Y	Y	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Farnum	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Mackie	‡	‡	‡	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Todd	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Vivian	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Broomfield	‡	‡	‡	Y
10 Cederberg	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Chamberlain	‡	‡	‡	Y
5 Ford	‡	‡	Y	Y
9 Griffin	?	?	‡	Y
8 Harvey	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Hutchinson	Y	Y	Y	Y
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	?	?	?	Y
13 Diggs	‡	‡	‡	Y
16 Dingell	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Ford	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	Y	?	Y
14 Nedzi	‡	‡	‡	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Fraser	?	?	?	Y
4 Karth	‡	‡	‡	‡
6 Olson	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Langen	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 MacGregor	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Nelsen	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Quie	Y	Y	Y	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	‡	‡	‡	Y
5 Colmer	?	?	?	?
2 Whitten	Y	Y	?	Y
3 Williams	?	?	?	Y
4 Walker	Y	Y	Y	Y
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	‡	‡	‡	Y
6 Hull	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Hungate	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Ichord	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Jones	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Karsten	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Randall	‡	‡	‡	Y
3 Sullivan	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Curtis	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Hall	‡	‡	‡	‡
MONTANA
1 Olsen	‡	‡	‡	Y
2 Battin	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Cunningham	‡	‡	‡	Y
3 Martin	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEVADA
AL Baring	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Cleveland	‡	‡	‡	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Howard	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Joelson	‡	Y	Y	Y
12 Krebs	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Minish	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 McGrath	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Patten	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Rodino	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Thompson	‡	‡	‡	‡
1 Cahill	‡	‡	‡	Y
6 Dwyer	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	‡	‡	‡	Y
7 Widnall	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	Y	Y	‡
AL Walker	Y	Y	Y	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	Y	Y	Y
41 Dulski	‡	‡	‡	Y
34 Hanley	Y	Y	Y	Y
39 McCarthy	?	?	?	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	Y	Y	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Pike	‡	‡	‡	Y
28 Resnick	‡	‡	‡	Y
35 Stratton	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Wolff	‡	-	‡	Y
37 Conable	?	?	?	Y
38 Goodell	?	?	Y	Y
2 Grover	Y	Y	Y	Y
36 Horton	‡	‡	‡	Y
30 King	Y	Y	Y	Y
31 McEwen	‡	‡	‡	Y
32 Pirnie	‡	‡	‡	Y
26 Reid	Y	Y	Y	Y
33 Robison	Y	Y	Y	Y
40 Smith	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Wydler	Y	Y	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Bingham	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Carey	?	?	?	Y
10 Celler	?	?	?	Y
9 Delaney	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Gilbert	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Kelly	?	?	?	Y
11 Keogh	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Multer	‡	‡	‡	Y
16 Murphy	‡	‡	‡	Y
18 Powell	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Rooney	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Rosenthal	?	‡	‡	‡
20 Ryan	‡	‡	‡	‡
21 Scheuer	Y	Y	Y	Y
24 Fino	‡	‡	‡	Y
6 Halpern	Y	Y	‡	Y
17 Lindsay	?	?	?	‡
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	?	?	?	?
4 Cooley	‡	‡	‡	Y
2 Fountain	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Henderson	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Kornegay	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Lennon	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Scott	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Taylor	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Whitener	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Jonas	Y	Y	Y	Y
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Andrews	‡	‡	‡	Y
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Feighan	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Gilligan	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Hays	‡	‡	‡	‡
19 Kirwan	Y	‡	Y	Y
3 Love	‡	‡	‡	Y
10 Moeller	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Secrest	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Sweeney	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Vanik	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Ashbrook	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Ayres	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Betts	Y	Y	‡	Y
22 Bolton	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Bow	?	?	?	‡
7 Brown	?	?	?	?
2 Clancy	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Devine	‡	‡	‡	Y
6 Harsha	‡	‡	‡	Y
5 Latta	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 McCulloch	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Minshall	‡	‡	‡	Y
13 Mosher	‡	‡	‡	Y
11 Stanton	Y	Y	Y	Y
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Jarman	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Johnson	?	?	?	Y
4 Steed	‡	‡	‡	Y
1 Belcher	Y	Y	Y	Y
OREGON
4 Duncan	‡	Y	Y	Y
3 Green	Y	Y	Y	‡
2 Ullman	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Wyatt	Y	Y	Y	Y
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Craley	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Dent	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Flood	Y	Y	Y	Y
20 Holland	Y	Y	‡	‡
14 Moorhead	Y	Y	Y	Y
26 Morgan	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y	Y
15 Rooney	?	?	?	Y
24 Vigorito	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Corbett	‡	Y	Y	Y
8 Curtin	?	?	?	Y
9 Dague	Y	Y	Y	Y
27 Fulton	Y	Y	Y	Y
23 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 Kunkel	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 McDade	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Saylor	‡	‡	‡	Y
17 Schneebeli	Y	Y	Y	Y
13 Schweiker	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Watkins	?	?	?	Y
12 Whalley	?	?	?	Y
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	?	Y
3 Byrne	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Nix	‡	‡	‡	Y
4 Toll	‡	‡	‡	‡
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	‡	-	‡	Y
1 St. Germain	?	?	?	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Dorn	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Gettys	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 McMillan	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Rivers	‡	?	‡	Y
2 Watson	‡	‡	‡	Y
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Reifel	‡	Y	Y	Y
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	‡	Y	Y
8 Everett	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Evins	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Fulton	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Grider	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Murray	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Brock	‡	‡	‡	Y
2 Duncan	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Quillen	‡	‡	‡	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Brooks	Y	Y	Y	Y
17 Burleson	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Cabell	Y	Y	Y	Y
22 Casey	?	?	?	Y
15 De la Garza	Y	Y	Y	Y
7 Dowdy	Y	Y	Y	Y
21 Fisher	‡	Y	Y	Y
20 Gonzalez	Y	Y	Y	Y
19 Mahon	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Patman	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Pickle	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Poage	Y	Y	Y	Y
AL Pool	Y	Y	Y	?
13 Purcell	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Roberts	Y	Y	Y	Y
18 Rogers	?	?	?	Y
6 Teague	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Thomas	?	?	?	?
9 Thompson	Y	Y	Y	Y
16 White	Y	Y	Y	Y
12 Wright	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Young	Y	Y	Y	Y
UTAH
2 King	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Burton	Y	Y	Y	Y
VERMONT
AL Stafford	Y	Y	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Downing	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Hardy	?	?	?	Y
9 Jennings	‡	‡	‡	Y
7 Marsh	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Satterfield	Y	Y	Y	Y
8 Smith	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Tuck	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 Broyhill	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Poff	Y	Y	Y	Y
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	‡	‡	‡	Y
5 Foley	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Hansen	Y	Y	?	Y
6 Hicks	‡	‡	‡	Y
2 Meeds	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 May	‡	‡	‡	Y
1 Pelly	Y	Y	Y	Y
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Kee	Y	‡	‡	Y
3 Slack	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Staggers	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Moore	Y	Y	Y	Y
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Race	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Reuss	‡	‡	‡	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	‡	‡	‡	‡
8 Byrnes	Y	Y	‡	Y
7 Laird	Y	Y	Y	Y
10 O'Konski	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Thomson	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Davis	Y	Y	Y	Y
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	‡	‡	‡	‡

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 77 through 81.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 155, 157, 162 163, 164.)

House Modifies Rent Supplement Plan, Refuses to Defeat Proposal By 202-208 Vote; Passes Housing Bill; Extends ARA for Two Months

77. H J Res 541. Extend for two months, to Aug. 31, 1965, the Area Redevelopment Act of 1961. Passed 224-167: R 16-116; D 208-51 (ND 158-9; SD 50-42), June 24, 1965. The President did not take a position on the resolution. (See story p. 798)

78. H Res 425. Open rule (limiting debate to six hours and waiving points of order) for floor consideration of HR 7984 (below) providing rent supplements to low-income families, and extending and amending laws relating to public housing, urban renewal and community facilities. Adopted 230-115: R 17-90; D 213-25 (ND 148-0; SD 65-25), June 28, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

79. HR 7984. Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965. Stephens (D Ga.) amendment to limit rent supplement payments under the bill to persons who were eligible under existing income standards for public housing, to reduce the appropriations authorization for supplements and to provide recipients of supplements with the opportunity to obtain options to purchase their homes. Accepted 240-179: R 4-131; D 236-48 (ND 182-5; SD 54-43), June 30, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 358)

80. HR 7984. Harvey (R Mich.) motion to recommit the bill to the Banking and Currency Committee with instructions to delete the rent supplements provision and language authorizing home improvement grants to homeowners in urban renewal areas. Rejected 202-208: R 130-4; D 72-204 (ND 21-163; SD 51-41), June 30, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

81. HR 7984. Passage of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965, providing rent supplements to low-income families and extending and amending laws relating to public housing, urban renewal and community facilities. Passed 245-169: R 26-109; D 219-60 (ND 176-8; SD 43-52), June 30, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (For later votes, see RCs 98 and 194.)

	77	78	79	80	81
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	N	N	N	Y	'N
8 Jones	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Selden	N	N	N	Y	N
4 Andrews	N	N	N	Y	N
6 Buchanan	N	N	N	Y	N
2 Dickinson	N	X	N	Y	N
1 Edwards	N	N	N	Y	N
7 Martin	N	?	N	Y	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	‡	‡	Y	N	Y
2 Udall	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Rhodes	N	N	N	Y	N
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	N	N	N	Y	N
4 Harris	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
2 Mills	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Trimble	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Cohelan	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
33 Dyal	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Edwards	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
18 Hagen	N	Y	Y	N	Y
34 Hanna	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Leggett	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
15 McFall	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Miller	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Moss	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
16 Sisk	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
38 Tunney	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
37 Van Deerlin	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
14 Baldwin	N	Y	N	Y	N
1 Clausen	N	N	N	Y	N
10 Gubser	N	N	N	Y	N
6 Mailliard	N	N	N	Y	N
12 Talcott	N	N	N	Y	N
13 Teague	N	N	N	Y	N
35 Utt	N	N	N	Y	N
36 Wilson	N	X	N	Y	N
11 Younger	N	N	N	Y	N
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	Y	Y	Y	X	‡
25 Cameron	N	Y	Y	N	Y
22 Corman	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
21 Hawkins	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Holifield	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
17 King	Y	✓	Y	N	Y
26 Roosevelt	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
30 Roybal	Y	?	Y	N	Y
31 Wilson	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
28 Bell	N	Y	N	Y	N
23 Clawson	N	N	N	Y	N
32 Hosmer	N	Y	N	Y	N
24 Lipscomb	N	N	N	Y	N
27 Reinecke	N	N	N	Y	N
20 Smith	N	N	N	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Evans	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 McVicker	Y	‡	Y	Y	Y
1 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Giaimo	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Grabowski	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
4 Irwin	N	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Monagan	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	N	Y	Y	Y	N
4 Fascell	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Fuqua	Y	Y	Y	‡	N
10 Gibbons	N	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Haley	N	N	N	Y	N
5 Herlong	N	N	N	Y	N
8 Matthews	N	Y	Y	Y	N
3 Pepper	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	N	N
1 Sikes	Y	Y	N	Y	N
12 Cramer	-	X	N	Y	N
11 Gurney	N	N	N	Y	N
GEORGIA
7 Davis	N	‡	Y	N	Y
6 Flynt	N	Y	N	Y	N
1 Hagan	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Landrum	?	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Mackay	Y	Y	Y	X	‡
2 O'Neal	N	N	N	Y	N
10 Stephens	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Tuten	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Weltner	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Callaway	N	N	N	Y	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
AL Mink	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
IDAHO
1 White	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Hansen	N	N	N	Y	N
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	Y	?	Y	N	Y
24 Price	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Schisler	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
23 Shipley	Y	Y	✓	?	?
16 Anderson	N	N	N	Y	N
17 Arends	N	-	N	Y	N
14 Erlenborn	N	N	N	Y	N
20 Findley	N	N	N	Y	N
12 McClory	N	N	N	Y	N
18 Michel	N	-	N	Y	N
15 Reid	N	N	N	Y	N
22 Springer	N	N	X	‡	X
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Dawson	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Kluczynski	Y	?	Y	N	Y
3 Murphy	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Ronan	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Rostenkowski	Y	Y	?	?	‡
9 Yates	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Collier	N	N	N	Y	N
4 Derwinski	N	X	N	Y	N
13 Rumsfeld	N	N	N	Y	N
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Denton	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Jacobs	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Madden	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Roush	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Adair	N	N	N	Y	N
7 Bray	N	N	N	Y	N
2 Halleck	N	?	N	Y	N
10 Harvey	-	‡	X	‡	-
6 Roudebush	N	N	N	Y	N
IOWA
4 Bandstra	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Culver	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Greigg	Y	?	Y	N	Y
7 Hansen	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Schmidhauser	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
5 Smith	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Gross	N	N	N	Y	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	N	N	N	Y	N
3 Ellsworth	N	N	N	Y	Y
4 Shriver	N	X	N	Y	N
2 Mize	N	N	N	Y	N
5 Skubitz	N	N	N	Y	N
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
3 Farnsley	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
2 Natcher	Y	Y	Y	N	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 77 through 81.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 155, 157, 162, 163, 164.)

	77	78	79	80	81
7 Perkins	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Carter	Y	X	N	Y	N
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Hebert	N	N	N	Y	N
8 Long	Y	N	N	Y	N
6 Morrison	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Passman	N	N	N	Y	N
7 Thompson	Y	?	Y	N	Y
4 Waggonner	N	N	N	Y	N
3 Willis	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Tupper	?	✓	?	?	✓
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Friedel	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Garmatz	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Long	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Machen	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
AL Sickles	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Mathias	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
1 Morton	N	‡	X	‡	-
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Burke	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Donohue	?	✓	Y	N	Y
7 Macdonald	?	?	Y	N	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	Y	✓	Y	N	Y
3 Philbin	‡	✓	Y	N	Y
6 Bates	N	N	N	Y	Y
1 Conte	N	Y	N	Y	N
12 Keith	N	N	N	Y	Y
10 Martin	N	?	X	?	✓
5 Morse	N	‡	N	Y	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Farnum	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Mackie	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Todd	Y	Y	Y	✓	X
2 Vivian	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
18 Broomfield	N	N	N	Y	N
10 Cederberg	N	N	N	Y	N
6 Chamberlain	N	-	N	Y	N
5 Ford	N	N	N	Y	N
9 Griffin	N	N	N	Y	N
8 Harvey	N	N	N	Y	N
4 Hutchinson	N	N	N	Y	N
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
13 Diggs	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
16 Dingell	Y	?	Y	N	Y
15 Ford	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
17 Griffiths	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Fraser	Y	?	Y	N	Y
4 Karth	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Olson	Y	‡	Y	Y	Y
7 Langen	N	N	N	Y	N
3 MacGregor	N	N	N	Y	N
2 Nelsen	N	X	N	Y	N
1 Quie	N	Y	N	Y	N
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	N	N	N	Y	N
5 Colmer	?	N	N	Y	N
2 Whitten	N	N	N	Y	N
3 Williams	N	X	N	Y	N
4 Walker	?	N	N	Y	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
6 Hull	N	Y	Y	Y	N
9 Hungate	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Ichord	N	Y	Y	Y	N
10 Jones	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
1 Karsten	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Randall	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
3 Sullivan	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Curtis	N	X	N	Y	N
7 Hall	-	N	N	Y	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Battin	N	N	N	Y	N
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Cunningham	N	N	N	Y	N
3 Martin	N	X	N	Y	N
NEVADA
AL Baring	N	X	N	Y	N
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Cleveland	N	Y	N	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
13 Gallagher	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Howard	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Joelson	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
12 Krebs	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Minish	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 McGrath	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
15 Patten	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Rodino	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Thompson	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Cahill	N	✓	N	Y	Y
6 Dwyer	N	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	N	N	N	Y	N
7 Widnall	N	Y	N	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	‡	Y	Y	Y	N
AL Walker	Y	Y	Y	N	N
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
41 Dulski	Y	Y	Y	‡	Y
34 Hanley	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
39 McCarthy	N	Y	Y	N	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Pike	N	Y	Y	Y	N
28 Resnick	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
35 Stratton	‡	‡	Y	N	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	✓	Y	N	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
37 Conable	N	‡	N	Y	N
38 Goodell	N	N	N	Y	N
2 Grover	N	N	N	Y	N
36 Horton	Y	N	Y	N	Y
30 King	Y	N	N	Y	N
31 McEwen	‡	N	N	Y	N
32 Pirnie	N	N	N	Y	N
26 Reid	N	Y	Y	N	Y
33 Robison	N	N	N	Y	N
40 Smith	N	N	N	Y	N
4 Wydler	N	Y	N	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	N	Y	✓	‡	‡
23 Bingham	?	Y	Y	N	Y
15 Carey	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Celler	Y	✓	Y	N	Y
9 Delaney	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Farbstein	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
22 Gilbert	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
12 Kelly	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
11 Keogh	Y	✓	✓	X	✓
13 Multer	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
16 Murphy	Y	?	Y	N	Y
18 Powell	Y	?	Y	N	Y
14 Rooney	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Rosenthal	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
20 Ryan	‡	‡	Y	N	Y
21 Scheuer	Y	Y	*	*	*
24 Fino	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Halpern	Y	✓	Y	N	Y
17 Lindsay	‡	✓	Y	N	Y
NORTH CAROLINA
1 Bonner	?	?	?	?	?
4 Cooley	N	Y	Y	N	N
2 Fountain	N	Y	N	Y	N
3 Henderson	Y	N	N	Y	N
6 Kornegay	N	Y	N	Y	N
7 Lennon	-	Y	N	Y	N
5 Scott	Y	Y	N	Y	N
11 Taylor	Y	Y	N	Y	N
10 Whitener	?	Y	N	Y	N
9 Broyhill	N	N	N	Y	N
8 Jonas	N	N	N	Y	N
NORTH DAKOTA
2 Redlin	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Andrews	N	X	N	Y	N
OHIO
9 Ashley	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
20 Feighan	Y	?	Y	N	Y
1 Gilligan	Y	‡	N	N	Y
18 Hays	‡	✓	Y	N	Y
19 Kirwan	?	✓	Y	N	Y
3 Love	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Moeller	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
15 Secrest	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
AL Sweeney	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
21 Vanik	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
17 Ashbrook	N	N	N	Y	N
14 Ayres	N	N	N	Y	N
8 Betts	N	N	N	Y	N
22 Bolton	N	N	N	Y	N
16 Bow	-	‡	X	✓	X
7 Brown	?	X	N	Y	N
2 Clancy	N	N	N	Y	N
12 Devine	N	N	N	Y	N
6 Harsha	Y	?	N	Y	N
5 Latta	N	N	N	Y	N
4 McCulloch	N	N	N	Y	N
23 Minshall	N	N	N	Y	N
13 Mosher	N	N	N	Y	Y
11 Stanton	N	N	N	Y	N
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Edmondson	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Jarman	N	Y	Y	Y	Y
6 Johnson	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Steed	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
1 Belcher	N	N	N	Y	N
OREGON
4 Duncan	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Green	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Ullman	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Wyatt	N	N	N	Y	N
PENNSYLVANIA
25 Clark	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
19 Craley	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
21 Dent	Y	✓	Y	N	Y
11 Flood	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
20 Holland	‡	‡	Y	N	Y
14 Moorhead	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
26 Morgan	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Rhodes	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
15 Rooney	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
24 Vigorito	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
18 Corbett	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
8 Curtin	N	-	N	Y	N
9 Dague	N	N	N	Y	N
27 Fulton	Y	-	N	Y	Y
23 Johnson	Y	N	N	Y	N
16 Kunkel	Y	N	N	‡	Y
10 McDade	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
22 Saylor	Y	‡	N	Y	Y
17 Schneebeli	N	N	N	Y	N
13 Schweiker	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
7 Watkins	N	N	N	Y	Y
12 Whalley	Y	N	N	Y	N
Philadelphia City
1 Barrett	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Byrne	Y	✓	Y	N	Y
5 Green	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Nix	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
4 Toll	‡	‡	✓	X	✓
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 St. Germain	‡	‡	Y	N	Y
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Ashmore	N	N	N	Y	N
3 Dorn	N	N	N	Y	N
5 Gettys	Y	Y	N	Y	N
6 McMillan	Y	Y	N	Y	N
1 Rivers	Y	Y	N	Y	N
2 Watson	N	X	N	Y	N
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Berry	N	N	N	Y	N
1 Reifel	N	N	N	Y	N
TENNESSEE
6 Anderson	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Everett	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Evins	Y	✓	‡	?	‡
5 Fulton	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Grider	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Murray	N	N	N	Y	N
3 Brock	N	N	N	Y	N
2 Duncan	N	N	N	Y	N
1 Quillen	N	Y	N	Y	Y
TEXAS
3 Beckworth	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Brooks	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
17 Burleson	N	N	N	Y	N
5 Cabell	Y	Y	Y	✓	X
22 Casey	N	Y	N	Y	N
15 De la Garza	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Dowdy	N	X	Y	Y	N
21 Fisher	N	N	N	Y	N
20 Gonzalez	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
19 Mahon	N	Y	Y	Y	N
1 Patman	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
10 Pickle	N	Y	Y	Y	Y
11 Poage	N	Y	Y	N	Y
AL Pool	?	N	N	Y	N
13 Purcell	N	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Roberts	N	Y	Y	Y	N
18 Rogers	N	Y	N	Y	N
6 Teague	N	Y	N	✓	N
8 Thomas	?	?	✓	X	?
9 Thompson	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
16 White	N	Y	Y	✓	N
12 Wright	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
14 Young	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
UTAH
2 King	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Burton	N	N	N	Y	N
VERMONT
AL Stafford	N	N	N	Y	Y
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt	N	N	N	Y	N
1 Downing	N	Y	N	Y	N
2 Hardy	N	Y	N	Y	N
9 Jennings	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
7 Marsh	N	N	N	Y	N
3 Satterfield	N	N	N	Y	N
8 Smith	Y	N	N	Y	N
5 Tuck	N	N	N	Y	N
10 Broyhill	N	‡	N	Y	N
6 Poff	N	N	N	Y	N
WASHINGTON
7 Adams	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Foley	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
3 Hansen	Y	‡	Y	N	Y
6 Hicks	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Meeds	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
4 May	N	N	N	Y	N
1 Pelly	N	Y	N	Y	N
WEST VIRGINIA
4 Hechler	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Kee	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Slack	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
2 Staggers	Y	Y	Y	N	?
1 Moore	N	N	N	Y	N
WISCONSIN
2 Kastenmeier	Y	Y	N	N	Y
6 Race	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Reuss	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Stalbaum	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
4 Zablocki	‡	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Byrnes	N	N	N	Y	N
7 Laird	N	X	N	Y	N
10 O'Konski	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
3 Thomson	N	N	N	Y	N
9 Davis	N	N	N	Y	N
WYOMING
AL Roncalio	‡	Y	Y	N	Y

*Scheuer present, but did not vote because of possible conflict of interest.

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 82 through 87.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 167, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179.)

House Passes Voting Rights Bill After Rejecting GOP Substitute; Rejects Coverage, 'U.S. School' Amendments; Prohibits Vote Frauds

82. HR 6400. Voting Rights Act of 1965. Adoption of a rule (H Res 440) allowing 10 hours of debate on HR 6400 and permitting consideration of a Republican substitute bill. Adopted 308-58: R 116-9; D 192-49 (ND 157-0; SD 35-49), July 6, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 533; for later votes, see below and RCs 106, 107.)

83. HR 6400. Cramer (R Fla.) amendment to provide penalties of up to $10,000 in fines and/or up to five years' imprisonment for falsifying voting or registration information or buying votes (applicable only to federal elections). Adopted 253-165: R 136-0; D 117-165 (ND 37-153; SD 80-12), July 9, 1965. The President did not take a position on the amendment.

84. HR 6400. Boggs (D La.) amendment to allow political subdivisions with more than 50 percent of voting age Negroes registered to free themselves from the bill's coverage. Rejected 155-262: R 18-118; D 137-144 (ND 53-136; SD 84-8), July 9, 1965. The President did not take a position on the amendment.

85. HR 6400. Gilbert (D N.Y.) amendment to stipulate that a person could not be denied the right to vote because of inability to read or write English if he demonstrated that he had successfully completed the sixth grade (or any other grade equivalent to whatever level of education a state demands) in a school under the American flag that was conducted in a language other than English. Rejected 202-216: R 10-125; D 192-91 (ND 171-19; SD 21-72), July 9, 1965. The President did not take a position on the amendment.

86. HR 6400. Collier (R Ill.) motion to recommit the bill to the Judiciary Committee with instructions to report back a Republican substitute (HR 7896) which provided remedies to voter discrimination on a county-by-county basis rather than statewide for "massive discrimination" areas as provided in HR 6400. Rejected 171-248: R 115-21; D 56-227 (ND 2-188; SD 54-39), July 9, 1965. A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

87. HR 6400. Passage of the Voting Rights Act, suspending the use of literacy tests or similar voter qualification devices in certain states and areas and authorizing the appointment of federal voting examiners to order the registration of Negroes in states and voting districts whose voter activity had fallen below certain specified levels; the bill also imposed a ban on the use of poll taxes as a voter qualification in any election. Passed 333-85: R 112-24; D 221-61 (ND 188-1; SD 33-60), July 9, 1965. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position.

	82	83	84	85	86	87
ALABAMA
3 Andrews	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
8 Jones	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
5 Selden	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
4 Andrews	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
6 Buchanan	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
2 Dickinson	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
1 Edwards	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
7 Martin	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
ALASKA
AL Rivers	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
ARIZONA
3 Senner	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Udall	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Rhodes	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
4 Harris	N	Y	Y	N	N	N
2 Mills	N	?	?	?	?	X
3 Trimble	N	Y	Y	Y	N	N
CALIFORNIA
5 Burton	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
7 Cohelan	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
33 Dyal	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
9 Edwards	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
18 Hagen	‡	Y	N	N	N	Y
34 Hanna	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
2 Johnson	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
4 Leggett	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
15 McFall	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Miller	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Moss	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
16 Sisk	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
38 Tunney	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
37 Van Deerlin	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
14 Baldwin	Y	Y	N	Y	N	Y
1 Clausen	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
10 Gubser	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
6 Mailliard	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
12 Talcott	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
13 Teague	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
35 Utt	-	Y	N	N	Y	N
36 Wilson	‡	Y	N	N	Y	Y
11 Younger	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
Los Angeles Co.
29 Brown	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
25 Cameron	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
22 Corman	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
21 Hawkins	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
19 Holifield	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
17 King	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
26 Roosevelt	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
30 Roybal	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
31 Wilson	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
28 Bell	Y	Y	N	N	N	Y
23 Clawson	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
32 Hosmer	‡	‡	‡	-	✓	‡
24 Lipscomb	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
27 Reinecke	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
20 Smith	Y	Y	N	N	Y	N
COLORADO
4 Aspinall	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
3 Evans	Y	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
2 McVicker	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
1 Rogers	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
CONNECTICUT
1 Daddario	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
3 Giaimo	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
6 Grabowski	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
4 Irwin	Y	Y	N	Y	N	Y
5 Monagan	Y	Y	N	N	N	Y
2 St. Onge	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
DELAWARE
AL McDowell	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
FLORIDA
2 Bennett	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
4 Fascell	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
9 Fuqua	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
10 Gibbons	Y	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Haley	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
5 Herlong	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	N
8 Matthews	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
3 Pepper	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
6 Rogers	Y	Y	Y	N	N	Y
1 Sikes	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
12 Cramer	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
11 Gurney	Y	Y	N	N	Y	N
GEORGIA
7 Davis	N	Y	Y	Y	Y	N
6 Flynt	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
1 Hagan	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
9 Landrum	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
4 Mackay	?	Y	Y	N	N	Y
2 O'Neal	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
10 Stephens	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
8 Tuten	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
5 Weltner	?	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Callaway	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
HAWAII
AL Matsunaga	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
AL Mink	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
IDAHO
1 White	‡	Y	Y	N	N	Y
2 Hansen	Y	Y	N	N	Y	N
ILLINOIS
21 Gray	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
24 Price	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
19 Schisler	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
23 Shipley	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
16 Anderson	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
17 Arends	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
14 Erlenborn	Y	Y	N	Y	Y	N
20 Findley	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
12 McClory	Y	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
18 Michel	Y	Y	N	?	Y	Y
15 Reid	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
22 Springer	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
Chicago—Cook Co.
7 Annunzio	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
1 Dawson	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
5 Kluczynski	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
3 Murphy	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
2 O'Hara	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
11 Pucinski	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
6 Ronan	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
8 Rostenkowski	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
9 Yates	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
10 Collier	Y	Y	N	Y	Y	N
4 Derwinski	Y	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
13 Rumsfeld	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
INDIANA
3 Brademas	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
8 Denton	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
9 Hamilton	Y	Y	N	Y	N	Y
11 Jacobs	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
1 Madden	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
5 Roush	Y	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
4 Adair	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
7 Bray	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
2 Halleck	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
10 Harvey	‡	‡	-	-	‡	‡
6 Roudebush	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
IOWA
4 Bandstra	‡	N	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Culver	Y	Y	N	Y	N	Y
6 Greigg	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
7 Hansen	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
1 Schmidhauser	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
5 Smith	‡	N	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Gross	Y	Y	N	N	Y	N
KANSAS
1 Dole	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
3 Ellsworth	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
4 Shriver	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
2 Mize	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
5 Skubitz	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
KENTUCKY
4 Chelf	Y	Y	Y	N	N	Y
3 Farnsley	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Natcher	Y	Y	N	N	N	Y

- KEY -

Y Record Vote For (yea).
✓ Paired For.
‡ Announced For, CQ Poll For.
N Record Vote Against (nay).
X Paired Against
- Announced Against, CQ Poll Against.
? Absent, General Pair, "Present," Did not announce or answer Poll.

Democrats in this type; Republicans in italics

CQ House Votes 82 through 87.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 167, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179.)

	82	83	84	85	86	87
7 Perkins	Y	N	N	N	N	Y
1 Stubblefield	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
6 Watts	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
5 Carter	Y	Y	Y	N	Y	Y
LOUISIANA
2 Boggs	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
1 Hebert	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
8 Long	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
6 Morrison	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
5 Passman	X	✓	?	X	✓	X
7 Vacancy
4 Waggonner	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
3 Willis	N	Y	Y	N	N	N
MAINE
2 Hathaway	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
1 Tupper	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
MARYLAND
4 Fallon	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
7 Friedel	✓	N	N	Y	N	Y
3 Garmatz	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
2 Long	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
5 Machen	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
AL Sickles	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
6 Mathias	Y	Y	N	N	N	Y
1 Morton	‡	‡	-	-	‡	‡
MASSACHUSETTS
2 Boland	‡	Y	N	Y	N	Y
11 Burke	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
4 Donohue	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
7 Macdonald	Y	N	N	N	N	Y
9 McCormack
8 O'Neill	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
3 Philbin	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
6 Bates	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
1 Conte	Y	Y	N	N	N	Y
12 Keith	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
10 Martin	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
5 Morse	Y	Y	N	N	N	Y
MICHIGAN
11 Clevenger	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
19 Farnum	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
7 Mackie	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
12 O'Hara	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Todd	Y	N	N	N	N	Y
2 Vivian	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
18 Broomfield	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
10 Cederberg	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
6 Chamberlain	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
5 Ford	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
9 Griffin	‡	Y	N	N	Y	Y
8 Harvey	Y	Y	N	Y	Y	Y
4 Hutchinson	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
Detroit—Wayne Co.
1 Conyers	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
13 Diggs	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
16 Dingell	✓	N	N	Y	N	Y
15 Ford	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
17 Griffiths	‡	N	Y	Y	N	Y
14 Nedzi	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
MINNESOTA
8 Blatnik	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
5 Fraser	?	N	N	Y	N	Y
4 Karth	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
6 Olson	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
7 Langen	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
3 MacGregor	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
2 Nelsen	‡	Y	N	N	Y	Y
1 Quie	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
MISSISSIPPI
1 Abernethy	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
5 Colmer	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
2 Whitten	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
3 Williams	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
4 Walker	N	Y	Y	N	Y	N
MISSOURI
5 Bolling	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
6 Hull	‡	Y	Y	Y	Y	Y
9 Hungate	Y	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
8 Ichord	‡	Y	Y	N	N	Y
10 Jones	-	Y	Y	N	N	N
1 Karsten	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
4 Randall	Y	Y	N	N	N	Y
3 Sullivan	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
2 Curtis	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
7 Hall	Y	Y	N	N	Y	N
MONTANA
1 Olsen	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
2 Battin	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
NEBRASKA
1 Callan	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
2 Cunningham	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
3 Martin	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
NEVADA
AL Baring	‡	Y	-	N	Y	‡
NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Huot	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
2 Cleveland	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
NEW JERSEY
14 Daniels	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
13 Gallagher	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
9 Helstoski	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
3 Howard	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
8 Joelson	‡	Y	N	Y	N	Y
12 Krebs	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
11 Minish	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
2 McGrath	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
15 Patten	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
10 Rodino	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
4 Thompson	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
1 Cahill	Y	Y	N	N	N	Y
6 Dwyer	‡	Y	N	N	N	Y
5 Frelinghuysen	‡	Y	N	N	Y	Y
7 Widnall	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
NEW MEXICO
AL Morris	Y	Y	Y	Y	N	Y
AL Walker	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
NEW YORK
27 Dow	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
41 Dulski	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
34 Hanley	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
39 McCarthy	Y	Y	N	Y	N	Y
29 O'Brien	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
25 Ottinger	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
1 Pike	Y	Y	N	N	N	Y
28 Resnick	‡	N	N	Y	N	Y
35 Stratton	Y	Y	N	Y	N	Y
5 Tenzer	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
3 Wolff	Y	Y	N	Y	N	Y
37 Conable	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
38 Goodell	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
2 Grover	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
36 Horton	Y	Y	N	N	N	Y
30 King	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
31 McEwen	Y	Y	N	N	Y	N
32 Pirnie	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
26 Reid	Y	Y	N	N	N	Y
33 Robison	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
40 Smith	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
4 Wydler	Y	Y	N	N	Y	Y
New York City
7 Addabbo	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
23 Bingham	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
15 Carey	Y	N	N	Y	N	Y
10 Celler	Y	N	Y	Y	N	Y
